Mr. CALL. Before the roll is called I wish to say that I do not see how any Senator can vote to exclude this class of people from the benefits of the appropriation already made. Why discriminate against the men who served in the Navy in the years from 1860 to 1865? They are the men stricken down by this limitation. Why pay all others? Upon what ground of justice or propriety can that be done? The money has been appropriated.

Mr. GALLINGER. With the consent of the Senator from Florida, as I am seeking light on this matter, I should like to propound one or two interrogatories to him.

Mr. CALL. I shall be very glad to answer the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GALLINGER. I tried to follow the argument of the Senator from Florida, and am impressed with the feeling that these claims ought to be allowed. I wish to ask the Senator from Florida whether I am correct in understanding him to say that under the decisions of the Supreme Court these claims are valid.

Mr. CALL. Unquestionably so.

Mr. GALLINGER. And that their payment has been denied simply because the statute of limitations has run against them.

Mr. CALL. Because there was put upon an appropriation act a limitation that none of these claims, which accrued six years before the filing of the petition in the Strong case, should be allowed and paid by the Department.

Mr. GALLINGER. I understood the Senator to say that certain claims, identical in character to those for which he is now arguing, have been allowed and paid. Am I correct?

Mr. CALL. The Senator is correct. I so stated.

Mr. GALLINGER. I think it is a pretty clear case that these claims ought to be paid, and I know of no better place to put them than on the pending bill.

Mr. CALL. The money has been appropriated and is in the Treasury unexpended. It can not be applied to anything else. The money was appropriated in pursuance to a decision of the Supreme Court that all officers serving upon vessels in port, but performing certain classes of duty similar to those on board ship, liable at any moment to be sent out of port and upon the open sea, were in the sense of law entitled to sea pay, and that it was a debt of the Government of the United States due to them. In three several cases quoted in this report such a decision was made.

Now, under that decision the men who served in that kind of service from 1860 to 1865 and 1866, who were officers of the Navy in the war, were entitled under the law, as a public debt of the United States, to be paid this class of pay. This is the report of the pay that was due them, certified and allowed under the decision of the Supreme Court and recommended to be paid.

In 1892, after this decision of the Supreme Court of the United States declaring that this is a public debt, and being a public debt for the war and during the period of the war, it is in terms as in substance the debt referred to in the Constitution, upon a deficiency act a limitation was imposed which strikes these people and these alone, chiefly.

All others have been paid and are now receiving pay of this class, but these men and the widows and orphans of those who lost their lives in the war, to whom the Government is indebted, the debt being guaranteed by the Constitution, are stricken down by this limitation of six years. The last Congress, with the consent of the Senators then in charge of the bill and without the opposition of the present chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, expressed its judgment and affirmed the rightfulness of this claim by putting it on the deficiency bill.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, no one has struck what is at the bottom of these claims. They do not rest on the merits of old sailors and good officers, men who imperiled their lives in the war. They were originally nothing but a set of undiscovered and unrecognized claims. Claim agents in the business dug them out.

There was not one of those officers, when he got a favorite berth in a ship which lay in the harbor alongside of some town and avoided going to sea, who had the slightest thought that he was ever going to get sea pay. He expected to get shore pay. He lay in still water. He was within sight and within boat-reach of a town and its advantages, its churches, its schools for his children, and its hops and balls for the entertainment of his family. They were favorite posts. Nobody wanted to go to sea. Everybody wished to take such places, and the officers expected to get less pay.

Some day or other some bright, ingenious, sharp, shrewd, nosing claim agent here in Washington took it into his head that he could make on a single case some court or other determine that because the ships lay in salt water the men ought to get the highest pay in the Navy; that they should get just as much as the men who went out to sea and traversed all the waters of the globe, encountered all the furies and terrors of the storm, breasted storms and weathered gales, and did sea service. He got one claim in, and the court, not understanding fully the distinctions involved in the case and the merits of it, decided that this one case was a good case and that the man was entitled to sea pay.

Forthwith the claim agents sent out their circulars by the hundreds and thousands, and hunted up every case, clear back for thirty years, where they could find anybody who had performed such service and had not received sea pay. Many of the officers were dead; their children were gone, but the grandchildren were hunted up. They were told that they could get 50 per cent of these claims, or 25 per cent, or whatever it was, if they put them into the hands of the claim agent. The Treasury began to be thronged and overborne by these claims, and before we got hold of it in Congress the Treasury Department had paid on the strength of this decision some hundreds of thousands of dollars in these cases.

Then Congress, on full debate and consideration here, declared that hereafter the accounting officers of the Treasury should not certify and audit any claim based on the decisions which had been rendered. That was a part of the statute. That was the most we could do. We were protecting the Treasury; we were trying to see if we could not shut off the claim agents.

The claims are referred to by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] and the Senator from Florida [Mr. CALL] as just and righteous, and we are told that there are crying widows and orphans. There is no widow and there is no orphan crying in these cases. It is the claim agents, the lawyers, who are importuning the Senator from Florida and everybody else, and have done so in season and out of season. The Senate ought to know that in paying these claims it is saying in terms that the man who gets an easy berth in a ship which lies at the wharf in a harbor anywhere must have the same pay as the man who goes abroad and traverses all the seas of the globe.

Mr. WHITE. Will the Senator from Maine allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. HALE. Certainly.

Mr. WHITE. I am not familiar with the facts in the matter, and my inquiry is directed at their ascertainment. Is it true that these claims have been found to be valid by any judicial tribunal?

Mr. COCKRELL. By only one.

Mr. HALE. No; as I say they got in one case and got a decision of the court. Then the claim agents, on the basis of that decision, flocked to the Treasury, and after a half million dollars had been paid Congress put down this barrier.

Mr. WHITE. Are the other claims, those upon which the present solicitation is based, analogous in all respects to that which the court held was a valid claim?

Mr. HALE. It is precisely the same class of claims. The court ruled upon a technicality that sea pay was due for this kind of service, and then Congress put the barrier down and enacted the statute to which I have referred.

Mr. COCKRELL. The decision was in direct conflict with the rulings of the Department and the usage which the officers had accepted for nearly a generation.

Mr. HALE. Invariably. I have stated these things in order that the Senate will not be deceived, and will not think that here is a discrimination against a meritorious class of men, who have really earned this pay. Not one of them ever earned a dollar of it, and none of them ever expected to get it. There was not an officer who went on board ship in this way who ever dreamed of sea pay.

Mr. COCKRELL. He accepted the pay which the Department decided he was entitled to, and was only too glad to get that.

Mr. HALE. That is right. There ought to be the distinction which exists between leave pay, shore pay, and sea pay; and the man on board a ship which lies at a wharf ought not to have the sea pay like the man who goes to sea.

Mr. GALLINGER obtained the floor.

Mr. CALL. I wish the Senator from New Hampshire would allow me to correct a mistake. Have I the consent of the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. GALLINGER. Certainly.

Mr. CALL. I am surprised at the statement of the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE]. I know he does not intend to misrepresent the case. The decision of the Supreme Court was not upon a technical point, and there was not merely one decision. There are a half dozen decisions quoted in this report.

Mr. HALE. I said two or three decisions.

There are three decisions. The Senator from Maine said it is a technical decision. It is not. As to the meaning of the law, it is a full and exhaustive decision. Here it is; but I shall not take the time of the Senate to read it. It goes into the condition of the vessel, where she was, stationary, but liable to be sent out at any moment, and the officers required to be personally present in the performance of their duty, ready at any time to be sent to sea. In these cases the Supreme Court decided that wherever that was the case, where the officers were ready and required to be ready to perform sea duty, they were performing sea duty, and in the terms of the law entitled to that pay. Who shall deny it?

The question is, does the decision of the Supreme Court, declaring that to be the definition of the law, create a public debt of the United States. It is not whether there are or not claim agents. I do not know any claim agents. I am one of the men whom they do not solicit. I have never had any kind of acquaintance with them, but I do know several meritorious women and children, the survivors of these officers, who think they have a just claim upon the Government; and they have. That is the case which the Supreme Court decided. What matters it whether the claim agents hunted up the claimants?

But the Senator from Maine is upon the Committee on Appropriations. Why is he now recommending and why has he been recommending all the time that this same pay be given to men who did not serve from 1860 to 1865? Let that question be answered. Why has he recommended that for those men to-day and yet denies similar treatment to the men and the children and widows of those who served from 1860 to 1865?

I have here the report of the Secretary of the Treasury. He says:

> In compliance with the resolution of the Senate of the 11th instant, calling for certain information relative to naval officers' claims for sea pay in accordance with the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of The United States vs. Strong, I have the honor to transmit herewith the report of the Fourth Auditor upon the subject of the 14th instant.

That is the case I have referred to here, which is full and exhaustive as to the right of those people, not upon a technical point, but upon the meaning of the law. The Auditor says:

> I have the honor to return herewith a copy of the resolution of the United States Senate of the 11th instant in regard to claims certified to Congress in accordance with the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Strong, referred to this office for report, and have to state:
>
> 1. The total sum of $389,071.90, exclusive of payments from current appropriations, has been reported to Congress for sea pay under the above decision.
> 2. Of the above-given sum $136,818.62 has been paid.
> 3. Of the sum paid, $40,230.25 was paid without regard to the date when the services were rendered.
> 4. Of the sums appropriated, as shown above, about $96,000 remains unexpended.

It has been appropriated and is unexpended, and can be applied to no other use.

That is the condition of the case, and I repeat that by the very terms of the statement of the Secretary of the Treasury, this limitation, if not in terms applicable to the sailors and naval officers who served during the war, is in fact applicable, because six years before the time fixed in the statute excludes all of them, and the widows and children, and to-day includes the men who were not in the service during the war.

Suppose the statement of the Senator from Maine is true that these gallant officers, upon a vessel in port, ready and prepared to go to sea, did have a respite from the severe service of the sea, from battle and storm, shall their widows and their children be deprived of the benefit of this just debt, adjudicated by the Supreme Court of the United States, because the husband or father had a respite and easier duty. Why not strike down the others? Why make this limitation applicable to them and them alone? The Senator who objects to the amendment, the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, has had charge of these appropriations all the time. Why did he not make the limitation so as to except from it the sailors and those who performed this meritorious service? Mr. President, there is no argument on the other side of this question.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

Mr. PALMER. I have no disposition to prolong the debate, but I should like to ask the Senator from Maine a question. Will the Senator from New Hampshire yield to me for a moment? It is for a question only.

Mr. GALLINGER. Certainly.

Mr. PALMER. I understand there is a distinction between sea pay and shore pay. I understand, furthermore, that the persons who are intended to be provided for by the amendment did not go to sea. If they did not go to sea, upon what ground is it proposed to give them sea pay?

Mr. HALE. This is the ground. For years there has been one rule observed in the Navy, and it is a rule made in obedience to good sense and fairness. There is a distinction created by law, as the Senator from Illinois has said, between sea pay and shore pay. But I will begin with leave pay. That is the smallest pay, being for an officer on leave.

Then comes shore pay, and the next is sea pay. For years there had been but one rule, and that was that officers who were ordered, for instance, to receiving ships, to training ships, ships that lie about harbors and never go anywhere else, should receive shore pay. It is not such a case as the Senator from Florida refers to—the court did not understand it—where the men were liable to be ordered to sea at any time. It was a ship that did not go to sea; the men occupied smooth and comfortable berths, and nobody ever expected that they would receive sea pay. Some of them did get it, however, and so Congress put in this statute of limitations to prevent all of them from getting it.

The court disregarded the interpretation that the Navy Department had always put upon sea pay, and decided that if a man was on a ship, no matter where it was, if he was not at sea, if he was inside of a harbor on a ship in salt water, lying at the wharf, as the receiving ships always do, that still he should have sea pay; that the men who did not earn sea pay should get it. They got up one or two or three cases, as I say, got their decision through, and ran the thing into the Treasury before we found it out.

The Senator from Florida wishes to know why we pay some of these men and do not pay the others. As soon as we found out the situation we put in this provision, that no claims which occurred more than six years prior to the time of the decision, giving them the benefit which the law generally gives of six years limitation, should be audited or paid. We paid the others, because we could not help it.

Mr. HOAR. I should like to ask the Senator from Maine a question. Do I understand the Senator to say that the Supreme Court of the United States has decided that these debts are due by the law of the land, and——

Mr. HALE. Let me answer the question. The Senator from Massachusetts is a very good lawyer.

Mr. HOAR. That does not answer the question.

Mr. HALE. Yes; it does. I am going to answer it.

Mr. ALLISON. That is a good beginning.

Mr. HALE. They did not decide that all these claims were due. A court decides a case as it comes to it. The court decided one case, A B; it decided another one case, C D; it decided another case, E F. That is all it decided. It laid down the principle. Then Congress, in order to shut off all these old claims up to within six years, said, "Notwithstanding this decision it shall only apply to cases within the six years." We put the bar down because we did not believe in the decision. I never believed in it; it is not a correct decision.

Mr. COCKRELL. The limitation the Senator from Maine speaks of is the bar of the law in the Court of Claims against all other claims.

Mr. HALE. Yes; that is the bar.

Mr. HOAR. I understand the proposition then is this: The Supreme Court has decided that the law of the land makes these claims due. It is true they did not decide on these cases that are before us. If they had, there would have been a judgment. But they interpreted and decided the law, and under that interpretation and decision of the law the party was entitled to go into the Department and get his pay, as a hundred or a thousand of them did. Then Congress came in and undertook to set up a statute of limitation, ex post facto, which did not exist in regard to this class of cases, because the committee under whose guidance Congress acted thought the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States was wrong.

Now, just reverse this case. Suppose these men had got their sea pay and the Supreme Court of the United States had decided that they were not entiled to it, that it was shore duty and not sea duty, although the man had to keep his mess and wear his uniform and be ready to go to sea all the time, under the practice of this Government the Department would have pursued those widows and children, those estates, for forty years, without admitting for a moment the thought of a statute of limitations or of a legislative bar or a legislative act.

I can not for one see the justice of asking the Government of the United States to make statutes of limitations in its own favor which it will not permit to be made against it. It does not make any difference whether it is an officer, or a widow, or an orphan, or anybody else, it is a man, or a woman, or a child, to whom the United States owes this money, and it is just as much the legal property of that person which we are keeping in our Treasury as if we had entered upon the widow's cottage and taken possession of it without form or right of law.

Mr. HALE. I take issue with the Senator on that point.

Mr. HOAR. Now the Senator——

Mr. HALE. The Senator has been interrupting me.

Mr. HOAR. I did not so understand.

Mr. HALE. I had not yielded the floor.

Mr. HOAR. I thought the Senator had yielded. I will finish my sentence and then yield.

Mr. HALE. I have not finished. The Senator from New Hampshire——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair reminds the Senators that the Senator from New Hampshire is entitled to the floor.

Mr. HOAR. The Senator from New Hampshire yielded to me. I thought the Senator from Maine was through.

Mr. HALE. I had not answered the Senator from Illinois [Mr. PALMER].

Mr. GALLINGER. I am delighted to yield to both Senators for a reasonable time.

Mr. HOAR. Let me finish the sentence, and then I will stop. I say again, it is as much the property of this widow as her cottage, and the United States is doing an unjustifiable act if it comes in and says, "If the thing was just reversed I would pursue you for forty years, but that I would get the shilling or the hundred dollars or the thousand dollars that you got by mistake; and when the mistake is in my favor merely because the Government can not be sued, you shall not have it set right."

Mr. HALE. The Senator has it all wrong. He is very vehement, very decided, and very animated in favor of this conjectural widow whom he has brought up, and to whom he says the Government owes these claims.

Mr. President, the decision that was got out of the court in these two or three cases did not say that the Government owed all these parties. It only established that in the three cases the Government had to pay. But the provision we enacted in order to prevent these cases from being audited beyond a certain date was the fundamental law of the court through which all the claims had to go.

We did not make the statute of limitations. When the three cases which were put into the Court of Claims under the statute of limitations, which is part of the law of the land, were decided and carried up to the Supreme Court and the decision rendered, the court did not pretend to say that persons whose claims were more than six years old, under the general law applicable to that case, not a party to that action, were entitled to an allowance of their claims.

The law says otherwise. The law says "none of you who did not put in your claims here within six years have a particle of claim upon the Government; not the widows or children or anybody else." All that we did was to put into the bill a provision recognizing the six years' limitation, and declaring that the auditing officer should not audit any of these claims beyond six years. The Senator from Massachusetts is too good a lawyer to claim that because one case is decided it goes back beyond a statute of limitation that is a part of the fundamental law of the land.

Mr. SQUIRE. May I ask the Senator a question for information?

Mr. HALE. Certainly.

Mr. SQUIRE. I have learned some facts about this matter, and I should like to ask one question, which I think is in point right here. I understand there was a case decided which was considered a test case; that the six years spoken of commenced to run back from that time, and that the test case was tried in the year 1886, so that the application of the six years commenced about the year 1880. Now, I wish to ask what point there was in establishing this bar, if that was not a test case? Why was it provided that the six years should commence to run preceding the decision of 1886, unless it was so considered?

Mr. HALE. The provision was put in because the moment the decision was made all the claim agents began to rush in their claims and to claim that by force of that decision the Government should pay them all. There was no test case. The lawyers considered it a test case, but nobody else did. The Government never considered it a test case.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. Allow me to ask a question right there. Did not the Department itself, both the Secretary of the Treasury and the First or Second Comptroller, whoever it was, in applying the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States made in one case to all the other cases make all the other cases payable?

Mr. HALE. That is just what they did. I say the moment the one, two, or three cases were decided, the claims then began to be rushed in and payment was demanded on the basis of that decision. You could not find any fault with Congress in providing that the claims before the six years limitation, which we did not create, which was then the law, should not be audited. They were rushing them all in. They were claiming an audit beyond the six years limitations because this decision decided in a particular case of A B C D or E F, that this was sea pay. They were rushing in the claims beyond the decision, beyond the limitation that was already fixed by law. We said: "You shall not audit any claims that are beyond that decision." That is all there is of it.

Mr. PASCO. I wish to ask the Senator from Maine if he can inform me whether the same law with reference to sea pay that was in existence when the decisions of the Supreme Court were made is still in force, or whether it has been since modified or changed?

Mr. HALE. That I do not know.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I was very glad to yield for the colloquy which has taken place, because we all want light on this very interesting question. I do not claim to know as much about these matters as the Senator from Maine in a general way, he having been for a long time a member of the Committee on Naval Affairs, but to my untrained mind in legal matters and in technicalities there are certain facts which seem to be so plain that I am surprised there should be any difference of opinion concerning them. It seems to be established that all the money to pay these claims is ready to be appropriated and is now lying idle in the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. COCKRELL. I dispute that fact distinctly, and will show that it is not the case.

Mr. GALLINGER. This is the first time I have heard it disputed, and it has been stated several times in the discussion.

Mr. CALL. What is the statement?

Mr. GALLINGER. That the money is appropriated, which the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations denies.

Mr. CALL. It is so stated by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. COCKRELL. I do not care what the Secretary says. Here is the law. I will read it, so that all can understand it. I do not want any misunderstanding in regard to this matter.

Mr. HALE. Does anybody claim that the money is already appropriated?

Mr. COCKRELL. Let me read the law:

> For pay of the Navy, $256,948.65: Provided, That no part of any one of the claims to which this appropriation is applicable shall be paid therefrom which accrued more than six years prior to the date of the filing of the petition in the Court of Claims upon which the judgment was rendered, which, being affirmed by the Supreme Court, has been adopted by the accounting officers as the basis for the allowance of said claim.

The very moment Congress knew that the accounting officers were making application of a principle which had never been decided by the Supreme Court of the United States and applied for money we then refused to appropriate a dollar, or to allow them to expend a dollar. It never has been appropriated.

Mr. GALLINGER. I presume that statute——

Mr. CALL. Will the Senator from New Hampshire allow me a moment?

Mr. GALLINGER. No: allow me to make a statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire declines to yield.

Mr. GALLINGER. I presume the statute which has been read is the provision inserted on an appropriation bill, but the fact is that the proper accounting officers of the Treasury Department did find money appropriated to pay these claims, and until Congress intervened, and by this provision on an appropriation bill denied them that right, they had no difficulty in discovering this money which must in some way have been in the Treasury for this purpose.

Mr. President, one other point seems to have been established. A part of these claims have been paid, absolutely paid, by the proper accounting officers of the Government. Then Congress stepped in and by a provision on an appropriation bill, which is vicious legislation, and always has been vicious legislation, and always will be, stopped the proper accounting officers from performing what they conceived to be their duty under the laws of the United States.

One other fact is, I think, not disputed. The Supreme Court has in a number of cases affirmed the principle upon which all these cases rest. Let us take the syllabus, for instance, in one case in which the opinion was delivered by Justice Strong, and see what his language is:

> A lieutenant commander in the United States Navy, performing duty as executive officer on board a receiving ship at Boston, under an order designating his employment as "shore duty," is entitled to receive pay for sea service.

That must have decided not one case, but it must have decided a line of cases. For the Senator from Maine to contend that these have been individual and isolated cases which have been decided by the Supreme Court I think will hardly hold in this discussion. It is a well-known fact that in all classes of cases there are test cases, and that when one case is decided it not only decides that case, but it decides all other cases which are on all fours with that case. There are, I take it, a large number of cases——

Mr. GEORGE. I should like to ask the Senator from New Hampshire a question.

Mr. GALLINGER. Certainly.

Mr. GEORGE. What is the date of the first decision of the Supreme Court allowing these claims?

Mr. COCKRELL. Eighteen hundred and eighty-seven.

Mr. GALLINGER. In 1887, I think.

Mr. HALE. Eighteen hundred and eighty-six.

Mr. GALLINGER. Eighteen hundred and eighty-six or 1887.

Mr. GEORGE. I wish to ask another question. What was the date of service to which the decision of the Supreme Court applied?

Mr. GALLINGER. Perhaps the Senator from Florida is informed on that point. I have not looked up this matter.

Mr. GEORGE. Was Symonds vs. The United States the first case?

Mr. COCKRELL. It dated back to 1862, I understand.

Mr. GALLINGER. Now, I will continue for a moment, and then the Senator from Mississippi may have the floor, because I do not propose to make a lengthy argument on this subject. Possibly I am not sufficiently well informed to discuss it at all, except that these plain principles, which do not require a trained legal mind to determine, which honest men can determine for themselves between man and man, or between the Government and the citizen, have impressed themselves upon my mind as being worthy of a word from me and my vote in support of this proposition.

I say that after the Supreme Court had decided the principle involved in these cases, and a large number of them had been paid by virtue of those repeated decisions, Congress stepped in and on an appropriation bill invoked the statute of limitations and stopped their further payment.

The decisions were not made, as the Senator from Maine has suggested, upon technicalities. The Supreme Court does not decide questions upon technicalities. The Supreme Court decides such questions upon the broad principles of law. If there are any technicalities in this case the technicalities belong to the Government, not to the court or to the citizen who has a right under the law to ask that he shall be given whatever money is honestly due him according to the decisions of the highest tribunal in the land.

The Senator from Maine invokes that old bogy of claim agents in connection with this matter. Mr. President, I know nothing about claim agents in connection with these claims, but I take it for granted that in these as in all other claims, the citizen deprived by the Government of his rights, has had to call upon claim agents to do what they could to protect him in his rights.

I said a few months ago, in discussing a claim in the Senate Chamber, that if the Government of the United States could be dealt with as a private citizen in its dealings with people of the United States it would be in jail all the time for larceny; and that is true. The Government of the United States does not propose to pay any claim that a citizen holds against it if it can possibly avoid it. A citizen is compelled to appeal to lawyers, to claim agents, if you please, to protect him in his rights before the law.

One further observation and I am done. This matter has been discussed here and elsewhere. I have given it some little attention. I believe those claims ought to be allowed. I quite agree with two distinguished men in another body, one of whom in discussing this question declared that he had "never heard the plea of the statute of limitations was an honest plea between citizen and citizen against the payment of an honest debt," and the other, one of the oldest men in the service of the United States, who has had long experience in governmental affairs, declared as follows:

> This money is due by virtue of a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States. * * * Whether it be $1 or $1,000,000, we owe this money under the ruling of the highest judicial tribunal in this land.

Mr. President, I believe that to be true, and believing it to be true, laying aside all technicalities, standing here appealing for the rights of the citizen, for the widow and for the orphan, for citizens of this Republic who have claims against this Government, whose claims have been affirmed by the Supreme Court, which decision has not been reversed except by an act of Congress upon an appropriation bill, I am glad of an opportunity to say that I think the Congress of the United States owes it to itself, to its integrity, and to its honor, to see that these claims are paid at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I have listened to this debate and I am anxious to find out what is exactly right to be done in this case. As I understand the facts, they are about as I shall state them. During the war, between 1861, or including 1861, and the end of the war, under a ruling of the Department, when certain officers and seamen who were doing duty upon a ship or ships inside of a harbor and not going to sea came to settle with the Department they received shore pay instead of sea pay, the sea pay being the larger sum.

Everybody understood that that was the right ruling of the Department. Those officers accepted the pay and gave their acquittance upon the United States, as it was shore duty. Then, after many of the officers were dead, twenty years afterwards, when everybody had supposed that there had been a full and final settlement on the part of the United States with those officers, a suit was instituted, I believe in 1886 or 1887, upon a state of facts arising but recently anterior to that time.

Mr. HOAR. May I put the Senator a question right there?

Mr. GEORGE. No; I want to state the case first, and then I will hear the Senator.

Mr. HOAR. It is in reference to the Senator's last sentence.

Mr. GEORGE. Never mind, unless the Senator wants to correct the statement I have made.

Mr. HOAR. I want to correct the Senator and to put a question to him.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WHITE in the chair). Does the Senator from Mississippi yield to the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield.

Mr. HOAR. The Senator says there was a full and final agreement with the parties. The question I wish to put is, whether that is not precisely what the United States says shall not be done, and that none of the settlements were full and final settlements? The Government says they may be opened at the expiration of half a century.

Mr. GEORGE. At any rate, the accounts of the officers were made out and settled on the basis of shore pay, and everybody supposing that to be the law at that time, no complaint was made. Many of those officers died, they passed out of existence, under the supposition that they had been fully paid.

Now, this was for service during the war, when, I suppose I may be allowed to say, it was a little safer, a little more convenient, and a little more agreeable to be doing duty on a vessel in a harbor than going out in the sea and meeting the enemy.

Twenty years after that time, upon a state of fact arising in time of peace, some lieutenant—I think it was Lieut. Symonds—believed that he was entitled to sea pay instead of shore pay and he entered suit. The Supreme Court of the United States decided that service on a vessel in the harbor was sea service and that he was entitled to sea pay.

Then, after all those men were dead and had gone out of existence, a lot of claim agents in the city of Washington, who are always looking around in the Departments for the opportunity to get up claims against the Government of the United States, discovered that the settlements which were made twenty years anterior to that time were all wrong. Thereupon they write all over the country, or advertise, and get these claims and present them here.

Now, what did Congress do? This matter has been settled, and settled by a tribunal which had a right to settle it. When Congress discovered this state of facts and that nothing could be final as to the settlement which had been made and accepted in good faith by the officers of the Government, by the fiscal officers of the Government as well as the naval officers of the Government, Congress passed a law, which it had a right to do, providing that the old settlements made twenty years before, which had been accepted in good faith by everybody, should not be reopened unless suit was brought within six years anterior to the date of that statute.

Mr. HALE. That is it exactly.

Mr. CALL. I beg pardon.

Mr. GEORGE. That is the exact state of facts, I understand.

Mr. CALL. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Mississippi yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. GEORGE. Of course I will yield if I have made a misstatement.

Mr. CALL. Congress did not do anything of the kind.

Mr. GEORGE. Where is the statute read by the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. COCKRELL. On the contrary, Congress said that the claims which had accrued prior to six years before the filing of the petition in that case should be barred. That is what it said.

Mr. GEORGE. It makes no difference; Congress passed the law which I have in my hand, and which I will read to the Senate, so that they may see what it is.

For pay of the Navy, $256,948.65: Provided, That no part of any one of the claims to which this appropriation is applicable shall be paid therefrom which accrued more than six years prior to the date of the filing of the petition in the Court of Claims upon which the judgment was rendered.

Congress had a right to pass that law, and I believe it was the duty of Congress to pass it. There ought to be an end of claims against the United States, especially of claims which have been presented to the accounting officers of the Government and regularly passed to the satisfaction of everybody. It was not so intended, but it appears to me after a very careful and patient listening to the arguments in this case that it is nothing more than a proviso for the benefit of the claim agents who have thus stirred up these old settled claims against the Government.

Mr. CALL. Mr. President, the Senator from Mississippi is usually very accurate and he states his propositions very clearly, but in this case he has not done so. There is no evidence of any claim agents before this body. There is no evidence that the Congress of the United States has ever adopted a statute of limitations upon accounting officers. The statute passed in reference to these claims, which includes this meritorious class of service rendered in the war, is the only one. To-day the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations and the Senator from Mississippi are voting money to pay claims far beyond these in amount, and claims which have none of the merit of this class of claims.

Mr. PALMER. Will the Senator from Florida allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. CALL. Certainly.

Mr. PALMER. Does the Senator admit that these claims are within the statute of limitations?

Mr. CALL. I do not. They are within the provisions of the enactment in that appropriation act, relating to that appropriation only, to that specific amount of money. Before that time Congress had appropriated (under the decision of the Supreme Court which fixed the liability of the Government) $300,000 to these men, of which $140,000 has been paid.

Mr. PALMER. Will the Senator allow me to make one further remark? I understand the Senator to maintain that that limitation has reference simply to that appropriation.

Mr. CALL. Beyond a question. It says "that no part of this amount." There is no question about it. It is only applicable to that appropriation. It says "that hereafter none of the money appropriated in this appropriation act." Beyond a doubt, it is not a general law.

Now, let us see whether it is a general law or has any application to the accounting officers of the Treasury. Let us see whether Congress passed any law saying that claims going back to a certain date against the Government shall not be presented. There is a statute of limitations limiting the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims, but there is none upon the accounting officers of the Treasury. I have here——

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. CALL. I will yield in a few minutes.

Mr. CHANDLER. Right at this point I wish to ask the Senator from Florida a question, if he will allow me.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield?

Mr. CALL. I always yield to the Senator from New Hampshire with pleasure; but I prefer to go on with this point.

Mr. CHANDLER. Then I will not interrupt the Senator now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida declines to yield.

Mr. CALL. I will yield presently. I say there is no statute of limitations. What does the Court of Claims say in Smith vs. The United States, in the fourteenth volume of Reports, 118?

Accounts in the Treasury are never adjusted. In neither the legal nor the mercantile sense of the term is an account between the Government and one of its officers ever finally adjusted.

Now, let us see whether that is true or not. Let us go on and see. I hold in my hand a list of claims allowed by accounting officers reported here within the last few days and referred to the Appropriations Committee, upon which the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Appropriations has been acting in this very bill. Now, let us see what he does:

For the payment of claims, for difference between actual expenses, and mileage allowed under the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the case of Graham vs. The United States (certified claims), 1854-'62, $101.82.

That goes back to 1854, years before the claims of these sailors to whom the Senator from Mississippi denies the respite of a few months' duty in a home port, in uniform, subject to martial law all the time, on duty ready to be called out at any moment, the Supreme Court declaring it to be sea duty. He votes to pay this mileage which accrued in 1854, due to these officers upon this decision of the Supreme Court that the claims were never adjusted.

So of the Post-Office Department, so of the War Department, and so of every other Department of the Government, wherever the law fixed the amount due the officer and the court declares that it is a public debt. Yet the Senator undertakes to come here and takes this case out of the category of such claims when the decision of the court is that even in time of peace an officer on board a receiving ship, performing the same duties as at sea, shall receive sea pay.

What does the Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Tracy, say in his letter to Senator BUTLER upon this very class of claims? I have it here in my hand. The Secretary says:

NAVY DEPARTMENT, Washington, July 11, 1892.

SIR: Replying to your letter of the 6th instant, referring to certain provisions in the deficiency appropriation bill as it passed the House, I have to state that under existing law, as construed by the Court of Claims and Supreme Court, sea pay has been and is allowed to officers serving on board of training, receiving, and practice ships "when not cruising."

Officers, except the commanding officer, performing duty on ships of this character, have ordinarily the same extra expenses with respect to mess bills, uniforms, etc., as those on duty on ships attached to home or foreign squadrons.

So we have the decision of the court to that effect; but that is not all. The Supreme Court has fixed the obligation of the Government to pay. The fact that it becomes the private property of the officer, just as much as the land of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE], or the house of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] is his property, has been adjudicated a thousand times; it is to-day the practice of the Government, and it has been recognized by the chairman of the committee and the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE], and is recognized in this bill as the law of the land. There is no statute of limitation whatever upon the subject.

A signal instance of this policy is found in the "customs inspectors' cases." The old law gave them "not exceeding" $3 per day. By a blunder the words "not exceeding" were left out of the Revised Statutes. After receiving pay for some years at the old rates, generally less than $3, the inspectors claimed the difference, and Congress has appropriated over $750,000 to meet these claims.

The chairman of the Committee on Appropriations recommended and that very committee has appropriated $750,000 to pay the customs inspectors the difference between the amount allowed them and $3 a day.

Mr. CHANDLER. From what document is the Senator reading?

Mr. CALL. I am reading from a résumé of the case.

Mr. COCKRELL. A lawyer's argument.

Mr. CALL. It is as good as yours or mine. The Senator is nothing but a lawyer and I am nothing but a lawyer. What argument is there in saying that the document from which I am reading is a lawyer's argument? The question is, is the claim right and just? Is it true? Do you deny it?

Mr. CHANDLER. In the customs inspectors' cases, to which the Senator alludes, the statute of limitations had not run. The Senator does not mean to convey the idea that those cases were within the statute of limitations?

Mr. CALL. Of course not. There is no statute of limitations as to any of them, but there is as to the widows and orphans of those who served in the war. They are the persons who are to be selected to be stricken down.

Mr. CHANDLER. That is what I wanted to ask the Senator about, but he would not allow me.

Mr. CALL. Then I will tell the Senator they are the persons selected to be stricken down by the statute of limitations, while these customs inspectors receive $750,000, and you deny to the widows and orphans of those men who fought from 1860 to 1865, whom in every form of legislation you could have lauded, and rightfully lauded, for their gallant courage, and now, after the Supreme Court has decided that it was their private property, a private debt, you come here and put into an appropriation bill a provision that the inspectors of customs shall receive $750,000 for the difference between $2 and $3 per day, when you have here right before your eyes, and I have read it, the report of the Secretary, showing that in the Post-Office Department and in the War Department payment has been made in cases of mileage, going back to 1840, and you refuse to appropriate money to pay what has been adjudged to be due by the Supreme Court upon a correct interpretation of the law. I ask, how can you justify yourselves in it?

There is no use to talk about any statute of limitations, and that being the law of the land. It was the law for the two years that that appropriation act lasted, and it was the law no longer. The act of Congress requires the Secretary of the Treasury every year to report to the Congress of the United States. Under the decision of the Supreme Court the accounts of an officer of the Government are never adjusted, but are always open to adjustment.

Mr. CHANDLER. Will the Senator allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. CALL. Certainly.

Mr. CHANDLER. I ask whether the Senator from Florida, who is a member of the Committee on Appropriations, which has very large powers as this Government is administered, is in favor of never interposing a statute of limitations in the case of a claim against the Government?

Mr. CALL. I am in favor of never imposing the statute of limitations upon a judgment of the Supreme Court of the United States as to a debt due to an individual.

Mr. CHANDLER. Very good, but——

Mr. CALL. When the judgment has been rendered, I am in favor of paying it, and not by a statute of limitations saying that I decide that the Supreme Court is wrong.

Mr. CHANDLER. I want to ask the Senator another question. I ask whether any one of these claims, the payment of which he now advocates, can be taken into the Court of Claims, and then, upon judgment being rendered there, taken to the Supreme Court of the United States, and a judgment there obtained in favor of the claimant? Can any one of these claims which the Senator proposes to pay be put into a judgment of the Court of Claims or of the Supreme Court of the United States?

Mr. CALL. Suppose they can or suppose they can not, what has that to do with the case?

Mr. CHANDLER. Why not? The Senator says he wants to pay every judgment of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Mr. CALL. Yes.

Mr. CHANDLER. Now, if these claimants choose to do so, and have a right to be paid, they can bring their suits in the Court of Claims and go to the Supreme Court of the United States, if necessary, and then get their pay.

Mr. CALL. I am not in favor of any such administration of the Treasury Department.

Mr. CHANDLER. Then, the Senator is simply in favor of paying these men just as if they had a judgment of the Supreme Court of the United States, when, under the existing statute law, they can not get into court. Therefore, the Senator is in favor of removing the statute of limitations in every one of these cases.

Mr. CALL. The Senator from New Hampshire is generally very forcible in his logic, but I do not think his logic on this occasion reaches the case. The Supreme Court of the United States have decided a principle.

Mr. CHANDLER. A precedent?

Mr. CALL. A principle; and it is the business of every officer of this Government to apply that to the cases coming before him which are of like character. It would certainly be the height of injustice to compel every man to whom the United States owes anything to bring suit for it. It would be practical repudiation. Such a state of things never occurred.

Mr. CHANDLER. Then the Senator is in favor of removing the statute of limitations entirely from the accounting officers of the Treasury?

Mr. CALL. There is no statute of limitations upon the accounting officers of the Treasury. The Senator knows there is no such pretense.

Mr. CHANDLER. The Senator is himself applying a statute of limitations on the accounting officers of the Treasury.

Mr. CALL. The Senator from Florida is in favor of paying all cases which come within the principle of the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States. That is what he is in favor of doing.

Mr. CHANDLER. No matter how old it is?

Mr. CALL. No matter what else. That is the law, and that should govern the Treasury Department. There is no statute of limitations, as I have read here to-day, except that which you have applied to these meritorious officers, who served on board ship in port declared by the court to have the right to sea pay.

Those alone are the people you have stricken down in your laws, and I have proven it to you by the report of the Treasury Department certifying claims away back to 1840 in the War Department, and appropriations in this very bill to pay them.

It is only that class of people who have rendered these conspicuous services during the war to whom you have applied this statute of limitations.

Mr. CHANDLER. I did not intend to be drawn into this discussion, and I do not now intend to cover the whole subject which has been brought into the debate, but I wish to call the attention of the Senate to the fact that here is a statute of limitations applicable to the Court of Claims and to suits therein. It reads:

SEC. 1069. Every claim against the United States, cognizable by the Court of Claims, shall be forever barred unless the petition setting forth a statement thereof is filed in the court, or transmitted to it by the Secretary of the Senate or the Clerk of the House of Representatives as provided by law, within six years after the claim first accrues.

Mr. President, that is a wise statute; it is the universal rule in the Court of Claims, and now, that being the policy of the Government with reference to suits in the Court of Claims, why should it not apply to the accounting officers of the Treasury Department?

Mr. CALL. I will tell the Senator why it should not apply. By the universal rule of law continuous accounts between individuals are never subject as to any of their items to the statute of limitations. Once proved that an account is continuous between two parties and unadjusted, it remains outside the statute of limitations.

Mr. CHANDLER. That is an absurd application of a ridiculous doctrine. The rule that is applied to suits in the Court of Claims should be applied to the same class of claims when suit is not brought in the Court of Claims, and all that the Congress of the United States has done has been to take this provision as to the Court of Claims, providing a statute of limitations, and applying it to the accounting officers of the Treasury.

There is not one of those claimants who, if his claim was as just as those which have been already paid, could not go into the Court of Claims and get his judgment if it were not for the statute of limitations, which the Senate and the House of Representatives have very wisely applied to the accounting officers of the Treasury Department.

There is no reason for paying these claims unless the Senate is prepared to repeal all statutes of limitation in the cases of all claims against the United States; and I was surprised to hear the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] make the statement that he did, that whenever a Senator votes to enforce the statute of limitation in the case of a claim against the United States, he is engaged in business equivalent to that of robbing a poor widow of her cottage.

That is the doctrine of the Senator from Massachusetts, if he means anything—that when a person has a claim against the United States, no matter how old it is, no matter how stale it is, no matter how much it may be barred by the statute of limitation, if you vote in this body to enforce the statute of limitation you are taking away from a poor widow that which is hers by just as sacred a right as that by which she possesses the cottage in which she lives.

Rhetoric of that kind, it seems to me, finds no place in the discussion of a question of this kind. Either the statute of limitations which is applied to the Court of Claims is a wise limitation on the accounting officers of the Treasury Department, or else let us remove it entirely and never set up in behalf of the Government of the United States the pretense that a claim is stale and never apply the statute of limitations to any claim whatever against the United States.

The Supreme Court of the United States decided that an officer of the Navy who was assigned to duty upon a receiving ship, tied up at a dock in a harbor, which never moved, which never was intended to move, which could not by any possibility be moved, was at sea.

Mr. President, the decision does not commend itself to my judgment. I do not intend to vote to pay claims of that kind, unless suit is brought upon them in the Court of Claims and judgment recovered according to law. In other words, all claims based upon the proposition that an officer who is on board of an old hulk, tied up at a wharf, which can not move, is at sea, ought not to be paid, provided they are barred by the reasonable statute of limitations which we apply to every suit that is ever brought in the Court of Claims.

Mr. MANDERSON. I shall vote for this amendment, and I want to give very briefly my reasons for that vote. I do not pretend to be a sea lawyer, but it seems to me in this debate that some of the lawyers of the body are at sea. [Laughter.]

I do not like to criticise naval legislation, yet I feel tempted to do so; perhaps I ought not to; I hardly know a marline spike from a boat hook; but I know that in the Army of the United States there is no distinction of duty.

The officer who has a soft place, a very nice billet here in the city of Washington, being on duty receives the pay of his rank just the same as though he might be on duty in the West at some disagreeable frontier post engaged, perhaps, in Indian warfare. There is no distinction. If he is on duty his pay is the same.

Mr. HALE. There ought to be a distinction.

Mr. MANDERSON. I do not think there ought to be a distinction. The officer of the Army or of the Navy who is on duty should receive the pay of his rank.

Mr. CHANDLER. Will the Senator allow me right there?

Mr. MANDERSON. Yes.

Mr. CHANDLER. Does not the Senator see that in most cases an army officer wherever he is on duty, can have his family with him; but when a naval officer goes to sea he can not take his family with him, but must leave them at home. So it is just and right in the case of naval officers, although it may not be in the case of army officers, to have two kinds of pay, one shore-duty pay and the other sea-duty pay.

Mr. MANDERSON. I can not see that, because I know very many cases where army officers can not have their families with them.

Mr. CHANDLER. I say in most cases army officers can have their families with them.

Mr. MANDERSON. That may be true as a general proposition; but I can not see why in the case of an officer on shore or on sea duty there should be any distinction in his pay.

Mr. PALMER. Will the Senator from Nebraska allow me to make a remark?

Mr. MANDERSON. Certainly.

Mr. PALMER. By the usage of the sea service the distinction is made that shore pay is at one rate and sea pay is at another.

Mr. MANDERSON. I understand that that is the law.

Mr. PALMER. It is not so with the Army.

Mr. MANDERSON. I know.

Mr. PALMER. Those who are on shore duty get one rate of pay and those on sea duty another.

Mr. HOAR. These men were on salt water.

Mr. PALMER. Yes; they were on salt water. I suppose it would have been just the same if they were on fresh water. I suppose they were not at sea.

All I wanted to do was to call the attention of the Senator from Nebraska to the point that in the naval service the distinction between sea and shore pay is made by law and regulations, while in the Army there is no difference in pay whether the officer has a soft place or a hard place.

Mr. MANDERSON. I understand that. My understanding of the law is that there is a distinction between the pay of the army officer and the pay of the navy officer; but we have got to take the law as we find it. There is that distinction. While the wrangle has been going on between my brother lawyers here I have been trying to get my mind into a judicial condition, so that I could decide whether the Supreme Court was right or whether the lawyers in this body who oppose the decision of the Supreme Court are right.

It seems that until 1843—I make that assertion because of the recital in the opinion of the court, delivered by Mr. Justice Matthews—officers of the Navy who were engaged on duty on receiving ships received sea pay. In 1843 the Navy Department issued an executive order declaring that the receiving ships at the several stations were not to be considered vessels in commission, in sea service from that time, and until these suits were brought naval officers who were upon receiving ships did not receive sea pay.

On training ships, which are another class of ships that do not seem to go to sea, they received sea-duty pay until 1882, when, by an executive order issued by the then able able Secretary of the Navy—and my impression is that he is the gentleman who sits very near me [Mr. CHANDLER]—training ships were declared to be not at sea, but that the men who were upon such ships were entitled to shore-duty pay.

The Supreme Court of the United States in the cases I have before me overruled these respective and respectable Secretaries of the Navy. They said that an officer on a receiving ship or on a training ship was at sea within the meaning of the law, and was entitled to sea pay.

Can there be any question that that law is the law of the land, and that it is a judicial overturning of the executive orders of the Navy Department? There can be no doubt of it.

Mr. President, I understand from the statements which have been made that under these test cases—for such they were, and they all involved the same principle, it was not necessary that the United States should be sued by every naval officer who had such a claim, and the Department was right in applying the principle fixed by the Supreme Court in these decisions to the cases that were presented to it.

Before Congress could overrule the Supreme Court and put on the check of a statute of limitations, we understand that several hundred thousand dollars have been paid in these cases, and that here is a remainder of less than $100,000.

Mr. COCKRELL. Over $200,000.

Mr. MANDERSON. A remainder, perhaps, of over $200,000 that should be paid. Upon what principle can it be contended that it should not be paid. We are told that the statute of limitations should prevent its payment.

I never have had very much respect for a statute of limitations between individuals, and I have still less respect for it when the Government of the United States proposes to apply it to its servants and to its officers; but, as suggested by the Senator from Massachusetts in the remarks made by him a short time ago, I would not apply such a statute of limitations.

This statute of limitations is now proposed to be applied in a case where there has been an erroneous ruling by the executive officers of the Government in the Department. It looks to me as though the United States was proposing to take advantage of its own wrong in dealing with these people.

I do not care, for the purposes of this discussion and for the purposes of the conclusion to which I shall come, whether these persons are widows, or whether they are orphans, or whether they are living men, who, in former times, performed the service, or whether the claim agents have a fee here. That should not guide the Senate of the United States in the determination of a matter of this sort. We should not lose sight of the fact that in matters of this kind, representing as we do one of the parties to the contract, we are bound by the high court that the Constitution of the country has established.

We should follow it, and we have no right to overrule it. I can see no principle upon which these persons should not receive that which the Supreme Court of the United States has said they are entitled to, notwithstanding the fact that Secretaries of the Navy have heretofore said they were not entitled to it.

I shall vote for the amendment.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President——

Mr. COCKRELL. Will the Senator from New Hampshire allow me to make a very brief statement before he proceeds?

Mr. CHANDLER. I merely want to quote the statute to the Senator from Nebraska, and I want the Senator from Nebraska to listen to this statute:

SEC. 1571. No service shall be regarded as sea service except such as shall be performed at sea, under the orders of a Department and in vessels employed by authority of law.

Does the Senator believe that an officer serving on an old hulk with a house built over it, tied up to a wharf, never intended to move, and which can not move, is performing service at sea within the meaning of that statute?

Mr. MANDERSON. Well, Mr. President, I have more reverence, I think, for authority than the irreverent Senator from New Hampshire. The Supreme Court has said that that old hulk, tied up at the wharf and unable to go out, is at sea.

Mr. COCKRELL. No; I beg the Senator's pardon. The court has not said any such thing.

Mr. MANDERSON. I beg your pardon. It so says.

Mr. CHANDLER. The only difference between us is this: I would not pay claims of that sort unless I was obliged to pay them in pursuance of a judgment of the Court of Claims, and these men can not get into the Court of Claims because of the statute of limitations. I would apply the statute of limitations to these claims, not feeling that I was depriving the widow of her cottage, as the Senator from Massachusetts seems to think we are doing in the votes we are giving here against these claims.

Mr. MANDERSON. I wish the Senator would not lug "the widow's cottage" into the debate in my time, for I have had nothing to do with "the widow's cottage" in my argument. I have simply suggested that in preference to the opinion of the Senator from New Hampshire or my own as to whether an old hulk, lying at a wharf, unfit to go to sea, is at sea or not at sea, I would accept the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Mr. CHANDLER. Not for my guidance.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska has the floor. Does he yield to the Senator from Maine?

Mr. MANDERSON. Certainly.

Mr. HALE. The Senator invokes as the rule to govern us the Supreme Court decision that that old hulk tied up at a wharf is at sea. Is that any more a part of the law of the land to govern us than the statutes as they exist, that not one of these claimants should receive pay unless he came within the six years' limitation?

Mr. COCKRELL. Will the Senator from Maine allow me to make one remark?

Mr. HALE. In a moment. I would not have any hesitation in the case of any such decision as that in invoking the law of the land, including the statute of limitations.

Mr. COCKRELL. If the Senator will permit me, I wish to state what has been decided by the Supreme Court.

On June 30, 1881, the Secretary of the Navy placed a commanding officer in charge of the training ship New Hampshire, then at Norfolk, and authorized him to enlist a crew such as were allowed for a vessel with her complement of officers. The order declared that her officers would be considered as attached to a vessel commissioned for sea service, the same as other apprentice training vessels.

On the 1st day of April, 1882, Symonds—this is the first decision—took charge as executive officer. He was paid sea pay up to a certain date, and that was the date of the order of the Secretary of the Navy simply stopping sea pay, without at all changing the kind of service. The vessel had been fitted for sea and was cruising there in the waters ready to go to sea, intended for the sea, and he had sea pay up to a certain day. Then the Secretary said that after a certain day he should only have shore pay, and the Supreme Court decided that on that vessel, in that condition, and under that order the officer was entitled to sea pay. That was in the case of Symonds.

The next case which went to the Supreme Court was that of Bishop. Bishop was in New York, and the vessel was cruising ready for sea. In the Bishop case the court simply referred to the Symonds case and confirmed the decision in that case.

Then the next case, and these are the only cases, was the case of Strong. The court simply referred to the case of Symonds as covering the Strong case, and said that under that state of facts the officer was entitled to sea pay for a short time. The Supreme Court never said he was entitled to sea pay from 1843 up to that date. The claimant sued for pay due him within six years of the date of the suit. That is all he could sue for in the Court of Claims.

Now, after the Court of Claims had made that decision, the accounting officers of the Treasury turned around and said, "We will go back to 1843, and we will allow sea pay to every officer who was on a training ship," ships which the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER] has described as hulks on the water that could not go to sea. As soon as that was reported to Congress we passed the provision which I have read in the deficiency act of 1889. Not a solitary one of those claims was ever paid by authority of Congress or with the knowledge of Congress.

Mr. MANDERSON. Mr. President——

Mr. COCKRELL. Wait one moment.

Mr. MANDERSON. I wish to correct a statement——

Mr. COCKRELL. They went to work and paid some of them out of the regular pay, and exhausted it. That brought the question to the Senate, and then it was that we passed a law that no more money should be paid on these claims.

Mr. MANDERSON. I wish to call the attention of the Senator from Missouri to one point——

Mr. COCKRELL. Just one moment, and I will be through. Here is one officer, William B. Fitzhugh, and the sum stated is $7,000. There are others at $3,000. They would get $1,000, $2,000, and so on apiece, going back to 1843, not that the court ever decided that anybody was entitled to any such pay, for in the three cases, which are entirely different from nine-tenths of the cases, the court decided that it was sea pay the officers were entitled to.

Then the Treasury officials applied it to all training-ship service. Look down here at the navy-yard; see the vessel there?

Mr. MANDERSON. I simply wish to call the attention of the Senator from Missouri to the Symonds case and his statement as to the New Hampshire, on which ship Symonds was executive officer. If he will look at the foot of page 50 of 120 Supreme Court Report he will find this statement of facts:

It is of no consequence in this case that the New Hampshire was not, during the period in question, in such condition that she could be safely taken out to sea beyond the mainland. She was a training-ship, anchored in Narragansett Bay, during the whole time covered by the claim of the appellee, and was subject to such regulations as would have been enforced had she been put in order and used for purposes of cruising.

So she was unable to go to sea. Now, let us look at the other case. The receiving ship Wabash was covered by a roof, we are told:

She was capable of being taken out to sea under steam, her machinery and boilers being sufficient for that purpose; she could have been taken out to sea under sail, but in the condition of her boilers and machinery and her sailing apparatus, without repairs, it would not have been in either case advisable or safe.

Mr. HALE. Was there a roof over the Wabash?

Mr. MANDERSON. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALE. Yet the court says she could have gone to sea.

Mr. MANDERSON. There was a roof over the deck.

Mr. CHANDLER. It was a house-boat.

Mr. MANDERSON. I am simply following the Supreme Court. That should be a good guide.

Mr. HALE. Which judge decided the case?

Mr. MANDERSON. Mr. Justice Matthews. The other opinion was delivered by Mr. Justice Harlan; both pretty good lawyers.

Mr. HALE. They could not have been good sea judges.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move to lay the amendment on the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Missouri to lay the amendment of the Senator from Florida on the table.

Mr. GALLINGER. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

The motion to lay the amendment on the table was agreed to.

Mr. CALL. The yeas and nays were ordered before.

Mr. CULLOM. No; they were not. The motion has just been made.

Mr. CALL. I am not mistaken. The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. COCKRELL. The yeas and nays were not ordered on the motion to lay the amendment on the table.

Mr. CALL. They were ordered on the question of agreeing to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state to the Senator from Florida that the motion which has just been passed upon was a motion to lay the amendment on the table, upon which the yeas and nays were not ordered.

Mr. CALL. The yeas and nays were ordered, and I insist——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is a past amendment. Are there further amendments as in Committee of the Whole?

Mr. CAREY. I offer an amendment to be inserted after line 11, on page 41.

The SECRETARY. After line 11, on page 41, insert:

To pay salaries of custodians of abandoned military reservations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, and prior years at the rate of $480 each per annum, $21,636.30: Provided, That salaries shall only be paid to those who accepted the appointments subject to the future action of Congress in making provision for their compensation, and not to those who expressly accepted appointment on condition that they should not receive compensation.

Mr. COCKEELL. I hope the Senator from Wyoming will not insist upon the amendment. I make the point of order that it is not in order. It is not in pursuance of any law, and it is not estimated for by any Department.

Mr. CAREY. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair desires to ascertain the fact, and hopes that the Senator from Wyoming will address himself to the point of order made by the Senator from Missouri. The Chair is not advised as to whether a recommendation has or has not been made.

Mr. CAREY. I wish to make a statement in reference to the amendment; then it is within the discretion of the chairman of the committee whether he will allow the amendment to be considered.

It has been the habit of Congress to pay the salaries of the men who take care of these reservations. I wrote a letter to the Secretary and asked him to certify the amount due to one John Fields and one W. W. Thompson, who were appointed to take care of two reservations in my State.

They entered upon their appointments. In the letter of appointment, which I have here, the Secretary of the Interior said to them, "There is no appropriation to pay your compensation, but if you will accept the appointment subject to the action of Congress hereafter, go ahead." They accepted it. Congress went on afterwards and paid these men in part, paid them up to a certain time, allowing them $40 a month. The men said the amount agreed upon was $60 a month. The Secretary, after holding my letter from April 11 up to a week or two ago, answers it, and in his reply he says he has sent down a full list of those appointments, but he does not recommend the payment of the men, because of the large amount of money it would take and the condition of the Treasury.

In the case of the two men with which I am familiar, one of them went 100 miles from his home so take charge of the reservation, and the other went nearly 300 miles from the place where he lived to take charge of the reservation. They took charge of the reservations. I have in my hand letters sent to them from the Interior Department, telling them to make a statement of their account. Here are the letters. [Exhibiting.] Here is the letter in which the appointment was transmitted. I believe this is the first appropriation bill for a number of years from which there has been entirely omitted an item for the compensation of the custodians of these posts.

I have a list of those whom the Secretary said were appointed in the particular way in which I have stated. There is another list where the persons agreed to take care of the posts on condition that they were permitted to occupy certain buildings there. But in reference to this list, which calls for $21,636, I may say it is just that the men should be paid. They are just as much entitled to their salaries as are the Senators who occupy seats upon this floor entitled to theirs.

I do not think it is a good excuse for not making the appropriation this year, when Congress has made such appropriations heretofore, to say that because of the condition of the Treasury the Secretary does not advise this large expenditure at this time. The two items of men in my State amount to only $700, but I did not think it was proper to ask that they be paid and to leave the others out. I wish to call the attention of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations to a letter I have here. I have the original letter of appointment in this case.

Mr. COCKRELL. We are just wasting time. The committee can not consent to the amendment. The Senator knows that if it were legitimate and we could accept it we would, but it is out of order. It is not a case where we can choose. We must have it submitted to the Department and the estimate of the Department.

Mr. CAREY. Here is a printed submission of the matter to the Appropriations Committee by the Secretary of the Interior.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair desires to know whether the Senator from Missouri insists upon his point of order.

Mr. COCKRELL. I insist upon the point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. DOLPH. I offer an amendment and ask to have it read. I will state that I suppose it is technically a claim, but it is for money paid into the Treasury by mistake, which the officers of the Treasury would have paid back long ago if they had possessed the authority. Bills have passed the Senate in five or six different Congresses to pay the money back, but they never could get consideration in the other House. Let the amendment be read to show what it is. Of course if the Senator from Missouri makes the point of order——

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the amendment be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be read for information.

The Secretary read as follows:

To pay to Thomas Guinean, of Oregon, the assignee of Bradley S. Hoyt, deceased, of California, the sum of $160, paid the United States by said Hoyt on account of land entry at Shasta, Cal., and which entry was subsequently canceled.

To pay to Chester B. Sweet, of California, the sum of $198.66' the same being the amount of the double minimum excess erroneously paid by him to the receiver of the United States land office as double minimum excess on preëmption cash certificate numbered 1298, Shasta, Cal., for lots 1, 2, and 3, and northeast quarter of southwest quarter of section numbered 7, in township numbered 40 north, range numbered 7 west, Mount Diablo base and meridian, made at Shasta, Cal., March 17, 1886.

Mr. DOLPH. The money has been in the Treasury for a number of years, and is properly payable to these gentlemen. There is no question about the facts. The claimants do no. know any other way to get the money out of the Treasury. It is a small matter and a just matter. I hope the Senator from Missouri will let the amendment go in.

Mr. COCKRELL. I am compelled to make the point of order. It is a pure claim.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. DUBOIS. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The SECRETARY. On page 52, line 8, strike out "$500" and insert "$1,000," and in line 13 strike out "one" and insert "two;" so as to read:

To pay Richard W. Young and C. S. Varian $1,000 each, in full for services rendered in the matter of the indictment of Lieut. B. D. Buck, Sergt. Frederick Linse, and Private Edward C. Sheffield, charged with homicide, at the Fort Douglas military reservation, of J. W. Leonard, $2,000.

Mr. DUBOIS. I can not understand why the Appropriations Committee have cut down the amount.

Mr. COCKRELL. That is the provision in the bill as it came from the other House. The Senate did not change it.

Mr. DUBOIS. Allow me to explain it. I think it ought to be put back to $1,000. Mr. Young and Mr. Varian, attorneys in Salt Lake City, were appointed by the Attorney-General to act in the case, these men having been charged with murder. They conducted the business for the Government at the request of the Government, and presented their bill. There is a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury asking that $1,000 be allowed each of these gentlemen, and there is also a letter from the Attorney-General, in which he says:

In my judgment the services rendered by the counsel are reasonably worth $1,000 each.

In the bill it is proposed to pay these men $500 each in full for the services rendered. It seems to me that $1,000 each is a just compensation. But I do not care to delay the Senate, and I am willing that the vote shall be taken.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. DUBOIS].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BLANCHARD. On page 59, after the word "cents," in line 3, I move to insert:

To pay T. C. Holmes and T. P. Leathers, late mail contractors, for amount of service on route 8165, Louisiana, from April 1 to May 31, 1861, $6,703.30.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move to lay the amendment on the table.

Mr. BLANCHARD. The Senator from Missouri will hardly take me off my feet.

Mr. COCKRELL. I withdraw the motion. I did not know that the Senator wished to say anything. I waited for him, and he did not address the Chair.

Mr. BLANCHARD. I was waiting for the Senator from Missouri to make the point of order against the amendment, if he desired. I should prefer to discuss the point of order if one is to be made, but inasmuch as the Senator from Missouri does not make the point of order against it, I will assume that he has none to make, and will therefore address myself to the merits of the amendment.

Mr. COCKRELL. I do not want the Senator from Louisiana to labor under any hallucination. I shall certainly make a point of order upon the amendment.

Mr. BLANCHARD. I trust, then, the Senator from Missouri will do it now.

Mr. COCKRELL. Then I make the point of order, and will reserve the motion to lay the amendment on the table.

Mr. BLANCHARD. What is the point of order?

Mr. COCKRELL. The point of order is that it is an old claim, an antebellum claim, which has been rejected by the Senate from time immemorial. It is a claim pure and simple, and comes under the rule which I have heretofore quoted.

Mr. BLANCHARD. I do not think this claim has ever been before the Senate in this shape, and I am sure the Senator from Missouri can not point to any instance of its ever having been before the Senate in any other shape at any time. If the Senator from Missouri makes the point of order against the amendment under Rule XVI of the standing rules of the Senate, then the point of order is not good.

I presume it is under clause 4 of Rule XVI that the Senator makes the point of order, though he did not so state.

Mr. President, I call your attention to that clause. It declares that—

No amendment, the object of which is to provide for a private claim, shall be received to any general appropriation bill, unless it be to carry out the provisions of an existing law or a treaty stipulation.

Mr. BLANCHARD. The amendment I have sent up is to carry out "the provisions of an existing law." I hold in my hand the estimate of the Treasury Department, made in 1886, where this very claim, after having been audited by the Auditor of the Treasury for the Post-Office Department, was transmitted to the Secretary of the Treasury, and by him sent up as an estimate for an appropriation in that year. It was never appropriated for.

I refer to House Executive Documents, first session Forty-ninth Congress, volume 30, and will read for the information of the Presiding Officer, the item covering this claim:

T. C. Holmes and T. P. Leathers, late mail contractors, for amount of service on route 8165, Louisiana, from April 1 to May 31, 1861, $6,703.30.

That is the language of the amendment I have offered. There, I repeat, is the estimate of the Treasury Department made in 1886, for this very claim, after the same had been duly audited, and no appropriation has heretofore been made to pay it.

I have here two letters, dated May 7 and May 25, 1894, from the present Auditor of the Treasury for the Post-Office Department. I will read one of them. It will be seen that the amendment I offer covers only about one-half of the amount which the Auditor states in his letter of May 7, 1894, to be due the contractors.

The reason why I sent up an amendment covering a smaller sum was because in the estimate which I have read, submitted in 1886, only one of the claims was included, to wit, the one on the mail contract in Louisiana. There were two of these mail contracts, one in Mississippi, being route No. 7402, and the other in Louisiana, being route No. 8165. The Treasury Department only included one of the claims in its estimate in 1886, and that was on the Louisiana route.

I confined the amendment to the amount due under the service rendered on the Louisiana route because it was the only one included in the estimate, and because if confined to that amount only the amendment would not be subject to the point of order. If I had included in the amendment the full amount due the parties the point of order would have been good, because it has never come up before Congress in the shape of an estimate from the Treasury Department. Confining it to the Louisiana route, however, I point to the estimate of the Treasury Department based upon the audit of the accounting officers of the Treasury for the Post-Office Department, and submit confidently that the point of order does not lie.

The existing law is well known and need not be cited; it is the general postal route law, which authorizes the Postmaster-General to enter into contracts for the carriage of the United States mails. I take it that the particular statute authorizing this does not need to be referred to. It has been the law ever since the Government had its inception that the Postmaster-General could award contracts for the carriage of the mails, and under that law contracts have been awarded for the last hundred years in this country.

I submit, therefore, that when I refer to the general postal law authorizing the Postmaster-General to make contracts for the carriage of the United States mail, it is sufficient. I need not enumerate all the statutes enacted from time to time referring to this subject, and authorizing the letting of mail contracts.

Mr. President, Capt. Leathers is an old and worthy citizen of my State. For many years he was captain of some of the finest steamboats on the Mississippi River, dating as far back as the early thirties. He is now old and impoverished and this money is justly his due.

It is a claim based upon existing law and having been stated and audited by the accounting officers of the Treasury for the Post-Office Department, it comes before the Senate in proper shape for its action.

Mr. President, on the 7th day of May the present Auditor of the Treasury for the Post-Office Department wrote this letter:

Your letter of the 30th ultimo, addressed to the honorable Postmaster-General, relative to the claim of Messrs. Holmes and Leathers, for carrying the mails in Mississippi and Louisiana in 1861, has been forwarded to this office. In reply, I have the honor to inform you that the records of this office show that T. C. Holmes and T. P. Leathers, under the firm name of "Holmes & Leathers," were contractors on route No. 7402, Mississippi, and No. 8165, Louisiana; that payment on the former route was made in full to December 31, 1860, and on the latter route to March 31, 1861, and that there is standing to their credit for service from January 1 to May 31, 1861, on route No. 7402, the sum of $6,207.05, and for service from April 1 to May 31, 1861, on route No. 8165, the sum of $6,703.30, a total of $12,910.25.

It is the last of these amounts, to wit, the sum of $6,703.30 that the amendment covers, and not the other. The former is purposely left out because it was not included in the estimates in 1886. The amount which the amendment covers was included in the estimates submitted in 1886 for appropriation. The letter goes on to say:

In 1882 a part of this claim was taken before the Court of Claims—

That was for the Mississippi route—and in 1886 a part was reported to Congress for an appropriation.

That was for the Louisiana route. The letter goes on to state:

No provision, however, was made by Congress for its payment, and if any action was taken by the Court of Claims in the case, this office has not been advised.

Within the past year this office has been put in possession of a register of payments made to mail contractors, under contracts with the United States and others, by the Confederate States government, a careful examination of which fails to disclose any payments to Holmes & Leathers on account of their contracts with the United States.

This, then, is a claim growing out of the carriage of the mails just about the time the war broke out in 1861. Here is a statement of the Auditor of the Treasury for the Post-Office Department to the effect that the Confederate register of payments made to mail contractors of that period discloses no payment made to Holmes & Leathers.

The letter of the Auditor of the Treasury which I hold in my hand shows that the United States Government has never paid Holmes & Leathers. It is therefore a just claim against the Government, audited by the Treasury, reported in the estimates of the Treasury for 1886, and referred to now by the Auditor of the Treasury for the Post-Office Department as being a just claim due by the Government.

More than that, Mr. President, I hold in my hand a report made by Mr. COX of Tennessee during the present session of Congress to the House of Representatives, dated May 8, 1894, sustaining this claim, and reporting the bill for the relief of these parties favorably. This report was made from the Committee on Claims of the House. Here is the whole report, which includes letters from the former Auditors, Mr. McConville and Mr. T. B. Coulter, both stating this account to be just and due, and one that ought to be paid by the Government.

More than that, the Committee on Claims of the Senate, during the present session of Congress, have reported this claim favorably. I introduced the amendment and had it printed and referred to the Committee on Appropriations. Now, what more is there to be said? It seems to me that this is a just claim and ought to be paid. It also appears clear that the point of order made against the amendment is not good.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. JARVIS in the chair). Does the Senator from Missouri insist on the point of order?

Mr. COCKRELL. I insist upon my point of order; and the Senator from Louisiana has proved that the point of order is correct.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is of opinion that the point of order is well taken.

Mr. BLANCHARD. The Chair gave no reasons for sustaining the point of order, and I respectfully appeal from the decision of the Chair, pending which I move that the Senate adjourn.

Mr. COCKRELL. I hope the Senate will not adjourn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Louisiana that the Senate do now adjourn.

The motion was not agreed to.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Mr. President, I suggest the want of a quorum.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the roll be called.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allen,	Dolph,	Jones, Ark.	Power,
Allison,	Dubois,	Kyle,	Proctor,
Bate,	Frye,	Lindsay,	Pugh,
Berry,	Gallinger,	McLaurin,	Roach,
Blackburn,	George,	McMillan,	Sheup,
Blanchard,	Gibson,	Manderson,	Squire,
Brice,	Gorman,	Mitchell, Oregon	Stewart,
Carey,	Hale,	Palmer,	Teller,
Chandler,	Harris,	Pasco,	Turpie,
Cockrell,	Hawley,	Patton,	Vilas,
Coke,	Hill,	Peffer,	Washburn,
Cullom,	Hoar,	Perkins,	White.
Davis,	Jarvis,	Platt,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary reports fifty-one Senators as answering to their names. A quorum of the Senate is present. Does the Senator from Louisiana insist upon his appeal?

Mr. BLANCHARD. I do.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana appeals from the decision of the Chair. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Senate?

Mr. ALLEN. I do not know that I understand the objection of the Senator from Missouri, and I should like to have the Reporter read the objection as made by that Senator.

Mr. COCKRELL. The objection was that "no amendment, the object of which is to provide for a private claim, shall be received to any general appropriation bill, unless it be to carry out the provisions of an existing law or a treaty stipulation, which shall be cited on the face of the amendment;" and the Senator from Louisiana read the report of the Committee on Claims of the Senate and the report of the Committee on Claims in the House; and the claimants themselves insisted that it was a claim, and took it to the Court of Claims.

Mr. ALLEN. I should like to have the Reporter read the objection as made by the Senator from Missouri at the time the Chair ruled on this question.

Mr. HALE. But the Chair has stated the ruling.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state that the Senator from Louisiana offers an amendment to pay a private claim, which the Chair is of opinion, under section 4 of Rule XVI, is not in order. The question of order having been raised, the Secretary will read the rule.

Mr. ALLEN. That is not the request that I made.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state the question. The Secretary will read the rule.

The Secretary read the fourth clause of Rule XVI, as follows:

4. No amendment, the object of which is to provide for a private claim, shall be received to any general appropriation bill, unless it be to carry out the provisions of an existing law or a treaty stipulation, which shall be cited on the face of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under this section of the rule the Chair sustains the point of order raised by the Senator from Missouri, and from that decision the Senator from Louisiana appeals. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Senate?

Mr. HALE. I move to lay the appeal on the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine moves——

Mr. ALLEN. I should like to know how the Senator from Maine can get the floor when I have it. I have the floor. I was recognized by the Chair.

Mr. HALE. I do not want to interfere with the Senator. I thought he was through.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will hear the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. HALE. When the Senator from Nebraska is through I shall ask leave to make the motion I have indicated.

Mr. ALLEN. The request I made of the Chair was that the objection as stated by the Senator from Missouri, as it existed at the time the Chair made the ruling, be read—not what the Senator from Missouri says now, but what he said before. What objection did he make before? I should like to have read for information that objection as it was stated by him. I am quite well satisfied that the Senator from Missouri did not make the objection he now makes. What he said at that time was that it was an antebellum claim, and that was the only objection he did make.

Mr. COCKRELL. Yes; that it is a claim; and that is exactly what I said subsequently.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The ruling of the Chair was not based upon whether it was an antebellum claim or not. It was based merely on the fact that in the opinion of the Chair it is a private claim.

Mr. ALLEN. Is it possible to get the objection of the Senator from Missouri read as he made it at the time the Chair ruled the amendment to be out of order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair can not order it read because it is not in writing. The Senator from Missouri can restate it if he will.

Mr. ALLEN. The objection of the Senator from Missouri is in writing. The Reporter has it. It has been the custom since I have been here when a request was made to have a statement of a Senator read to read it.

Mr. HALE. Of course if the Senator will allow me, he will gain nothing by any language which the Senator from Missouri may have used. The point of order is open at any time, to be made by any member of the Senate, and the rule is so clear and plain, as read by direction of the Chair, that nobody can mistake as to what it is.

Mr. ALLEN. That may be true, but that is not germane to the question. I have no interest whatever in the amendment of the Senator from Louisiana. I never heard of the matter before. But having been myself the victim on one or two occasions of snap judgment and a misconstruction of the rules of the Senate, I do feel an interest in it. A very few months ago I offered an amendment which was perfectly germane to the subject-matter of the bill, which was an appropriation itself, and which the Chair ruled was general legislation, when there was not a solitary feature of general legislation about it.

I insist that the Senate is obliged to follow some kind of a guide for the interpretation of the Senate rules precisely as we are obliged to follow the ordinary rules for the construction of a statute. It is not within the power of the Presiding Officer to say that a given rule is violated in offering an amendment when, under the ordinary construction of the rule, it can not be construed to fall within the objection.

It has been the practice for the last year to my certain knowledge to have such a request as I have made complied with. If the Chair insists that it shall not be done I have no power to require it, but it has been the rule in the Senate within the last year to my certain knowledge that whenever a Senator has requested the reading of an objection or the statement of another Senator upon any disputed question the Chair has promptly ordered the reading of such statement.

Mr. COCKRELL. Will the Senator allow me to make one statement?

Mr. ALLEN. Certainly.

Mr. COCKRELL. Certainly the Senator was not present when the amendment was first offered. I first rose and moved to lay it on the table.

Mr. ALLEN. I was right here at the time.

Mr. COCKRELL. Then the Senator from Louisiana stated that he had supposed I would make the point of order.

Mr. ALLEN. I heard the Senator.

Mr. COCKRELL. Thereupon I made the point of order and referred to this identical clause of the rule.

Mr. ALLEN. I heard the whole proceeding. There was no rule referred to at that time. The Senator from Missouri, sitting in his chair and without rising, said that he made the objection that it was an antebellum claim; that it had been considered here and rejected by the Senate on several occasions. That was the only definite language used by him. There was not a solitary rule of the Senate pointed out which the amendment of the Senator from Louisiana violated—not one.

Mr. TELLER. If the Senator from Nebraska will allow me, I should like to suggest that a Senator who raises a point of order does not have to cite any rule. A bare statement that the point of order is made has been the practice of the Senate. Any Senator raises a question of order on that statement. He never cites the rule unless somebody asks for it, and it is immaterial what reasons he gives. He can not argue. It is not a debatable question. All he does is to say that he raises the point of order. That is the practice of the Senate.

Mr. CULLOM. And then it is the duty of the Chair to decide the point of order.

Mr. ALLEN. I presume that is true, but I do not see that that is germane to the question. Does the Senator from Colorado know of any rule of the Senate which prohibits the allowance of a claim because it is an antebellum claim?

Mr. TELLER. It does not make any difference what reason the Senator gives for raising the point of order. He may give any reason when he raises the point of order. It is for the Chair to determine under the rules whether the amendment is in order or not. He might give a reason entirely futile and useless; but the Chair applies the rule. So the Senator's objections are simply trifling.

Mr. ALLEN. I have not the slightest doubt that the statement of the Senator from Colorado is correct, but what I claim is that the Senator from Missouri did not raise any point of order. He did not make a solitary objection that is covered by a rule of the Senate unless there is a rule of the Senate to the effect that a claim can not be allowed when it is an antebellum claim. That was his language, and the only language he used in making the objection. If there is a rule of that kind I suppose it is properly enforced by the ruling of the Chair; but I insist that when a Senator raises a point of order he must be able to point to some rule which covers the point he raises.

Mr. HALE. If the Senator will allow me, I will state that he is clearly wrong. The rules of the body are presumed to be known to all, and the Chair represents the knowledge of the body upon the rules. A Senator raises a point of order. If the Chair inquires of the Senator raising the point of order upon what clause in the rule he bases the point of order, then the Senator will naturally state it; but without such an inquiry, it is not necessary to state anything.

Mr. ALLEN. I presume that is true; I do not doubt it at all; but my contention is that the Senator from Missouri did not raise any point of order that is covered by a solitary rule of this body.

Mr. HALE. That is for the Chair to decide.

Mr. ALLEN. Not necessarily so.

Mr. HALE. It is for the Chair to decide. If the Chair says that no point of order has been presented and directs that the proceeding shall go on, that is the end of it, unless an appeal is taken from his decision.

Mr. ALLEN. It is surprising——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state, if the Senator from Nebraska will permit, that the Chair is distinctly of the impression that when the Senator from Missouri raised the question of order he stated that he raised it under paragraph 4 of Rule XVI.

Mr. ALLEN. If the Senator from Missouri made that statement, and the RECORD will show it, I will withdraw every particle of objection I have made. He made no statement of that kind, as I recollect.

Mr. HILL. I do not desire to interfere in this discussion, but it seems to me that we are wasting time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield the floor?

Mr. ALLEN. I do not yield the floor, but I will yield to the Senator from New York for a question.

Mr. HILL. I simply suggest, in the interest of harmony, that the usual course be pursued, and that the stenographer shall read just what the Senator from Missouri said when he first made the point of order.

Mr ALLEN. That will doubtless cover it. That is exactly what I have been asking the Chair for nearly half an hour to have done, to have read the language which the Senator from Missouri used in stating his objection to the amendment before the Chair ruled upon this question—not his language since that time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska will suspend for a moment, so that the Reporter may read the language used by the Senator from Missouri. The Reporter will read his notes.

The Reporter read as follows:

Mr. COCKRELL. The point of order is that it is an old claim, an antebellum claim, which has been rejected by the Senate from time immemorial. It is a claim pure and simple, and comes under the rule which I have heretofore quoted.

Mr. TELLER. That ought to be satisfactory to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. HALE. Now, I move to lay the appeal on the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine moves to lay the appeal from the decision of the Chair on the table.

The motion to lay the appeal on the table was agreed to.

Mr. CHANDLER. On page 66, after line 6, I move to insert:

To W. Jasper Blackburn balance due him as member of the Fortieth Congress from Louisiana, $5,597.23.

To the representatives of Nathaniel Boyden balance due him as member of the Fortieth Congress from North Carolina, $5,652.78.

Mr. COCKRELL. I make the point of order on those cases.

Mr. CHANDLER. If the Senator will allow me, I hope he will not do that.

Mr. COCKRELL. I will withdraw the point of order for the present.

Mr. CHANDLER. I was requested to move this amendment by a member of the House of Representatives. These two gentlemen, one living and the other dead, were members of the Fortieth Congress. They were not paid the full amount they were entitled to receive, and under precedents that have been set in the case of members of the House and members of the Senate, they are entitled to the amount proposed in the amendment.

I have here a report of the House of Representatives—Report No. 769—which sets out the justice of these payments and the certificates from the accounting officers of the Treasury showing the amount proposed in the amendment to be the correct sum. I was urged by members of the House to move this amendment at a time when the frame of mind of the Senator from Missouri would be such that he would generously allow these just claims to be adopted and would not make the point of order upon this meritorious amendment.

Mr. COCKRELL. It may be very meritorious, but the Senate is not the body to pass upon this class of claims. It is a claim pure and simple, not for a salary now, but an old matter which belongs to the House of Representatives. We never interfere with the other House in such matters. We never interfere with what they pay their members.

Mr. CHANDLER. Do I understand the Senator from Missouri to insist on his point of order?

Mr. COCKRELL. I do insist upon it.

Mr. CHANDLER. I am very much surprised that the Senator insists on the point of order against these very meritorious claims.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is obliged to sustain the point of order raised by the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. SQUIRE. On page 52, after line 13, I move to insert:

For payment to Alexander M. Winston for services as attorney in defending certain pauper defendants in the United States Court at Spokane, Wash., in September, 1893, by appointment of Judge C. H. Hanford, $115.

Mr. COCKRELL. I make the point of order against the amendment.

Mr. SQUIRE. Mr. President, this is a case that I suppose is not subject to a point of order, because I have here a letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury certifying the account. He says:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, March 30, 1894.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith, for the consideration of Congress, copy of a communication from the Attorney-General of the 27th instant submitting, for an appropriation, the account of Alexander M. Winston, $115, for services rendered in defending certain pauper defendants under the order of the judge of the United States court for the district of Washington, the same to be considered in connection with similar accounts contained in House Executive Document No. 92, present session.

Respectfully, yours,

W. E. CURTIS, Acting Secretary.

The SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Then follows a letter from the Department of Justice addressed to the Secretary of the Treasury, which is as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
Washington, D. C., March 27, 1894.

SIR: Inclosed is a copy of an account of Alexander M. Winston, Spokane, Wash., approved in the sum of $115, for services rendered in defending certain pauper defendants, upon appointment by the presiding judge, Hon. Cornelius H. Hanford; said services being directed by the judge and performed by Mr. Winston under the act of July 20, 1892 (27 statutes, 252).

You are respectfully requested to forward the claim to Congress for an appropriation in the amount stated, the claim of Mr. Winston, for legal services rendered to the United States to be considered in connection with similar accounts forwarded by the Department on January 26, 1894, found in Executive Document No. 92, Fifty-third Congress, second session.

Very respectfully,

RICHARD OLNEY, Attorney-General.

The SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

Then here is a letter from Judge C. H. Hanford, stating that $115 is the exact sum due. There were four cases. One case was tried and the charge was $40, and in the three other cases the charges were $25 each. In two cases conviction was secured, and in two others the accused were found not guilty. It seems to me that a small matter of this kind ought to be agreed to promptly without any argument. I have nothing further to say. I have been told by some experienced members of the Committee on Appropriations, and I believe, that the amendment is not subject to a point of order.

Mr. COCKRELL. I make the point of order against the amendment. In the first place, it is not an estimate. It is simply a transmittal of the man's claim. It was presented to the Department of Justice and referred to the Treasury Department and reported to Congress. It is the claim of an attorney for defending a criminal when he was assigned by the court to defend the criminal. Will the Senate of the United States establish a precedent that every lawyer who is appointed by a judge to defend a criminal in a United States court shall be paid any fee the Attorney-General or anyone else may allow him? There is no law for it; none in the world. In every State court in the Union lawyers are assigned to defend criminals by the trial judge.

Mr. TELLER. And in the Federal courts, too.

Mr. COCKRELL. It has been the universal practice. The point of order is well taken that this is not a claim authorized by law. It is not estimated by the head of any Department, but is simply transmitted here for the information of Congress, for Congress to do what it pleases with it.

Mr. SQUIRE. With the approval of the Treasury Department and the Attorney-General.

Mr. CHANDLER. I ask the Senator from Missouri why in cases like this, of just claims, the accounting officers do not allow them and report them regularly to Congress?

Mr. COCKRELL. Because they have no authority to allow them. There is no law for it. They can not allow them.

Mr. CHANDLER. Is it not a debt of the United States?

Mr. TELLER. It is not a debt against the United States.

Mr. FRYE. It ought not to be.

Mr. TELLER. It ought not to be.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair holds that the point of order raised by the Senator from Missouri is well taken.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I move to insert after the last paragraph in the bill:

SEC. 6. That the sum appropriated to be paid to William Milligan, administrator of George Wattles, deceased, in the act of March 3, 1891, entitled, "An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1891, and for prior years, and for other purposes," be paid instead to William Milligan, administrator of George Wattles, deceased, but the amount thus appropriated shall not be paid until the Court of Claims shall certify to the Secretary of the Treasury that the personal representative on whose behalf the award is made represents the next of kin, or in the event the court shall find there were no next of kin, and that there was a widow, then that said sum be paid to the executor, personal representative, or next of kin of such widow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I will explain what the amendment means.

The Court of Claims under the spoliation act found a judgment of twenty thousand and some odd dollars in favor of one Mr. Milligan, and the appropriation act of 1891 made an appropriation of that amount.

Mr. COCKRELL. This is only a question of identity.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. That is all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment submitted by the Senator from Oregon.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. I hope we may be able to get through with this bill this evening, so that the Senator from Missouri will consent to our taking a recess over to-morrow.

Mr. COCKRELL. If we can get through with the bill, we shall adjourn over.

Mr. ALLISON. There is no amendment pending.

Mr. BLANCHARD. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk, to come in after the word "cents," on line 21, page 58.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 58, after the word "cents," in line 21, it is proposed to insert:

To pay T. C. Holmes and T. P. Leathers, late mail contractors, for amount of service on route 8165, Louisiana, from April 1 to May 31, 1861, $6,703.30, said Holmes & Leathers having been awarded said contract under the provisions of the acts making appropriations for the support of the postal service, passed in 1856, 1857, 1858, 1859, and 1860.

Mr. COCKRELL. I make the same point of order on that amendment which I made when it was previously offered.

Mr. GEORGE. The Chair gave no grounds upon which he based his former ruling; but it strikes me that the Senator from Louisiana has complied with the rule in his amendment as now offered. The rule provides:

No amendment, the object of which is to provide for a private claim—

The object of this amendment is to provide for a private claim. We admit that—shall be received to any general appropriation bill—

We admit that this is a general appropriation bill—

unless it be to carry out the provisions of an existing law or a treaty stipulation, which shall be cited upon the face of the amendment.

The first amendment was defective in not complying with this rule, in not reciting the statute under which the claim was made. I submit to the Chair if now, when the general law under which this contract was made is referred to and cited in the amendment, the rule has not been complied with?

Certainly, Mr. President, the rule meant this and no more: That a claim must not be a general claim arising out of some equity which the party may have supposed he had against the Government of the United States, but must be a claim arising under a statute or a treaty. The Senator from Louisiana, in his second amendment, has brought this claim literally and strictly within the rule. I hope, therefore, when the attention of the Chair is called to it, that the amendment will not be ruled out of order.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Mr. President, the only clause in the rule which is invoked by the Senator from Missouri is the one referred to by the Senator from Mississippi, and I can but repeat and emphasize his statement of the argument, that, even if this be a private claim, which is admitted, it is still not subject to the point of order, provided it be to carry out the provisions of existing law, and provided this fact is stated on the face of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Louisiana hold that the laws cited in the amendment are now in existence?

Mr. BLANCHARD. They have never been repealed. The acts of 1856, 1857, 1858, 1859, and 1860 making appropriations for the support of the postal service for those years are still in existence. The Presiding Officer, I submit, can not take the position that they are no longer in existence because they have been executed. There were legislative provisions in those acts besides the clauses appropriating money. Are they not existing law, and are they not just as much a part of the law as the sums appropriated in the acts for the support of the postal service?

We point to the laws passed in those years as having authorized the Postmaster-General to make these contracts. He did make them, and the letters of the Auditor, which I have read, show it. This executive document, making an estimate for an appropriation to cover this very claim, shows it; and there has been, I submit to the Chair, in the form in which this amendment is last presented, a substantial and full compliance with every part of clause 4 of Rule XVI.

Mr. GEORGE. Will the Senator allow me?

Mr. BLANCHARD. Certainly.

Mr. GEORGE. I beg leave to suggest to the Chair that when a statute is passed which authorizes a contract to be made, and in pursuance of that statute the contract is made, unless we hold that there shall be a repudiation of the obligation of the Government, the statute is existent always and existing until the contract is complied with.

Mr. COCKRELL. I shall not consume the time of the Senate in this matter. This is purely a claim, and it is not authorized by the provisions of any existing law.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Mr. President, how can the Senator from Missouri, the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, say that this not authorized by an existing law when the amendment cites the law which authorizes it? If it be not true, let the Senator produce the acts and show it.

There is a full compliance with the rule when we ask the payment of this claim pursuant to the provisions of existing law and name the law. If the law be not so written, that would be an argument against the amendment on its merits; but when the amendment cites the law upon which the claim is based and by which the incurring of the debt was authorized, the point of order can have no force. It would certainly be doing violence to the parliamentary law which governs this body to hold—

Mr. COCKRELL. Why not get out a mandamus to compel its payment if the law authorizes it?

Mr. GEORGE. There is no appropriation from which it can be paid.

Mr. BLANCHARD. There is no appropriation from which it can be paid, as suggested by the Senator from Mississippi. We point to the laws which authorize the contract, and we prove abundantly by authentic documents from the Treasury Department and the Post-Office Department that the contract was made and this money earned under it, and the same has never been paid.

Mr. ALLEN. I should like to ask the Senator from Louisiana a question. I ask if that contract was authorized by any statute whether it would be possible for this Government to repeal the law so as to affect this contract after it was once accepted and its performance entered into?

Mr. BLANCHARD. It would not be. The answer is obvious; when the contract was made under existing law between the Government of the United States and this mail contractor, his rights under that contract became vested rights, and the law upon which the contract was based could not even be repealed to his prejudice.

Mr. ALLEN. The law authorizing the contract never has been repealed, as I understand?

Mr. BLANCHARD. In point of fact it never has been repealed. It is on the statute books to-day.

Mr. President, I submit that unless clause 4 of Rule XVI is a perpetual bar against any amendment, the amendment I offer is in order. If the Chair is going to put such a construction on the rule as will prevent the introduction of any amendment under it, then the point of order made by the Senator from Missouri under this rule is good.

But I submit that if the semblance of a reasonable construction be placed upon clause 4 of Rule XVI, it will admit this amendment, even if we construe the language of the rule stricti juris. The Chair must see that every part of the clause of the rule has been met by this amendment. The amendment cites the existing law under which the debt was contracted, and names the time when the act which authorized the making of this contract was passed.

It seems to me too clear for further argument that the amendment is within the purview and scope of clause 4 of Rule XVI.

Mr. GEORGE. I wish to make just one other suggestion, Mr. President. I know this claimant is an honest man and I know this is an honest claim, and I want to suggest to the Chair that when a criminal statute is repealed all prosecutions under that statute fall with it. When a statute of a civil nature in relation to personal rights is repealed, every single right which accrues under that statute remains and the statute remains for the purpose of enforcing such rights.

There has been no attempt to show that there has been any express repeal of these laws, and I want the Chair to understane it and the Senate to understand it. So that a rule of the Senate intended to cut off any sort of private claim which people might set up is used for the purpose of defeating a solemn contract made by the Government of the United States under a law passed by Congress, which law has not been and can never be repealed so far as this contract is concerned. I think if there is anything in human reason upon which we can stand secure, it is that this amendment is not within the scope and purview of the rule cited.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana has offered an amendment, which has been read. The Senator from Missouri raises a question of order under paragraph 4 of Rule XVI that the amendment is not in order. The Chair has no difficulty in deciding the question. If the Chair makes a mistake it can be corrected by appeal. The Chair is of opinion that the point of order is well taken, and therefore sustains it.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended.

Mr. PASCO. I wish to have the last amendment made as in Committee of the Whole reserved, so that I may offer a substitute for it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment indicated by the Senator from Florida will be reserved. The question is on concurring in the other amendments made as in Committee of the Whole.

The amendments were concurred in.

Mr. PASCO. I offer a substitute for the last amendment referring to the claim of John A. Brimmer, jr., administrator of John Gilliat, which I ask may be read. It is on page 177, beginning in line 6.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment proposed to be reserved will be read.

The SECRETARY. On page 77, beginning with line 6, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, inserted:

That the sum appropriated in the act of March 3, 1891, entitled "An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1891, and for prior years, and for other purposes," to be paid to John A. Brimmer, jr., administrator of John Gilliat, deceased, to be paid instead to the administrator of Thomas Gilliat, deceased, the original sufferer.

Mr. PASCO. I offer a substitute for that amendment.

Mr. COCKRELL. I have examined the substitute, and will accept it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Florida to the amendment which has been read will be stated.

The Secretary read as follows:

That the sum of $35,840.44 appropriated to be paid to John A. Brimmer, jr., administrator of John Gilliat, deceased, in the act of March 3, 1891, entitled "An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1891, and for prior years, and for other purposes," be paid to the person or persons entitled to recover and receive the same, to be ascertained by the Court of Claims upon sufficient evidence, and certified to the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. PASCO. This is a French spoliation claim. It became my duty as a member of the Committee on Claims to examine this matter at the last session of Congress, and this was the form in which it was deemed best by the committee that the item should be placed upon the bill. It is for that reason I have offered the substitute.

Mr. COCKRELL. It is accepted.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

Mr. DOLPH. I rise to a question of privilege. I present the conference report on the river and harbor bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read.

The Secretary proceeded to read the report, but was interrupted by——

Mr. WHITE. I desire to inquire whether the Senator from Oregon expects to press the consideration of this conference report to-night? I will say that there are certain matters in the report which I desire to examine. I have not been able to see the report, and I desire to make some objection to certain matters which I understand are contained in it.

Mr. HARRIS. I suggest to the Senator to let the report be read, and the question then will be whether we shall proceed to consider it or not.

Mr. WHITE. I rose for the purpose of ascertaining whether it was desired to act upon the report to-night.

Mr. BLANCHARD. I desire to make the same statement in reference to this conference report as has been made by the Senator from California. I do not think it is well to press the adoption of the conference report to-night. The report has just been made to the Senate. We have not had time yet to examine it, and I think it ought to be printed and lie over until the next legislative day.

Mr. BERRY. The report should be read first, Mr. President.

Mr. DOLPH. I desire to make a statement before the report is acted upon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read.

Mr. CHANDLER. Before the Secretary proceeds with the reading, I desire to suggest that if the report is not to be acted on to-night, the reading by unanimous consent be omitted, and then the Senate can adjourn. Let the report be printed.

Mr. HALE. Yes; it ought to be printed.

Mr. DOLPH. I desire to say that it is thought by members of the committee very important that this report should either be acted upon to-night or be acted upon to-morrow. The Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN], who precedes me on the committee of conference, has been here all the afternoon intending to present the report, but not desiring to interfere with the Senator from Missouri in the consideration of the bill which has been before the Senate, when he left he said to me that, if the report was not acted upon to-night, he desired that the Senate should meet to-morrow for its consideration.

If it is understood that we shall meet to-morrow and consider the report, I shall have no objection whatever to its being printed in the RECORD, and then going over until to-morrow; but if the proposition is to adjourn over to-morrow, then I ask that the report be acted upon to-night. If it is considered to-night or to-morrow when the Senate meets, it can be engrossed and prepared for the signatures of the officers of the Senate and House of Representatives on Monday.

If that can not be done, then there would be a loss of at least one further day, and they could not be prepared and signed by the officers of the two Houses before Tuesday. It is considered important to place it before the President, as many members are anxious to adjourn at the very earliest possible moment. If the tariff bill should be disposed of in any reasonable time both branches of Congress will be desirous of adjourning.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from New Hampshire that the reading of the report be dispensed with?

Mr. DOLPH. If the report is to be considered to-night, it should be read; if not, I make the request that the Senate meet to-morrow.

Mr. BERRY. We shall have a session to-morrow.

Mr. DOLPH. If that be so, I have no objection to the report being printed in the RECORD and going over until to-morrow.

Mr. HARRIS. Let us understand this matter. I ask unanimous consent that the report be printed in the RECORD, and that the Senate meet at the usual hour to-morrow for the purpose of considering it immediately after the reading of the Journal.

Mr. CHANDLER. Will the Senator from Tennessee kindly allow me, as he substituted his request for mine, to now join in his?

Mr. HARRIS. I beg leave to retire if the Senator has made the request before, because I was not aware of it.

Mr. CHANDLER. I concur cordially in the Senator's request, and I hope it will be unanimously adopted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request?

Mr. HOAR. What is the request?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That the reading of the conference report be suspended; that the report be printed in the RECORD, and be taken up to-morrow immediately after the reading of the Journal. Is there objection?

Mr. HOAR. Why not have the report read and let it go over until to-morrow in the usual way? The Senate can then take it up.

Mr. HARRIS. I think the understanding is that we meet to-morrow especially to consider this matter. When it is considered, then the Senate can determine what further order it will make.

Mr. HOAR. I shall not interpose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the order being made? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The report is as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6518) "making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes," having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 3, 20, 23, 28, 32, 33, 35, 39, 62, 84, 113, 122, 125, 133, 135, 150, 151, 155, 185, and 229.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 2, 5, 6, 7, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 18, 21, 22, 26, 34, 37, 38, 40, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 59, 60, 61, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 80, 81, 82, 83, 85, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 96, 99, 101, 103, 104, 105, 106, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 124, 125, 127, 128, 130, 131, 132, 136, 139, 141, 144, 146, 147, 148, 149, 154, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 169, 182, 183, 184, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 224, 226, 227, and 228, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 1, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$30,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 4, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$200,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 8, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$40,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 9, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: After the word "improvement," in line 24, page 4, add as a separate paragraph the following:

"Merrimac River, Massachusetts: The Secretary of War is directed out of the appropriation on hand to make a resurvey of said river with a view of obtaining a depth up to Haverhill equal to that over the bar at Newburyport."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 17, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$15,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 19, and agree to the same with an amendment in the nature of a substitute, as follows: Strike out all of amendment numbered 19, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Improving Bay Ridge and Red Hook Channels, New York Harbor, New York: Continuing improvement of Bay Ridge Channel by dredging out and opening the same from a point at its junction with the Gowanus Creek Channel (near Twenty-eighth street), southerly therefrom, along and in front of Gowanus Bay and Bay Ridge to a point where the said Bay Ridge Channel so to be opened, encounters a 26-foot contour or depth of water, so that the channel, so to be opened, shall be of a uniform depth of 26 feet and a width of 800 feet at low water, and continuing improvement of Red Hook Channel from its junction with the Bay Ridge Channel to its connection with the Buttermilk Channel, to obtain a depth of 26 feet at mean low water and a width of 400 feet, $150,000: Provided, That the Secretary of War may, in his discretion, expend $20,000 of said appropriation in improving Gowanus Creek Channel under the project to obtain 21 feet depth of water."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 24, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out the matter proposed to be inserted and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Improving Niagara River from Tonawanda to Port Day with a view to obtaining a channel of 12 feet depth to Schlosser's Dock by cutting through the shoal at the head of Conners Island as indicated in the report of the Chief of Engineers for 1893, page 3113, $10,000; and the unexpended balance of the appropriation heretofore made in the river and harbor act of July 13, 1892, for the improvement of the Niagara River from Tonawanda to Port Day is hereby reappropriated for this purpose."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 25, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$50,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 27, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out the language proposed to be inserted by the Senate, and insert after line 17, page 66, the following as a new paragraph:

"Baltimore Harbor: To widen the ship channel to 1,000 feet."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 29, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$100,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 30, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$110,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 31, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: On page 14, line 8, strike out the word "twenty-six" and insert in lieu thereof "twenty-five;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 36, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$80,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 41, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$275,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 47, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$70,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 48, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$20,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 58, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$20,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 69, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out the following item as contained in lines 22 and 23, page 24: "Improving harbor at Wilmington, Cal.: Continuing improvement, $40,000;" the same having been inserted in the bill by mistake, the improvement having heretofore been completed; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 79, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$15,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 86, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$170,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 87, and agree to the same with amendments, as follows: Restore the matter proposed to be stricken out; strike out all after the word "separately," in line 22, page 30, down to and including the word "company" in line 1, page 31; strike out all after the word "river" in line 3, page 31, down to and including the word "subject" in line 5, same page; and strike out the remainder of the paragraph, beginning with the word "And" in line 8, same page; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 95, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed, insert "$150,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 97, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed, insert "$30,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 98, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$4,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 100, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$14,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 102, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out the proviso, as contained in lines 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, and 15, page 36; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 107, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$7,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 121, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: After the word "hundred" in line 17, page 44, insert "and ten;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 123, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$40,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 129, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out the sum proposed and insert in lieu thereof the following: "$135,000, of which $10,000 shall be used in improving Rough River, Kentucky;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 134, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$30,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 137, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: At the end of the paragraph proposed to be inserted strike out the period and insert a colon and the following proviso: "Provided, That nothing herein shall be construed to commit the Government to proceed with the construction of said improvement;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 138, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$51,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 140, and agree to the same with amendments as follows: After the word "Minneapolis," in line 25, page 57, strike out the period and insert in lieu thereof a comma; strike out all of line 1, page 58, and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Fifty-one thousand dollars, which together with;" in line 3, same page, strike out the words "to further improvement," and insert in lieu thereof the words "shall be expended;" in line 3, same page, after the word "ninety-four," strike out the period, insert a comma, and the following words: "by the construction of lock and dam numbered 2 in the same project;" strike out the remainder of the paragraph beginning with the word "and," in line 8, same page; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 142, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$110,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 143, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: After the word "dollars," in line 2, page 59, strike out the period and insert a comma, and the following words: "Of which $10,000 may be used in dredging at the mouth of Wolf River, in the discretion of the Secretary of War;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 145, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: After the word "Avoyelles," in line 20, page 59, strike out the period, insert

in lieu thereof a comma, and at the end of the paragraph add the following: "And the said Commission is directed to report to Congress, in their next regular report, their views on the advisability of effecting a separation between the Mississippi and Red Rivers, at the present junction thereof and maintaining navigation between the same through Bayou Plaquemine or by means of a canal;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 152, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out the entire paragraph proposed to be inserted and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Missouri River, from its mouth to the lower limits of Sioux City, Iowa: The Missouri River Commission is authorized and directed to expend from the appropriations for the improvement of said river $75,000 in the rectification of the river at Omaha, Nebr.; $35,000 at Atchison, Kans.; and $50,000 at St. Joseph and other localities on the river in the State of Missouri where the Commission may deem such improvement necessary."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 153, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 22, page 60, strike out the word "fifty-five" and insert in lieu thereof the word "ten;" on page 61 strike out all of lines 1, 2, and 3, and the words "and Bismarck," in line 4, and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 161, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 22, page 64, strike out the words "two hundred and fifty," and insert in lieu thereof the words "one hundred;" strike out all after the word "Provided," in line 22, page 64, down to and including the word "further," in line 5, page 65; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 168, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$25,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of Senate numbered 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, and 181, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out all of section 2 of the bill, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"SEC. 2. It shall be unlawful for any person or persons to engage in fishing or dredging for shell fish in any of the channels leading to or from the harbor of New York, or to interfere in any way with the safe navigation of those channels by ocean steamships and ships of deep draft.

"Any person or persons violating the foregoing provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by fine or imprisonment, or both, such fine to be not more than $250 nor less than $50, and the imprisonment to be not more than six months nor less than thirty days, either or both united, as the judge before whom conviction is obtained shall decide.

"It shall be the duty of the United States supervisor of the harbor to enforce this act, and the deputy inspectors of the said supervisor shall have authority to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person or persons who may commit any of the acts or offenses prohibited by this act: Provided, That no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the presence of the supervisor or his inspector or deputy inspectors, or either of them: And provided further, That whenever any such arrest is made the person or persons so arrested shall be brought forthwith before a commissioner, judge, or court of the United States for examination of the offenses alleged against him; and such commissioner, judge, or court shall proceed in respect thereto as authorized by law in case of crimes against the United States."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 215, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out all of line 4, page 86, and the period at the end of line 11, page 96, and insert after the word "channel," in line 11, page 95, a comma and the following words: "And Sasanoa River, from Bath to Boothbay;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 225, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out all of line 11, page 99, and insert in line 20, page 45, after the word "improvement," the following: "Including survey from Magnolia to the city of Dallas;" and the Senate agree to the same.

M. W. RANSOM,
A. P. GORMAN,
J. N. DOLPH,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

T. C. CATCHINGS,
RUFUS E. LESTER,
THOS. J. HENDERSON,
Managers on the part of the House.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. HARRIS. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After ten minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 6 o'clock and 35 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Saturday, August 4, 1894, at 12 o'clock m.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate August 3, 1894.

SECRETARY OF LEGATION AND CONSUL-GENERAL.

Ellis Mills, of Virginia, now consul-general at Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands, to be secretary of legation and consul-general of the United States at that place.

POSTMASTERS.

John M. Griffin, to be postmaster at Madera, in the county of Madera and State of California, in the place of Lewis O. Sharp, whose commission expired July 12, 1894.

John M. Martin, to be postmaster at Ocala, in the county of Marion and State of Florida, in the place of George K. Robinson, whose commission expired April 16, 1894.

W. A. Hopkins, to be postmaster at Eminence, in the county of Henry and State of Kentucky, in the place of Henry S. Adams, removed.

Thomas Hickey, to be postmaster at Wakefield, in the county of Middlesex and State of Massachusetts, in the place of Charles B. Bowman, whose commission expired February 12, 1894.

John Huxtable, to be postmaster at Wareham, in the county of Plymouth and State of Massachusetts, in the place of John Huxtable, whose commission expired April 11, 1894.

Patrick Mahan, to be postmaster at Natick, in the county of Middlesex and State of Massachusetts, in the place of George L. Bartlett, whose commission will expire August 7, 1894.

Leonard J. Presson, to be postmaster at Gloucester, in the county of Essex and State of Massachusetts, in the place of James H. Mansfield, whose commission expired January 28, 1894.

William W. Sampson, to be postmaster at Malden, in the county of Middlesex and State of Massachusetts, whose commission expired February 28, 1894.

John Stallman, to be postmaster at Lee, in the county of Berkshire and State of Massachusetts, in the place of Frederick Gillmor, whose commission expired July 11, 1894.

George A. Sweeney, to be postmaster at Attleboro, in the county of Bristol and State of Massachusetts, in the place of Loring W. Barnes, whose commission expired June 2, 1894.

Josiah Woodbury, to be postmaster at Beverly, in the county of Essex and State of Massachusetts, in the place of Charles H. Odell, whose commission expired July 11, 1894.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate August 3, 1894.

PROMOTION IN THE ARMY.

Infantry arm.

Second Lieut. Marcus D. Cronin, Twentieth Infantry, to be first lieutenant.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY.

Passed Assistant Engineer Albert F. Dixon, to be a chief engineer.

Assistant Engineer Albert Moritz, to be a passed assistant engineer.

Paymaster Leonard A. Frailey, to be a pay inspector.

Passed Assistant Paymaster Eustace B. Rogers, to be a paymaster.

Assistant Paymaster Henry E. Jewett, to be a passed assistant.

Lieut. Charles T. Forse, to be a lieutenant-commander.

Lieut. Edwin K. Moore, to be a lieutenant-commander.

Lieut. (junior grade) Charles N. Atwater, to be a lieutenant.

Ensign William B. Whittelsey, to be a lieutenant (junior grade).

Surg. Hosea J. Babin, to be a medical inspector.

Passed Assistant Surg. Emlyn H. Marsteller, to be a surgeon.

Passed Assistant Surg. George P. Lumsden, to be a surgeon.

Passed Assistant Paymaster Mitchell C. McDonald, to be a paymaster.

Assistant Paymaster Thomas H. Hicks, to be a passed assistant paymaster.

POSTMASTERS.

William S. Sparks, to be postmaster at Delaware, in the county of Delaware and State of Ohio.

J. H. Weber, to be postmaster at Bellevue, in the county of Huron and State of Ohio.

Joshua G. Galloway, to be postmaster at National Military Home, in the county of Montgomery and State of Ohio.

C. Rudolph Brand, to be postmaster at Toledo, in the county of Lucas and State of Ohio.

George C. Columbia, to be postmaster at Lawrenceburg, in the county of Dearborn and State of Indiana.

Edward P. Jones, to be postmaster at Del Norte, in the county of Rio Grande and State of Colorado.

Charles F. Wilkins, to be postmaster at Urichsville, in the county of Tuscarawas and State of Ohio.

Henry L. Romey, to be postmaster at Bluffton, in the county of Allen and State of Ohio.

Clement R. Leonard, to be postmaster at Easton, in the county of Talbot and State of Maryland.

Wilber B. Foster, to be postmaster at Rockville, in the county of Tolland and State of Connecticut.

Stephen W. Poe, to be postmaster at Grafton, in the county of Taylor and State of West Virginia.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

FRIDAY, August 3, 1894.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by Rev. W. E. PARSON, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

PRINTING OF A BILL.

Mr. BRODERICK. Mr. Speaker, yesterday morning I asked unanimous consent for the consideration of the antilottery bill from the Senate, which I sent to the Clerk's desk, and which was read. I observe that the bill is not printed in full in the RECORD. I do not know the rule or the practice in reference to such matters, but if, under the circumstances, the full text of the bill is not necessarily entitled to appear in the RECORD, I ask unanimous consent that it may appear there.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is informed it is not customary to print in the RECORD bills for which unanimous consent is asked and to which objection is made.

Mr. BRODERICK. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be printed in the RECORD for information.

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

The bill as amended by the Committee on the Judiciary of the House is as follows:

A bill (S. 1520) for the suppression of lottery traffic through national and interstate commerce and the postal service subject to the jurisdiction and laws of the United States.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That any person who shall cause to be brought within the United States from abroad for the purpose of disposing of the same, or deposited in or carried by the mails of the United States, or carried from one State to another in the United States, any paper, certificate, or instrument purporting to be or represent a ticket, chance, share, or interest in or dependent upon the event of a lottery, so-called gift concert, or similar enterprise, offering prizes dependent upon lot or chance, or shall cause any advertisement of such lottery, so-called gift concert, or similar enterprise, offering prizes dependent upon lot or chance, to be brought into the United States, or deposited in or carried by the mails of the United States, or transferred from one State to another in the same, shall be punishable in the first offense by imprisonment for not more than two years or by a fine of not more than $1,000, or both, and in the second and after offenses by such imprisonment only.

SEC. 2. That the provisions of sections 3929 and 4041 of the United States Revised Statutes as amended, respectively, and the provisions of sections 2491 and 2492 of the United States Revised Statutes, and of sections 11, 12, and 13 of the act of Congress of October 1, 1890, entitled, "Chapter 1244. An act to reduce the revenue and equalize duties on imports, and for other purposes," and all other provisions of law for the suppression of traffic in or circulation of any such tickets, chances, shares, or interests in or other matter relating to lotteries, or for the suppression of traffic in or circulation of obscene books or articles of any kind, shall apply in support, aid, and furtherance of the enforcement of this act.

SEC. 3. That nothing herein contained shall be deemed to repeal by implication sections 3894, 3929, or 4041 of the United States Revised Statutes, or any part thereof, nor any provisions of the act of Congress of April 29, 1878, entitled "An act to prevent the sale of policy or lottery tickets in the District of Columbia," nor any provisions of the act of Congress of September 19, 1890, entitled "An act to amend certain sections of the Revised Statutes relating to lotteries, and for other purposes," nor any provision of the laws whatsoever against the establishment of lotteries, or games, or other schemes, or prizes, or chances, or the traffic in or circulation of tickets and other such papers or instruments, or the publication of advertisements or notices in anywise relating thereto.

SEC. 4. That the powers conferred upon the Postmaster-General by the statute of 1890, chapter 908, section 2, are hereby extended and made applicable to all letters or other matter sent by mail.

PUBLIC PRINTING AND BINDING.

The bill (H. R. 2650), providing for the public printing and binding and the distribution of public documents, was laid before the House.

The SPEAKER. This bill has been returned from the Senate with amendments.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I move to concur in the amendments of the Senate.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. Before that is done I would like to have some explanation.

Mr. BURROWS. What are the amendments?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. This is the general bill with reference to public printing which passed this House at the extraordinary session. The Senate has made quite a number of amendments, which relate mainly to the administrative features of the bill. Some of them provide for a further reduction in the number of documents printed—in no case for an increase. Among these various amendments there are some to which I would not be inclined to agree; but they are so unimportant as compared with the magnitude of this measure that I do not feel willing to occupy further time, or delay further the passage of this bill, by raising any question in regard to them.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. Well, that may be the gentleman's opinion, but——

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Let me complete my statement. I will yield to the gentleman after a while.

I say they have made some amendments which the Committee on Printing would not and do not favor, but they are unimportant amendments as compared with the great measure which looks to a complete reformation in the system of Government printing, and reduces the cost of the public printing so largely, that it is variously estimated to be a reduction of from two hundred to three hundred thousand dollars.

This is a bill which systematizes, methodizes, and harmonizes all the printing laws of the Government, and it is therefore, in the judgment of the committee, such a great and needed reform in the printing and distribution of public documents that it was deemed advisable, in view of the fact that these amendments were not material, to accept them, so as not to delay further the enactment of the bill into law.

This bill provides for the distribution at once of about a half a million or more of copies of public documents which are now stored in the basement of the Capitol, and provides a remedy which will prevent the accumulation hereafter of such documents, and accomplishes so many reforms, that I do not feel that we would be justified in delaying the consideration of the bill further by opposing these amendments, which, as I have said, we do not regard as material. They are mainly amendments which amount only to changes in the phraseology and verbiage of the bill; and the committee, therefore, recommend concurrence in the Senate amendments.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE of Kentucky. What committee?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. The Committee on Printing.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, when this bill was before the House it met with very much opposition from various members of this body. There is a large minority in the House who believe that the bill itself is an unwise proposition. Now, I am not advised as to the correctness——

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. How much time does the gentleman from Illinois want?

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. Well, I have taken the floor in my own right, and will occupy such time as I deem necessary.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I have not yielded the floor to the gentleman.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. But I have the floor.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. The gentleman said he wanted to ask a question.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. The gentleman from Tennessee is mistaken.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I gave way to the gentleman from Illinois under the assumption that he wanted to ask a question. The gentleman rose and, as I understood him, asked a question, and I said I would yield to him as soon as I had concluded my statement.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. I did not ask the gentleman a question, and did not rise for that purpose.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Then I decline to yield to the gentleman, as I had not concluded what I wished to say.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. Very well, if the gentleman has the floor.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Illinois afterward.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I had not completed my statement. I wish to say in this connection that this bill provides for the public printing of every kind and of all classes of public documents for the use of the Government. It provides also for printing an extra edition of the report on the Diseases of the Horse—70,000 copies—for which there is a very great demand, as gentleman are aware. There is no provision made by the amendments of the Senate for any change in the printing of Government publications, except in one or two instances, where they reduce the number of copies to be printed.

Mr. BRYAN. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. COOMBS. Do these amendments deal with the question of the distribution of these documents?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. That is already fixed by the bill as it passed the House. That arrangement is not disturbed. When it passed the House in October last it passed almost unanimously. There was, it is true, two or three days' debate on various amendments, and the bill was finally so amended as to meet the demands of the members of the House, and passed almost without dissent. The amendments of the Senate make, as I have said, no material changes in the bill as we passed it.

Mr. KILGORE. Will the gentleman allow a question right there?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Certainly.

Mr. KILGORE. Is it not a fact that the bill as it passed the House was amended so as to be acceptable to the House before it could pass at all?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. The bill was amended and was acceptable to the House, because, as I have said, it passed almost unanimously.

Mr. KILGORE. Is it not true, then, that the important amendments provided by the House in the bill have been stricken from it by the Senate?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. No, sir; not one solitary one of them. If the gentleman will mention one——

Mr. KILGORE. I am not familiar with the Senate amendments.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. It does not interfere with any amendment which was discussed in the House and adopted by it.

Mr. KILGORE. Is this a conference report?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. No, sir; simply a motion on the part of the Committee on Printing to concur in the Senate amendments to the bill.

Mr. KILGORE. Well, would that motion be in order?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. That can not be questioned now, for I have debated it for five or ten minutes already without objection.

Mr. KILGORE. I think, if the gentleman from Tennessee will allow me——

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Certainly.

Mr. KILGORE. That the important amendments to the bill ought to be printed in the RECORD and called up for consideration to-morrow, or at some other time to be fixed. There is no necessity for a great deal of unnecessary haste in pushing it through the House. We ought to be able to understand what it does and what it means. It is a voluminous measure, covers a great many changes in the matter of printing and the distribution of public documents.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. If the gentleman will allow me, there is no Senate amendment that changes that matter. It is just as we passed it in the House.

Mr. KILGORE. Did not the Senate take off some of the amendments that were put on by the House?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. No, sir. The only changes made in that matter are in respect to the language of the bill in a few places. Certain of the amendments, for instance, provided for a Clerk's document room, but the House itself abolished that, and at my request the Senate struck out the amendments that the House had put on in anticipation that there would be a Clerk's document room, because, manifestly, they were not properly on the bill after the House had stricken out the provision. That was the main feature of change.

Mr. KILGORE. Have the conference committee taken out that amendment?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. There has been no conference upon the bill. This is a motion to concur in the Senate amendments. Mr. Speaker, I will yield to any gentleman who wishes to ask me a question.

Mr. KILGORE. If we are going to consider this bill this morning, it ought to be considered in the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Ah, but, Mr. Speaker, we have debated it now for ten minutes. Now, Mr. Speaker, I will yield for any question that any gentleman wants to ask.

Mr. BRYAN. Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. BRYAN. Does this bill make any provision as to the distribution of employés in the Printing Office, so that they shall be appointed from the various districts of the country?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. There is no such provision either in the House or Senate bill.

Mr. BRYAN. Is there any provision compelling the Public Printer to make a fair distribution of the employés from districts throughout the country, so that they shall be appointed from the various parts of the country in fair proportion?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. There is no such provision.

Mr. BRYAN. Would it be proper to put an amendment on the bill that would make provision for such a fair distribution, so that the States and districts distant from this capital would receive a fair proportion of appointments?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. It could not be put in now, because the bill has passed both Houses. Such an amendment would not be in order.

Mr. KILGORE. Will the gentleman allow me?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Yes.

Mr. KILGORE. The bill, when first considered in the House, provided for the appointment of a superintendent of documents. Is that provision still in the bill?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. There is no such provision as that. That provision was stricken out by the House. It has not been put back by the Senate; but this bill provides that the office of superintendent of documents in the Interior Department shall be abolished, and it provides that there shall be a superintendent of documents appointed by the Public Printer, who will discharge the duties of that bureau there, and be paid out of the funds provided for the public printing.

Mr. KILGORE. Do not the Public Printer and the Joint Committee on Printing have the naming of that officer?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. The Public Printer, with the approval of the joint committee.

Mr. KILGORE. When that measure was before the House that proposition was antagonized by the House, as I remember.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. The original proposition was stricken out and is not put back.

Mr. KILGORE. But you have got some such provision as that in here.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Not at all. It just provides that the work now done by the superintendent of documents in the Interior Department shall be done in the Printing Office, so that these publications can be sent out without being shipped around from one building to another.

Mr. KILGORE. And this is to be done by a man named by the Public Printer and the Joint Committee on Printing?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Named by the Public Printer, with our approval.

Mr. KILGORE. That is the same thing.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. The same thing, if you say so; but the gentleman will remember——

Mr. TRACEY. The gentleman does not want to make an incorrect statement——

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. The gentleman will remember that the Public Printer was for years known as the Congressional Printer. He was appointed by the two Houses of Congress; but the Printing Office became so important that he was made an appointee of the President. It was taken away from Congress. This simply provides that the officer who discharges that duty with reference to these documents in the Interior Department shall now be changed, and that he shall be put where he can be made more the servant of Congress. That is that provision. Now what is the suggestion of the gentleman from New York [Mr. TRACEY]?

Mr. TRACEY. I understood the gentleman from Tennessee to say that the Public Printer had the appointment of a superintendent of documents. Now the amendment adopted by the Senate says that the Joint Committee on Printing shall designate to the PublicPrinter a competent person, and so forth. The Public Printer has nothing to do with it.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. The language there used is the same as that used with reference to an index clerk. The index clerk is named by the Committee on Printing to the Public Printer, and he appoints him. So in this case, this man will be named by the Committee on Printing, and he will be appointed, because he is supposed to be the immediate representative of Congress.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. Will the gentleman yield to me for a question?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Certainly.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. Does this bill, in the changes that have been made, dislodge the appointing power from the Public Printer and put it in the Committee on Printing?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. It only provides in respect to three officers. The Senate attached an amendment which provides that in respect to the chief clerk and the two foremen, one of printing and the other of binding, that the Public Printer shall have the approval of the Joint Committee on Printing in making their removal.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. Does not, then, the appointing power go to the Committee on Printing?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. It does not.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. Does your bill afford a means by which those documents which are now in the basement will be distributed?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. It does. The officers of the two Houses are empowered to distribute all the documents now in the basement to the present members of Congress.

Mr. Speaker, it occurs to me that this bill is as nearly the bill the House wants as it is possible to get one. I would agree to no changes from the House bill that are very material. The amendments of the Senate are in nearly every case immaterial amendments.

A MEMBER. Does this interfere with the distribution of the Rebellion Records to members?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I will state to the gentleman who has asked me if this interferes with the distribution of the Rebellion Records, that the Rebellion Records are left in the bill with the provision exactly as it was put in there by the House, and it gives a copy of the Rebellion Records to every member of the present Congress who was not a member of a former Congress.

Mr. WARNER. Will the gentleman permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Certainly.

Mr. WARNER. This is a very voluminous bill. May I ask him, with respect to the amendments which have been referred to, if there is any objection to let them be printed, in order that the House may have time to consider them and know what they are? I differ entirely with the gentleman as to whether these amendments are material or not. I do not care to see put in the hands of the Senate committee such an amount of power and such an opportunity to bluff the civil service of this Government as in this bill, as I read it, is proposed to be given. It seems to me that this matter might lie over and might wait until members have time to consider it.

A matter of this importance, which has been before this House so many times, and in which each time there has been so much question, should not be passed upon in this summary way. [Loud applause.]

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Now, Mr. Speaker, to show the utter unreasonableness of the gentleman's statement, I have but to say that every solitary amendment in this bill has been printed for three days in the RECORD, and the gentleman has not looked at them.

Mr. WARNER. No attention has been called to it until this morning; and I venture to say that there are not ten members on the floor of this House outside of the gentleman himself who know what these amendments are. [Loud applause.]

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I do not know what the gentleman's remark was that provoked applause.

Mr. WARNER. I would be very glad to repeat it.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. But the gentleman asked——

Mr. HAYES. It was not what he said, but what you said.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I want to say to the gentleman from New York that these amendments were every one of them printed, are now in the RECORD, and have been there for three days; and I venture to say that if they were ordered to be printed in the RECORD this morning they will not be read by the gentleman from New York who now challenges them. They were printed as the Senate passed them, and they are now in print. I did not bring it up the day before yesterday. I did not bring it up yesterday, and I only brought it up this morning after those amendments have had three days' consideration.

Mr. WARNER. And the gentleman forgot to give notice that he was going to bring it up; and the reason why "the gentleman from New York" opposes concurrence is not because he has not read the amendments, but because he has read them.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I beg the gentleman's pardon. I did not forget to do anything of the kind. It is not my business or duty to call the attention of the gentleman to what is printed in the RECORD. These amendments were printed, as I have said, and I state again that they do not materially change the provisions of the bill as passed by the House. They are there, and gentlemen can get rid of them by voting against them. I simply want, if the House wants to put them out, to send the bill to a conference. If the House desires to do that, it can vote down the motion to concur and put it in conference.

Mr. TRACEY. That is where it ought to go.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Therefore I have moved to concur in the amendments; and I move the previous question on the motion to concur.

Mr. BYNUM. The gentleman certainly does not intend to move the previous question.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I certainly intend to get rid of it; and if gentlemen do not want to vote for it, they can vote it down, and that is a nonconcurrence.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I will yield to the gentleman from Illinois any time that he desires.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. I claim to be recognized in my own right.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Then, Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. I have been recognized in my own right.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Well, I move the previous question, Mr. Speaker, and I would like to know what right the gentleman has to take me off the floor?

The SPEAKER. There is some misapprehension about this matter. The gentleman from Tennessee demands the previous question, and says that he has not yielded the floor, and the Chair can not recognize the gentleman from Illinois pending the demand for the previous question. If the previous question is voted down the Chair will recognize the gentleman.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I rise to make a statement——

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. I desire to say to the gentleman from Tennessee now——

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I have not yielded the floor, Mr. Speaker, and I will not yield it unless the gentleman will accept time. I am willing to give him time.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. Then I want five minutes to indicate the objections to this bill. Mr. Speaker, this is not a bill to be railroaded through the House in this manner. This is a measure that ordinarily ought to be considered in Committee of the Whole, and the gentleman who brought it up commenced debating it in order to cut off the House from discussion——

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I call the gentleman to order. I have done nothing of the kind. I demand the previous question.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. RICHARDSON] demands the previous question.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. Then I trust the House will vote it down. This bill is being railroaded——

The SPEAKER. The House will be in order.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, a number of gentlemen near me——

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, is it in order for the gentleman from Tennessee to debate this matter after he has moved the previous question?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I have withdrawn the demand for the previous question.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee states that he withdraws the demand for the previous question.

Mr. PAYNE. But he has not done it.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands his debating it to be a withdrawal of the demand for the previous question.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I withdraw the demand for the purpose of making this statement. Gentlemen on this side of the House say that the only amendment which they have read to which there is any objection is the one which gives the Printing Committee the right to pass upon the appointment of three employés specified in the amendment on page 18, line 21. Now, I am opposed to that amendment and was opposed to it when the Senate put it in. The measure is better without it. But, Mr. Speaker, that amendment is so utterly unimportant as compared with the great provisions of this bill that I was willing to take the bill with that provision in it. However, inasmuch as gentlemen here in whom I have confidence state that they do not like that provision, I now amend my motion by moving to concur, with the amendment which I send to the desk.

The amendment was read, as follows:

Page 18, line 21, strike out the words "the employés herein named shall be subject to removal only upon the approval of the Joint Committee on Printing."

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Striking out that obviates the only objection that I have heard to the bill; and as I am and have been opposed to that provision all the time, I am willing to take the bill without it. I demand the previous question upon the motion to concur, with that amendment.

Mr. WARNER. Now that the gentleman from Tennessee has let the cat out of the meal bag, will he not give us a reasonable time to look up the kittens? [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. CUMMINGS. There is more than one cat in this meal. [Laughter.]

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. The Chair must submit the motion of the gentleman from Tennessee. It is in the power of the House to vote it down if it desires.

Mr. BURROWS. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. If the motion for the previous question should be voted down, will it then be in order to move to refer the bill?

The SPEAKER. The bill will be before the House for such disposition as the House chooses to make of it. The gentleman from Tennessee demands the previous question upon his motion to concur in the Senate amendments, with the amendment indicated by him.

The question being taken, the Speaker declared that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I ask for a division.

The House again divided; and there were—ayes 43, noes 116.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. No quorum, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee makes the point that no quorum has voted, and the Chair will appoint to act as tellers the gentleman from Tennessee, Mr. RICHARDSON, and the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. HOPKINS.

Mr. DOCKERY (pending the count by tellers). Mr. Speaker, as this is an important matter, I ask unanimous consent that it go over until Monday next.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. I will agree to that, if it is understood that the previous question is voted down, so that the matter will be open.

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Speaker, I would amend that request by adding a provision that the Senate amendments shall be printed in connection with a reprint of the bill.

The tellers continued the count, and finally reported—ayes 67, noes 113.

So the previous question was not ordered.

Mr. BURROWS. I now move to nonconcur in the Senate amendments, and on that——

The SPEAKER. The Chair had promised to recognize the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS].

Mr. BURROWS. Very well.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. Before that motion is made, I desire to call the attention of the House to one additional amendment that has been made to this bill. The reason I opposed the motion made by the gentleman in charge of the bill for the previous question is, that, as I undertook to state some time ago, when this bill was before the House——

Mr. TRACEY. I would like to ask what question is before the House?

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. The gentleman will learn if he listens.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. TRACEY. I understood that was voted down.

The SPEAKER. The motion for the previous question was voted down, but the question now recurs on the motion of the gentleman from Tennessee to concur in the Senate amendments.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. And I have taken the floor in my own right.

When this bill was before the House a large minority of members were opposed to it. Now, this is a bill affecting every member with reference to the question of public documents, as to which it provides, as I understand, a different method of distribution from that authorized under existing law.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. The gentleman is utterly mistaken. There is no such provision in the bill.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. One moment. I respect the gentleman from Tennessee highly, but not enough to let him make my speech.

The bill met the favorable consideration of a majority of members and passed the House. Since it went to the Senate a large number of amendments have been added which the gentleman from Tennessee has stated are immaterial amendments. One of these amendments makes section 45 of the bill read as follows:

SEC. [44] 45. There shall be appointed by the Public Printer, with the approval of the Joint Committee on Printing, a chief clerk, who shall be a practical printer and versed in the art of bookbinding, whose salary shall be $2,400 per annum; and a foreman of printing and a foreman of binding, who must be practically and thoroughly acquainted with their respective trades, who shall each receive a salary of $2,100 per annum. The employés herein named shall be subject to removal only upon the approval of the Joint Committee on Printing.

Another of these innocent amendments is found on page 30 of the bill, and reads as follows:

The Joint Committee on Printing shall designate to the Public Printer a competent person, to be appointed by him, as superintendent of documents, and shall fix and regulate the compensation to be paid by the Public Printer to the person so designated and appointed.

Now, here are two of the innocent amendments which the gentleman from Tennessee says are purely formal. These amendments give to the Committee on Printing absolute power. They take from the President of the United States, if the office were high enough, or from the Secretary of the Interior, or from the Public Printer the power of appointing these officers in the printing department and give it to this Committee on Printing.

Now, I say that if we are to consider and vote upon these amendments, every member of this House should have the bill with the amendments before him, and should have opportunity to examine so as to determine whether he concurs in the recommendation of the Senate, that these autocratic powers be conveyed to this Committee on Printing or not. For that reason, Mr. Speaker, I am in favor of the motion proposed by the gentleman from Michigan; and I trust that the consideration of this bill will go over until Monday next, and that enough copies of the bill will be printed to give every member of the House an opportunity to examine the bill as amended. Then, if it is the consensus of opinion that these amendments are proper and just, I have no further objection to the passage of the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I now yield to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. DUNN] such time as he may desire.

Mr. DUNN. Mr. Speaker, there are two features in this bill which I think every man who understands the principles of our Government ought to oppose. The President of the United States under the law appoints a Public Printer after due deliberation, no doubt, who is endowed with certain executive powers to discharge the duties and obligations of the office to which he is appointed. It must be presumed that he is fully competent—indeed there is the best evidence that he is. The passage of this bill as amended by the Senate strikes at the judgment of the President in making the appointment of Mr. Benedict. I am not caring so much about that, because the President has given us the best of evidence that he is able to take care of himself [laughter], but it strikes at his judgment in this, that it practically declares that he did not select a competent man for the position of Public Printer, or that he has selected a man incompetent to perform the duties of the office; and therefore this joint committee must come in with advisory powers, to tell the Public Printer what his duties are, and how to perform them, thus interfering, legislatively, with what is purely an executive function.

Mr. Speaker, I understand that it is unnecessary for me to discuss this question further now; but at another time I intend to express my views more fully in proof that this measure should not pass in its present shape, and will vote at once for a disagreement and reference to conference.

Mr. BURROWS. Mr. Speaker, I understand that the gentleman from Tennessee is willing to withdraw the motion to concur in the Senate amendments.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I withdraw the motion to concur, and yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. BURROWS. Now, Mr. Speaker, I have no desire to delay this matter by reference to a committee, but rather to hasten its consideration. I move, therefore, that the House nonconcur in the amendments of the Senate.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. One word upon that motion. Of course I understand that if the House should vote down the motion to concur, it would be equivalent to a vote in favor of the motion of the gentleman from Michigan to nonconcur. But in order to save time I withdraw the motion to concur, and renew the call for the previous question upon the motion made by the gentleman from Michigan to nonconcur.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. I want to call the attention of the gentleman from Tennessee——

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I withdraw the motion I have made.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. But there is a provision here that I want to call the gentleman's attention to in connection with what has already been said—regarding section 45 of the bill, where provision is made in the amendment of the Senate that there shall be appointed by the Public Printer—

With the approval of the Joint Committee on Printing—the employés named in the rest of the section. That is only one-half of the matter to which I wish to call the gentleman's attention particularly. The concluding portion of the section provides that these parties shall be appointed "only by the advice and consent of the Joint Committee on Printing." I trust the gentleman from Tennessee will include that in the consideration he gives to the matter before the conference committee.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I said that I was opposed to this provision. I am opposed to it because some gentlemen seem to think the Committee on Printing wants to increase its own power. I have never wanted that sort of power.

But there are reasons why these officers should be somewhat subject to the Committee on Printing. The House will remember that this officer is called the "Congressional Printer," and is so named in the Revised Statutes. The object of the law is to bring him as nearly as possible under the control of Congress; and that, I apprehend, is the only reason why this provision has taken the form in which we find it. But I think the committee of the Senate made a mistake in recommending that particular phraseology.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. I only ask that the gentleman will look into the matter in connection with the first part of the section to which objection was made.

Mr. BURROWS. Now, Mr. Speaker, I demand the previous question upon the motion.

Mr. PICKLER. I desire to ask a question of the gentleman from Tennessee, the chairman of the Committee on Printing.

The SPEAKER. It is not in order, the previous question having been demanded.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. PICKLER) there were—ayes 162, noes 10.

Mr. PICKLER. No quorum.

The SPEAKER. The point of no quorum being made, the Chair will order tellers.

Mr. PICKLER and Mr. BURROWS were appointed tellers.

Mr. PICKLER. Pending the point of no quorum, if I can be permitted to ask a couple of questions of the chairman of the committee, which I wanted to ask before and could not get an opportunity to do, I will withdraw the point of no quorum.

The SPEAKER. But the previous question has been demanded. The gentleman, of course, can not control the business of the House when a majority is against him.

Mr. PICKLER. Then I ask unanimous consent, pending the point of no quorum, to be allowed to ask one or two questions of the chairman of the committee.

Mr. LOUD. Regular order.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER. The tellers will resume the count.

The question was taken; and the tellers reported—ayes 181, noes 0.

So the previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Michigan, that the House nonconcur in the Senate amendments.

Mr. PICKLER. Now, Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask the chairman of the Committee on Printing a couple of questions.

The SPEAKER. It is not in order now without unanimous consent. The previous question has been ordered, which cuts off all debate.

Mr. PICKLER. But is not the question now on the motion of the gentleman from Michigan?

The SPEAKER. It is; and on that motion the previous question has been ordered.

Mr. PICKLER. I ask consent to submit one or two questions to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Is there not thirty minutes' debate, under the rule, after the previous question is ordered?

The SPEAKER. But there has already been debate.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Let the gentleman walk out into the corridor and ask his questions.

Mr. PICKLER. The gentleman from Ohio need not trouble himself about the course I shall pursue.

Mr. BURROWS. Mr. Speaker, let us have the regular order.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. PICKLER) there were—ayes 181, noes 2.

So the motion was agreed to.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Now, Mr. Speaker, the Senate has already asked for a conference on this bill. I move that the request of the Senate be acceded to, and that the conferees be appointed on the part of the House.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, the request for a conference on the part of the Senate will be granted.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER announced the appointment of Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee, Mr. MCKAIG, and Mr. BRODERICK as conferees on the part of the House.

PAYMENT OF CERTAIN CERTIFICATES, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (S. 1896) to provide for the payment of the 8 per cent greenback certificates of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

Mr. COGSWELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be put upon its passage. There is a similar bill, identical in its terms, reported from the District Committee.

Mr. DOCKERY. Let the bill be read.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read, after which the Chair will ask if there be objection to the request.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Treasurer of the United States is hereby directed to pay to the owners, holders, or assignees of all board of audit certificates redeemed by him under the act approved June 16, 1880, the residue of 2.35 per cent per annum of unpaid legal-rate interest due upon said certificates from their date up to the date of approval of said act providing for their redemption.

SEC. 2. That the Treasurer of the United States is hereby directed to redeem and pay all the remaining outstanding bonds of the District of Columbia known as the "greenback 8 per cent bonds," with interest, as specified in said bonds, from the date of issue to the date of maturity thereof, and with interest at the rate of 6 per cent per annum from the date of their maturity to the date of the approval of this act. The Treasurer of the United States is hereby directed to sell a sufficient amount of the unissued 3.65 bonds of the District of Columbia to cover the provisions of this act.

Mr. BRYAN. I would like to ask the gentleman from Massachusetts a question.

Mr. COGSWELL. Certainly.

Mr. BRYAN. When were these bonds issued?

Mr. COGSWELL. Certain of these bonds were issued following 1876.

I will state to the gentleman that when the District assumed its present form of government a board of audit was appointed to take up and adjust the floating indebtedness of the District; and the law provided that certificates of indebtedness might be issued by the board, which were convertible into 3.65 District bonds. There were a certain number of certificate holders who did not get their certificates converted in time; that is, before they were all issued Congress came in and repealed the act, and some certificates were left out.

Finding its mistake, Congress in 1880 restored the provisions of the old law, and allowed the certificate holders to convert the certificates into bonds. By a clerical error, however, while all of the other certificate holders have been paid 6 per cent from the time of issuing the certificates—by a clerical error, as shown in the report accompanying the bill reported from the District Committee—it was omitted to provide that these certificate holders who had been left out should also be paid 6 per cent on their certificates from the time of issuing the same.

So that they took the 3.65 bonds under protest, and this bill is to allow them the difference between the 3.65's and the 6 per cent, which puts them on all fours with the other certificate holders.

Mr. BRYAN. What is the amount?

Mr. COGSWELL. About $40,000. There will be no expense to the Treasury, because these bonds are ready to be issued.

Mr. COX. What committee reported the bill?

Mr. COGSWELL. The Committee on the District of Columbia. It has been reported three times and has received the favorable consideration of committees in both Houses.

Mr. BRYAN. Does this come out of the general funds of the Government or out of the District funds?

Mr. COGSWELL. It comes out of these bonds, $200,000 of which have not been issued at all. It does not take any money out of the Treasury. It comes out of these bonds that have already been provided for.

Mr. KILGORE. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. COGSWELL. Certainly.

Mr. KILGORE. Do I understand that by the passage of this bill you impose no additional charge upon the Treasury?

Mr. COGSWELL. No additional charge upon the Treasury.

Mr. KILGORE. And that whatever money is to be disbursed under this measure must be paid out of the revenues of the District of Columbia exclusively?

Mr. COGSWELL. Paid out of bonds which are already provided for, but not issued.

Mr. KILGORE. By the District of Columbia?

Mr. COGSWELL. Yes. District bonds.

Mr. BRYAN. Then it will be paid by the issue of new bonds?

Mr. COGSWELL. By the issue of bonds already provided for.

Mr. BRYAN. But not issued.

Mr. COGSWELL. But not issued. It is a balance left over of bonds not issued.

Mr. BOWERS of California. Authorized?

Mr. COGSWELL. Authorized by Congress.

Mr. BRYAN. Then it will simply be paying it out of the bonds now, and paying the bonds hereafter.

Mr. COGSWELL. Yes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, and was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. COGSWELL, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

By unanimous consent, the bill H. R. 6167, on the same subject, was ordered to lie on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the following titles:

A bill (H. R. 2582) to authorize the appointment of James William Abert to the retired list of the Army;

A bill (H. R. 868) for the relief of Charles B. Stivers;

A bill (H. R. 3858) to pension Mrs. Ella B. Peirce, widow of Charles Peirce, of New Bedford, Mass.;

A bill (H. R. 6921) for the relief of George B. Crosby;

A bill (H. R. 7494) disposing of four condemned cannon of the Navy;

A bill (H. R. 7419) for the construction of a military road from the city of El Paso to Fort Bliss, Tex;

A bill (H. R. 6042) to authorize sale of lot 8, block 93, city of Hot Springs, by school directors thereof and use of proceeds for school purposes;

A bill (H. R. 5371) for the relief of certain enlisted men of the Marine Corps; and

A bill (H. R. 2996) for the relief of Mrs. E. S. Luke, widow of John L. Luke, late a soldier in the Black Hawk war.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed joint resolution (S. R. 91) to provide for the printing of a digest of the laws and decisions relating to the appointment, salary, and compensation of officials of the United States courts; in which the concurrence of the House was requested.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments, the bill (H. R. 5575) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895, and for other purposes, asked a conference with the House on the bill and amendments, and had appointed Mr. COCKRELL, Mr. GORMAN, and Mr. ALLISON as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. PEARSON, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (H. R. 213) to pay for alley condemned in square No. 493, in the city of Washington, D. C.;

A bill (H. R. 4606) to amend sections 5365 and 5366 of the Revised Statutes relating to barratry on the high seas;

A bill (H. R. 6720) providing for the resurvey of Grant and Hooker Counties, in the State of Nebraska; and

A bill (H. R. 7488) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to grant leases for sites on the Hot Springs Reservation, Arkansas, for cold-water reservoirs.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the House nonconcur in the Senate amendments to the sundry civil appropriation bill and agree to the conference, and that the amendments be printed, together with the bill.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the title of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 5575) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. SAYERS] asks unanimous consent to make an order that the House nonconcur in the Senate amendments to the sundry civil bill, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate, and that the bill and amendments be printed. Is there objection?

Mr. KILGORE. Now, Mr. Speaker, there are a number of amendments put on that bill by the Senate which, on a point of order, would have to be considered in the Committee of the Whole, and I think they ought to be so considered.

Mr. SAYERS. I will say to the gentleman from Texas that it is important that this bill should go into conference, because several items will have to be brought back for the consideration of the House, and they may delay the session of Congress——

Mr. KILGORE. But no amendment can be considered to the same advantage after it comes back from conference as it could now. For instance, there is an appropriation in the bill to buy the Mahone property for a Government Printing Office site.

Mr. SAYERS. I will state to the gentleman that that amendment will be brought back to the House, free and untrammeled, so that it may be considered separately and on its merits.

Mr. KILGORE. And other amendments like that?

Mr. SAYERS. Any amendment upon which we think that ought to be done.

Mr. KILGORE. I make no objection then.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to making the order asked for?

There was no objection.

Accordingly the House nonconcurred in the amendments to the sundry civil bill, and agreed to the conference asked by the Senate, and the bill and amendments were ordered to be printed.

The SPEAKER announced as conferees on the part of the House Mr. SAYERS, Mr. O'NEIL of Massachusetts, and Mr. COGSWELL.

JOHN T. HEARD.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of a bill which the Clerk will report, after which the Chair will ask if there be objection to its consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 7874) to enable the Secretary of the Interior to pay JOHN T. HEARD for professional services rendered the "Old Settlers," or Western Cherokee Indians, out of the funds of said Indians.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to JOHN T. HEARD, for professional services rendered, out of any moneys appropriated or to be appropriated by Congress for the "Old Settlers," or Western Cherokee Indians, by reason of a judgment rendered June 6, 1893, by the Court of Claims, in favor of the "Old Settlers," or Western Cherokee Indians, in case No. 16599, for certain moneys and lands due, arising from or growing out of certain treaty stipulations or acts of Congress, amounting to $800,386.31, in compliance with the mandate of the Supreme Court of the United States, the sum of $10,000, or such part thereof, if any, as shall remain of the 35 per cent set apart by resolution in various councils of said "Old Settlers," or Western Cherokee Indians, for the expense of the prosecution of said claim, after the ascertainment and determination of the amount of such fees and charges and other claims as are properly chargeable against said 35 per cent: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior shall first determine that the said professional services were rendered to said "Old Settlers," or Western Cherokee Indians, and were contracted for in good faith by persons authorized to represent said Indians.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask the gentleman one or two questions which, if properly explained, would satisfy me. I understand this amount is for services rendered to the Cherokee Indians many years ago?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Yes.

Mr. KILGORE. By Mr. HEARD; and before he was a member of Congress?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Yes, sir.

Mr. KILGORE. Now, another question. I understand that the appropriation provided for upon that bill must be satisfied out of the funds of these Indians?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Yes, sir.

Mr. KILGORE. And that they are willing to do it?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Yes.

Mr. Speaker, I will state this: Mr. HEARD was employed by these Indians in 1882; and assisted other counsel in getting the case referred to the Court of Claims, under the "Bowman act," for a finding of facts, and in the preparation of the same for trial. In November, 1884, Mr. HEARD was elected a Representative in Congress, and the cause being then ready for hearing, it was advanced on the docket by the court in order that it might be argued by Mr. HEARD before his Congressional term began, and it was so argued by him, and a finding of facts made by said court favorable to the claimants.

He terminated his connection with the case after said finding of facts was reported to Congress, and made a contract with his clients by the terms of which he was to receive a fee of $22,500, upon the payment of the money to claimants, if the amount indicated by said findings should be recovered; but that the amount paid him should be less or more than that sum, according as the amount of the final collection might vary from said sum. Therefore the amount which Mr. HEARD would be entitled to receive could not be known definitely until the basis of settlement between the claimants and the Government should have been fixed by Congress or the courts.

Congress rereferred the case to the Court of Claims, with directions to try it and find a judgment according to the points of law and equity involved, with the right of appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Other attorneys had to be employed to complete the work which Mr. HEARD had begun; and in view of that fact, when the final judgment was rendered in favor of claimants, Mr. HEARD made his final contract with his clients, and reduced his fee to $10,000. This contract was duly made and authenticated according to law, and its terms approved by the Indians as shown by resolutions unanimously adopted in their annual council on June 28, 1893. Said contract was duly presented by Mr. HEARD to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs for approval; but owing to an opinion of the Attorney-General of the United States, referring to such cases (although made nearly a year after Mr. HEARD had concluded his services), the Commissioner could not approve the same, or withhold from the funds of the Indians the money to pay the fee provided for therein, because the contract did not antedate the rendition of the services.

The Commissioner of Indian Affairs, however, recommended to the Secretary of the Interior that since the claim of Mr. HEARD was so obviously just, that a bill should be sent to Congress for enactment which would enable the Department to carry out in good faith the contract which the Indians had made, and which they expressed their desire to live up to. The Secretary adopted said recommendation, and this is the bill he sent here, and exactly in the form in which he prepared it. The Department recommends its passage and the payment of the contract money. The Indians want to pay it, and Mr. HEARD does not object to its being paid. [Laughter and applause.]

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. BOWERS of California. Wait a moment. Is this to be paid from the Treasury or from the Indians' money?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. It is to be paid from the Indians' money; and I ask for the reading of a letter from the agent of these Indians, who lives among them, and who originally employed Mr. HEARD and knows what his services have been worth to the claimants, written on yesterday, and addressed to the gentleman from Indiana, Judge HOLMAN, Chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs in this House, and by him handed to me this morning, stating that the Indians desire the passage of the bill. [General cries of "Vote!"]

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. CLARK of Missouri, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the letter to Judge HOLMAN be printed as a part of my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Without objection that can be done.

There was no objection.

The letter is as follows:

AUGUST 1, 1894.

DEAR SIR: The passage of House bill No. 7374, recommended to Congress by the Secretary of the Interior, to enable him to pay Hon. JOHN T. HEARD for professional services rendered to the Old Settlers or Western Cherokee Indians, out of funds belonging to them, is not objected to by said Indians, and ought to pass. It will enable them to carry out in good faith their contract made with Mr. HEARD.

The services rendered by him before the committees of Congress and in the Court of Claims were very valuable, and the contract made with him, by me, as the representative of said Indians, has been fully ratified by them, as is shown by a resolution of their council, on file in the office of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs; and they desire Congress to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to settle with Mr. HEARD according to the terms of said agreement.

J. M. BRYAN,
Old Settler, Cherokee Commissioner, and Treasurer.

Hon. WILLIAM S. HOLMAN,
Chairman Committee on Indian Affairs, House of Representatives.

UNLAWFUL VIOLENCE ON ACCOUNT OF CRIME.

Mr. BLAIR. Mr. Speaker, I desire to send to the desk a joint resolution, which I shall ask to have read, and then will ask unanimous consent of the House for its present consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

Joint resolution, providing for the investigation of acts of unlawful violence throughout the country, alleged to have been inflicted on account of crimes.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled, That the Commissioner of Labor be instructed to investigate, ascertain, and report the number, date, location, and attendant facts and circumstances of all alleged assaults by males upon females throughout the country during the ten years last preceding the passage of this joint resolution, for or on account of which organized but unlawful violence has been inflicted or attempted to be inflicted upon those charged with making such assaults.

Also, to ascertain and report all acts of organized but unlawful violence to the person, with the attendant facts and circumstances, which have been inflicted upon accused persons or persons alleged to have been guilty of crimes punishable by due process of law which have taken place in any part of the country within the ten years last preceding the passage of this resolution, whether such acts of organized but unlawful violence were inflicted by whipping, lynching, or otherwise, on account of offenses or alleged offenses against the laws and punishable by due process thereof.

Such investigation shall be made by the usual methods and agencies of the Department of Labor, and report made to Congress as soon as the work can be satisfactorily done; and the sum of $25,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated to pay the expenses out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this joint resolution?

Mr. COX. I object.

Mr. BLAIR. I ask that the resolution, then, be referred to the Committee on Labor.

Mr. DUNPHY. Regular order.

The SPEAKER. By unanimous consent it can be referred to the Committee on Labor. Is there objection?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi and Mr. COX. I object.

The SPEAKER. As objection is made, the Chair will look at it and refer the resolution under the rule.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. CAMPBELL, until Wednesday, on account of sickness in his family.

To Mr. GRAHAM, indefinitely, on account of sickness.

To Mr. HALL of Missouri, to-day, on account of sickness.

To Mr. HATCH, for three days, on account of sickness.

To Mr. TAYLOR of Indiana, indefinitely, on account of illness.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Mr. Speaker, I submit a report from the Committee on Rules, for immediate consideration.

The report was read, as follows:

Resolved, That to-day after the second morning hour and until 5 o'clock, be assigned to the consideration of bills reported and called up by the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads; this order not to interfere with revenue or appropriation bills, conference reports, or reports from the Committee on Rules.

Mr. BUNN. Mr. Speaker, to-day being Friday, the day set apart by the rules for the consideration of business on the Private Calendar, I really think, in view of the fact that so little time is given to the consideration of private bills, that the House, in the interest of the Private Calendar, ought to vote down this proposed rule. Representing, as I do, the Committee on Claims, I insist that that committee should be given an opportunity to present its business for the consideration of the House.

In view of the fact that only a short time remains until this Congress will adjourn I think we ought to have at least the day which is set apart in the rules for the consideration of our reports. If this thing goes on I do not know where it will end. We are expected by members of the House to sit in our committee room day after day and consider bills of a private nature, and I hardly ever come into this Hall without being approached by some member urging that the committee shall give consideration to some bill in which he is interested. The members of the committee over which I have the honor to preside have met regularly and transacted their business faithfully, and we have begged the House of Representatives to give us time to have our reports considered, but during this entire session of Congress—yes, more than that, sir—during both the sessions of the Fifty-third Congress, taking the two sessions together, we have had but one-half day for the consideration of business reported from our committee. And this, too, although every Friday is set apart by the rules for the consideration of business on the Private Calendar.

It seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that it is time the House should adhere to that rule. It seems to me all the more reasonable to insist on this now, because the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads is, I understand, the next committee to be called in the second morning hour, and that will give an opportunity for it to present bills for the consideration of the House. I do not think that the Committee on Claims ought to be set aside by the House in this way and no consideration given to its business unless what can be obtained by unanimous consent.

The House, to be sure, has been very liberal in unanimous consents, but there are certain bills upon the Calendar reported from our committee which are absolutely just, against which nobody can reasonably raise a voice, and we ask for time to have those bills considered by the House. I move, Mr. Speaker, to lay this rule upon the table. [After a pause.] I withdraw that motion.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Mr. Speaker, it is not altogether the fault of the House of Representatives that the Committee on Claims has not had time for the consideration of its business, or that it has not succeeded in passing its bills. I remember a day not long ago when that committee was called when they brought up no bills, although under the call they would have had two hours. I do not propose to charge any neglect upon the committee, but I understand that they have got through a great number of bills by unanimous consent.

When this pending rule was first prepared, it contained a provision assigning yesterday to the Committee on Claims, but other business of the House pressed forward and the time was occupied to such an extent that the gentleman in charge of the business of that committee did not care to use the hour or two that remained.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Does not the gentleman from Ohio know that four or five weeks ago there was a tacit understanding that if our committee would give way, so as to let the House proceed with other business, a day should be set apart later for the business of the Committee on Claims?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Certainly; and in compliance with that understanding this rule was originally prepared, assigning yesterday to that committee.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I make the point that a motion to lay on the table is not debatable.

Mr. PICKLER. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OUTHWAITE] has presented a report from the Committee on Rules, and the gentleman from North Carolina has moved to lay it on the table.

Mr. BUNN. I withdrew that motion.

Mr. PICKLER. There was no consent given for the gentleman to withdraw it.

The SPEAKER. No consent was required. Any gentleman can withdraw any motion he makes unless the House has taken some action upon it.

Mr. PICKLER. Not without getting the floor to do so, and the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BUNN] did not have the floor. He moved to lay the rule on the table, and so the matter stands, and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OUTHWAITE] is out of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio, the Chair understands, is demanding the previous question upon the adoption of the report.

Mr. BUNN. Mr. Speaker, I ask the gentleman from Ohio, before he makes that demand, to yield to me for one question.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Ohio withdraw the demand for the previous question?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I wish to yield to gentlemen for questions or for any propositions that are pertinent——

Mr. PICKLER. Mr. Speaker, I object. The previous question is ordered, as I understand it.

The SPEAKER. It rests with the gentleman from Ohio to demand the previous question or not.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I have not yet demanded the previous question.

Mr. PICKLER. I think the gentleman did.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Oh, well; you are mistaken. The record will show that I am correct. Now, I want to yield for a question from the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BUNN].

Mr. BUNN. I want to ask the gentleman whether, in withholding from us a day yesterday, it was the purpose of the Committee on Rules to take from us to-day also?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Oh, no; not at all.

Mr. BUNN. Then, why was not the rule so shaped as to give us back the day, unless you meant to take it from us?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. There was no purpose of that kind.

Mr. BUNN. Is not that the effect?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I move the previous question.

Mr. ENLOE. I would like to ask the gentleman from Ohio a question.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I will yield to the gentleman for a question.

Mr. ENLOE. I should like to find out if I can the character of business from the Post-Office Committee which is so urgent as to justify bringing in this order and how much money it is proposed to appropriate if the committee can have its way.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. That is a matter that can be discussed later on, if the House should decide to give the day to the Post-Office Committee.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Mr. Speaker, is not the previous question operating?

The SPEAKER. The call for the previous question has been withdrawn, as the Chair understands.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. It has been demanded twice.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. The previous question has not been demanded once.

Mr. PICKLER. Yes, sir; it was demanded just now by you and then you yielded.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. The gentleman from Ohio has made the demand twice for the previous question.

The SPEAKER. It is not uncommon for a gentleman to demand the previous question, and then withdraw it upon the request of some member.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Certainly; but we have not heard the gentleman withdraw it. If he does so, all right.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understood the gentleman to withdraw it. There is so much confusion it is difficult to understand what is taking place.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I stated that I would withdraw the call for the previous question for the purpose of yielding to the gentleman from Tennessee. I yielded for that gentleman's question and am now answering it. And now these other gentlemen begin to talk at random.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Oh, no.

Mr. PICKLER. The gentleman withdraws the previous question to let somebody in.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I am entitled to hold the floor for an hour, yielding to anyone that I may choose.

Mr. ENLOE. I desired to know what business of the Post-Office Committee was to be brought up. I begin to suspect from the interruptions which have occurred and from the failure to get the information I asked for, that gentlemen do not want the House to know what business it is that is to come from that committee.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I will simply say it is the business of that committee on the Calendar. Whatever business the chairman of the committee may be directed by his committee to bring up can be brought up under this order.

Mr. ENLOE. I have understood the committee wanted to bring up a bill to increase the compensation of clerks in the post-offices throughout the country.

Mr. COX. Will the gentleman from Ohio yield to me for a moment?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. For a question?

Mr. COX. Yes, sir.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Certainly I will yield.

Mr. COX. Do you think it right to let in the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, to the exclusion of the Committee on Claims, when the latter committee has not had a day for its business during this Congress? Does the gentleman think that is right?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. It seems to me that on last Friday the Committee on Claims lost its day with the acquiescence of its chairman.

Mr. COX. Now, come right down to the gist of the matter: Do you think you are treating us right?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I certainly think there is nothing wrong in this proposed rule, or I should not advocate it.

Mr. COX. Do you think you are dealing squarely with us?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Certainly; with you and your committee. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the adoption of this proposed rule.

The question being taken; there were on a division—ayes 94, noes 29.

Mr. PICKLER. No quorum.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. OUTHWAITE and Mr. BUNN were appointed to act as tellers during the call of the yeas and nays.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 174, nays 54, answered "present" 1, not voting 122; as follows:

YEAS—174.

Abbott,	Covert,	Hermann,	Outhwaite,
Adams, Pa.	Crawford,	Hicks,	Page,
Aitken,	Culberson,	Hines,	Paschal,
Alderson,	Cummings,	Hitt,	Pearson,
Aldrich,	Curtis, Kans.	Hooker, N. Y.	Pence,
Arnold,	Curtis, N. Y.	Houk,	Perkins,
Avery,	Daniels,	Hudson,	Phillips,
Babcock,	Davey,	Johnson, Ind.	Pigott,
Bailey,	Davis,	Johnson, N. Dak.	Post,
Baker, Kans.	De Forest,	Kem,	Powers,
Baker, N. H.	Dinsmore,	Kiefer,	Price,
Baldwin,	Dolliver,	Kyle,	Quigg,
Barnes,	Doolittle,	Lane,	Randall,
Bartlett,	Draper,	Lapham,	Rayner,
Barwig,	Dunn,	Lawson,	Reed,
Bell, Colo.	Dunphy,	Layton,	Re lly,
Bell, Tex.	Durborow,	Lester,	Reyburn,
Bingham,	Edmunds,	Loud,	Russell, Conn.
Black, Ill.	Ellis, Ky.	Loudenslager,	Sayers,
Blair,	Ellis, Oregon	Lucas,	Stephenson,
Boatner,	English, N. J.	Lynch,	Straus,
Boutelle,	Epes,	Maddox,	Strong,
Bowers, Cal.	Fielder,	Maguire,	Sweet,
Bretz,	Fithian,	Mahon,	Talbott, Md.
Broderick,	Fletcher,	Marsh,	Tarsney,
Brookshire,	Funk,	Marshall,	Terry,
Brosius,	Gardner,	Marvin, N. Y.	Tracey,
Bryan,	Geary,	McCall,	Tucker,
Bundy,	Geissenhainer,	McCleary, Minn.	Turner, Va.
Burrows,	Goldzier,	McCreary, Ky.	Tyler,
Bynum,	Gorman,	McDannold,	Updegraff,
Cadmus,	Grosvenor,	McDowell,	Van Voorhis, N. Y.
Caminetti,	Hainer,	McEttrick,	Wanger,
Campbell,	Hall, Minn.	McGann,	Warner,
Cannon, Cal.	Hammond,	McKeighan,	Washington,
Cannon, Ill.	Hartman,	McRae,	Waugh,
Catchings,	Haugen,	Metcalfe,	Weadock,
Childs,	Hayes,	Mercer,	Wells,
Cobb, Mo.	Heard,	Meyer,	Wheeler, Ill.
Cogswell,	Heiner,	Milliken,	Wilson, Ohio
Coombs,	Henderson, Iowa	Moon,	Wilson, Wash.
Cooper, Fla.	Henderson, N. C.	Northway,	Wright, Mass.
Cooper, Wis.	Hendrix,	Ogden,
Cousins,	Hepburn,	O'Neil, Mass.

NAYS—54.

Alexander,	Enloe,	Latimer,	Richardson, Tenn.
Allen,	Everett,	Livingston,	Ritchie,
Berry,	Fyan,	Mallory,	Shell,
Black, Ga.	Grady,	Martin, Ind.	Snodgrass,
Branch,	Grow,	McCulloch,	Springer,
Brickner,	Hare,	McDearmon,	Strait,
Bunn,	Hulick,	McKaig,	Talbert, S. C.
Capehart,	Hunter,	McLaurin,	Tate,
Clark, Mo.	Hutcheson,	Money,	Williams, Ill.
Cockrell,	Ikirt,	Moore,	Williams, Miss.
Cox,	Izlar,	Mutchler,	Wolverton,
De Armond,	Jones,	Neill,	Woodard.
Donovan,	Kilgore,	Pendleton, Tex.
English, Cal.	Kribbs,	Richards, Ohio

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—1.

Pickler.

NOT VOTING—122.

Adams, Ky.	Erdman,	McNagny,	Smith,
Apsley,	Forman,	Meredith,	Somers,
Bankhead,	Gear,	Montgomery,	Sorg,
Bartholdt,	Gillet, N. Y.	Morgan,	Sperry,
Belden,	Gillett, Mass.	Morse,	Stallings,
Beltzhoover,	Goodnight,	Moses,	Stevens,
Bland,	Graham,	Murray,	Stockdale,
Boen,	Gresham,	Newlands,	Stone, C. W.
Bower, N. C.	Griffin,	Oates,	Stone, W. A.
Breckinridge, Ark.	Grout,	O'Neill, Mo.	Stone, Ky.
Breckinridge, Ky.	Hager,	Patterson,	Storer,
Brown,	Haines,	Payne,	Swanson,
Burnes,	Hall, Mo.	Paynter,	Tawney,
Cabaniss,	Harmer,	Pendleton, W. Va.	Taylor, Ind.
Caruth,	Harris,	Ray,	Taylor, Tenn.
Causey,	Harter,	Richardson, Mich.	Thomas,
Chickering,	Hatch,	Robbins,	Turner, Ga.
Clancy,	Henderson, Ill.	Robertson, La.	Turpin,
Clarke, Ala.	Holman,	Robinson, Pa.	Van Voorhis, Ohio
Cobb, Ala.	Hooker, Miss.	Rusk,	Wadsworth,
Cockran,	Hopkins, Ill.	Russell, Ga.	Walker,
Coffeen,	Hopkins, Pa.	Ryan,	Wever,
Conn,	Hull,	Schermerhorn,	Wheeler, Ala.
Cooper, Ind.	Johnson, Ohio	Scranton,	White,
Cooper, Tex.	Lacey,	Settle,	Whiting,
Cornish,	Lefever,	Shaw,	Wilson, W. Va.
Crain,	Linton,	Sherman,	Wise,
Dalzell,	Lockwood,	Sibley,	Woomer,
Denson,	Magner,	Sickles,	Wright, Pa.
Dingley,	McAleer,	Simpson,
Dockery,	McMillin,	Sipe,

So the previous question was ordered.

The following pairs were announced:
Until further notice:
Mr. WILSON of West Virginia with Mr. DINGLEY.
Mr. HATCH with Mr. HARMER.
Mr. OATES with Mr. STORER.
Mr. STONE of Kentucky with Mr. GEAR.
Mr. GOODNIGHT with Mr. WALKER.
Mr. TAYLOR of Indiana with Mr. BELDEN.
Mr. MONTGOMERY with Mr. TAWNEY.
Mr. WISE with Mr. FLETCHER.
Mr. COBB of Alabama with Mr. SHAW.
Mr. DENSON with Mr. THOMAS.
Mr. RUSK with Mr. SHERMAN.
Mr. ROBBINS with Mr. MORSE.
Mr. SCHERMERHORN with Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee.
Mr. MCMILLIN with Mr. HOUK.
Mr. GRESHAM with Mr. MAHON.
Mr. CONN with Mr. HOOKER of New York.
Mr. WHEELER of Alabama with Mr. WRIGHT of Pennsylvania.
Mr. MOSES with Mr. WADSWORTH.
Mr. WHITING with Mr. WHITE.
Mr. STOCKDALE with Mr. BRODERICK.
Mr. STALLINGS with Mr. SCRANTON.
Mr. CLARKE of Alabama with Mr. HENDERSON of Illinois.
Mr. BRECKINRIDGE of Arkansas with Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois.
Mr. CABANISS with Mr. PHILLIPS.
Mr. TURPIN with Mr. GILLETT of Massachusetts.
Mr. LOCKWOOD with Mr. WEVER.
Mr. CRAIN with Mr. SETTLE.
For this day:
Mr. PAYNTER with Mr. VAN VOORHIS of Ohio.
Mr. SIPE with Mr. RAY.
Mr. ALDERSON with Mr. APSLEY.
Mr. CARUTH with Mr. SMITH of Illinois.
Mr. TURNER of Georgia with Mr. CHICKERING.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. BYNUM. I move to reconsider the vote by which the previous question was ordered.

Mr. DUNPHY. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. BYNUM) there were—ayes 93, noes 2.

Mr. BYNUM. No quorum.

The SPEAKER announced the appointment of Mr. BYNUM and Mr. OUTHWAITE as tellers.

Mr. DUNPHY. I ask the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER appointed Mr. DUNPHY and Mr. BYNUM as tellers at the desk.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 172, nays 41, answered "present" 1, not voting 137; as follows:

YEAS—172.

Abbott,	Cooper, Wis.	Hicks,	Murray,
Adams, Pa.	Covert,	Hooker, N. Y.	Mutchler,
Aitken,	Crawford,	Ikirt,	Northway,
Alderson,	Culberson,	Johnson, Ind.	Ogden,
Aldrich,	Cummings,	Johnson, N. Dak.	O'Neill, Mass.
Alexander,	Curtis, Kans.	Kem,	Outhwaite,
Arnold,	Curtis, N. Y.	Kiefer,	Paschal,
Avery,	Dalzell,	Kribbs,	Payne,
Baker, Kans.	Daniels,	Kyle,	Pearson,
Baker, N. H.	Davey,	Lacey,	Pendleton, W. Va.
Baldwin,	Davis,	Lane,	Perkins,
Bankhead,	De Armond,	Lapham,	Phillips,
Barnes,	Dockery,	Latimer,	Pigott,
Bartlett,	Dolliver,	Lawson,	Powers,
Barwig,	Doolittle,	Layton,	Price,
Bell, Colo.	Draper,	Loud,	Quigg,
Bingham,	Dunn,	Loudenslager,	Reyburn,
Black, Ill.	Dunphy,	Lucas,	Richardson, Mich.
Blair,	Durborow,	Lynch,	Robertson, La.
Bland,	Ellis, Oregon	Magner,	Ryan,
Boatner,	Fielder,	Maguire,	Sorg,
Boutelle,	Funk,	Mahon,	Sperry,
Bowers, Cal.	Fyan,	Mallory,	Stevens,
Branch,	Gardner,	Marsh,	Stockdale,
Brets,	Geary,	Marshall,	Stone, C. W.
Broderick,	Geissenhainer,	Martin, Ind.	Stone, W. A.
Brookshire,	Goldzier,	Marvin, N. Y.	Strong,
Brosius,	Grady,	McCall,	Sweet,
Brown,	Grosvenor,	McCleary, Minn.	Talbott, Md.
Bryan,	Grow,	McCreary, Ky.	Tarsney,
Bundy,	Hager,	McDannold,	Terry,
Cadmus,	Hainer,	McDearmon,	Tracey,
Caminetti,	Haines,	McDowell,	Turner, Va.
Campbell,	Hall, Minn.	McEttrick,	Tyler,
Cannon, Cal.	Hall, Mo.	McLaurin,	Updegraff,
Cannon, Ill.	Hammond,	McNagny,	Van Voorhis, N. Y.
Catchings,	Hartman,	McRae,	Warner,
Childs,	Haugen,	Meiklejohn,	Washington,
Cobb, Mo.	Hayes,	Mercer,	Waugh,
Cockrell,	Henderson, Iowa	Meredith,	Weadock,
Cogswell,	Henderson, N. C.	Meyer,	Wells,
Coombs,	Hendrix,	Milliken,	Wheeler, Ill.
Cooper, Fla.	Hermann,	Moon,	Wright, Mass.

NAYS—41.

Allen,	Everett,	Maddox,	Strait,
Bell, Tex.	Fithian,	McCulloch,	Swanson,
Berry,	Grout,	McKaig,	Talbert, S. C.
Black, Ga.	Hare,	Moore,	Tate,
Bunn,	Hunter,	Morgan,	Williams, Ill.
Bynum,	Hutcheson,	Neill,	Williams, Miss.
Clark, Mo.	Izlar,	Pendleton, Tex.	Wolverton,
Cox,	Jones,	Richards, Ohio	Woodard.
Donovan,	Kilgore,	Ritchie,
English, Cal.	Lester,	Shell,
Enloe,	Livingston,	Snodgrass,

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—1.

Pickler.

NOT VOTING—137.

Adams, Ky.	Ellis, Ky.	Lockwood,	Sickles,
Apsley,	English, N. J.	McAleer,	Simpson,
Babcock,	Epes,	McGann,	Sipe,
Bailey,	Erdman,	McKeighan,	Smith,
Bartholdt,	Fletcher,	McMillin,	Somers,
Belden,	Forman,	Money,	Springer,
Beltzhoover,	Gear,	Montgomery,	Stallings,
Boen,	Gillet, N. Y.	Morse,	Stephenson,
Bower, N. C.	Gillett, Mass.	Moses,	Stone, Ky.
Breckinridge, Ark.	Goodnight,	Newlands,	Storer,
Breckinridge, Ky.	Gorman,	Oates,	Straus,
Brickner,	Graham,	O'Neill, Mo.	Tawney,
Burnes,	Gresham,	Page,	Taylor, Ind.
Burrows,	Griffin,	Patterson,	Taylor, Tenn.
Cabaniss,	Harmer,	Paynter,	Thomas,
Capehart,	Harris,	Pence,	Tucker,
Caruth,	Harter,	Post,	Turner, Ga.
Causey,	Hatch,	Randall,	Turpin,
Chickering,	Heard,	Ray,	Van Voorhis, Ohio
Clancy,	Heiner,	Rayner,	Wadsworth,
Clarke, Ala.	Henderson, Ill.	Reed,	Walker,
Cobb, Ala.	Hepburn,	Reilly,	Wanger,
Cockran,	Hines,	Richardson, Tenn.	Wever,
Coffeen,	Hitt,	Robbins,	Wheeler, Ala.
Conn,	Holman,	Robinson, Pa.	White,
Cooper, Ind.	Hooker, Miss.	Rusk,	Whiting,
Cooper, Tex.	Hopkins, Ill.	Russell, Conn.	Wilson, Ohio
Cornish,	Hopkins, Pa.	Russell, Ga.	Wilson, Wash.
Cousins,	Houk,	Sayers,	Wilson, W. Va.
Crain,	Hudson,	Schermerhorn,	Wise,
De Forest,	Hulick,	Scranton,	Woomer,
Denson,	Hull,	Settle,	Wright, Pa.
Dingley,	Johnson, Ohio	Shaw,
Dinsmore,	Lefever,	Sherman,
Edmunds,	Linton,	Sibley,

So the motion to reconsider was laid upon the table.

Mr. PAGE. I was not in the Hall of the House when my name was called, but desire to be recorded as present.

The SPEAKER. The Chair can not entertain the request.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

The question recurring on the adoption of the resolution, on a division (demanded by Mr. BYNUM) there were—ayes 95, noes 10.

Mr. BYNUM. No quorum.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I demand the yeas and nays.

Mr. PICKLER. I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. KILGORE. And pending that, I move that when the House adjourns to-day it be to meet at 12 o'clock on Monday next.

The SPEAKER. That motion is not in order. But one motion to adjourn can be entertained, pending the consideration of the report of the Committee on Rules.

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. PICKLER, it was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio demands the yeas and nays on the adoption of the resolution.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER appointed Mr. DUNPHY and Mr. BYNUM as tellers at the desk.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 177, nays 40, answered "present" 2, not voting 132; as follows:

YEAS—177.

Abbott,	Broderick,	Cummings,	Haines,
Adams, Pa.	Brookshire,	Curtis, N. Y.	Hall, Minn.
Aitken,	Brosius,	Dalzell,	Hammond,
Alderson,	Brown,	Daniels,	Hare,
Aldrich,	Bryan,	Davis,	Hartman,
Alexander,	Bundy,	De Forest,	Haugen,
Arnold,	Cabaniss,	Dinsmore,	Hayes,
Avery,	Cadmus,	Doolittle,	Henderson, Iowa
Baker, Kans.	Caminetti,	Draper,	Henderson, N. C.
Baker, N. H.	Campbell,	Dunn,	Hendrix,
Baldwin,	Cannon, Cal.	Dunphy,	Hermann,
Bankhead,	Cannon, Ill.	Durborow,	Hines,
Barnes,	Catchings,	Ellis, Oregon	Hitt,
Bartlett,	Clancy,	Fielder,	Hooker, N. Y.
Barwig,	Cobb, Mo.	Fletcher,	Hulick,
Bell, Colo.	Coffeen,	Funk,	Johnson, Ind.
Bingham,	Coombs,	Fyan,	Johnson, N. Dak.
Black, Ill.	Cooper, Fla.	Gardner,	Kem,
Blair,	Cooper, Tex.	Geary,	Kiefer,
Boatner,	Cooper, Wis.	Geissenhainer,	Kyle,
Boen,	Cousins,	Goldzier,	Lacey,
Boutelle,	Covert,	Grosvenor,	Lane,
Bowers, Cal.	Crawford,	Hager,	Lapham,
Brickner,	Culberson,	Hainer,	Lawson,

Layton.	McNagny,	Pence,	Stone, W. A.
Livingston,	McRae,	Pendleton, W. Va.	Straus,
Loud,	Meiklejohn,	Perkins,	Strong,
Loudenslager,	Mercer,	Phillips,	Sweet,
Lucas,	Money,	Pickler,	Talbott, Md.
Lynch,	Moon,	Pigott,	Tarsney,
Maddox,	Moore,	Post.	Terry,
Maguire,	Morgan,	Powers,	Tracey,
Mahon,	Murray,	Price.	Tyler,
Marsh,	Mutchler,	Quigg,	Updegraff,
Martin, Ind.	Neill,	Randall,	Van Voorhis, N.Y.
Marvin, N.Y.	Northway,	Rayner,	Wanger,
McCall,	Ogden,	Reyburn,	Warner,
McCleary, Minn.	O'Neill, Mass.	Richardson, Mich.	Washington,
McCreary, Ky.	O'Neill, Mo.	Robertson, La.	Waugh,
McDannold,	Outhwaite,	Russell, Conn.	Weadock,
McDowell,	Page,	Sayers,	Wheeler, Ill.
McEttrick,	Paschal,	Sorg.	Wilson, Wash.
McGann,	Patterson,	Sperry,
McKaig,	Payne,	Stephenson,
McKeighan,	Pearson,	Stone, C. W.

NAYS—40.

Allen,	De Armond,	Ikirt,	Ritchie,
Bell, Tex.	Dockery,	Izlar,	Shell,
Black, Ga.	English, Cal.	Kilgore,	Strait,
Bland,	Everett,	Kribbs,	Talbert, S. C.
Branch,	Fithian,	Latimer,	Tate,
Bunn,	Gorman,	McCulloch,	Tucker,
Capehart,	Grady,	McDearmon,	Williams, Ill.
Clark, Mo.	Heiner,	McLaurin,	Williams, Miss.
Cockrell,	Hunter,	Pendleton, Tex.	Wolverton,
Cox,	Hutcheson,	Richards, Ohio	Woodard.

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—2.

Bretz,	Cooper, Ind.

NOT VOTING—132.

Adams, Ky.	English, N. J.	Lester,	Simpson,
Apsley,	Enloe,	Linton,	Sipe,
Babcock,	Epes,	Lockwood,	Smith,
Bailey,	Erdman,	Magner,	Snodgrass,
Barthoidt,	Forman,	Mallory,	Somers,
Belden,	Gear,	Marshall,	Springer,
Beltzhoover,	Gillet, N. Y.	McAleer,	Stallings,
Berry,	Gillett, Mass.	McMillin,	Stevens,
Bower, N. C.	Goodnight,	Meredith,	Stockdale,
Breckinridge, Ark.	Graham,	Meyer,	Stone, Ky.
Breckinridge, Ky.	Gresham,	Milliken,	Storer,
Burnes,	Griffin,	Montgomery,	Swanson,
Burrows,	Grout,	Morse,	Tawney,
Bynum,	Grow,	Moses,	Taylor, Ind.
Caruth,	Hall, Mo.	Newlands,	Taylor, Tenn.
Causey,	Harmer,	Oates,	Thomas,
Chickering,	Harris,	Paynter,	Turner, Ga.
Childs,	Harter,	Ray,	Turner, Va.
Clarke, Ala.	Hatch,	Reed.	Turpin,
Cobb, Ala.	Heard,	Reilly,	Van Voorhis, Ohio
Cockran,	Henderson, Ill.	Richardson, Tenn.	Wadsworth,
Cogswell,	Hepburn,	Robbins,	Walker,
Conn,	Hicks,	Robinson, Pa.	Wells,
Cornish,	Holman,	Rusk.	Wever,
Crain,	Hooker, Miss.	Russell, Ga.	Wheeler, Ala.
Curtis, Kans.	Hopkins, Ill.	Ryan,	White,
Davey,	Hopkins, Pa.	Schermerhorn,	Whiting,
Denson,	Houk,	Scranton,	Wilson, Ohio
Dingley,	Hudson,	Settle,	Wilson, W. Va.
Dolliver,	Hull,	Shaw,	Wise,
Donovan,	Johnson, Ohio	Sherman,	Woomer,
Edmunds,	Jones,	Sibley.	Wright, Mass.
Ellis, Ky.	Lefever,	Sickles,	Wright, Pa.

So the resolution was agreed to.

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. SPRINGER with Mr. REED.

For the rest of this day:

Mr. HOLMAN with Mr. LEFEVER.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL MONDAY NEXT.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Mr. Speaker, I move that when the House adjourns to-day, it be to meet on Monday next.

The motion was agreed to.

RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. CATCHINGS. Mr. Speaker, I present the conference report on the river and harbor appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the title of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 6518) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes.

(For conference report see Senate proceedings.)

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the statement of the House conferees.

The Clerk read as follows:

When the bill passed the House it carried $9,538,689.56. The Senate Committee on Commerce increased the same $3,087,490.44. When the bill was up for consideration in the Senate it was still further increased $164,500, making the total amount as it passed the Senate, $12,790,680. The House conferees succeeded in reducing the Senate bill $1,302,500. The bill as now recommended by the conferees carries $11,488,180.

Mr. CATCHINGS. Mr. Speaker, unless some gentleman desires further information, I will move the previous question on the adoption of the report.

Mr. DALZELL. Does this bill as reported by the conferees contain an appropriation of $20,000 for surveys of canals between Lake Erie and the Ohio River?

Mr. CATCHINGS. It does. I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The conference report was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. CATCHINGS, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted:

To Mr. HOLMAN, for this day, on account of sickness.

COMMITTEE REPORTS.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will call the committees for reports.

SCHOOL ON OMAHA INDIAN RESERVATION.

Mr. LYNCH, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, reported favorably, with amendments, the bill (S. 870) authorizing the issue of a patent to the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions for certain lands on the Omaha Indian Reservation for school purposes; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING, NORFOLK, VA.

Mr. McKAIG, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported a bill (H. R. 6776) to amend "An act to provide for the erection of a public building in the city of Norfolk, in the State of Virginia," approved January 2, 1891; which was read a first and second time, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS OF THE UNITED STATES.

Mr. McKAIG also, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, also reported a bill (H. R. 7470) to provide for the securing of plans and for the erection of the public buildings of the United States; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompany report, ordered to be printed.

MORNING HOUR.

The SPEAKER. This completes the call of committees for reports. The morning hour begins at five minutes before 3 o'clock, and the call rests with the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. I ask unanimous consent to pass the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, with the understanding that it may be recurred to hereafter without prejudice.

Mr. BUNN. I shall have to object to that, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made. The call rests on the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

SALARIES OF RAILWAY POSTAL CLERKS.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. By direction of the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads I call up the bill S. 544.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the title of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 544) to reclassify and prescribe the salaries of railway postal clerks.

Ths SPEAKER. This bill is in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to consider the bill in the House as in the Committee of the Whole. It does not require any appropriation.

The SPEAKER. But it provides for a charge against the Treasury?

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. Yes, I know that——

Mr. DOCKERY. I think it would be better to consider that bill in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. I will move, then, that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole to consider this bill.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill, with Mr. O'NEIL of Massachusetts in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the bill called up by the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

The bill was read, as follows:

A bill (S. 544) to reclassify and prescribe the salaries of railway postal clerks.

Be it enacted, etc., That persons in the Railway Mail Service, known as railway postal clerks, shall, on and after the passage of this act, be divided into seven classes, whose salaries shall not exceed the following rates per annum: First class, not exceeding $800; second class, not exceeding $1,000; third class, not exceeding $1,200; fourth class, not exceeding $1,300; fifth class, not exceeding $1,500; sixth class, not exceeding $1,600; seventh class, not exceeding $1,800: Provided, That the Postmaster-General, in fixing the salaries of clerks in the different classes, may fix the salaries of clerks of the same class, according to the amount of work done, the number of hours on duty, and the responsibility incurred by each, but shall not in any case allow a higher salary to any clerk of any class than the maximum fixed by this act for the class to which such clerk belongs.

SEC. 2. That such railway postal clerks of class 7 as shall be detailed as chief clerks of divisions, and such clerks of class 6 as may be detailed chief clerks of two or more lines, shall, while traveling on the business of the Department, be paid from the appropriation for the transportation of mails on railroads their actual and necessary expenses, but not exceeding $5 per diem.

SEC. 3. That all laws and parts of laws in conflict with the provisions of this act be, and the same are hereby, repealed.

SEC. 4. That this act take effect from and after its passage.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the Clerk read the formal report and then the report by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. KYLE], a member of the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

The reports were read, as follows:

The Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, to whom was referred the bill (S. 544) to reclassify and prescribe the salaries of railway postal clerks, have considered the same and recommend its passage.

The Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5064) to reclassify and prescribe the salaries of railway postal clerks, having considered the same, direct me to report it back to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

And as a bill (S. 544) similar in all respects to this one has been introduced in the Senate and favorably reported by the proper committee of that body, we take the following, bearing upon the subject in hand, from said report and present it as part of this report:

"The great advances which have been made during recent years in the handling of the mails have been due most largely to the increased efficiency of the Railway Mail Service, and particularly to the increased skill and ability of the railway mail clerks. There is no other class of public servants which is subjected to a like amount of competition. The eagerness of business men to receive their letters with the least possible delay; the desire on the part of the railroads to attract patronage by increasing the speed of trains; the pressure upon the Post-Office Department to keep abreast of the times in furnishing mail facilities—all these things have so developed the railway mail clerk of to-day that he has become one of the most skilled of laborers, while at the same time the mental wear and tear of his work has increased in full proportion to the increase in his efficiency. While these increased demands have been made on the railway mail clerks, their pay, so far from having been increased, on the contrary, has even been diminished.

"The bill under consideration permits an increase in the maximum to $1,800, a truly modest advance. The clerks who would comprise the new seventh grade, thirteen in all, are known as assistant superintendents of divisions, while the seventy-two clerks to be benefited by the proposed sixth grade are chief clerks. These men are located at the important railroad centers, and have the immediate charge of about one hundred men each. They have been promoted from the ranks and selected for the positions because of their superior executive ability, knowledge of the service and of the postal laws and regulations. In any other Department these men would be as chiefs of division and draw a salary of $2,000 or more.

"The following statement shows the rates of compensation under existing law and the proposed changes as provided in this bill:

"Compensation per annum.

	Existing law.	This bill.
First class	$800	$800
Second class	900	1,000
Third class	1,000	1,200
Fourth class	1,200	1,300
Fifth class	1,400	1,500
Sixth class		1,600
Seventh class		1,800

"The bill adds a sixth and seventh class at a compensation, respectively, of $1,600 and $1,800, and provides that the Postmaster-General, in fixing the salaries of clerks in different classes, may grade the salaries of the same class with due regard to the amount of work, the number of hours employed, and the responsibility incurred. It also provides that clerks of class 7 may be detailed as chiefs of divisions, and clerks of class 6 may be detailed chief clerks of two or more lines under prescribed restrictions."

"The bill carries no appropriation. It simply authorizes the Postmaster-General to reclassify the railway postal clerks, and allows him to fill the higher classes as the appropriations at his disposal will allow. The bill is identical with one which passed the Senate in the Fifty-second Congress. Should the reclassifications be made at once the increase would amount to about $350,000; but the rapidity of the change would depend on the annual appropriation."

"OFFICE OF THE POSTMASTER-GENERAL,
"Washington, D. C., February 1, 1894.

"SIR: I have the honor to submit the following in response to yours of the 23d ultimo, relating to Senate bill 544, which provides for a reclassification of the Railway Mail Service.

"Senate bill 544, I understand, is practically the same as that which was favorably passed upon by the committees on Post-Offices and Post-Roads of the Fifty-second Congress.

"Since my connection with the Post-Office Department I have become much impressed with the importance and usefulness of the railway mail mail branch of the general service of mail transportation, and I therefore appreciate the importance of making provision for the enlargement of the organization from time to time, so as to enable the Postmaster-General to properly care for the growth and changed conditions of the mails which are distributed in railway post-offices.

"It is this branch of the postal service which is quickest to place the rural districts upon a parity with the cities.

"I do not understand that the proposed measure is intended to make it obligatory on the part of the Postmaster-General to instantly apply to the entire service a complete change in its organization. It would, if enacted into law, place the Department in a position to enlarge its organization as the actual necessities of the service and the appropriations would admit of.

"As emphasizing the necessity for legislation admitting of the enlargement of the Railway Mail Service it is not improper to mention that the present organization of that service provides for but five classes, and was authorized when the railway post-office lines covered less than 100,000 miles and the number of clerks was but 3,500.

"To-day, however, the length of railroads over which the mails are carried approaches closely to 170,000 miles, and the yearly increase is estimated at 4,000 miles, while the number of clerks within the coming year will exceed 7,000. Ten years ago the present organization was doubtless sufficient, but its continuance, without changes, acts as a check upon the acquiring of the maximum extent of satisfactory mail service that would result from granting to the Postmaster-General authority to adapt the organization to the growing necessities of the country.

"Yours, respectfully,

"W. S. BISSELL,
"Postmaster-General.

"Hon. A. H. COLQUITT,
"Chairman Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads,
"United States Senate, Washington, D. C."

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, this bill has passed the Senate, and the object of it is to reclassify the railway postal clerks. Under the present system there are five classes of these clerks. Under this bill if it passes there will be seven classes. As the law now stands the lowest class can not receive more than $800 a year, the second class not exceeding $900, the third class not exceeding $1,000, the fourth class not exceeding $1,200, and the fifth class not exceeding $1,400 per annum.

If this bill passes, and there is a new classification, the first class may have $800 a year, the second class $1,000, the third class $1,200, the fourth class $1,300, the fifth-class $1,500, the sixth class $1,600 and the seventh class $1,800; that is to say, that is the utmost that can be allowed to any of these clerks. The salaries as fixed here are not certain salaries, but not exceeding the amount specified; so that the whole matter rests within the discretion of the Postmaster-General.

The bill carries no appropriation, but the Postmaster-General says that if the reclassifications are all to be made at once the increase would amount to about $350,000. He also says that the rapidity of the change would depend upon the annual appropriations; so that if this bill passes there can not possibly be any greater expense than $350,000 a year; and not that unless the amount is appropriated by Congress.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Will the gentleman permit me to interrupt him with a question?

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. Yes, sir.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. I understand that the object of this bill is to give to those who have had long and meritorious service some opportunity for honorable promotion?

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. Yes, sir; that is one of the objects of the bill; and the bill is very much desired by the Post-Office Department.

Mr. DUNPHY. I want to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. I yield to the gentleman for a question.

Mr. DUNPHY. These are postal railway clerks?

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. These are postal railway clerks.

Mr. DUNPHY. They already have their salaries fixed by law.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. They already have their salaries fixed by law, except that they are not fixed certainly. They are allowed not exceeding a certain sum. It is entirely within the discretion of the Postmaster-General as to how much he will pay each grade. It depends upon the annual appropriation.

Mr. DUNPHY. And I understand the difference between the postal railway clerks and the postal clerks is that while the postal railway clerks have their salaries fixed by law, the postal clerks have not their salaries fixed by law at all.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. There is no connection between the two services. The passage of this bill would not interfere with the salaries of the postal clerks.

Mr. DUNPHY. But this is a salary bill.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. Not necessarily.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. It is a bill for the reclassification of the railway mail clerks.

Mr. DUNPHY. By raising their salaries.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. It may not raise any salary except there will be two new grades of clerks. The only way salaries will certainly be raised under this bill is that there will be two new additional grades of clerks, and of course those clerks will be entitled to something more than the fifth-class clerk is now receiving; but the whole of the amount of salaries depends upon the discretion of the Postmaster-General, within the appropriation that is made by Congress.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I retain the floor, and will yield time to such gentlemen as desire.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. Yield to me five minutes.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. I desire to ask the gentleman what is the maximum salary under the classification now existing?

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. Fourteen hundred dollars.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Now, that is the highest salary that a postal railway clerk may receive.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. That is the highest salary he may receive under the present act.

Mr. COOMBS. What is the lowest?

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. The lowest is $800. I now yield five minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS].

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I do not know that I desire to take the time allotted me, because I think this is a bill where action should be taken rather than to have the time expended in debate. I simply desire to call attention of members of the committee to the fact that this bill does not necessarily raise the salary of these clerks at all, it depending upon the appropriations. The reason and the necessity for this reclassification is that there has been no change in the law for nearly twenty-five years. When the railway postal clerks were last classified, they were in number less than 3,500, and operated on less than 100,000 miles of road.

Since that time the Railway Mail Service has extended over 170,000 miles of railroad, and the number of clerks has increased to over 7,000. This classification simply increases the number by two. We have five classes now, and if this bill becomes a law we shall have seven. The seventh class will cover only thirteen persons, and the sixth class only seventy-two. So gentlemen can see that this is not a wholesale raid upon the Treasury of the United States, but is simply a measure for facilitating the business of this great Department of the Government.

The positions of the seventy-two clerks in the sixth class are similar to those of chiefs of bureaus, and in the other Departments of the Government no chief is now receiving a salary of less than $2,000. Under this classification the highest amount that could be allowed to any one of these seventy-two would be $1,600. That is the maximum, and if the appropriation is not sufficient to pay that amount the Postmaster-General, under the law, will have the power of reducing the salary one hundred or two hundred dollars, as the case may be.

Now, Mr. Chairman, in my judgment there is no branch of the public service so deserving as this Railway Postal Service. The clerks in that service are intelligent, skilled men. No man of mediocre intelligence can hold permanently a position there. From the nature of the work they are compelled to become experts. In addition to this intelligence they are required to have great physical endurance, for they are exposed to much hardship, and also to constant danger from railway accidents. Even if there was nothing but that consideration to urge in their favor, I take it that there is no member on this floor who would not heartily, readily, freely, and cheerfully give his support to this bill.

But, Mr. Chairman, there is another consideration to be taken into account in connection with this bill. The compensation of the employés in this service has been degraded during the last few years, while the compensation of those in the other great Departments has been increased. Back in 1873 the average salary of these postal clerks was $1,033.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. Will the gentleman give me five minutes more?

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. I yield five minutes more.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. In 1873, I say, the average pay of these postal clerks was $1,033, while the average to-day is only $993. This decrease has been made by the Postmaster-General, under the law which gives him the power to regulate the salaries of these clerks with reference to the amount of money that is actually appropriated by the Government; and, to show the injustice that is done to these employés in that respect, I desire to call attention to the report of the Postmaster-General where he speaks of the increased efficiency in this branch of the service. The Postmaster-General in his report for 1893 says that in the five years from 1888 to 1893 the number of pieces of ordinary mail handled increased 48.69 per cent, while the number of clerks to do that business increased only 13.86 per cent. It will be seen, therefore, that, notwithstanding a decreased compensation, the exigencies of the service have been such that each of these clerks has been compelled to do an extra amount of work. Any gentleman here who is familiar with this branch of the service knows that when these clerks are employed they often work not less than fourteen hours a day.

Mr. MERCER. Then they do not get the benefit of the eight-hour law?

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. They do not. They can not. They work as many as fourteen hours a day while in actual service.

Mr. HERMANN. If the gentleman will permit me, I will state, in line with his argument, that in my own State and California the postal clerks have recently had a continuous run of 740 miles.

Mr. BOATNER. How can they be compelled to work fourteen hours a day when the statute expressly provides that no Federal employé shall work more than eight hours?

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. I will tell the gentleman; and it is another illustration of the injustice that is done to the employés in this Department of the public service. Take, for instance, a route from Chicago, where the mail is made up for Omaha and points farther west, the clerk is required to appear at the place designated, say, at 3 o'clock in the morning. The train may not be ready to start until 7 o'clock a. m. but, in order to arrange the mail the clerk is required to be on hand three or four hours prior to that time, and to work with a diligence and intelligence that are not paralleled elsewhere in the Government service. Then he has to run from there to Burlington, Iowa, or to Omaha, Nebr., or farther on so that from the time he starts to work until he gets through his work is often not less than fourteen hours in continuous service.

It is true that there is a provision in the law that clerks shall work one week on and one week off, so as to divide up the time and get down the average to eight hours per day if possible, but so complicated is this service and so expert the character of the work required from these clerks that they are required to work from one to three hours a day on the maps and in practicing their duties on days when they are off duty. This is required of them in order that they may be efficient on the days when they are on duty.

Any gentleman here who has been on the mail cars and has observed the work that is done by these clerks will verify the statements I have made. So high is the grade of work that is required in this service that if, in the distribution of the mails contained in the various sacks in the mail car, a certain percentage of mistakes appears the clerk loses his position. It will be seen, therefore, that instead of taking the time he is off duty for rest and recuperation, the railway postal clerk is required to practice his work in order to be prepared to work efficiently when he is on duty.

Now, under the old law, before there was any reduction in the salaries in classes 4 and 5, the clerks received $200 a year more in each of those classes than they are receiving at the present time.

Without multiplying words, Mr. Chairman, and without occupying further time to explain this bill, I am satisfied that from the experience and knowledge of members of the House there can be no fair and just opposition to the passage of this bill. It was favored by Gen. Don M. Dickinson when he was Postmaster-General; it was favored by Mr. John Wanamaker when he was Postmaster-General; and it is favored by the present chief of that great Department. There is no man, be he Democrat or Republican, who has carefully investigated the merits of this bill, and understands the requirements and exactions which must be met by this class of public servants, who will not concede the merit, the justice, the equity of this bill. I hope and trust that none of the economists upon either side of the House, for the sake of insuring that the appropriations of the Government shall not exceed a certain limit, will feel it incumbent upon them to strike a blow at this worthy class of public servants by opposing this bill.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. I move that the bill be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

Mr. DOCKERY. That motion is not yet in order. General debate has not been closed.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. Does the gentleman wish to occupy some time?

Mr. DOCKERY. I would like to be recognized in my own right.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. I will give the gentleman five minutes.

Mr. DOCKERY. I want more time than that. This is a proposition to increase the salary list of the Government $350,000 a year, and is entitled to full consideration.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. I will give the gentleman ten minutes.

Mr. SAYERS. On this bill we will take what time we please.

Mr. DOCKERY. I would be glad to have the floor in my own right.

The CHAIRMAN. As the gentleman from North Carolina is now on the floor, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DOCKERY] can not occupy the floor except with his consent.

Mr. DOCKERY. The Chair is correct. How much time does the gentleman from North Carolina consent to yield to me?

The CHAIRMAN. Ten minutes.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Chairman, there is no Representative on this floor more ready than I am to concede the efficiency of the railway postal clerks. That arm of the postal service is peculiarly efficient, and as such is entitled to the most generous consideration at the hands of the Government. This proposition was well stated a moment ago by the gentleman from New York [Mr. DUNPHY], in answer to a statement of the chairman of the committee, to be a proposition to increase salaries; and as appears by the report of the Postmaster-General it involves an additional annual tax upon the people of the United States to the extent of $350,000.

Mr. Chairman, this House has heretofore expressed itself in an indirect way upon the proposition to increase the salaries of railway postal clerks. In the last Congress an amendment was agreed to in Committee of the Whole on the Post-Office appropriation bill providing a fund, amounting, as I remember, to $120,000, which would enable the Postmaster-General to allow the clerks the maximum compensation authorized by law. The law now allows a certain class of clerks $1,200; the Postmaster-General, in his discretion, allows to clerks of that class only $1,150. To another class, as I remember, the existing law permits the Postmaster-General to pay $1,400; yet he only allows clerks of that class $1,300.

Now, as I was saying, an amendment was adopted in the last Congress in the Committee of the Whole appropriating $120,000 so as to enable the Postmaster-General to pay the additional amount not heretofore allowed. When that amendment came before the House for its consideration, the House promptly disagreed to the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Chairman, this proposition to increase the salaries of this very worthy class is not a new proposition. When the Treasury of the United States had $100,000,000 of surplus, the Fifty-first Congress denied this bill consideration. When the vaults of our Treasury were overflowing with surplus revenue, the Fifty-first Congress denied this bill a hearing. Yet, to-day, with an impending deficit—with $50,000,000 of Government bonds already issued—this measure "bobs up serenely" to add $350,000 annually to the taxes of the American people.

Mr. Chairman, I shall not stop to discuss the merits or the demerits of this bill. Under favorable circumstances I might support it. If our revenues were abundant, I might support it. If we had money flowing into the Treasury so as to meet all the obligations of the Government and leave a surplus, I might support it. But confronted with the existing condition—and that a condition of $50,000,000 already added to the interest-bearing debt of the Government—I shall oppose this increase of salaries.

I appeal to gentlemen on both sides of this Chamber to stay their hands and not add further to the burdens of the people at a time when hundreds and thousands of citizens of this country are out of employment. Postpone the consideration of this measure until prosperous times return; and then it is possible I may unite with the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS] in advocating the proposition. Mr. Chairman, I trust the House will not give this measure favorable consideration.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. I want to ask if the gentleman voted in favor of the report of the conference committee on the river and harbor bill to-day?

Mr. DOCKERY. I did not.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. The gentleman did not vote for that?

Mr. DOCKERY. The "gentleman" never voted for it. I think, if I remember aright, I voted for the river and harbor bill in the Forty-eighth Congress, since which time I have never supported the measure.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. This House voted $2,000,000 without a quiver to that.

Mr. DOCKERY. For what?

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. Two additional millions for river and harbor improvements all over the country, over and above what was already in the House bill. Here is a proposition that affects the entire United States, and does not take a dollar out of the Treasury.

Mr. DOCKERY. Oh, the gentleman will hardly claim that. He must admit that the reclassification will involve an expenditure of $350,000.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. But the Postmaster-General says that the reclassification will improve the efficiency of the service, even if you do not make an appropriation to pay the additional salaries, letting them remain just as they are.

Mr. DOCKERY. Well, my observation has been that when you authorize an increase of salary the increase usually follows. This is the purpose of the bill to increase salaries. If that is not the intention and purpose, will the gentleman admit amendments that will forbid the increase of appropriations to carry out the reorganization or reclassification? If such a provision is incorporated I do not know that I would object to the bill.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. The gentleman knows that the purpose is to improve the efficiency of that branch of the service. The Postmaster-General says he would rather have it without the appropriation, so as to permit the reclassification, than to let the law remain as it is.

Mr. DOCKERY. It gives me pleasure in this connection to say that there is no more efficient branch of the public service than the Railway Postal Service.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. Then do it justice and let us pass this bill.

Mr. DOCKERY. Certainly I will do it justice; but the gentleman should remember that these people are getting salaries now ranging from $800 to $1,400, a great deal more on the average than people are earning in ordinary business pursuits. Not one of these gentlemen desires to resign. They are generally considered good salaries, and hence under the present condition of affairs I must oppose this increase. We have been doing justice to them.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. Now, if the gentleman will allow me——

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri has the floor.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. But the gentleman has yielded to me.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman should first address the Chair and get consent to ask a question.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. There is no necessity for the Chair getting excited.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri has the floor.

Mr. DOCKERY. I yield to the gentleman.

[Here the hammer fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. DOCKERY. I should like to have five minutes more for the purpose of answering the gentleman's question.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. It does not matter. I shall not insist upon it.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, this is not a bill to increase salaries. The gentleman from Missouri has not stated the case properly. The object of the bill and the only object is to increase the efficiency of the Railway Postal Service.

Mr. BROSIUS. If agreeable to the gentleman from North Carolina, I would like to ask a question here.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. Certainly.

Mr. BROSIUS. What number of clerks will be affected by this legislation? I have not been able to ascertain.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. Well, of course all the clerks will be more or less affected—the entire postal service. There are now five classes, and there will be seven after the passage of this bill.

Mr. BROSIUS. Is the gentleman able to give approximately the number of clerks who will be affected?

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. I do not remember exactly. The gentleman's colleague from Pennsylvania [Mr. BINGHAM] can inform him.

Mr. BINGHAM. It will be about 6,100.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. That is my recollection of it.

Mr. BROSIUS. Now, about what amount of money, in addition to that already expended under existing law, will be required to give effect to the bill?

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. The utmost amount that can be expended if the bill becomes a law is $350,000 a year. It does not necessarily follow, however, that half or a third of this amount will be expended, because the Postmaster-General states positively that he is going to move slowly in the matter, and what he wants is an opportunity to improve the efficiency of the service.

Mr. BROSIUS. That is the amount in excess of the amount now expended in the service?

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. Yes, sir.

Now, if no one else wishes to discuss the question, I would like to come to a vote.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I want either to be recognized in my own right or to ask time from the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. How much time does the gentleman want?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I would prefer to be recognized in my own time. I always quit when I get done speaking.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. There is no time except what I have.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. How can that be? I thought there were two sides to all questions.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. Well, in the morning hour it is necessary to have a different rule. But I will be willing to yield to the gentleman.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. How much will you give me?

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. Five minutes.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. That will not do; I will not accept that.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. I have only twenty minutes, and I will give the gentleman ten.

Mr. BINGHAM. The gentleman certainly would not ask more than half of that time.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Well, all right; I will accept that.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I want to say this to begin with: I have no suggestion whatever to make to the Republican side of the House on questions of economy. They are hardened in their sins and set in their ways. [Laughter.] Nobody commissioned me to be their legal or spiritual adviser. But I do want to give a word or two of advice to gentlemen on the Democratic side of the Chamber, and that is, that we came into possession of every branch of this Government at the last election on a platform of economy. We made the welkin ring from California to Maine, and from the St. Lawrence River to the Rio Grande, with the proposition that the Republican party was an extravagant party, and that if we came into possession of the Government we proposed to cut down expenses.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. The people did not believe you.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Yes, they did. They believed us sufficiently to give us possession of this Government. I believed that proposition then and I believe it now. I also believe in keeping faith with the people. I do not propose to stultify myself and the people who sent me hither by going into the game of "raising" the Republicans [laughter], if you know what that means [laughter], in the matter of extravagance. Mr. Chairman, of all the times since I have been old enough to take cognizance of what is happening in the world, this is the most inopportune season to raise people's salaries.

Mr. ALLEN. It is all we can do to raise revenue.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Yes. That is true. We can not raise revenue enough now, under the laws which Republicans put upon the statute books, to run the Government even when it is economically administered. Hundreds of thousands of people are out of employment, begging for work, who can not get it; and now this committee comes in here and asks this Democratic House to put up the salaries of these men. They may be very deserving. No doubt they are. I have not a word to say against them. But it is proposed, in the face of existing distress, in the face of the hard times, in the face of a bankrupt Treasury, in the face of the protests of the masses of the people, to add $350,000 a year to the burdens of the taxpayer of this country.

I want to say to gentlemen on this side of the Chamber that the people will not have it. [Applause.]

Now, my friend from Illinois, who generally speaks very entertainingly if not intelligently [laughter], laid down the proposition here that these men work fourteen hours a day; and yet it is stated right on the face of this report that they lay off one-half of the time. That makes seven hours a day. The gentleman who wrote this report, Senator MCMILLAN, urges Congress to pass this law because the railway mail clerks are compelled to work more hours a day than the clerks over here in the Departments. That is certainly a strange reason. I can suggest a better method of equalizing things among them. That is to make these clerks in the Departments work more hours in the day. [Laughter.] It will have a tendency to keep them out of mischief.

A MEMBER. Why not give them less pay, too.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Nobody ever proposes more work and less pay. It is always more pay and less work. These railway postal clerks may not be paid exorbitant salaries. I do not suppose they are. But they are this day drawing bigger salaries, a good deal, than the majority of laborers in the United States of equal intelligence.

A MEMBER. Are any of them going to resign?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Not as anybody has heard of. Thomas Jefferson said that Federal officeholders seldom died and never resigned. He was correct in that as in everything else. There is no imminent danger of their resigning, and if they did there are plenty just as competent to take their places. Every member on the Democratic side, and many Republicans, have among their papers, or on file in the Post-Office Department divers and sundry applications of men who want these identical places at the present pay, and it will not do for the gentleman from Illinois, or for gentlemen from anywhere else, to say that these men who hold these places are more intelligent and better fitted for the places than other people who want the positions.

Mr. KILGORE. Did we not pass a bill the other day to compel the Government to employ, under certain circumstances, three or four thousand of those postal clerks who were "fired" by the preceding Administration?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Yes; we passed a bill through this House to put back upon the rolls of the Post-Office Department some 3,000 or 3,500 competent Democratic railway clerks——

Mr. KILGORE. Under the present salary?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. At the present salary, clerks who were bounced by President Harrison for no other reason than that they had the courage, the patriotism, and the good sense to vote the Democratic ticket in 1888. [Applause on the Democratic side.] What will be the fate of that bill in the House of the Ancients I do not know. [Laughter.]

Now, my Democratic friends, I want to inform you what this bill is. I might as well tell the whole truth and be through with it. It is a proposition to raise the salaries of five or six or seven Republicans where you raise the salary of one Democrat. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. BOUTELLE. I am glad the gentleman has got down to good Democratic argument. [Laughter on the Republican side.]

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Yes; I have got down to argument. I do not very much blame a Republican for voting for this kind of a bill—it is entirely consistent with their record of extravagance—but I should like to see the color of the man's hair and the cut of his eyes on the Democratic side of this House who can vote for this bill and tell the truth about it when he gets home and satisfy his Democratic constituents that he did right.

Mr. KILGORE. "It can not be did." [Laughter.]

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. No; it can not be "did." I am amazed, Mr. Chairman, that such a proposition as this should ever come from a Democratic committee. [Applause on Democratic side.]

I do not desire to consume the time of this House, and do not intend to unnecessarily; but I want to give gentlemen fair warning right here and now that they are not going to get this bill passed, and the two other bills that are back of this, until every method of obstruction is exhausted that is left to us under the new rules of this House. Just one sentence more. If I had as much parliamentary rope as the gentleman from Texas [Mr. KILGORE] used to have in the halcyon days of the filibuster, they never would pass. [Laughter.]

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BINGHAM].

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. Chairman, I believe the people are always willing to give good compensation to the subordinate force of the Post-Office Department, for there is not a service of this Government wherein they receive a larger measure of convenience, benefit, and reward than in a capable and wise administration of this great Government work. This large body of men, I believe the statement will not be questioned, stand the severest examination as to clerical requirements and ability of any of the subordinate employés of this Department. Their compensations are limited, their labors are severe, and with the growth of the Post-Office service their requirements are growing continually greater and greater.

With every increase in this service the standards as to ability are becoming higher. The schedules to-day that are handled on the great trunk lines carrying postal cars are multiplied five times to what they were ten years ago. It is to be remembered these men are all in the classified service, and are required to pass a severe examination. The gentleman who has just spoken submits that these men are off a number of days in each month. It is well to understand that the allowance of time off occurs in order that they may study their schedules, pass their examinations, and be qualified continually for the constantly growing work, as well as the necessary physical relief. No man can do continuous work upon railroads—mental and physical. There is, however, in connection with this service, one condition not thus far adverted to. It is the only work in the Post-Office Department where there is an average possibility of loss of life and serious injury. In the last fiscal year 10 men were killed, 68 men were seriously injured, and 115 men were qualifiedly injured. The families of the deceased, of the men who were killed in the service, received no allowance from the Government; and yet in one of the bills that will pass this House there is an allowance of $5,000 each for the families of the deceased, of every one who lost life, in the recent Ford's Theater disaster. Every year in this service men go to death with no compensation to their family following; men receiving life injuries with no compensation from the Government following. It is a most dangerous service as well as labor requiring the highest line of ability.

In connection with the broadening of this service in recent years there has been established in the great cities subpost-offices; and these men, taking my own city as an illustration, where twenty-odd post-offices or substations are established—these men on the cars, in addition to their schedule route, must be so familiar with the territorial division of great cities that distribution must be made the same as the clerks now make in the local offices.

Mr. VAN VOORHIS of New York. I will ask the gentleman if there are not more mail trains robbed in the State of Missouri than anywhere else, and is not that the place where the most of these people are killed that you have spoken of?

Mr. BINGHAM. I will not say, but I will let my friend from Missouri [Mr. DOCKERY] answer that question in his time.

The $350,000 estimated by the Department will not of necessity be expended. It will be within the discretion of the Postmaster-General; this bill simply authorizes the Postmaster-General to reclassify postal clerks—a Postmaster-General who came into power with the same party as the gentleman from Missouri. The Postmaster-General says it will increase the efficiency of the service, a readjustment and realignment of an army of men, upwards of 6,000, covering an appropriation of $7,186,000, giving better administration, a service more useful to the people than if continued upon the present law. I submit I would rather accept and follow the statement and recommendation of the Postmaster-General supervising this special function of the Government than the suggestions of the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. Unless some one else wishes to discuss this matter, I move that the bill be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

Mr. DOCKERY. General debate has not been closed, and the bill has not been considered by sections.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that general debate be now closed.

Mr. KILGORE. I object.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. Then I make the motion that general debate be now closed.

Mr. DOCKERY. That can only be done in the House.

The CHAIRMAN. That request was submitted, and the gentleman from Texas objected.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. I move that the committee rise and report the bill to the House with a favorable recommendation.

Mr. DOCKERY. Oh, no. General debate has not been closed.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. I move that the committee do now rise.

The CHAIRMAN. That motion is not in order.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. Why not, Mr. Chairman? The gentleman from North Carolina has charge of this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina moves that the committee do now rise.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. I understood the gentleman to couple with that a motion that when the committee rise the bill be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

The CHAIRMAN. He withdrew that. His last motion was that the committee do now rise.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. Well, Mr. Chairman, I move to amend that motion by adding, that the bill be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

Mr. DOCKERY. I make the point that that is not in order, Mr. Chairman, until general debate is closed.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. I would like to know why it is not in order?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is not obliged to give reasons, but the gentleman knows well enough that in the Committee of the Whole a bill must first be open to general debate, that after general debate is closed the bill must then be read by paragraphs, and only after that has been done is it in order to move to report it to the House.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. The bill has been read and debated generally.

The CHAIRMAN. It has not been read by paragraphs, nor has general debate been closed. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from North Carolina that the committee do now rise.

The question being taken, the Chairman declared that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. DOCKERY. I ask for a division.

The committee divided.

The CHAIRMAN (pending the division). The morning hour has expired and the committee will rise.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. O'NEIL of Massachusetts, from the Committee of the Whole, reported that they had under consideration a bill (S. 544) "to reclassify and prescribe the salaries of railway postal clerks," and had come to no resolution thereon.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the special order.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That to-day, after the second morning hour and until 5 o'clock, be assigned to the consideration of bills reported and called up by the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads; this order not to interfere with revenue or appropriation bills, conference reports, or reports from the Committee on Rules.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. HENDERSON] is recognized.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House take a recess until 8 o'clock.

Mr. QUIGG. I make the point of order that the motion is not in order in view of the rule which the House has adopted to-day.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I believe I have been recognized by the Chair, and I make the point that the motion of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. KILGORE] is not in order under the rule adopted awhile ago.

Mr. QUIGG. Mr. Speaker, may we have the special order reported again?

The Clerk again reported the special order as above.

Mr. QUIGG. I make the point of order that the motion of the gentleman from Texas is not in order under that rule.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. I think I have the floor, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. A point of order is made which the Chair is called upon to decide. The special order assigns to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads this day up to 5 o'clock, but the Chair supposes it is competent for the House to adjourn or to dispose otherwise of the time. There is nothing in the order which restricts it, although the order is an assignment of this day up to 5 o'clock to that committee. The Chair thinks the motion of the gentleman from Texas is in order, if it is insisted upon. The gentleman moves that the House take a recess until 8 o'clock this evening.

The question being taken, the Speaker declared that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. KILGORE. I ask for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 48, noes 85.

Mr. KILGORE. No quorum has voted.

The SPEAKER. The point of no quorum being made, the Chair will appoint to act as tellers the gentleman from Texas, Mr. KILGORE, and the gentleman from New York, Mr. DUNPHY.

Mr. KILGORE called for the yeas and nays, but immediately withdrew the demand, and then, pending the count by tellers, withdrew the point of no quorum.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from North Carolina indicate the bill which he desires to call up under the special order?

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. I desire to call up the bill (H. R. 56) for the classification of clerks in first and second class post-offices and fixing the salaries of the same, and I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of that bill.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole, Mr. O'NEIL of Massachusetts in the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole for the consideration of the bill which will be read.

Mr. DUNPHY. I ask unanimous consent that the first reading of the bill be dispensed with.

Mr. BYNUM, Mr. KILGORE and others objected.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 56) for the classification of clerks in first and second class post-offices and for fixing the salaries of the same.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Postmaster-General be, and he is hereby, authorized to classify and fix the salaries of the clerks and employés attached to the first-class post-offices from and after July 1, 1892, as hereinafter provided:

The assistant postmaster shall receive 50 per cent of the salary of the postmaster, as provided by act of March 3, 1883, except at New York, N. Y., where the salary of the assistant postmaster shall be fixed at $3,500 per annum, and that of the second assistant postmaster at $2,000 per annum.

The secretary and stenographer to postmaster at offices where authorized, five classes, salary shall be graded in even hundreds of dollars., at $1,200, $1,300, $1,400, $1,500, and not exceeding $1,600 per annum, to be classified according to the salary of the postmaster.

Cashiers, six classes, salary shall be graded in even hundreds of dollars, at $1,800, $2,000, $2,200, $2,400, $2,600, and not exceeding $2,800 per annum, to be classified according to the salary of the postmaster.

Assistant cashiers, five classes, salary shall be graded in even hundreds of dollars, at $1,200, $1,300, $1,400, $1,500, and not exceeding $1,600 per annum, to be classified according to the salary of the postmaster.

Finance clerks, bookkeepers, and superintendents of stamp divisions shall receive 35 per cent of the salary of the postmaster.

Stamp agents, as now compensated, shall receive $24 per annum.

Superintendents of mails shall receive 45 per cent of the salary of the postmaster, except at New York, N. Y., where the salary of the superintendent of mails shall be fixed at $3,500 per annum.

The assistant superintendent of mails shall receive 30 per cent of the salary of the postmaster, except at Washington, D. C., at which office the assistant superintendent of mails shall receive $1,800 per annum. In no case shall assistant superintendents of mails receive less than $1,200 per annum.

Superintendents of delivery shall receive 45 per cent of the salary of the postmaster, except at New York, N. Y., where the salary of the superintendent of delivery shall be fixed at $3,500 per annum.

Assistant superintendents of delivery shall receive 20 per cent of the salary of the postmaster, except at Washington, D. C., at which office he shall receive $1,800 per annum. In no case shall assistant superintendents of delivery receive a less salary than $1,200 per annum.

Superintendents of registry divisions shall receive 40 per cent of the salary of the postmaster.

Assistant superintendents of registry shall receive 30 per cent of the salary of the postmaster, except at New York, N. Y., where the salary of the first and second assistant superintendents of registry shall be fixed at $2,400 and $1,800 per annum, respectively.

Superintendents of money-order divisions shall receive 40 per cent of the salary of the postmaster, except at New York, N. Y., where the salary of the superintendent of the money-order division shall be fixed at $3,500 per annum.

Assistant superintendents of money-order divisions shall receive 30 per cent of the salary of the postmaster, except at New York, N. Y., where the salary of the first and second assistant superintendents of money-order division and the chief bookkeeper of money-order division shall be fixed at $2,400, $1,800, and $1,800, respectively.

Superintendents of stations shall receive a salary from $1,100 per annum to not exceeding $2,000 per annum, graded in even hundreds of dollars, except at New York, N. Y., where the salaries of the superintendents of stations A and D shall be fixed at $2,500 each per annum, and superintendents E and F shall be fixed at $2,200 each per annum.

Clerks in charge of stations shall be graded in even hundreds of dollars, from one hundred to one thousand dollars per annum.

General foremen or chief clerks shall receive a salary of $1,500 per annum.

Clerks in charge of package stations, stations for registry, and money-order business and sale of stamps shall receive a salary of from $100 to $900 per annum.

Stampers and mail messengers, three classes, salary shall be graded in even hundreds of dollars, from $600 to not exceeding $800 per annum.

Printers, four classes, salary shall be graded in even hundreds of dollars, from $900 to not exceeding $1,200 per annum.

Pressmen, messengers, watchmen, laborers, janitors, porters, firemen, carpenters, waste-paper examiners, and general utility clerks, four classes, salary shall be graded in even hundreds of dollars, from $600 to $900 per annum.

The auditor and draftsman at New York, N. Y., shall receive $3,000 and $1,200 per annum, respectively.

The employés of each post-office, except those hereinbefore named, shall be divided by the postmaster, subject to the approval of the Postmaster-General, into two classes, to be known as first-class clerks and second-class clerks. Fifty per cent of the number shall be designated as first-class and 50 per cent as second-class clerks, who shall be rated according to the length of time in the service. First-class clerks shall be divided into five classes, as follows:

One-fifth shall receive $1,400 per annum; one-fifth shall receive $1,300 per annum; one-fifth shall receive $1,200 per annum; one-fifth shall receive $1,100 per annum; one-fifth shall receive $1,000 per annum.

Second-class clerks shall hereafter enter the service at $600 per annum and shall receive an annual increase of $100 until the maximum salary shall amount to $900 per annum. All appointments to the service shall be made to the grade of second-class clerks, and no appointment to the first-class grade shall be made except by promotion from the second-class grade; such promotions to be governed by length of time in the service. No clerk shall receive a less salary after the passage of this act than he was receiving prior thereto. No clerk shall be reduced from a higher to a lower grade after his assignment thereto, unless unable to perform the duties connected with such higher grade.

SECOND-CLASS OFFICES.

That the Postmaster-General be, and he is hereby, authorized to classify and fix the salaries of the clerks and employés attached to the second-class post-offices from and after July 1, 1892, as hereinafter provided:

Assistant postmasters shall receive 50 per cent of the salary of the postmaster.

Clerks in second-class post-offices shall enter the service at $600 per annum, and shall receive an annual increase of $100 until they attain an annual salary of $900, except the chief clerk, who shall receive $1,000 per annum. This class shall include mailing clerks, letter distributers, dispatchers, registry clerks, stamp clerks, money-order clerks, separators, assorters, paper distributers, and general-delivery clerks.

Stampers, messengers, porters, watchmen, and laborers shall be graded in three classes, with salary of five hundred, six hundred, and seven hundred dollars per annum: Provided, That when the salaries hereinbefore named, for both first and second class offices, are adjusted and fixed, no clerk or employé shall be promoted or advanced in grade or salary without the approval of the Postmaster-General; and hereafter postmasters at offices of the first and second class shall submit rosters of the clerks attached to their respective offices to the Postmaster-General, to take effect from the first day of the fiscal year, July 1, and no roster shall be considered in effect until approved by the Postmaster-General. That all clerks and employés hereinbefore named who are in the classified list under the civil-service act shall be selected after competitive examination, as required by said act.

SEC. 2. That there be, and there is hereby, appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sum as may be necessary to carry into effect the provisions of this act, and that such appropriation be deemed an annual appropriation.

SEC. 3. That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act be, and the same are hereby, repealed.

Mr. DUNPHY. Mr. Chairman, this bill is a bill to classify the clerks in first and second class post-offices, and to fix their salaries.

There are now 151 first and 674 second class post-offices. In these 825 offices there are employed 10,750 clerks, styled assistant postmasters, superintendents, assistant superintendents, foremen, chief clerks, clerks, printers, pressmen, etc., but all known to the law as clerks.

Many members of the House will be surprised to learn that the salaries of these clerks are not fixed by law; that from year to year they go up and down, seesaw-like; that they are left to the uncertainties that surround appropriation bills, and that, besides, they are dependent upon the variable allowances made from year to year to postmasters for keeping their offices in running order.

The carriers are classified, and have their salaries, inadequate and small as they are, fixed to a certainty by law.

The railway mail clerks are classified and have their salaries fixed to a certainty by law.

But this army of 10,750 clerks have no proper classification, and they are the only employés of the Government who, having entered the service after competition, have no fixed salaries.

Prior to March, 1889, there was practically no legislation on this subject, except the statute authorizing allowances to postmasters for expenditures for the necessary cost of clerical services.

The Pendleton act prescribed that within sixty days it shall be the duty of the Postmaster-General, under general conformity to section 163, to separately arrange in classes the employés of the Post-Office Department, but that section has been construed as referring only to Department clerks, and no practical scheme for classifying and compensating post-office clerks was ever prepared or put into effect until March 2, 1889, and that scheme was contained in an appropriation bill, and is still in operation.

Under it estimates, or, as Postmaster-General Vilas styled them, "guesses," as to the probable cost of clerk hire, are submitted to Congress. Sometimes the full amount of these estimates or guesses has been allowed, and sometimes it has been somewhat reduced.

The amount for clerk hire for all the post-offices is, however, appropriated in bulk. Then the chief of salary and allowance division allots a certain amount to each post-office where clerks are employed.

I do not mean to reflect at all on the present chief of that great division. I am commenting on a system tolerated by Congress by which a chief of a bureau, without any proper legal restriction, is permitted to parcel out millions upon millions of dollars. By the last Post-Office appropriation bill $9,700,000 were appropriated for clerk hire. That sum will, without any instructions framed into law, be parceled out by the chief of the division of salaries and allowances.

Here is a system, or want of system, that no well-managed business concern would tolerate. Here is a system, or want of a system, grossly inconsistent with the proper administration of even any small department of the Government. Here is a condition of affairs that concentrates in one man, a chief of a bureau, a power that no other official in the land possesses; a power which, if used arbitrarily, would lead to the most serious complications.

After the chief of the salary and allowance division makes to the various post-offices the allotments I have described, the postmasters assign clerks to salaries.

To me it is astounding that this plan, from which necessarily so much unfairness and inequality in the matter of salaries results, has not long since been corrected.

Under the present plan clerks have no certain fixed salaries. A clerk receiving $900 this year may be cut to $700 next year. His work being exactly the same, he never knows whether he will get a cut in his salary.

Mr. LOUD. He knows it will not be raised.

Mr. DUNPHY. Of course he does. His salary depends, as I have said, first, on the amount appropriated by Congress; then on the sum allotted to his postmaster by the chief of the salary and allowance division, and finally on the whim or caprice of the postmaster of his office.

Mr. BOATNER. Right there, if the gentleman will permit me: Is he not aware that in the Departments at Washington, and throughout the country generally, it frequently occurs that a clerk will be receiving a salary of $1,600, $1,400 or $1,200 a year for doing work which requires less capacity and less knowledge than that done by another clerk who receives but $900 or $1,000 a year.

Mr. DUNPHY. I do not think you can get any chief of a Department who will admit that such a condition as that exists, and I am not familiar, I will state to the gentleman, with that condition of affairs.

Mr. BOATNER. And is it not true that promotion here means simply, as a rule, an increase of salary without changing the character or the amount of work to be done?

Mr. DUNPHY. I do not know as to that. I think not.

Mr. BOWERS of California. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. DUNPHY. Certainly.

Mr. BOWERS of California. We understand, do we not, that under the present system one official in the Post-Office Department fixes arbitrarily the amount which shall be applied to the various post-offices which are entitled to clerks, and fixes their compensation and changes it from year to year and time to time to suit his own whim and convenience?

Mr. DUNPHY. Congress appropriates in bulk the amounts to be used for clerk hire in the various post-offices throughout the country, and then when it comes to the Post-Office Department, the chief of the salary and allowance division allots to each post-office entitled to a clerk the sum he thinks sufficient for compensation. The postmaster at the office selects the clerk and fits the salary to him.

Mr. QUIGG. Will my colleague allow me an interruption?

Mr. DUNPHY. Certainly.

Mr. QUIGG. In other words, Congress gives to the chief of the salary and allowance division the tremendous sum of $20,000,000, which he at his own will distributes all over the country according as he sees fit, without any rule of distribution fixed by Congress.

Mr. DUNPHY. About half of that sum.

Mr. QUIGG. Yes; $10,000,000.

Mr. DUNPHY. Yes, sir.

Mr. QUIGG. And is it not a fact that that is the situation this bill seeks to cure?

Mr. DUNPHY. That is one of the evils the bill is intended to correct.

Mr. DOCKERY. But the gentleman applies a heroic remedy which involves an additional charge on the people of this country of $2,140,000 a year. I have a letter from the Postmaster-General in that connection which I will submit presently.

Mr. DUNPHY. There is no question, and it is not pretended that this will not increase to some extent the amount allowed for clerk hire. But I wish the gentleman to understand that the real object of the bill was not to increase salaries, but to classify the clerical force in the post-offices throughout the country. It seems to be a necessary result of a classification which is regarded as important, that the appropriations should be somewhat increased.

A clerk now doing a certain kind of work in one first-class office receives but one-half the salary of a clerk discharging similar duties in another first-class office.

Many instances exist where two clerks work side by side in the same office; do exactly the same kind of work, and yet one receives twice the compensation of the other, who, in many cases, is the better clerk of the two. Many instances exist where one clerk performs a higher grade of work than another, and still receives a smaller compensation than that man working in the same room with him.

These inequalities and this unfairness exist all over the country. They existed prior to March 2, 1889, and the act of that date was intended to correct them. It has, however, totally failed. The most that can be claimed as having flowed from that act are, first, the reduction of the pay of some high-salaried employés, and secondly, the grading of salaries in even hundreds of dollars. The act never, however, corrected the evils it was aimed at. The system is just the same now as it always has been. Uncertainty, injustice, are still the essentials of its operation.

When the postal service was small and young the evils of this system may have been few, but now it is one of the greatest business concerns in the world. It has outgrown the ancient system. Now that more than ten thousand men are engaged as clerks in it, its indefiniteness, uncertainty, and unfairness are, to say the least, deplorable, and we should not hesitate to remedy them. Congress has regulated the pay of all other clerks, of all other employés. It has fixed not only the salary, but in a number of instances has fixed the hours of labor. Why should this army of clerks be denied equal fair treatment? Are they less intelligent? Is less skill required of them? Is their work so easy? Are their hours so short?

The records of the Post-Office Department will show that but twenty persons apply for appointment as clerks to every one hundred that apply for appointment as carriers. This proportion exists to all other employés of the Post-Office Department, except the railway mail clerks. And why is it so? Because all the others have a regular salary fixed by law; their hours of labor are regulated by law; they work eight hours a day for six days in the week, and are entitled to pay for overtime.

But how is it with the clerk? He works seven days in the week. He works from twelve to sixteen hours a day in many instances. Never less than twelve hours and very frequently as many as sixteen hours. His work is indoors, in crowded, poorly lighted, badly ventilated rooms, and at times in cellars; and then, it is only an intelligent, well-informed, active, healthy man that can do the work at all.

When the late Hon. S. S. Cox said of the post-office clerks that "they receive less pay, work more hours, and perform more onerous and indispensible duties than perhaps any other officials in the Government service," he said what, in my judgment, is absolutely correct. And notwithstanding all these things, they are as to their salaries, still left to the mere chances of an antiquated system.

The railway mail clerks are paid a definite salary, graded by law, running from $800 to $1,400 per annum. They are eligible for higher positions in the service, and they are given frequent periods of rest. The letter-carriers have their salaries, inadequate as they are, graded by law, have an eight-hour law, and a leave-of-absence law.

The clerks have none of these. Their pay, their tenure of office, their hours of work, are all dependent on the whims of the Department, regulated by a system at least half a century out of date.

The bill now before the House proposes to correct these evils, these inequalities, this uncertainty, and this unfairness. It proposes to put the clerks in classes, to fix their salaries, to regulate entrance into and promotion in the service. It is true, it will necessitate increased expenditures for clerk hire. It will increase the appropriations for the pay of clerks about $1,650,000, but no person believes that in post-office matters our sole aim should be to make that Department a self-sustaining Department.

Mr. DOCKERY. I quite agree with the gentleman in that proposition.

Mr. DUNPHY. Every citizen in the land wants to see the post-office business brought as near to perfection as possible. Every-fair minded citizen wants all Government employés treated with equal fairness.

Many citizens do complain about increased appropriations for maintaining a great standing Army.

Many citizens do complain about large appropriations for an increase of our Navy.

Many complain about large appropriations for coast defenses and such other things.

The money that pays for these is raised by taxation.

But no man in the land will complain when increased appropriations, intended to cure defects in and to extend the efficiency of the Post-Office Department, are made.

The money that pays for that is not raised by taxation upon the people. It comes as a direct result of the service.

There is not only no complaint from any section against this measure, but it is everywhere commended, and the people, who know the evils that it is aimed at, are surprised that Congress should not long ago have corrected them.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. DUNPHY. Certainly.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Does the Postmaster-General recommend the passage of this bill now?

Mr. DUNPHY. The Postmaster-General recommends the passage of this bill now.

Mr. BINGHAM. In the most unqualified terms.

Mr. QUIGG. Right away.

Mr. DUNPHY. And the last six Postmasters-General have been importuning Congress to pass such a bill.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I understood that he recommended that it should go into effect on the 1st of July, 1895.

Mr. DUNPHY. He recommends that the bill be passed now, to go into effect at that time.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Well, we will wait until July, 1895, to pass it.

Mr. MONEY. Why does the gentleman want that done?

Mr. DUNPHY. The Postmaster-General has recommended it to the committee, and we have adopted his suggestion, because he knew there was no likelihood of this bill passing through this House at an early date, that it could scarcely pass through the Senate before the next session, and he wanted the time between its passage and the 1st of July to prepare the classification.

Mr. MONEY. What I wanted to know was why the Postmaster-General wanted this bill to take effect in 1895 instead of immediately.

Mr. DUNPHY. In order, as I have already stated to you, to enable him to arrange the classification.

Mr. MONEY. Did he not state in a letter you have there that it would increase the expenditures of the Government $2,140,000, and that on account of the hard times and the condition of the Treasury he would like to postpone it?

Mr. DUNPHY. The bill I had the honor of introducing on this subject was submitted to the Postmaster-General for the purpose of obtaining his views on it and getting from the then chief of the division of salaries and allowances the estimated cost of the same. The Postmaster-General sent back his letter, recommending certain amendments, and they have been incorporated in the bill. When the bill was changed in accordance with his recommendation, the amount, which at first was calculated at $2,140,000, was cut down to about $1,640,000.

That is the amount of the increase that will be necessary. There is no attempt to make it less than it actually is, but the figures mentioned by the gentleman were based upon the old bill. This bill that is now before the House will necessitate an increased appropriation of about $1,650,000.

Mr. QUIGG. And that appropriation will not occur within this Congress?

Mr. DUNPHY. Not within this Congress.

Mr. STRAUS. Not within this fiscal year?

Mr. DUNPHY. Not within this fiscal year, or this Congress. Now, I should like to have the House understand where this increase will go to. Between the postmaster of every city and the real clerks there are a number of high officials. There is the assistant postmaster, the superintendent of the money order division, the superintendent of mails, the superintendent of delivery, and there are others. There are about one thousand six hundred and thirty-eight of these high officials between the postmasters and the real clerks.

There was no attempt to increase the salaries of these 1,638 officials, but there was an attempt, and it has been a successful attempt, I think, to fix their salaries evenly, to give the even salaries to the same grades. That has brought about an average increase in the salary of each one of these 1,638 employés, of about $1.61 a month. Now, if we were after a bill to increase salaries, do you think we would have kept the increase down to $1.61 a month? There was no intention to increase the salaries. The intention of the bill was to make a proper classification.

The money called for in the increased appropriation made necessary by this bill will go to clerks who are now getting $300 and $400 and $500 a year, clerks who are working twelve hours a day and getting starvation wages, clerks who are working sixteen hours a day, in cellars, and who are paid by this Government for their services at the rate of $25 a month.

Mr. KILGORE. Will the gentleman allow me?

Mr. DUNPHY. Just wait a moment. This bill proposes to let such clerks enter the service at higher salaries—at $600 a a year, or $50 a month. It gives them the second year $700, and gradually increases their salaries to $800 and $900, and that is the highest limit to clerks in the second class. Then, after years of service, after years of intelligent efforts which have made them efficient, they will go into the first class and their salaries begin at $1,000 and will go to the highest point, $1,400, which is the present limit.

This classification bill is not intended to raise the higher salaries. An effect of it will be to raise the small salaries, giving a clerk who now receives $300 a year an opportunity to earn a fair living, to support himself, and to maintain and educate his family.

Mr. QUIGG. May I ask the gentleman another question?

Mr. DUNPHY. Yes. I will yield to the gentleman in a moment. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. KILGORE] desires to ask me a question, and I should like to yield to him first.

Mr. KILGORE. I should like to have the gentleman give the name of some office in which any clerk is performing duty at a salary of $300 a year.

Mr. DUNPHY. New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Pittsburg, Chicago, Cincinnati, Brooklyn——

Mr. KILGORE. That is not the case in the smaller offices down in our country.

Mr. DUNPHY. There are no clerks in the fourth-class post-offices.

Mr. KILGORE. In the third-class post-offices?

Mr. DUNPHY. There are no clerks in the third-class post-offices, except where there are distributing centers, where lines of railways connect or cross each other.

Mr. KILGORE. There are clerks in all of them.

Mr. DUNPHY. No, only separating clerks at railway crossings. The clerks I speak of are real post-office clerks, who do the work and do not get proper pay for it.

Mr. HERMANN. How does this bill affect the clerks in the separating offices?

Mr. DUNPHY. It affects their salaries in this way: The least they get now is $400 a year. This makes them enter the service at $600 a year, and they can go up to $900.

Mr. HERMANN. Then that affects even fourth-class post-offices?

Mr. DUNPHY. There are no clerks in fourth-class post-offices. This bill does not touch any offices except first and second-class offices.

Mr. QUIGG. Will my friend allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. DUNPHY. Yes.

Mr. QUIGG. The gentleman has explained that this bill is not intended to raise salaries. Now, is it not a fact that the increased expenditure which will result from the passage of this bill, of a little more than a million and a half of dollars, is because the clerks do not now actually receive the money which under the allowance of the chief of the allowance division they are theoretically to receive?

Mr. DUNPHY. That is correct. Now, suppose, for example, in a post-office there is a clerk at $1,200 a year, or $100 a month. Something happens, and he is compelled to resign or is removed. The clerk at $1,100 a year, who is next to him, has a right to expect that he will be promoted. There will be no such promotion, however. That $1,200 place is taken and split into three, and three men are employed at $400 a year There is no system at all in the matter. These clerks never know what their salary will be.

Mr. KILGORE. Who fixes up the salaries of these subordinates?

Mr. DUNPHY. I have told you twice.

Mr. KILGORE. Is it not done in the post-office itself? Does not somebody in the post-office regulate the pay these clerks shall receive?

Mr. DUNPHY. The postmasters are obliged to submit to the Postmaster-General rosters——

Mr. KILGORE. I understand that.

Mr. DUNPHY. A list of the clerks and the salaries recommended. The roster of New York comes on, with its 1,100 or 1,200 clerks' names on it, the salary they are getting, and the salary that the postmaster recommends. Of course he never recommends a reduction.

Mr. KILGORE. Does not the postmaster control that matter in a majority of instances?

Mr. DUNPHY. No. The roster comes on here and is submitted to the Postmaster-General. He submits it to the chief of the division of salaries and allowances. You go to the chief of the division of salaries and allowances and say that Cincinnati has got to have more clerks, and he agrees with you and gives them to you. Then how does it affect Brooklyn, Pittsburg, and other places? Either they do away with clerks or cut down some salaries.

Mr. KILGORE. But that does not answer the question I have submitted, that the pay of these clerks holding the lower positions is controlled by the postmaster himself. He recommends that they shall have $300 or $400 a year.

Mr. DUNPHY. He has nothing to do with determining what they shall receive.

Mr. KILGORE. He is the man who makes the recommendation.

Mr. DUNPHY. Yes; he may recommend, but the pay, the salary actually given, depends upon the appropriation.

Mr. KILGORE. And if the appropriation is not sufficient to cover all, then he scales it pro rata.

Mr. DUNPHY. There is no pro rata about it. It is scaled.

Mr. KILGORE. He scales it.

Mr. DUNPHY. He may scale it in one place and not touch any other place.

Mr. KILGORE. And the man who is recommended for $400 may get $300.

Mr. DUNPHY. He may, and often does.

Mr. KILGORE. If the postmasters in each of these offices would recommend a little more for the clerks who get the lowest salaries and a little less for those who receive the higher compensation they might get it to fit all around.

Mr. QUIGG. That is what we want to correct in this bill.

Mr. DUNPHY. We want to make a system by which every clerk in the post-office, right from the postmaster down to the messenger, including every official in the business, will have his salary regulated by law, and a fair salary.

Mr. DOCKERY. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. DUNPHY. Certainly.

Mr. DOCKERY. Is it not true that Congress, without a single exception, or substantially without an exception, has granted the Post-Office Department the full amount of their estimates for clerk hire for the last ten or twelve years?

Mr. DUNPHY. No, sir; I think you are mistaken about that.

Mr. DOCKERY. I know we did in this Congress.

Mr. DUNPHY. Yes; it was done in this Congress, but this is the first time in my experience here.

Mr. BINGHAM. I will ask the gentleman to state, as a matter of previous examination of this immediate question, if it is not true that the post-office clerks are the lowest paid of any subordinate force of the Government, and that the average compensation for the 10,000 clerks in the post-offices is $700 a year; that is, taking the high salaries and the low salaries, they are the poorest-paid force of this Government?

Mr. CAMPBELL. The gentleman ought to know from his experience as postmaster in Philadelphia.

Mr. BINGHAM. I want to make another statement, and that is, that these men receive no leave of absence with pay the same as is paid to the letter-carriers and the clerks in the Departments, the employés in the Printing Office, and in the Bureau of Printing and Engraving, nor do they receive any allowance for sickness.

Mr. DUNPHY. That is right, sir.

Mr. KILGORE. Will you allow me to ask you a question in that connection?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. DUNPHY. I want to show the inequalities that are allowed to exist between these employés and all other employés in the Post-Office and other Departments.

Mr. KILGORE. But here is the infirmity of your whole statement——

Mr. DUNPHY. Just wait a moment. I do not think that it is correct to say that the carriers do more work than these clerks do. The carriers work six days in the week for eight hours in the day.

Mr. MERCER. They work seven days. They work on Sunday.

A MEMBER. One hour on Sundays.

Mr. DUNPHY. They work six days in the week substantially. When they work more than eight hours a day they get paid for overtime; and they have a leave-of-absence law.

That is all right. I am not finding any fault with that. I approve of it, and I believe that they ought to have a considerably increased salary. The postal railway clerks and the carriers have their salaries fixed by law. The postal railway clerks do not work thirteen or fourteen hours a day, as stated by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS]; their average work is only about eight hours a day, including days that they are off and days that they are on. They get frequent periods of rest, and besides that, they are eligible for higher positions in the service.

These clerks, on the contrary, work seven days in the week from twelve to sixteen hours a day, in crowded buildings, with artificial light, with the thermometer sometimes as high as 106, as it has been in New York recently; they have no leave-of-absence law, they have no tenure-of-office law, they have no salaries fixed by law; they have none of the advantages that the other employés of the Department have.

This bill proposes to fix their salaries. It proposes to regulate entrance into and promotion in that service. It will take away from the division of salaries and allowances the arbitrary power which it now has of disbursing every year, without legal restriction, some $10,000,000 of the people's money, and, generally, will correct evils in the Department and promote the efficiency of the post-office system.

Mr. KILGORE. I understand the gentleman from New York to say that there are, connected with these large offices, many higher officials who get big salaries——

Mr. DUNPHY. I did not say that they got big salaries.

Mr. KILGORE. They work, I suppose, about three hours a day.

Mr. DUNPHY. No, sir. They work more hours than even the clerks do.

Mr. KILGORE. Well, they get well paid for it. Now, there is no proposition here, I understand, to classify their salaries down in order that the pay of these clerks may be increased?

Mr. DUNPHY. Will the gentleman from Texas permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. KILGORE. Yes, sir.

Mr. DUNPHY. Will you help me to get a vote on this bill to-day? [Laughter.]

Mr. KILGORE. No, sir; because I think it is an unjust bill all along the line. And besides, we have not got votes enough here just now.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Will the gentleman from New York tell us whether there is any difficulty in getting clerks to take these places now?

Mr. DUNPHY. In reply to that I will say that for every one hundred applicants for the positions as carriers there are only twenty for these clerical positions.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. But still, there are plenty applying for them.

Mr. DUNPHY. Oh, yes; there are applicants enough.

Mr. STRAUS. Many of whom, probably, could not fill the places if they got them.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. So that the Government pays enough now for the service.

Mr. DUNPHY. This bill will fix positively the salaries of all the clerks from the postmaster down.

As to the principal employés, the change will necessitate a small increase in the salary of some of them. There was no idea, however, of increasing any salary. Where, amongst these principal employés, a salary is increased to some slight extent it is the result of an attempt to establish a uniform system—a system based on exact equality among the same grade and class of employés.

When you come to the clerks in the first-class post-offices, the bill intends that they shall be divided into two classes. The 50 per cent of clerks are put in a class called the first class, and the rest in a class called the second class. In the first class there will be five grades. One-fifth of the clerks will be in the first grade, with salaries at $1,400; one-fifth in the second grade, with salaries at $1,300; one-fifth in the third grade, with salaries at $1,200; one-fifth in the fourth grade, with salaries at $1,100; one-fifth in the fifth-grade, with salaries at $1,000. There will be about 2,750 of these first-class clerks.

The second-class clerks in the first-class post-offices will hereafter enter the service at $600, and shall receive an annual increase until $900 is reached. All appointments to the first class are to be made from the second class.

There are about 2,750 of these second-class clerks. The estimated increase for these 5,500 clerks under this proposed classification will be $1,040,050.

In the first-class post-offices there will be and there are 1,638 employés classified as clerks, but designated as assistant postmasters, superintendents, assistant superintendents, auditors, foremen, and chief clerks. The increase in the salaries of these 1,638 persons under this proposed classification will be $334,370, an increase for each person of about $1.61 a month.

In the second-class post-offices there is practically no change.

Originally, the bill provided for the creation of an assistant postmaster in second-class post-offices, but upon the recommendation of the Postmaster-General this provision has been stricken out.

Let me say that this bill meets with the most hearty approval of Postmaster-General Bissell. Of all the bills intended to better the service of his great Department, this one seems to him to be the most important and is filled, as he has expressed to me, with merit.

Let me say in conclusion that every one of the last six Postmasters-General have strongly recommended favorable action by Congress in such a measure as this. Every one of them has protested against the antiquated system now in force, and every one of them has claimed that substantial, great benefits to the post-office system would certainly follow the enactment of such a measure as this.

Mr. DUNPHY. I yield now to the gentleman from California [Mr. LOUD].

Mr. LOUD. Mr. Chairman, I recognize the fact—otherwise I should not attempt at this late hour to say a word upon this question—that there is a power in this House which has determined that this bill shall not pass. I regret to see that there are honorable members of this body who have not sought to investigate the justice and equity contained in this bill, but have thrown themselves back upon the proposition that the bill carries a large amount of money and therefore it should not pass. I am one of those who believe in justice and equity in the various Government Departments as well as elsewhere.

A letter-carrier now enters the service at a salary of $600 for the first year. The second year he receives $800, and the third year $1,000. That is the salary fixed by law. I will not attempt to discuss the question whether it is too much or too little: it is the salary fixed by law. Now, I think it requires quite as high a degree of intelligence and capacity to perform the duties of a post-office clerk. I have served myself as clerk in a post office, and know something about the duties. A clerk may enter the service to day at $300, and there will be hardly any reasonable chance for him ever to receive more than $600. Some gentleman has asked whether there are not plenty of applicants for these places.

I suppose there would be plenty applicants if the salary were not more than $200 a year, but I believe that we, as legislators, ought to look at this question from a higher, more just, and more equitable standpoint than that. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. KILGORE] asks whether the postmasters fix the salaries of the clerks. I answer, yes: the postmaster in every post-office in this country substantially fixes the salaries of the post-office clerks.

Mr. KILGORE. Now, why could not we take a little off the salaries of those higher officials to supplement the low salaries of the lower officials and bring them up to what the gentleman thinks the proper level?

Mr. LOUD. I will consider that question in a moment. Let us take as an illustration the post-office in my own city of San Francisco. The salary and allowance division of the Department allows so much money to that office for clerk hire. There is so much work to be done, and the postmaster has to employ enough men to do that work. The gentleman from Texas suggests that we might take enough off the higher salaries to raise the salaries of the clerks.

Let us for a moment consider that proposition. In any first-class office, with, perhaps, two hundred clerks, there are a few higher officials, the postmaster, whose salary is fixed by law; the assistant postmaster, who receives a reasonable salary; the superintendent of mails, and the superintendent of the money-order office. There is also the superintendent of carriers, but his pay comes out of the appropriation for the carrier service. There you have four persons in that office who receive reasonable salaries. The superintendents of mails receive, on an average, perhaps about $2,000, even in such large offices as of San Francisco.

Now, I do not see that there is much room for scaling the salaries of four men who to-day are receiving only a reasonable compensation and bringing up the salaries of 150 or 200 clerks to what is reasonable.

I want to give the gentleman from Texas and other gentlemen some figures showing what these post-office clerks are receiving. The statistics to which I refer were collected a year ago. There are in the service something over 10,000 clerks; 4,666 of these are receiving $900 or less per annum.

In the Boston post-office, for instance, there are 42 clerks receiving $600 a year who have served one year, 37 two years, 22 three years, 15 four years, 2 five years, 4 six years, 11 eight years. You will find a similar state of affairs throughout the whole United States. Instead of there being the possibility of an increase of salary for any clerk in our post-offices to-day there is no possibility of it whatever. I will take the office in my own city as an illustration. There the maximum salary allowed by law for clerks is $1,400. There is not to-day a single clerk in that office receiving $1,400.

Mr. KILGORE. Are there any clerks in post-offices receiving as small a salary as $300?

Mr. LOUD. I do not think so.

Mr. KILGORE. Such figures as that have been paraded here a good deal by the advocates of this bill.

Mr. LOUD. There are 32 clerks in the Chicago office receiving $400 a year; there are quite a number in different offices receiving $500. I do not know of any $300 clerks.

Mr. KILGORE. These clerks occupying subordinate places—are they men or women?

Mr. LOUD. Most of them are men. There are very few women employed in the post-offices of the country. Out of, say, 200 clerks there would not be more than 10 or 12 ladies employed.

In my own city at the beginning of the last fiscal year clerks who had been receiving $1,200 a year (and many of them had been in the service a great number of years) were reduced to $1,100; clerks who had been receiving $1,100 were reduced to $1,000. And so on through the whole office. Such is the condition generally throughout the whole United States.

While I am aware that certain gentlemen have determined that this bill shall not pass, I want to say to members of the House that it proposes but a simple act of justice to specify by law what salaries the clerks in these post-offices shall receive. Under this bill but a very small number of these clerks can by any possibility ever attain the salary of $1,200. The passage of this bill is an act of justice which ought to be consummated to-day, although it may cost a million and a half dollars or more.

I yield back the floor to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. DUNPHY. Mr. Chairman, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DOCKERY].

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Chairman, a moment ago I asked the gentleman in charge of this bill whether it was not the habit of Congress to appropriate the full amount of the estimates for clerk hire in post-offices. I find that for the fiscal year 1891 the estimate was $7,590,000, the appropriation $7,390,000; for the fiscal year 1892 the estimate was $8,249,000, the appropriation $8,060,000; for 1893 the estimate was $8,460,000, the appropriation $8,060,000; for 1894 the estimate was $8,860,000, the appropriation the same; for 1895 the estimate was $9,700,000, and the appropriation the same. It thus appears that for the fiscal years 1891, 1892, and 1893 the appropriations fell slightly below the estimate; but for the fiscal years 1894 and 1895 the appropriations were up to the maximum of the estimate.

Mr. Chairman, I desire to place in the RECORD, without reading it in full, a letter from the Postmaster-General relating to this measure. It is dated February 14, 1894, and refers to the bill originally introduced by the gentleman from New York [Mr. DUNPHY], which, as he states, has been amended by the committee. I will read but a single paragraph of this letter:

In view of the excessive falling off in receipts for the present fiscal year, and the large deficiency that will necessarily follow, and in view of the fact that the enactment of this bill into a law would probably increase the salaries for clerks about $2,140,000, I deem it wise to postpone the time when this bill shall go into effect to not earlier than July 1, 1895.

The gentleman from New York states that this bill has been amended so that instead of involving an increase of $2,140,000 it involves an increase of but $1,640,000 or $1,650,000. So that this bill as amended carries more than a million and a half additional compensation, whereas it appears from the figures I have just read that Congress has never in any year of the last five years reduced the appropriation for clerk hire as much as $400,000 below the estimates.

I incorporate in my remarks the letter to which I have referred:

OFFICE OF THE POSTMASTER-GENERAL,
Washington, D. C., February 14, 1894.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge your esteemed favor of recent date, inclosing for my consideration H. R. bill 56, and asking for my views on the same. In reply I beg leave to say that I believe a bill for the reclassification of clerks in first and second-class post-offices, and fixing the salaries of the same, should be passed by Congress and become a law; and H. R. 56 seems to meet more fully the approval of the post-office clerks, as expressed through their National Association and officers, and the approval of postmasters throughout the country to a greater degree than any other bill on the same subject that has been presented to me for consideration.

In view of the excessive falling off in receipts for the present fiscal year, and the large deficiency that will necessarily follow, and in view of the fact that the enactment of this bill into a law would probably increase the salaries for clerks about $2,140,000, I deem it wise to postpone the time when this bill shall go into effect to not earlier than July 1, 1895.

I respectfully suggest the following amendments: Strike out the word "two," page 1, line 6, and insert in lieu thereof the word "five."

Strike out the word "six," in line 20, page 2, and insert in lieu thereof the word "five." Strike out in line 23, page 2, the words "twenty-six hundred dollars;" and in line 24, page 2, strike out the word "eight" and insert in lieu thereof the word "six." Strike out on page 2, line 32, the words "finance clerks, bookkeepers, and."

Amend by striking on page 4, the words beginning with the word "except," in line 84, and ending with the word "annum" in line 88. This amendment I deem necessary from the fact that a commission appointed by the Post-Office Department, is now considering the redistricting of the city of New York, and what are now stations "A" and "D," "E" and "F" may not be the limits of the same under the action of this commission. If the committee deem it necessary to cover this point on the line suggested by the words stricken out, I suggest that the words "two thousand," in line 83, be stricken out, and the words "two thousand five hundred" be inserted in lieu thereof.

Amend page 5, line 92, by striking out the words "or chief clerks" and inserting in lieu thereof the words "of crews." I would suggest that if the committee think that the foreman of crews in one office of the first class might be entitled to more salary than the foreman of crews in another office of the same class, they could arrange the salaries to run from $1,000 to $1,500 Strike out, on page 5, lines 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, and 100. On page 5, line 101, strike out the word "four" and insert in lieu thereof the word "six;" and in line 103, page 5, strike out the word "twelve" and insert in lieu thereof the word "fourteen." Insert in line 105, page 5, after the word "carpenters," and before the words "waste paper," the word "and." Strike out on page 5, line 105, the word "and," after the word "examiner," and in line 106, page 5, the words "general utility clerks, four," and insert in lieu thereof the word "three."

Strike out in line 107, page 5, the word "nine" and insert in lieu thereof the word "eight." Amend by inserting after the word "annum" in line 108, page 5, the following words: "And general utility employés may be allowed by the Department at a salary not exceeding $40 each, who, after six months' continuous service, may be promoted to the minimum grade of second-class clerks at a salary of $600."

On page 6, line 119, strike out the word "classes" and insert in lieu thereof the word "grades." After the word "annum" in line 129, page 6, insert the following words: "except general utility employés as herein provided." Strike out on page 6, lines 129, (beginning with the word "all,") 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, and 138, and insert in lieu thereof the following words: "All appointments to the service shall be made to clerkships of the second class, and no appointment to the first class shall be made except by promotion from the second class. All promotions from the second to the first class, and all promotions within the first class, shall be made from the next lower grade upon a basis of efficiency and length of service, under such rules as the Postmaster-General may prescribe. No clerk shall receive a less salary after the passage of this act than he was receiving prior thereto, and no clerk shall be reduced from a higher to a lower grade after his assignment thereto, unless properly reduced by reason of his inefficiency or inability to perform the duties connected with such higher grade."

Amend by striking out in line 143, page 7, the words "ninety-two" and insert in lieu thereof "ninety-five." On page 7 strike out lines 145 and 146, and insert in lieu thereof "chief clerk, six classes, graded, in even hundreds of dollars, from $1,000 to $1,500, according to the salary of the postmaster."

Amend by striking out the words, beginning with the word "except," line 150, page 7, and ending with the word "annum," line 151, page 7. Strike out the word "stampers" in line 155, page 7. Amend by inserting after the word "annum," line 157, page 7, the following: "And general utility employés may be allowed by the Post-Office Department at a salary not exceeding $300, who, after six months' continuous service, may be promoted to $400 per annum, and after twelve months' continuous service from original employment may receive the minimum salary of second class clerks, namely, $600 per annum."

Very respectfully,

W. S. BISSELL,
Postmaster-General.

Hon. JOHN S. HENDERSON,
Chairman Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Mr. DUNPHY. I would like to say to the gentleman from Missouri that when, in 1889, they passed the so-called classification bill, the one that is now in operation, it was contained in an appropriation bill; and by the very bill in which was the classification there were $350,000 less appropriated than was necessary to put it into effect; and it has been that way from that time until this. They never got to what was intended by the act of 1889.

Mr. CAMPBELL. That is to say, they passed the law and did not appropriate the money to carry it into effect.

Mr. DUNPHY. That is the exact condition.

Mr. DOCKERY. But for the last two years the amount has been appropriated in full.

Mr. MERCER. I would like to ask the gentleman from New York a question, with his consent; if he can inform the House how much money is paid into the United States Treasury as profit by the several post-offices in the United States in large cities? For instance, in Omaha I think the net profit is over $200,000. In New York about four millions——

Mr. CAMPBELL. Yes, sir.

Mr. MERCER. In Chicago about two and a half millions; in Philadelphia three millions, and so on. Why, then, quibble about money in a question of this kind, when these offices return such enormous results to the Government?

Mr. DUNPHY. Well, there are 825 of these offices out of, I do not know how many thousands——

Mr. QUIGG. About 68,000.

Mr. DUNPHY. Which produces 66¾ per cent of the entire revenues of the Department.

Mr. LUCAS. Offices where the work is done.

Mr. DUNPHY. Yes, sir; and the work done here, it must be remembered, is work of which the small offices get the benefit, because the big offices prepare the mail and send it to the little offices, and all the officials there have to do is simply to untie the bundles and put the mail in the boxes.

Mr. MERCER. The gentleman, of course, will understand that I favor the bill.

Mr. DUNPHY. Certainly. I now ask unanimous consent that the time be extended to a quarter past 5 to-day, to enable gentlemen to make some remarks on this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. KILGORE. I object.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas objects.

Mr. KILGORE. We are to have a night session, and I do not think that we ought to force this additional work upon the employés here.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. Chairman, if it were possible for the Post-Office Department to receive revenue under statute for the work that it does, even to-day, with a deficit staring it in the face of upwards of $15,000,000, it would pay its entire expenses and turn a surplus into the Treasury. It is the vast amount of matter going through the mails under the frank of the Government which so largely brings the Post-Office Department into deficiency; and continually, as a consequence, we are confronted with the statement that we should not do this or should not do that, in connection with the administration of the Department, because we are in deficiency. I repeat, if the Government would pay for what it carries under its frank through the mails, the Post-Office Department would meet its obligations and pay a surplus into the Treasury.

Mr. KILGORE. Will the gentleman allow me just there?

Mr. BINGHAM. I have only a few moments.

Mr. Chairman, that which I have just stated is correct as a general proposition, the deficit in the revenues of the Department comes from the carriage of free mail matter.

Mr. KILGORE. I am willing to surrender my franking privilege; are you?

Mr. BINGHAM. That is only incidental to the Government.

The post-office clerks are the only body of men employed in the Post-Office service not classified. The specific purpose of the bill under consideration is to do that which you do with the postal clerks and the letter carriers, indicate a specific line of work to be performed, work so many hours, and receive so much compensation, increasing with each additional year until you reach the maximum under the statute.

It is legislation for the purpose of improving and promoting the service, thereby rendering it more efficient. Under the present law and regulations the amount of the appropriation is $9,700,000 for the next fiscal year—an appropriation in bulk—and a division will be made under rules fixed by the Department.

We do not thus legislate in this way with reference to the other Departments of the Government. You do not so provide in the War, the Treasury, the Post-Office, the Agricultural, Interior, and the Navy Departments of the Government for clerical force employed here in Washington. It is not a great lump sum, but your appropriation bills read so many clerks of class 1, so many of class 2, and so on to the end. You have classified the service, and the legislation is wise.

Your own Postmaster-General simply asks that you may classify these men so that a certain line of work, under a law the same as the carriers and postal clerks are classified, shall receive a fixed, specific, well-defined compensation for the work performed, with gradual promotion.

Now, one word more in connection with this bill. As I have stated, these clerks are the poorest paid in the service. They get no leave of absence with salary allowances; they are allowed no leave of absence on account of sickness; they get nothing but limited, poor compensation—an average of less than $700 per annum. They are under the civil service rules and must be qualified for their work.

Your legislation in the Post-Office appropriation bill has increased the item for clerks over $900,000 for the next fiscal year. I submit for the work the Department will do—the great decrease in view of business stagnation—it can be done within the present appropriation for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894. There has been no percentage of increase in 1894. There will be but a limited growth in the next year. This large increase the Department now enjoys—upwards of $900,000—will almost enable the Postmaster-General to carry out the classification paragraphs contained in the Dunphy bill. In fact, I am sure $400,000 additional would be all-sufficient. The bill enacted into law, going into operation June 30, 1895, would require no additional appropriation at this time. The clerks desire it; the Postmaster-General asks for it; it requires no money; good administration will be the result, and the people enjoy a better postal service. They have this right, for they who use the mails directly pay the expenses.

Mr. DUNPHY. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee rise.

The CHAIRMAN. The hour for a recess having arrived, the committee will rise.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. O'NEIL of Massachusetts, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 56 and had come to no resolution thereon.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. LACEY, from to-day, for four days next week, on account of business of a public nature.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

Mr. DUNPHY. I ask unanimous consent that gentlemen who have submitted remarks on the pending bill in committee may have permission to print.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I move to amend that by proposing that all members be allowed to print remarks upon the bill.

Mr. DUNPHY. I have no objection to that.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will suggest that it might be better to limit the time within which this can be done.

Mr. DUNPHY. Say within ten days.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. DUNPHY] asks unanimous consent that leave to print upon the bill which has just been under consideration be granted for ten days. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. WILLIAMS] will perform the duties of the Chair at the evening session. The House will now, under the rule, take a recess until 8 o'clock.

Accordingly (at 5 o'clock p. m.) the House took a recess until 8 o'clock.

EVENING SESSION.

The recess having expired, the House was called to order at 8 o'clock p. m. by Mr. WILLIAMS of Illinois, as Speaker pro tempore.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The House is in session under clause 3, Rule XXVI.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the purpose of considering bills on the Private Calendar under clause 3, Rule XXVI.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole, Mr. DOCKERY in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole under the special order.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I am directed by the Committee on Invalid Pensions to ask unanimous consent that we begin with House bill 6041, Calendar number 390, and consider only bills which have never yet been considered and bills of a character that have not been opposed at these evening sessions.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Illinois. What are those?

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. The cases of widows remarried, divorced women, and things of that kind.

Mr. CURTIS of New York. And desertions.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman had better fix the last clause of his request more specifically.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that we begin with the bill specified and go through then down the Calendar.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. MARSH. I desire to ask the gentleman from Indiana a question. Is your object to consider only pension bills?

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. No, sir; I have no right to ask that.

Mr. MARSH. Is your object to consider bills to which there is no objection?

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Bills that have never been considered before.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

Mr. STRONG. Yes, I object.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the first bill on the Calendar.

LOUISA C. CONWAY.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 4935) to pension Louisa C. Conway.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that this bill, being one upon which the point of no quorum was made a week ago to-night, be passed over without prejudice.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection that order will be made. [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Now, Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that we begin with Calendar number 371, the one indicated to me by the gentleman from Ohio.

The CHAIRMAN. That order will be made, without any objection. [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

ALEXANDER P. MAGAAN.

The first business called up was the bill (H. R. 4686) to correct the military record of Alexander P. Magaan, of Battery H, Fourth United States Artillery.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause the military record of Alexander P. Magaan, who enlisted as a private in Battery H, Fourth United States Artillery, on the 8th day of July, 1846, and stands charged with having deserted on the 8th day of September, 1848, to be corrected by removing said charge of desertion and granting an honorable discharge to said soldier, it appearing that he did not desert, but was absent with leave, sick, and was prevented from returning on account of sickness.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

Provided, That no pay, bounty, or emolument shall become due by virtue of the passage of this act.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. I would ask that that bill be passed over to-night without prejudice.

The CHAIRMAN. That order will be made, without objection.

Mr. STRONG. I object.

Mr. KILGORE. Let the report be read.

Mr. STRONG. I ask that the report be read.

The CHAIRMAN. The report will be read in the time of the gentleman from Texas.

The report (by Mr. WOOMER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4686) to correct the military record of Alexander P. Magaan, of Battery H, Fourth United States Artillery, have had the same under consideration and report the same back with the following amendment:

"Provided, That no pay, bounty, or emolument shall become due by virtue of the passage of this act."

It appears from the record that this soldier enlisted July 8, 1846, at Staunton, Va., for five years in the regular Army, and was assigned to Battery C, Fourth Regiment, United States Artillery, and subsequently transferred to Battery H of the same regiment. At the time of his enlistment he was about 20 years of age. Soon after his enlistment his battery was ordered to proceed to Mexico, and while there his command was engaged in the battles of Vera Cruz, Cerro Gordo, Contreras, Molino Del Rey, and City of Mexico, in which battles he participated.

After the close of the Mexican war he, with his battery, returned to Fort Monroe, Va., and in September, 1848, while at Fort Monroe, affidavits before the committee show that he became sick, received a furlough, and went home. He never returned to his command. There were other affidavits before the committee showing that at the time he returned home he had been an invalid, and so remained long after the expiration of his term of enlistment.

Your committee believe that as this young man enlisted simply to serve through the Mexican war, and having so served faithfully until after the war closed, that he should be relieved of the charge of desertion, and therefore recommend the passage of the bill as amended.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Chairman, I would like to make some inquiry and have some further explanation than we get in the report of the status of this party named in this bill. It seems they rely upon a number of affidavits to establish the fact that he was away on furlough or on sick leave. Now, the records ought to show whether or not he was absent with sick leave. The records in the War Department would show that.

Mr. HOOKER of New York. Probably the gentleman in charge of the bill can tell you about it.

Mr. KILGORE. That is one thing I would like to be enlightened upon. These affidavits state that he was away and remained away sick, and never returned to his command; and was therefore put down as a deserter. Now, I think there ought to be some record in the War Department. I do not think that affidavits taken fifty years after a thing took place, on a subject of this kind, ought to be worth much unless supported by some record in the War Office; and if the events took place as stated in that report there must be some record of the fact of his having a sick furlough.

I do not see how the affidavits of these parties can make known if he left on sick leave. I do not see how he can prove the fact that he remained away sick long enough to be reported as a deserter. The whole report looks unsatisfactory. I do not know who wrote the report, and I do not like to charge anybody with shenanigan, but it looks as if it was written with special reference to suppressing the facts. I think an explanation is due the committee from the gentleman who seems to be championing this bill.

Mr. CURTIS of New York. Will the gentleman yield to me for a moment? I recognize the qualities of my friend from Texas, and I am sure he would not make such an unkind remark with respect to any gentleman who is absent. This report was made by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, who is a member of the Committee on Military Affairs, who is not here, and I think that the gentleman would hardly like his remarks taken down in the manner in which they have been made in the absence of this gentleman.

Mr. KILGORE. I do not know. If I was going to say anything about a man, perhaps I would rather that he was not here. Of course, I do not charge anybody with any intention to deceive the House; but the report, it strikes me, is not such a report as ought to be made in a case of that kind for the purpose of putting the House in possession of the facts.

Mr. STRONG. Mr. Chairman, Aleck Magaan in 1846 was a young man, 20 years old, living in Virginia. The Mexican war was in progress. A call was made for troops and he enlisted, was mustered in, and was assigned to a battery in the service of the United States. He went with that battery to Mexico, where he remained till the close of the war, taking part, as is shown by the report, in a large number of engagements. When the war closed he returned with his command to Fortress Monroe. He was sick and he got a leave of absence and went to his home.

The war being over, and there being no further use for the troops at that time, he did not return to his command, and he was dropped as a deserter. I want to say to the gentleman from Texas that this man was not only sick at the time he left his command, but he has remained an invalid ever since. Forty-six years have passed, and they have been forty-six years of poverty and sickness to Aleck Magaan. He comes here now to ask you, the representatives of the people of the great Republic whose battles he fought, to relieve him in his old age and distress from this charge of desertion. He is now nearly 68 years old.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Chairman, of course I am not discrediting anything that the gentleman states; but I should like to know how these facts came out. How is it known that this man left his command on sick leave and remained away long enough to be marked as a deserter?

Mr. STRONG. The facts are made known to the committee by a large number of affidavits. I am not certain whether the records of the War Department disclose the fact about which the gentleman inquires or not, but I want to say that this man stands in as good a position relatively as many and many a man who went into that service and was charged with desertion who has been relieved.

Mr. KILGORE. I am not disputing that; but I claim that before this Committee of the Whole is called upon to pass a bill of this kind the facts, well authenticated, ought to be before us. The report in this case, as I have already said, is unsatisfactory. I think, Mr. Chairman, that this bill is a very good one to withdraw and let soak awhile. [Laughter.]

Mr. STRONG. If the gentleman from Texas could only know this man as I know him, a poor old skeleton, he would not oppose this act of justice.

Mr. KILGORE. Was he able to be in the last war?

Mr. STRONG. He was not able to be in the last war, and he is now a poor, feeble old man.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. Is it the object of the bill to give him a pension?

Mr. STRONG. I will be frank about that. I expect that if this charge of desertion is removed he will be able to get a pension of $8 or $12 a month, whatever is allowed to soldiers of the Mexican war.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. Then what is the effect of the amendment recommended by the committee?

Mr. STRONG. To provide that he shall have no back pay or emoluments.

Mr. CURTIS of New York. Mr. Chairman, I am a member of the committee that reported this bill and I have a distinct recollection of some of the facts that were brought before us in connection with it. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WOOMER], the member of the committee who drew the report, is not present this evening, so I venture to state my recollection of the case. It was under discussion in the committee and many facts were brought out in the affidavits produced there which would have answered satisfactorily, I am quite sure, the objections of my friend from Texas.

I recollect that there was a discussion in the committee upon this bill, and that the evidence was very complete and satisfactory, not merely the man's own statement, but the testimony of other well-informed persons, showing that he went home, as stated in the report, an invalid, remained there an invalid, and has been substantially an invalid ever since. He was a man not very well informed as to these matters, and he has continued all these years under a charge which it was never his intention to bring upon himself. While in health he did his duty faithfully as a soldier, and he had no intention of deserting.

If the case were fully known to my friend from Texas I am sure that it would appeal to him with such force that his heart would bleed with compassion, and, knowing now what he wanted to know about the case, I believe that he will not further oppose the passage of this bill. I ask that it be laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

The amendment recommended by the committee was agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

ISAAC D. TOLL.

Mr. WEADOCK. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 6659) to increase the pension of Capt. Isaac D. Toll.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to increase the pension of Capt. Isaac D. Toll, late of Company E, Fifteenth United States Infantry, in the war with Mexico, from $8 to $30 per month.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request for the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. DOLLIVER. Mr. Chairman, without objecting, I want to inquire whether this bill is taken up out of its order on the Calendar?

The CHAIRMAN. It is; on a request for unanimous consent.

Mr. DOLLIVER. I have no disposition to object.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. I object.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. I ask unanimous consent that we now begin with the bill No. 390 on the Calendar and proceed regularly.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, that order will be made.

There was no objection.

MARY DANAHAY.

The first business in order was the bill (H. R. 6941) granting a pension to Mary Danahay, mother of Daniel Danahay, late a private of Company H, Eighteenth New York Cavalry.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. I ask that this bill be laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it lie on the table.

There being no objection, it was ordered accordingly.

HENRY C. FIELD.

The next business in order was the bill (H. R. 4490) granting a pension to Henry C. Field.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of Henry C. Field, dependent father of Daniel Field, late a private of Company H, Twenty-ninth Maine Regiment, and pay him a pension of $12 per month.

The report (by Mr. APSLEY) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4490) granting a pension to Henry C. Field, submit the following report:

The beneficiary of this bill is the father of Daniel Field, who served in Company H, Twenty-ninth Maine Infantry. The soldier enlisted November 20, 1863, and was discharged May 17, 1864, on account of disability from chronic diarrhea and disease of heart. He was paid in full to discharge and allowed transportation from New Orleans to the place of his enlistment.

On June 1, 1864, while on board the United States steamer Pocahontas, en route from New Orleans to New York, that vessel collided with another and was sunk and the soldier was drowned. These facts are shown in a satisfactory manner by the records of the War Department and Pension Bureau. The claim of the mother, and subsequently of the father, was rejected by the Pension Bureau on the ground that the soldier's death was not directly chargeable to his military service, he having been discharged prior to the accident which caused his death.

The mother of the soldier died April 11, 1890. The father, the beneficiary of this bill, is now 80 years of age. The soldier left neither widow nor child surviving him.

Lewis Carville and Jordan G. Carville, of Lewiston, Me., testify that the petitioner is the owner of a small farm and a little live stock worth $800 or $900; that he is 80 years of age and in feeble health; the income of his property is not sufficient to support him and an invalid daughter who lives with him, and the deficiency is supplied by relatives not bound for his support; that the soldier lived with his father and aided in his support.

The only point involved in this case is the question whether soldier's death was properly chargeable to his military service. The decision of the Pension Bureau gives unquestionably the proper construction of the general law, but, on the other hand, the soldier was being transported to his home on a Government vessel as a part of his contract with the Government; he was still in a very important sense in the public service, and the Government was clearly responsible for his safe delivery at the point of enlistment. Through no fault of his the vessel was sunk and he was drowned. The facts combine to present one of those exceptional and anomalous cases which private acts are especially designed to relieve.

Your committee therefore recommend that the bill do pass.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Chairman, if I have understood correctly this bill and the report, the purpose of the bill is to pension the father of a man who was drowned, and who at the time of losing his life was not a soldier.

Mr. MAHON. He lost his life while being transported to his home by the Government on a Government vessel.

Mr. KILGORE. Had he not already been discharged?

Mr. MAHON. But the Government was bound to transport him to his home.

Mr. KILGORE. Suppose he had been traveling in a vessel which was not a Government vessel; would that have made any difference?

Mr. MAHON. Yes; if he was traveling by means of conveyance of his own selection.

Mr. CURTIS of New York. He was not to be regarded as discharged until he reached his home.

Mr. KILGORE. The Government was simply giving him transportation.

Mr. CURTIS of New York. The Government was returning him to his home under its contract to return him to the place where he had enlisted.

Mr. KILGORE. I think it is going a good ways to undertake to pension the father of a man who at the time of his death was not a soldier at all—was in private life, having been discharged from the military service. The only ground upon which this claim can be based is that the soldier was on his way home on a Government transport. Now, suppose he had been paying his own expenses, would that have made any difference? It was simply as a matter of accommodation to him that the Government was transporting him.

Mr. HAYES. Not as a matter of accommodation, but as a matter of right.

Mr. KILGORE. But suppose transportation had been furnished to him upon a railroad or by any other means of transportation.

Mr. VAN VOORHIS of New York. It was the business of the Government to send him home on a safe vessel.

Mr. KILGORE. I am a little inclined to antagonize this bill.

Several MEMBERS. Oh, no.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. If the gentleman will yield to me I wish to say that the theory the committee had in its mind in recommending the passage of the bill was this: The Government of course took this man away from his home, which was in Maine. He was discharged at New Orleans. The Government furnished him transportation back to his home. On that return trip the transport sank and the man lost his life. His father, who was dependent on him and is now over 80 years of age, has asked for a pension.

Mr. KILGORE. There is not in the report any statement to the effect that his father was dependent on him or would have been now.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Yes, sir; there is.

Mr. KILGORE. What does the report say on that subject?

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. The report states that "the soldier lived with his father and aided in his support."

Mr. KILGORE. Well, he could not have been expected to be living with his father all this time, even if he had survived. Was the soldier a single man?

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. He was. Mr. Chairman, permit me to say that this is one of those cases in which, I submit, there ought not to be an insistance on any technical ground of this kind in opposition to the granting of the pension. It was not the fault of the soldier that he was away from home, and it was not his fault that he was drowned while returning.

Mr. KILGORE. Well, he was simply performing a patriotic duty when he enlisted.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Yes; that is true.

Mr. KILGORE. When was he discharged?

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. On May 17, 1864.

Mr. KILGORE. And he enlisted in November, 1863?

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Yes, sir.
Mr. KILGORE. Why was he discharged?
Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. He was discharged on account of chronic diarrhea and disease of the heart.
Mr. KILGORE. I do not see how his father could depend on him very much in that condition.
Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Well, if he had not been discharged until he put his foot on the shore, back in his home, his father, under the present law, would be entitled to a pension.
Mr. KILGORE. Under the law of 1890?
Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Yes, sir.
Mr. KILGORE. Very well; let it go.
The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, this bill will be laid aside with favorable recommendation.
There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

JOHANNA GLEASON.

The next busines on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. 5703) for the relief of Johanna Gleason.
The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Johanna Gleason, widow of Thomas Gleason, of Company A, Thirty-fifth New York Volunteers, on the pension roll, and pay her a pension subject to the provisions and limitations of the general pension laws.

The committee recommend the adoption of the following amendment:

Strike out in lines 7 and 8 the words "general pension laws" and insert "act approved June 27, 1890."

Mr. KILGORE. Let the report be read.
The report (by Mr. RYAN) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, having had under consideration House bill No. 5703, makes the following report:
Thomas Gleason enlisted in Company G, Thirty-fifth New York Volunteer Infantry, and served from June 11, 1861, to April 19, 1863, when he died from pistol wound received that day in barroom fight, the weapon having exploded while in his own hand. A claim for pension was filed by his widow, Johanna Gleason, uner the act of July 14, 1862. It was rejected January 19, 1866, on the ground that the soldier was killed in an affray, not in line of duty.
A claim was also filed July 3, 1893, under the act of June 27, 1890. This was rejected October 21, 1893, on the ground of no title, the soldier having died in the service, not honorably discharged as required by said act, and under the present laws and practice the latter claim can not be reopened.
The evidence shows that the widow has no property or income.
There is a letter on file from Capt. John A. Haddock, of the soldier's company, dated just prior to soldier's death and addressed to this claimant, which tends to show that the affray was not of the soldier's seeking; that he was sober, was assaulted, and wrenched the pistol from the hands of his assailant. This is a case where a pension can not be granted because of technical grounds, and is one of that class of cases where special acts of Congress are necessary. Your committee, therefore, do recommend that the bill pass after being amended by striking out the words "general pension laws" in lnies 7 and 8 and inserting the words, "act approved June 27, 1890."

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, is the gentleman in charge of this bill present to-night?
Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. That bill was introduced by the gentleman from New York [Mr. SHERMAN].
Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. He is not present?
Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. No, sir.
Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. Who reported the bill?
Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. It was reported by Mr. RYAN.
Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. I would like to have some explanation other than that covered by the report.
Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. I desire to say, Mr. Chairman, that the case is simply this: Had this man been killed under the same circumstances, after his discharge, his wife would have been entitled to a pension. He served nearly two years and then lost his life; but did not lose it in the line of duty. That is the only point.
Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. He lost his life in a personal difficulty, if I understand it?
Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Yes, sir.
Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. But he was in the service at the time?
Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Yes.
Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. And his widow can not get a pension under the general law?
Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. His wife can not get a pension under the new law because he had not been discharged from the service. The claim was rejected because it was held that the soldier had not been killed in the line of duty; and the widow can not get a pension under the general act passed on Wednesday of last week.
The CHAIRMAN. Without objection the amendments recommended by the committee will be agreed to.
There was no objection.
Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Chairman, I do not understand from the reading of the report in this case when this killing took place.
Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. On the 19th day of April, 1863.
Mr. KILGORE. Where?
Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Well, the report does not state.
Mr. KILGORE. Was he in the Army at the front, or was he somewhere in the rear, on leave of absence?
Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Well, I can not tell. I may as well be entirely frank about it. My understanding is that he was at the front.
Mr. KILGORE. And his wife now seeks a pension?
Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Yes, sir.
Mr. KILGORE. What has the Bureau to say about it?
Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. He did not die in the line of duty, and therefore the widow can not draw a pension under the old law. He did not have an honorable discharge from the service, and hence she can not get a pension under the new law. The Pension Bureau, therefore, was compelled to reject the claim.
Mr. KILGORE. I understand he met his death while in the service and before he was discharged?
Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. That is correct. He had not been discharged, and he was in the service when he met his death.
Mr. KILGORE. The question is whether he was in the line of duty when he was killed. How was he killed?
Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. In a personal difficulty with a comrade.
Mr. KILGORE. How would it be to let this case lie over a little, so that we can look into it a little further?
Mr. VAN VOORHIS of New York. Oh, this is Mr. SHERMAN'S case. He is not here. Let it go through.
Mr. KILGORE. Well, he had just as well be here as the rest of us.
Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. This would come clearly under the general law which we passed, so far as the House is concerned, on the day that we had assigned to us for business from the Committee on Invalid Pensions.
Mr. KILGORE. When was this bill reported?
Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. On the 11th of May.
Mr. KILGORE. Is it a unanimous report?
Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Unanimous.
Mr. KILGORE. Was there not some objection in the committee?
Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. No, sir; none whatever that I know of.
The fact is this: He died in 1863, over thirty-one years ago. This woman has lived as his widow ever since. The man was in the service while she was at home doing the best she could, and the committee felt that the wife, or widow now, ought to be entitled to some consideration, and so we granted the pension of $8 a month which she would receive under the general law if the circumstances had been different.
Mr. KILGORE. There appears no evidence except a written statement by some one that the soldier himself was not the aggressor.
Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Yes; that is true.
Mr. KILGORE. That is a written statement, but it is not evidence that would be very satisfactory. Was this letter written by some gentleman who was present and knew about the facts?
Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. By Capt. John A. Haddock, the captain of the soldier's company, and the letter is dated just prior to the soldier's death, and addressed to the claimant. It tends to show that the controversy was not of the soldier's seeking——
Mr. KILGORE. Was not what?
Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Was not of the soldier's seeking, and that he was sober, was assaulted, and wrenched the pistol from the hands of his assailant. It was not his own pistol.
The amendment recommended by the committee was agreed to.
The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside, to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

ELIZABETH MOORE ENGLISH.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 6585) granting a pension to Elizabeth Moore English.
The bill was read at length.
The Clerk proceeded to read the report.
During the reading of the report,
Mr MARTIN of Indiana said: Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that that bill be passed over without prejudice.
There was no objection.

GRACE HARRINGTON.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 6403) to increase the pension of Grace Harrington.
The bill was read at length.
Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I desire to ask if the gentleman who introduced this bill is present?
The CHAIRMAN. The bill was introduced by the gentleman from New York [Mr. DUNPHY], and he does not seem to be here.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. I ask unanimous consent, then, that it be passed over, since it is a bill to increase a pension.

There was no objection.

MATTHEW T. LEWIS.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 6923) for the relief of Matthew T. Lewis.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and hereby is, authorized and directed to grant an honorable discharge to Matthew T. Lewis, late of Company K, Third Michigan Cavalry.

The Committee on Military Affairs recommended the following amendment:

Add to the bill the following words:

"Provided, That no pay, bounty, or emolument shall become due by virtue of the passage of this act."

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I ask that that bill be passed over.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Carolina asks that the bill be passed over.

Mr. GORMAN. I hope the gentleman from South Carolina will not insist on this bill going over until he hears a statement of the merits of the bill.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. I have no objection to the gentleman making a statement.

Mr. GORMAN. I will say, Mr. Chairman, that this is one of the class of bills that the Committee on Military Affairs consider with favor. The claimant comes before Congress asking for relief because of long and meritorious services, and because the desertion was in a measure justifiable.

This soldier enlisted in 1861. He served faithfully and gallantly until January or February, 1864, never being absent a day from his command. He reënlisted and was allowed thirty days' furlough, the first time that he had been home or absent from his command since his enlistment. About a month after he returned to his command at Benton Barracks, in St. Louis, Mo., his wife telegraphed him that if he wanted to see his daughter, his only child, before she died, he had better come home at once.

He asked for leave, which was denied him on the ground that he had just had thirty days' leave, and that the regiment would soon be ordered to Arkansas. He talked with some of his comrades, notably one of the officers, the orderly-sergeant, Mr. Hartman, who makes an affidavit to the facts here. Mr. Lewis said to him, "What shall I do?" He replied, "If I were in your place I know what I should do." Lewis went home. His daughter died either the day he arrived home or the day after. He himself was taken sick and was not able to get out of the house for over a year, and was not able to move away from his home for two years.

So the affidavits and proof presented before the Committee on Military Affairs show. I sincerely think this is a case that has merit in it, on account of his faithful service, and on account of the circumstances attending the desertion.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. Is it the object of the bill to grant him a pension afterward, or just to have the stigma of desertion removed.

Mr. GORMAN. That is the object, and if he can get a pension afterward, that is his own lookout. It depends upon the merits of his claim.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. Does he come under the pension law? Is he disabled?

Mr. GORMAN. That I do not know. He is an honorable, honest, and worthy old citizen, and a resident of my district, and he asks that the stigma of desertion be removed. He feels that he has been sufficiently punished for thirty years to condone his leaving without authority. That is what the bill is for.

I believe it the duty of this great Government to do justice to this old soldier, who left his command under apparently justifiable reasons, by at this late date giving him an honorable discharge in consideration of the valuable services rendered in time of need.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. Is there a proviso?

Mr. GORMAN. There is a proviso that no pay, bounty, or emolument shall be allowed.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The amendment recommended by the Committee on Military Affairs was again read.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. In view of the fact that possibly this bill might create opposition, and as there may be some more meritorious bills that we might pass, it seems to me it would be very well to pass this bill over for to-night. Possibly, if it was insisted upon, it might break up the meeting. [Laughter.]

Mr. GORMAN. I will say to the gentleman that this is the only bill I have on the Calendar, while many have asked me to introduce bills for them. This, however, is the one that I thought there was the most merit in.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. I make no further objection.

The amendment recommended by the committee was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

GRACE HARRINGTON.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 6403) to increase the pension of Grace Harrington.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that we pass over the bills which have been introduced by members who are not present, and that we consider the bills introduced by gentlemen who are present.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understands that the gentleman who introduced this bill is not present.

Mr. PICKLER. I object.

Mr. MAHON. Let them come here.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk informs the Chair that he read the wrong bill. He will now report the bill which is regularly in order.

HENRY HALTEMAN.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 1526) for the relief of Henry Halteman.

The bill was read.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that that bill be passed without prejudice.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection that order will be made. [After a pause.] The Chair hears no objection, and it is so ordered.

GEORGE W. HARBAUGH.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 6633) for the relief of George W. Harbaugh.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and hereby is, authorized and directed to remove from all the records in his Department the several charges of desertion appearing on the rolls and hospital record of George W. Harbaugh, as a late private in Company G of the Sixth Regiment of Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and as a late private in the Sixth Independent Battery, Ohio Light Artillery, and in Battery M, Fourth United States Artillery, and grant to said George W. Harbaugh an honorable discharge of date October 30, 1863, from Company G, Sixth Regiment of Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and also grant to said George W. Harbaugh an honorable discharge of date June 24, 1865, from the Sixth Independent Battery, Ohio Light Artillery.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, if there be no gentleman present interested in the passage of that bill, I ask that it be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. PICKLER. Mr. Chairman, there is; and I so informed the chairman of the Committee on Invalid Pensions just now.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. I beg the gentleman's pardon. I did not understand what he said.

Mr. PICKLER. Mr. Chairman, I represent that bill. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. MORGAN] introduced the bill, and he is not here to-night. He wants it, however, to be considered; and, moreover, the soldier has been here for weeks and weeks trying to get his bill passed; and he is a worthy old man.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Chairman, what disposition is proposed to be made of that bill? Let us have the report read.

The report (by Mr. MORGAN) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6633) for the relief of George W. Harbaugh, having considered the same, respectfully submit the following report:

George W. Harbaugh was enrolled June 15, 1861, as a private in Company G, Sixth Wisconsin Infantry Volunteers, and mustered into service July 16, 1861, to serve three years. The hospital records show him admitted to Seminary General Hospital in Georgetown, D. C., October 3, 1861, with remittent fever; transferred and admitted to Camden Street Hospital in Baltimore, Md., October 10, 1861, same diagnosis, and returned to duty November 16, 1861.

The company muster roll for November and December, 1861, and subsequent rolls to include May and June, 1862, report him present. The roll for July and August, 1862, reports him "absent without leave since August 29, 1862;" and roll for September and October, 1862, "deserted August 29, 1862." His name does not appear on subsequent rolls of the company.

This charge of desertion was disproved by the following hospital record, showing that his absence was due to the honorable cause of a gunshot wound in battle the 29th of August, 1862, at Bull Run.

The hospital records show him admitted to Cliffburn Hospital, District of Columbia, September 1, 1862, diagnosis not stated; admitted to Race Street General Hospital at Philadelphia, Pa., September 4, 1862, with gunshot wound, and returned to duty October 4, 1862; readmitted to the same hospital October 14, 1862, with catarrhal fever, and returned to duty November 3, 1862; again admitted December 18, 1862, with "hypertrophy cardis," and deserted March 15, 1863; admitted to McClellan General Hospital in Philadelphia, Pa., April 3, 1863 (date or manner of return from the reported desertion of March 15, 1863, not shown), with debility, and returned to duty July 9, 1863.

George W. Harbaugh was enrolled January 28, 1864, at Wooster, Ohio, as a recruit, for three years, in the Sixth Independent Battery, Ohio Light Artillery, and joined the battery March 5, 1864. The hospital records show him treated in various hospitals, for diarrhea, from July 27, 1864, to September 5, 1864, and for intermittent fever from September 5, 1864, to October 6, 1864, when he was returned to duty.

The muster roll of the Sixth Independent Battery, Ohio Light Infantry, for November and December, 1864, reports him on detached service with Battery M, Fourth United States Artillery, and the muster roll for January and February, 1865, and the muster-out roll of the battery, dated September 1, 1865, and the records of Battery M, Fourth United States Artillery (to which he was attached sometime in November or December, 1864), show him to have deserted from Battery M, Fourth United States Artillery, December 24, 1864, at Columbia, Tenn.

On the 17th of June, 1871, the soldier applied for an honorable discharge as of the Sixth Ohio Battery, declaring under oath that he remained with the battery up to the latter part of December, 1864, when he was detailed in Hospital No. 15, Nashville, Tenn., by the medical director, and was assigned to duty as a clerk; that he remained there until June 9, 1865, when he received a furlough for thirty days, and went to his home in Wisconsin; that before his furlough expired the battery was mustered out of service at Columbus, Ohio, and, as he was to report to the battery, and not return to the hospital, he could not reach his command, and was, therefore, not discharged. No record of this alleged furlough has been discovered.

In reference to the above furlough, George W. Grubb, age and place of residence not stated, under date of October 2, 1883, swears that he was a member of the Sixth Ohio Independent Battery, and was personally acquainted with claimant from January, 1864, to June 10, 1865; that claimant participated in all the engagements of the Georgia campaign; that he was detached with Battery M, Fourth United States Artillery, about December 10, 1864, and was in hospital at Nashville, Tenn., from February 1 to June 10, 1865, when claimant and he were furloughed and traveled together as far as Mansfield, Ohio; that he knows that the claimant did not desert in December, 1864, or at any other time, and that he had a "proper furlough signed by the respective departments."

It appears from the evidence that the soldier was but 15 years of age when he entered the service; that he was a good soldier and fought with his regiment, the Sixth Wisconsin, a part of the Iron Brigade; that he was also in all the battles of the Atlanta campaign, under Sherman, and with Gen. Thomas at battles of Franklin and Nashville, having served three years nine months and eleven days, and was not a deserter, but was absent with leave of the hospital authorities on what he supposed a regular furlough and in company with his noncommissioned officer.

He never intended to desert, and was only absent from his command on account of sickness or wounds, and this after the last hostile gun was fired and the war was really over in the West.

In view of the facts, and that this was an error made in his case reporting him absent without leave when he was absent on account of wounds received in battle, and in view of his extreme youth, he being only a boy of 15 when he enlisted in the Army, the committee reports back the bill with a recommendation that it do pass.

The supplemental report (by Mr. MORGAN) was read as follows:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6633) for the relief of George W. Harbaugh, having considered the same, respectfully submit the following report:

George W. Harbaugh was enrolled June 15, 1861, as a private in Company G, Sixth Wisconsin Infantry Volunteers, and mustered into service July 16, 1861, to serve three years.

The hospital records show him admitted to Seminary General Hospital, in Georgetown, D. C., October 3, 1861, with remittent fever; transferred and admitted to Camden Street Hospital, in Baltimore, Md., October 10, 1861, same diagnosis, and returned to duty November 16, 1861. The company muster roll for November and December, 1861, and subsequent rolls to include May and June, 1862, report him present. The roll for July and August, 1862, reports him "absent without leave since August 29, 1862;" and roll for September and October, 1862, "deserted August 29, 1862." His name does not appear on subsequent rolls of the company.

The records show that his regiment was in action August 29, 1862.

This charge of desertion was disproved by the following hospital record, showing that his absence was due to the honorable cause of a gunshot wound in battle the 29th of August, 1862, at Bull Run.

The hospital records show him admitted to Cliffburn Hospital, District of Columbia, September 1, 1862, diagnosis not stated; admitted to Race Street General Hospital at Philadelphia, Pa., September 4, 1862, with gunshot wound, and returned to duty October 4, 1862; readmitted to the same hospital October 14, 1862, with catarrhal fever, and returned to duty November 3, 1862; again admitted December 18, 1862, with "hypertrophy cardis," and deserted March 15, 1863: admitted to McClellan General Hospital in Philadelphia, Pa., April 3, 1863 (date or manner of return from the reported desertion of March 15, 1863, not shown), with debility, and returned to duty July 9, 1863.

The following record disproves any desertion March 15, 1862: The register of men sent to and received from hospitals at Philadelphia, Pa., bears this man's name and shows him sent from Race and Crown Streets Hospital on January 16 (the register covers the years 1862 and 1863) to Race Street General Hospital. The remark "a deserter" appears in pencil thereon against him. The same register also reports him sent to McClellan General Hospital at Nicetown, Philadelphia, Pa., April 3, 1863.

His name appears on the muster rolls of the provost guard on duty at Philadelphia, Pa. (as belonging to Company G, Sixth Wisconsin Infantry), as follows: May and June, 1863; July and August, 1863, on detached service at Wood and Twenty-second streets; September and to include October 30, 1863, after which date all record of him ceased, as a member of Company G, Sixth Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry.

George W. Harbaugh, was enrolled January 28, 1864, at Wooster, Ohio, as a recruit, for three years, in the Sixth Independent Battery, Ohio Light Artillery, and joined the battery March 5, 1864. The hospital records show him treated in various hospitals, for diarrhea, from July 27, 1864, to September 5, 1864, and for intermittent fever from September 5, 1864, to October 6, 1864, when he was returned to duty.

The muster roll of the Sixth Independent Battery Ohio Light Artillery for November and December, 1864, reports him on detached service with Battery M, Fourth United States Artillery, and the muster roll for January and February, 1865, and the muster-out roll of the battery, dated September 1, 1865, and the records of Battery M, Fourth United States Artillery (to which he was attached sometime in November or December, 1864), show him to have deserted from Battery M, Fourth United States Artillery, December 24, 1864, at Columbia, Tenn.

This soldier appears, from the records of the hospital at Nashville, Tenn., and other evidence on file, to have been treated at Columbia, Tenn., from December 24, 1864, to February 1, 1865, for chills and fever, when he was ordered to report to the medical director of Nashville, Tenn. He was admitted to Hospital No. 14, Nashville, Tenn., February 26, 1865, and he is borne upon the hospital records of Nashville, Tenn., until June 24, 1865, when they show him transferred, where to not stated.

On the 17th of June, 1871, the soldier applied for an honorable discharge as of the Sixth Ohio Battery, declaring, under oath, that he remained with the battery up to the latter part of December, 1864, when he was detailed in Hospital No. 15, Nashville, Tenn., by the medical director, and was assigned to duty as a clerk; that he remained there until June 9, 1865, when he received a furlough for thirty days and went to his home in Wisconsin; that before his furlough expired the battery mustered out of service at Columbus, Ohio, and as he was to report to the battery, and not to return to the hospital, he could not reach his command, and was, therefore, not discharged. No record of this alleged furlough has been discovered.

In reference to the above furlough, George W. Grubb, age and place of residence not stated, under date of October 2, 1883, swears that he was a member of the Sixth Ohio Independent Battery, and was personally acquainted with claimant from January, 1864, to June 10, 1865; that claimant participated in all the engagements of the Georgia campaign; that he was detached with Battery M, Fourth United States Artillery, about December 10, 1864, and was in hospital at Nashville, Tenn., from February 1 to June 10, 1865, when claimant and he were furloughed and traveled together as far as Mansfield, Ohio; that he knows that the claimant did not desert in December, 1864, or at any other time, and that he had a "proper furlough signed by the respective departments."

As disproving the charge of desertion of December 24, 1865, the following evidence has been submitted:

L. K. Force, a resident of Akron, Ohio (post-office address, Middleberry, Ohio), age not stated, under date of September 24, 1883, swears that claimant and he were members of the Sixth Ohio Battery, detached with Battery M, Fourth United States Artillery; that on or about December 17, 1864, while on the march, said claimant was taken sick with chills and fever, and affiant accompanied him to a house in Columbia, Tenn., where they stayed all night; that on the following morning the claimant, being quite sick, had to be left at Columbia for medical treatment while affiant went on with the command; that he next met claimant about the last of April, 1865, in hospital at Nashville, Tenn., to which place he had been brought from Columbia, and that when affiant left Nashville, about May 8, 1865, the claimant was left in hospital there doing clerical duty.

Aaron P. Baldwin, aged 55 years, of Akron, Ohio, late captain of the Sixth Ohio Independent Battery, under date and seal of November 9, 1893, says:

"I was an officer in the Sixth Ohio Light Veteran Volunteer Battery and was on duty with the battery during the years of 1864 and 1865; that while the battery was camped at Chattanooga, Tenn., preparing for the Atlanta campaign, during the month of March, George W. Harbaugh reported to the battery as a recruit. He served through the Atlanta campaign, performing every duty in a faithful and soldierly manner. During the month of November he was placed on detached service with Battery M, Fourth United States Artillery.

"He was reported a deserter from Battery M on the pursuit of Hood, and so recorded on battery muster rolls. Other men of the Sixth Ohio Battery, living in Akron at this time, saw him in hospital at Columbus, Tenn., also in hospital, Nashville, Tenn., in June, 1865, from which he went home on furlough. I am satisfied he never deserted the service and is entitled to an honorable discharge, and would recommend such action by the War Department, believing he is entitled to the same as one who performed his duty, when health permitted, in a loyal and honorable manner."

It appears from the evidence that the soldier was but 15 years of age when he entered the service; that he was a good soldier and fought with his regiment, the Sixth Wisconsin, a part of the Iron Brigade; that he was also in all the battles of the Atlanta campaign under Sherman, and with Gen. Thomas at battles of Franklin and Nashville, having served three years nine months and eleven days, and was not a deserter, but was absent with leave of the hospital authorities on what he supposed a regular furlough and in company with his noncommissioned officer.

He never intended to desert, and was only absent from his command on account of sickness or wounds, and this after the last hostile gun was fired and the war really over in the West.

In view of the facts, and that this was an error made in his case, reporting him absent without leave when he was absent on account of wounds received in battle, and in view of his extreme youth, he being only a boy of 15 when he enlisted in the Army, the committee reports back the bill with a recommendation that it do pass.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on laying aside this bill with a favorable recommendation.

Mr. PICKLER. Mr. Chairman, I simply desire to say in regard to this bill that it is not my bill. I know very little about it except what the report says. I know that this is a bill introduced by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. MORGAN], and I understand that the soldier lives in his district. I became somewhat interested from knowing that the soldier was here, and having seen him week after week trying to have his bill passed, and that is the reason I insist on it now being considered.

It is true that this man did desert twice; but it is also true that the record shows that he was shot at the first battle of Bull Run, and that while he was suffering from that wound he was reported as a deserter. It is further conclusively shown that when he made application to go back to his regiment they would not restore him except on some condition, and that he was advised not to go back; and he did not go back, but enlisted in another regiment.

Mr. KILGORE. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. PICKLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. KILGORE. I can not understand how a man who is wounded in battle, and thus necessarily fell into the hands of the infirmary corps, could be reported as a deserter after being taken to the hospital.

Mr. PICKLER. That is just the facts in the case.

Mr. KILGORE. That does not look reasonable.

Mr. PICKLER. The report shows how that was.

Mr. LOUD. I would like to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. Was he not reported dead after the second battle of Bull Run?

Mr. PICKLER. I do not know as to that.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. I did not catch the reading of the report exactly, but it seems to me that that is the way it read.

Mr. LOUD. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. PICKLER. In a moment. I have just a few words to say in addition. I have never talked with this man about that; but, as I understand the case, on this first desertion he was reported as dead, probably in the first engagement. He did not go back to that regiment, because when he was sufficiently able to go back he found that he had been reported as a deserter, and for some reason or other they insisted on some conditions, such as taking his pay, or something of the kind, I do not understand what. He did not comply with the conditions, but reënlisted in another regiment. He was in the hospital from that regiment, and was reported as a deserter while in hospital. Now, he at neither time was an actual deserter. One time he was shot and the other time he was sick in hospital; and that is the way his record stands.

It seems that fate follows some men. I confess that it is against this man that there should be two charges of desertion against him; yet both cases admit of full explanation and are fully explained. The man himself has been here, and I have talked with him. That is the only way I know anything about this case, for, as I have said, he is not from my district. I asked him, "How much bounty did you get the second time?" He stated positively that he got only the first installment of the bounty, and that he did not reënlist for a bounty, and I believe he tells the truth.

Mr. LOUD. The gentleman has stated that this applicant is around the halls of Congress pressing this bill. I ask him if he thinks it at all strange that this man should follow up this case so persistently when he so persistently enlisted and reënlisted at a time when large bounties were given?

Mr. PICKLER. Oh, well, I hope the gentleman will not do injustice to himself by raising technical questions in a case of this kind. I do not know how the fact was. I have only the man's own assertion that he did not receive the bounty.

Mr. LOUD. Still, you know that he must have received two large bounties if he enlisted twice in 1864.

Mr. PICKLER. I know he says he did not receive them, and I do not know why the gentleman from California should say that he did. The man is here without friends, and the House can vote down this bill if it chooses and let this stigma rest upon him, but I think these charges of desertion ought to be removed from this man before he dies. As I have said, he does not belong to my district. I have simply met him here and talked with him about his case.

Mr. KILGORE. About how many times does the report say that this man deserted?

Mr. PICKLER. Twice.

Mr. KILGORE. And you say that in one case he was shot in battle and sent to the hospital, and another time he was in the hospital sick.

Mr. PICKLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. KILGORE. Well, those two coincidences are altogether too remarkable. That a man should be twice charged with desertion, once because of being wounded and in hospital, and the other time when he was sick in hospital is so remarkable that it needs to be very clearly explained.

Mr. PICKLER. I submit to the gentleman that such a thing might very easily happen. Of course, it did not happen in many cases, but I think both these charges of desertion are very fully explained in the report. The man is a stranger to me; I never saw him till I saw him here and talked with him about his case, but I believe that he states it correctly.

Mr. KILGORE. I have no doubt that his story excited your sympathies, but the question is whether these charges of desertion ought to be removed and whether the evidence in the case would justify such action on the part of the House.

Mr. PICKLER. Has the gentleman any further questions to ask?

Mr. KILGORE. I am pretty well satisfied about this case.

The question being taken upon laying the bill aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation, the Chairman declared that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. KILGORE. I ask for a division.

The committee again divided; and there were—ayes 18, noes 12.

Mr. KILGORE. No quorum has voted, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of no quorum being made, the Chair will appoint to act as tellers the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. PICKLER] and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. KILGORE].

Mr. PICKLER (pending the count by tellers). Mr. Chairman, as the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. MORGAN], whose bill this is, is not present this evening, I ask unanimous consent that it be passed over without prejudice, retaining its place upon the Calendar.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

JULIA E. LOCK.

The next pension business on the Private Calendar was an act (S. 828) granting a pension to Julia E. Lock, formerly widow of the late Gen. Daniel McCook.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that that bill be passed over without prejudice.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

NETTIE N. SEAVER.

The next pension business on the Private Calendar was an act (S. 16) granting a pension to Nettie N. Seaver.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Nettie N. Seaver, widow of Henry T. Seaver, late a private in Company K, Fourth Regiment Vermont Volunteer Infantry.

The report (by Mr. APSLEY) was read as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions have considered the bill (S. 16) to pension Nettie N. Seaver and submit the following report:

A similar bill passed the Senate and was also favorably reported in the House in the Fifty-second Congress. This bill passed the Senate March 5, 1894.

The facts appearing are as follows:

Henry T. Seaver was a private in Company K, Fourth Regiment Vermont Volunteer Infantry. He enlisted September 21, 1861, and was discharged July 13, 1865, making his term of service almost four years. The records show that he was a brave and faithful soldier. At the battle of the Wilderness he received a gunshot wound, for which he was pensioned, and a large number of affidavits go to prove that he contracted rheumatism, diarrhea, and malarial poisoning. Soldier lived until 1872, when he died of a complication of diseases, apparently involving the stomach, spleen, and kidneys. The widow applied for a pension, and after a long time it was rejected on the ground that the fatal disease was not clearly shown to be due to Army service.

The matter was placed in the hands of two special examiners, both of whom, after an exhaustive examination, reported in favor of the claim.

Special Examiner Frank E. Marlee closed his report as follows:

"From a careful review of the testimony I am of the opinion that the claim is meritorious, and I recommend its admission."

Special Examiner Charles Fairbanks, who stands deservedly high in the service, says:

"I am of the opinion that in the absence of medical testimony and the obscurity of the disease of kidneys, further examination is useless. I recommend admission."

An autopsy showed ulceration of the kidneys, and the Pension Bureau ruled that that disease was the cause of death, and hence the widow was not entitled to pension.

When the special examinations were made all the physicians who had knowledge of the case were dead, but a general mass of testimony was taken from neighbors, which conclusively shows that soldier had been continuously sick from date of discharge to death, and all agreed in the opinion that death was the result of diseases contracted in the service.

The widow is poor and sick, being without property and unable, a portion of the time, to earn a living, as shown by affidavits quoted in the Senate report. No doubt she is entitled to a pension of $8 under the act of June 27, 1890, but it appears that she has never filed a claim under that act.

The facts appearing from the records of the Pension Office and records of the War Department, more fully stated, are as follows:

The soldier was enrolled August 24, 1861; was captured at James River June 30, 1862; confined at Richmond, July 13, 1862; admitted to hospital at Savage Station, Va.,—date not shown—with rheumatism; paroled September 13, 1862; sent to Washington September 28, 1862, and forwarded to Army of Potomac February 24, 1863; mustered out with company July 13 1865. He was pensioned $2.66½ per month (one third rate) on account of gunshot wound of arm, and died January 31, 1872.

It appears that he was treated in the service for rheumatism and for diarrhea, but that his death was caused by disease of kidneys.

In view of the fact that soldier is shown to have been ill from discharge and the obscurity of his diseases, and the presumption that these and his fatal disease of kidneys were related, and that all played a part in causing his death, your committee recommend that the bill do pass.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. I move that that bill be laid aside, to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

Mr. KILGORE. I suppose, Mr. Chairman, that we must have that bill and report read over again, as there is so much confusion in the Hall that we can not hear anything out here.

The CHAIRMAN. The bill has been laid aside.

Mr. KILGORE. Well, I object to its being laid aside without having an opportunity to know something about it.

The CHAIRMAN. If the gentleman states that he rose in time to object, the Chair will accept his statement.

Mr. KILGORE. The Chair did not make the announcement so that I could hear it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will accept the gentleman's statement.

Mr. KILGORE. From what I did hear of the report I assume that the beneficiary of this bill could get a pension under the act of 1890. I think the report so states. It certainly states facts sufficient to warrant the granting of a pension under the act of 1890, and that being the case, I do not see why we should pass this bill. I would like to have a statement from somebody who has some knowledge on the subject.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has no information about this bill. I should like to hear from the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MARTIN], or from some other gentleman who may know the particulars of this case, some statement on that subject.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. In this case the soldier enlisted

September 21, 1861, and was discharged July 30, 1865, after nearly four years' service——

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee rise. We can not hear anything that is said.

The question being put on the motion that the committee rise—

The CHAIRMAN. The noes seem to have it.

Mr. KILGORE. I call for a division.

The question being again taken, there were—ayes 4, noes 41.

So the motion that the committee rise was rejected.

Mr. KILGORE. Now, if the attention of the House can be given to this case, I should like to hear some explanation from the gentleman from Indiana. If we can not have order so that we can hear what is said, we may as well stop business.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, the report of the committee states this case quite fully. I will try to state the matter in brief by saying that this soldier was a private in Company K, Fourth Regiment Vermont Volunteer Infantry. He enlisted September 21, 1861, and was discharged July 30, 1865, having served three years and ten months. He died in 1872. As I gather from the reading of the report (having no personal knowledge of the case), this applicant was the wife of the soldier during the war. He died of a complication of diseases, involving, apparently, stomach, spleen, and kidneys.

Now, this widow could obtain a pension under the act of June 27, 1890, which, as will be remembered, grants pension to the widow of any soldier who served ninety days or more and was honorably discharged. But in this case the committee concluded (as they did in another case recently considered favorably by the Committee of the Whole) that in view of the report made by two different special examiners, who went into the field, and summoned witnesses, and reported to the Department that, in their judgment, the claim was admissible under the old law, it would be no injustice to the Treasury, and would be a clear act of justice to this widow to recommend that she be pensioned at $12 instead of $8 a month.

As I have stated, her husband died in 1872. Possibly he might have obtained a pension had he himself applied. The record does not enable us to determine that matter. There has never been, as I understand, any pension paid in this case. But the soldier served three years and ten months. This lady is still a widow. These special examiners who went into the field and summoned witnesses in the case, reported that the claim ought to be admitted under the general law. Therefore the committee felt that it would not be going beyond what was right to recommend that she be pensioned under the general law at $12 a month rather than under the act of June 27, 1890, at $8 a month.

This, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, is in brief the case presented to you for your action to-night.

Mr. KILGORE. Now, Mr. Chairman, I am not denying anything stated by the report or by the gentleman from Indiana. I am not denying the merits of this case. I am perfectly willing to admit that it is meritorious. From the statement which has been given to the House, I believe it is a meritorious case, and that no action on the part of Congress is necessary to enable this woman to obtain a pension.

That is my objection to the passage of this act. I believe that neither the House nor the Senate ought to pass measures in behalf of claimants for pension when those claimants have a right of way at the Pension Bureau. We ought not to trespass upon the authority and duties and jurisdiction of the Pension Bureau.

Mr. McNAGNY. Would not the fact that this old lady has remained a widow for twenty years since the death of her husband, and has been totally without relief from the Government, modify your opinion to some extent as to the equity of this case?

Mr. KILGORE. Well, that may be so. But many of them were in the same position up to the date of the passage of the act of June, 1890. All of them, in fact, who were situated as this woman, were without a pension up to the date of the passage of that act.

Mr. McNAGNY. She makes a very strong case under the old law.

Mr. KILGORE. What would she get under the old law?

Mr. McNAGNY. Twelve dollars a month.

Mr. BRETZ. Oh, let the poor old woman have it.

Mr. KILGORE. Very well.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I wish to make a correction in my statement. I made the observation a few moments ago that probably this man might have obtained a pension himself. I find, however, that he was wounded in the battle of the Wilderness and was actually pensioned. There are a large number of affidavits going to show that he had contracted rheumatism, diarrhea, and malarial poisoning in the service.

Mr. HUNTER. How much pension did he draw?

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Well, this report was drawn up by my colleague on the committee, Mr. APSLEY, who is not present, and I can not answer the question.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on laying the bill aside to be reported to the House with favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

OTIS SMITH.

The next business on the Calendar was the bill (S. 1640) granting a pension to Otis Smith.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Otis Smith, of North Cambridge, Mass., late a private in Company D, Twentieth Regiment Maine Volunteer Infantry, and that he receive a pension of $30 per month in lieu of that which he now receives.

The report (by Mr. APSLEY) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions have considered the bill (S. 1640) to increase the pension of Otis Smith, which passed the Senate April 11, 1894, and submit the following report:

The facts stated in the report of the Senate committee are as follows:

"The claimant under this bill was a private in Company D, Twentieth Regiment, Maine Volunteer Infantry, and after an honorable service of six months received a painful injury in the line of duty, which resulted in a double inguinal hernia and other disabilities, which have proved permanent. Soldier also contracted intermittent fever in the service, from which he still suffers. He now draws a pension at the rate of $17 per month, and an application for increase has been rejected. It is admitted on all hands that soldier is in a most deplorable physical condition.

"On one side the hernia can not be retained by a truss, and soldier suffers constant, severe pain; his mind is almost completely gone, and he is utterly unable to do any work whatever. Claimant is 84 years old, in extreme poverty, and can not possibly long survive.

"The last medical examination by a board of pension examiners recommended, for the combined disabilities, a rate of $54 per month, and other medical examinations have recommended a higher rate than is proposed in the pending bill."

The records of the Pension Bureau show that this soldier is pensioned at $17 on account of double inguinal hernia, malarial poisoning, and injury to back. He served from July 1 to December 9, 1862, when discharged because of age and injury, having been absent in hospital since October 29, 1862. Medical examination at Boston, Mass., in May, 1893, rates him $14 for double hernia and $4 for lumbago, but states that there are no external evidences of injury to back.

The board also reports him 83 years of age and rates him second grade ($30) for senility (old age) and results, but not for malarial poisoning. A previous examination in August, 1891, at Boston, rated $8, for hernia; $8 for malarial poisoning, and $8 for lumbago, and second grade for old age. In May, 1890, he was rated $12 for hernia, $2 for injury to back, and $4 for chills and fever.

In view of the general helplessness of this man from all causes, your committee recommend that the bill do pass.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on laying aside the bill with favorable recommendation.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. KILGORE) there were—ayes 37, noes 1.

Mr. KILGORE. No quorum has voted.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order being made that no quorum has voted, the Chair will order tellers.

Mr. KILGORE and Mr. MARTIN of Indiana were appointed tellers.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 28, noes 1.

Mr. KILGORE. A quorum has not voted.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. I ask unanimous consent that that bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. PICKLER. I object.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. I hope the gentleman will not do that.

Mr. PICKLER. There is no better bill on the Calendar, or a more deserving one than this. I object.

Mr. KILGORE. I withdraw the point of no quorum. [Applause.]

So, no further count being demanded, the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

REBECCA H. CHAMBERS.

The next business on the Calendar was the bill (S. 876) granting a pension to Rebecca H. Chambers.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Rebecca H. Chambers, she being the only sister of Archer S. Harmon, late of Company B, Ninety-third Regiment of Indiana Volunteer Infantry, who died unmarried in said service.

Mr. KILGORE. Let the report be read.

The CHAIRMAN. The report in this case is somewhat lengthy.

Mr. KILGORE. Well, that is no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The report will be read.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that I may be allowed to make a short explanation in place of the reading of the report.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. This claimant, Rebecca H. Chambers, is a single woman, a widow, who resides at Butlersville, Indiana, in Jennings County; her maiden name was Rebecca H.

Harman. She was married to the soldier on the 18th of March, 1886, and her husband died on March 6, 1892. She is now unmarried and in reduced circumstances.

Mr. KILGORE. When was she married?

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. On the 18th of March, 1886.

Mr. KILGORE. She was not the wife of the soldier at the time he performed the service?

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. No; this is a sister. I want to say to the Committee of the Whole that this lady was the sister of five brothers who enlisted in the service; that when four of them had gone, the last one, living with her and her mother, hired some one to stay in his place to take care of the mother and the sister. The soldier died in the service. This woman subsequently took care of her mother until her mother's death. She finally had to have one of her limbs amputated. She is now a one-legged woman, without anyone in the world to depend upon, with no property, with five brothers who died in the service, and this brother of whom I have just spoken, having hired a person to stay in his place and take care of the mother and sister for awhile. The effect of this bill would place her on the pension roll at $12 a month. She is in absolute poverty and in nearly as pitiable a condition as it is possible to be.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. Is there any precedent for sisters being pensioned?

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Yes.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. Such bills have been passed heretofore?

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Yes, in this Congress. You see, under the law, dependent brothers and sisters were pensionable, and in extreme cases like this and cases not so strong as this, Congress has felt that where a dependent brother or sister might be entitled to a pension, as in this case, where the woman had become of age, the act might be extended that far.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. There is no general legislation that would cover this case?

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. No, sir; none at all, and I suppose that no general legislation could be made that would cover this class of cases.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. Is there no provision in that part of the country whereby people who can not take care of themselves can be sent to the almshouse or be cared for by the county?

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. I suppose so, but——

Mr. RYAN. I hope that the sister of five brothers who died in the Army will not be permitted to go to the poorhouse.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. I should like to know what the precedents are for this action?

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. I wish I could call the name of the case. The gentleman questioned me about it one night here, within the last two months. It was a bill introduced by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. WILLIAMS], I think, and reported by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MCDANNOLD]. That was a case where the woman was then or had been in the poorhouse.

Mr. KILGORE. Was this lady ever married?

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Yes; and her husband has been dead for several years.

Mr. KILGORE. Were these brothers who were lost in the war, and this one who survived the war, any of them married?

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. I think probably they were, except this one. These young men, one after another, all enlisted in the Union Army, Samuel Harman in the Eighty-second Regiment Indiana Volunteers; John Harman in Company B, One Hundred and Fortieth Regiment Indiana Volunteers, who died while in the service in the hospital at Louisville, Ky.; James Harman in Company F, Twenty-second Regiment Indiana Volunteers; Michael Harman in the Third Regiment Indiana Volunteer Cavalry; Archer S. Harman in Company B, Ninety-third Regiment Indiana Volunteers, who died in the hospital in St. Louis, Mo., while in the service.

Mr. KILGORE. Now, if they had wives surviving them, their wives drew pensions on account of their service and death?

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Yes, their widows would be pensioned, but this one I speak of did not have any wife.

Mr. KILGORE. When was this lady married?

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. She was married in 1886. Her husband died March 6, 1892.

Mr. KILGORE. I think this is going a long way to allow a pension in such a case as this.

Mr. RYAN. This is a very meritorious case.

Mr. KILGORE. Oh, it is a meritorious case, so far as charity is concerned, but it is stretching the law a long way, according to my notion, to put this lady on the pension roll.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. The mother in this case——

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Chairman, as I can not hear what is going on from the conversation that is taking place, I may insist on closing up this business if we can not have order in this committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would suggest that the order is a little better than usual.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. I desire to say, further, Mr. Chairman, the mother of this claimant applied for a pension on account of the death of the soldier, who died unmarried, but that pension was not allowed until after the death of the mother, which occurred September 25, 1885. The accrued portion of this pension, being the proportional share for three months, was paid the claimant, to reimburse her, although a very small reimbursement, for the expenses during the last sickness and death of her mother.

Mr. KILGORE. I do not think that sort of a bill ought to pass.

The bill was ordered to be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

JOHN C. NUSS.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 6926) for the relief of John C. Nuss.

The bill was read.

The CHAIRMAN. The bill does not seem to be in order under the rule.

Mr. MAHON. Who has charge of that bill? Is there anyone present who has charge of that bill?

The CHAIRMAN. From the reading of the bill it does not seem to be in order under the rule. Perhaps some gentleman can explain the bill.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Chairman, I ask that the bill be laid aside without prejudice.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks that the bill be laid aside without prejudice. Without objection, that order will be made.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

ELLEN G. HEINER.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 1427) granting an increase of pension to Mrs. Helen G. Heiner.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to increase and pay a pension of $40 per month, in lieu of the pension now received, to Mrs. Helen G. Heiner, widow of the late Capt. Robert G. Heiner, now deceased, of Company A, First United States Regular Infantry, and who was formerly first lieutenant of Company K, Fifty-seventh Pennsylvania Volunteers, to be subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, from and after the passage of this act.

The report (by Mr. STRAUS) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1427) granting an increase of pension to Mrs. Helen G. Heiner, have considered the same and report as follows:

This bill is accompanied by Senate Report No. 185, this session, and the same, containing a full statement of the facts, is adopted by your committee as their report, and the bill is returned to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

[Senate Report No. 185, Fifty-third Congress, second session.]

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1427) granting an increase of pension to Mrs. Helen G. Heiner, have considered the same and report as follows:

A similar bill having unanimously passed the Senate during the last Congress, amended so as to allow an increase to $40 instead of $50 per month, your committee adopt the report made thereon, hereto appended, and recommend the passage of the bill as it formerly passed the Senate.

[Senate Report No. 962, Fifty-second Congress, first session.]

Robert G. Heiner was mustered into service as a second lieutenant, Twenty-second United States Colored Troops, December 26, 1863; promoted to be first lieutenant January 25, 1865, and was honorably mustered out of service October 16, 1865. He accepted appointment of second lieutenant, Eleventh United States Infantry, April 27, 1866; was transferred to Twenty-ninth Infantry, September 21, 1866; promoted to be first lieutenant July 28, 1866, and captain September 29, 1879, serving continuously until November 27, 1890, when he died at Columbus (Ohio) barracks. Cause of death, apoplexy, following chronic Bright's disease.

Capt. Heiner, left no property or other means of support for his family except a small house in Western Pennsylvania, which rents for $12 per month.

The widow who asks for the increase contemplated by this bill has three children, two being dependent, one a daughter of about 17 years, in delicate health, and a son about 15 years old. Her mother, aged 72 years, is also dependent upon her.

In view of all the circumstances and facts your committee recommend the passage of the bill with the following amendment: In line 4 strike out the word "fifty" and insert "forty."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the views of the minority.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I desire to make an inquiry. If there be no gentleman present who will object to my request, I will ask that that bill be passed over, in view of the fact that there is a minority report.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD] introduced that bill and the gentleman from New York [Mr. STRAUS] reported it.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to passing this bill over without prejudice?

Mr. KILGORE. I object.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the views of the minority.

The views of the minority were read, as follows:

VIEWS OF THE MINORITY.

The majority of the Committee on Pensions having favorably reported the Senate bill No. 1476, granting an increase of pension to Mrs. Helen G. Heiner, the undersigned, a member of the committee, desires to submit the following reasons why, in his judgment, the bill should not pass.

Mrs. Heiner is now receiving a pension rated at $20 per month, and in addition to this she receives $12 per month from rented property and $70 per month salary as a clerk in the Treasury Department. Her total annual income is over $1,200. Her children are all past the age of 16 years, and in the natural order of things will soon become self-sustaining. In fact one son, as the undersigned is reliably informed, is now in the United States Army with the rank and pay of a lieutenant.

There is nothing shown in the soldier's record or in any of the papers submitted to the committee to warrant Congress in favoring this widow above widows of other soldiers of similar rank, and it certainly can not be claimed that the increase of pension asked for is necessary to the comfortable support of herself and family. She does not need the additional pension, and, in the light of the facts above stated, there is no reason whatever for granting it to her unless an equal increase is made by general enactment in all cases of the same class.

There has not been, so far as I have heard, a single valid argument advanced in support of this bill, and, in my opinion, it would be a gross perversion of the powers of Congress to make an exception of a case so utterly devoid of merit.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Chairman, I move that this bill be laid aside with the recommendation that it lie on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

WEAR CRAWFORD.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 6928) a bill to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Wear Crawford.

The bill was read.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I ask that that bill be passed over without prejudice.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, that order will be made.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

ROSANNA COBB.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 5994) granting a pension to Rosanna Cobb, widow of Edmond Cobb, deceased, late of Black Hawk war.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Rosanna Cobb, of Pike County, Ill., widow of the late Edmond Cobb, deceased, who was a private in McDow's regiment of Illinois Volunteers in the Black Hawk war, and allow her a pension of $8 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

Strike out the word "eight," in line 9, and insert in lieu thereof the word "twelve," so as to fix the rate of pension at $12 per month; and strike out the words "Black Hawk," in line 8, and substituting therefore the words "Sac and Fox."

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Chairman, I ask whether the member having charge of that bill is present? If not, I move that it be laid aside.

Mr. McDANNOLD. Mr. Chairman, I introduced that bill and would like to have the report read.

Mr. MAHON. That is all right.

The report (by Mr. STALLINGS) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5994) granting a pension to Rosanna Cobb, have considered the same, and report as follows:

The claimant is the widow of Edmund Cobb, who served from June 4 to July 2, 1831, as a private in Capt. McDow's Company of Illinois Volunteers in the Sac and Fox Indian war.

The soldier's service was recognized by the allowance of a bounty land-warrant under the act of 1855, but the widow's claim for pension under the Indian war act of July 27, 1892, was rejected because the service was rendered prior to 1832 and the act referred to includes only the Indian wars from 1832 to 1842.

It appears from her application on file at the Pension Office that Mrs. Cobb is now nearly 80 years old. The soldier died November 10, 1856. The following letter contains a full statement of the merits of the case:

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 15, 1894.

MY DEAR SIR: Having been informed that you have introduced a bill for the pension of Mrs. Rosanna Cobb, of Perry, Ill., and wish to know something of her pecuniary condition, I make the following statement:

I was born and lived in Perry twenty-three years. I have known her from my earliest recollection, and all that time she has supported herself by her own labor—doing washing, housecleaning, etc. She did the heavy work at my own home for years, and I know her to be an honest, worthy woman. Now that she is too old to work, her daughter has done plain sewing for the support of both. She has no sons nor any daughter who is able to give her much aid. I would respectfully urge a speedy action in this case, as I understand she is now bedridden and may live but a few months. I am,

Very respectfully, yours,

MRS. WILLIAM J. BRYAN.

Hon. JOHN J. McDANNOLD,
House of Representatives.

After full consideration of all the facts your committee are of the opinion that the bill is a deserving one, and its passage is respectfully recommended, with an amendment striking out the word "eight," in line 9, and inserting in lieu thereof the word "twelve," so as to fix the rate of pension at $12 per month; and an amendment striking out the words "Black Hawk," in line 8, and substituting therefor the words "Sac and Fox."

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendments will be agreed to, and the bill as amended will be ordered to be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

JOHN F. FOSTER.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 5405) for the relief of John F. Foster, late Company C, Eighth Iowa Cavalry.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to put upon the pension roll, at the rate of $12 per month, the name of John F. Foster, late of Company C, Eighth Iowa Cavalry.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

Strike out the words "at the rate of $12 per month" and insert in lieu thereof the words "subject to the provisions and limitations of the act approved June 27, 1890.

Also that the title be amended so as to read: "A bill to pension John F. Foster."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the report of the majority and the views of the minority. There is a minority report in this case.

The report (by Mr. LACEY) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5405) granting a pension to John F. Foster, submit the following report:

John F. Foster enlisted July 1, 1863, in Company C, Eighth Iowa Cavalry Volunteers. He went into Camp Henderson at Davenport, Iowa, where he took sick about September 20, 1863, with chronic diarrhea and rheumatism, and was not mustered into the service because of said disabilities. He filed a claim for pension (No. 751605), which claim has not been allowed because the soldier was not mustered into the service.

He is now 70 years of age, and is disabled by rheumatism, has lost the use of his left hand and sight of left eye.

Richard L. McKenzie testifies to the present disability of the soldier.

William C. Cullum testifies as to the enlistment and contracting of disability in the United States service in camp at Davenport; that he was a sound man at enlistment, and that his disability still continues. Said Cullum was a member of the Eighth Iowa Cavalry.

John P. Campbell also testifies as to the soldier's enlistment, and that he was sound and healthy at time of enlistment, and that on his return home was suffering from chronic diarrhea and rheumatism; that he is still suffering from said diseases.

From the evidence filed with your committee, it appears that the soldier properly enlisted and contracted the said diseases in the service before muster, and that by reason of such illness was not mustered into the United States service, and the failure to muster him prevents him from having a pensionable status.

Your committee think that he should be pensioned for said diseases at such rate as his disability would entitle him to.

Your committee recommend the amendment of the bill by striking out the words "at the rate of $12 per month" and by inserting in lieu thereof the words "subject to the provisions and limitations of the act approved June 27, 1890."

Also that the title be amended so as to read: "A bill to pension John F. Foster."

And that as so amended the bill do pass.

The views of the minority were read, as follows:

The salient point in this case is this:

The petitioner was never in the military service of the United States so far as appears from the records of the War Department. As against this want of record the petitioner alleges that he enlisted about July 1, 1863, in Company C, Eighth Iowa Cavalry, went into camp at Davenport, Iowa; was taken sick about September 20, 1863, with diarrhea and rheumatism, and finally lost the use of left hand and sight of left eye; he does not state when or how he left the service, or when or why his eye became affected.

William C. Cullom states, not in his own handwriting, that he knew of Foster's enlistment in the Eighth Iowa Cavalry, often met him in camp at Davenport, knew of his being taken sick with diarrhea and rheumatism, and has seen him suffering since with rheumatism of left hand, arm, and side, and believes he was free from these diseases July 1, 1863.

John P. Campbell testifies in almost the same words as Mr. Cullum. Whether these men were themselves, in fact, in the Eighth Iowa Cavalry is not shown.

Richard L. McKenzie testifies that he has known Mr. Foster for thirteen years, and knows that he has rheumatism in left side, and appears to have lost sight of the left eye and use of left hand.

Aside from this the committee has no evidence before it.

Now, the sole question in this case is, was this man a soldier of the United States? Is it possible that he could have enlisted and remained with his regiment for near three months and yet the rolls of that regiment show no trace of him? Whether he was such soldier seems to the undersigned to be clearly a matter within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Military Affairs to consider. If a bill should be passed directing the Secretary of War to place his name on the rolls of that regiment, he could then prosecute his claim for pension under the general law.

In recommending the passage of this bill the committee is unfairly impinging upon the jurisdiction of the Committee on Military Affairs, and is, in effect (upon what the undersigned consider entirely insufficient evidence), declaring, in contravention of the records of the War Department, that this man did serve for ninety days or more as a soldier in Company C, Eighth Iowa Cavalry.

For these reasons the undersigned recommend that the bill do lie on the table.

M. R. BALDWIN.
C. J. ERDMAN.

Mr. LACEY. Mr. Chairman, I move that this bill be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. LACEY. Division.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 23, noes 6.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. No quorum.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Carolina makes the point that no quorum has voted. The Chair will appoint as tellers the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LACEY] and the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. TALBERT].

Mr. LACEY (pending the count). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be laid aside without prejudice.

Mr. KILGORE. I ob ect.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas objects. The tellers will resume their places.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 15, noes 4

Mr. KILGORE. No quorum.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of no quorum being made, the Chair, under the rule, will cause the roll to be called.

The Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana (pending the call). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Texas withdraw his point of no quorum, and that the bill be laid aside without prejudice. If that is agreed to, I will make a motion that the committee rise, so that we may pass some of these bills that have already been disposed of in committee.

Mr. KILGORE. I object.

The Clerk resumed the call of the roll.

Mr. KILGORE (during the call). Mr. Chairman, if I understand the proposition of the gentleman from Indiana it is that he will move that the committee rise. In that case I am willing to withdraw the point of no quorum.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MARTIN] asks unanimous consent to vacate the order for the call of the roll, that the point of no quorum be withdrawn, and that this bill retain its place on the Calendar without prejudice.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. I move that the committee rise.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and Mr. WILLIAMS of Illinois having resumed the chair as Speaker pro tempore, Mr. DOCKERY, from the Committee of the Whole, reported that they had had under consideration sundry bills and had directed him to report the same to the House with various recommendations.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, if there be no objection, and if it be in order, I would like to put the bills that have been favorably reported upon their passage.

Mr. KILGORE. I object.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and the House accordingly (at 9 o'clock and 55 minutes p. m.) adjourned until Monday next at 12 o'clock m.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as follows:

By Mr. HUTCHESON, from the Committee on Claims: A bill (H. R. 5732) for the relief of Charles W. Russey. (Report No. 1364).

By Mr. MARTIN, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions: A bill (H. R. 7359) to pension Samuel F. Tenant. (Report No. 1365).

By Mr. HARE, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions: A bill (H. R. 5551) for the relief of Emily A. Mann. (Report No. 1366).

By Mr. McDANNOLD, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions: A bill (H. R. 3343) for the relief of Mrs. Cinna Rickards, widow of John D. Rickards. (Report No. 1367).

By Mr. POST, from the Committee on the District of Columbia: A bill (H. R. 7582) providing for reconveyance by District Commissioners of certain lands to Andrew J. and Mary E. Curtis. (Report No. 1368.)

PUBLIC BILLS, MEMORIALS, AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolution, and memorials of the following titles were introduced, and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BELL of Colorado: A bill (H. R. 7886) to prevent monopolization of patented inventions—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. CURTIS of New York: A bill (H. R. 7884) to amend section 2 of the act approved February 15, 1893, entitled "An act granting additional quarantine powers and imposing additional duties upon the Marine Hospital Service—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. HEARD (by request): A bill (H. R. 7885) to regulate fares and transfers on certain street-car lines in the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. BAKER of Kansas: A bill (H. R. 7887) to provide means for gathering and storing rainwater in semiarid regions of the United States, and for other purposes—to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

By Mr. DAVIS: A bill (H. R. 7896) to authorize the control of water for agricultural purposes—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BLAIR: A joint resolution (H. Res. 214) providing for the investigation of acts of unlawful violence thro ghout the country alleged to have been inflicted on account of crime—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. BLAND: A resolution directing the Committee on Ways and Means to report a bill for an income tax that will produce $100,000,000 of revenue annually, and to place all grades of sugar on the free list—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

PRIVATE BILLS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills of the following titles were presented and referred as follows:

By Mr. CLARK of Missouri: A bill (H. R. 7888) for the relief of H. K. Edwards—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FITHIAN: A bill (H. R. 7889) for the relief of Thomas Riley—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HERMANN: A bill (H. R. 7890) for the relief of Henry Bateman—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. IKIRT: A bill (H. R. 7891) to authorize payment of commutation to David Jones—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. MAGUIRE: A bill (H. R. 7892) for the relief of Albrecht Nest, late of the United States Navy—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. NEILL: A bill (H. R. 7893) to grant a pension to Armstead Rawlings, of Arkansas—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland: A bill (H. R. 7894) removing the charge of desertion from the record of James H. Andrews—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BRETZ: A bill (H. R. 7895) granting a pension to Buford W. Patterson—to the Committee on Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire: Papers to accompany House bill 7879, to remove the charge of desertion now standing against James H. Waters—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BLAIR: Remonstrance of fraternal orders against the income tax—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BUNDY: Petition of F. E. Dougherty and 126 other citizens of Pike County, Ohio, for the survey and estimates for a ship canal from the lakes to the Ohio River by way of Sandusky and Scioto Rivers—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DAVIS of Kansas: Petition of 250 citizens of Chicago, Ill., praying for the impeachment of Richard Olney, Attorney-General of the United States, for misuse of his official position by the prostitution of Federal courts—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. FITHIAN: Papers to accompany House bill for relief of Thomas Riley—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. LOUDENSLAGER: Petition of the officials of First Baptist Church of Camden, N. J., against the passage of House bill 6913, appropriating Government moneys to sectarian schools and undertakings—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Also, petition of George S. Hains and 525 others, of Camden, N. J., and the vicinity, protesting against the passage of House bill 6913, appropriating public money to sectarian institutions or schools—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Also, petition of the officers of the board of the Third Methodist Episcopal Church, of Camden, N. J., representing a membership of 750, against the passage of House bill 6913, appropriating public moneys to sectarian schools and undertakings—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Also, petition of Broadway Methodist Episcopal Church, of Camden, N. J., official board, representing 1,200 members, against the passage of House bill 6913, appropriating public moneys to sectarian schools or undertakings—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Also, petition of the officials of the Centenary Methodist Episcopal Church, of Camden, N. J., authorized by their members, numbering 350, against the passage of House bill 6913, appropriating Government moneys for sectarian schools and undertakings—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Also, petition of the Eighth Street Methodist Episcopal Church, of Camden, N. J., against the passage of House bill 6913, appropriating Government moneys to sectarian schools and undertakings—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Also, petition of Rev. M. E. Snyder, pastor of the Slate Street Methodist Episcopal Church, of Camden, N. J., numbering 200 members, by unanimous request of the members, against the passage of the House bill 6913, appropriating Government moneys to sectarian schools and undertakings—to the Committee on Indain Affairs.

By Mr. WEADOCK: Petition of Max A. Dormer, Henry Koch, Theo. Mackinson, of Evangelical Lutheran Zion's Church, Beaver, Mich, against the amendment of preamble of the Constitution—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of Rev. J. H. P. Partenfelder, Max Boen, Mike Kamm, of Emanuel Lutheran Church of Bay City, Mich., against amendment to preamble of Constitution—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of H. C. Kuechle, pastor of Emanuel Lutheran Church of Alpena, Mich , against amendment of preamble to the Constitution—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of T. Hartman, pastor; E. O. Summerfeld, and U. Miller, trustees of St. Paul Lutheran Church of Posen, Mich., against amendment of preamble of the Constitution—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of Ferdinand Sievers and others, of Bay County, Mich., against the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of Rev. George Brenthal, pastor; Christian Hildner and George Ortner, trustees, Michael Lutheran Church, Richville, Mich., against amendment to the preamble of the Constitution—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of Rev. Emil Durr, pastor; John Graf and August Worth, elders, St. Paul Lutheran Church, Unionville, Mich., against amendment to the preamble of the Constitution—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SENATE.

SATURDAY, August 4, 1894.

On motion of Mr. GALLINGER, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of yesterday's proceedings was dispensed with.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLES, its Chief Clerk, announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

A bill (H. R. 213) to pay for alley condemned in square No. 493, in the city of Washington, D. C.;

A bill (H. R. 4606) to amend sections 5365 and 5366 of the Revised Statutes, relating to barratry on the high seas;

A bill (H. R. 6720) providing for the resurvey of Grant and Hooker Counties, in the State of Nebraska; and

A bill (H. R. 7488) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to grant leases for sites on the Hot Springs Reservation, Arkansas, for cold-water reservoirs.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. PERKINS. I present a telegram from the Board of Trade of San Francisco, Cal., an organization representing several hundred of the leading business men of that city, remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Bailey bankruptcy bill, which is now upon our Calendar. I move that the memorial lie on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. PERKINS presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Los Angeles, Cal., remonstrating against the support of the Government in maintaining the present system of sectarian Indian education; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. McMILLAN presented the petition of R. B. Clark and sundry other citizens of Detroit, Mich., praying that in the passage of any law providing for the taxation of incomes the funds of fraternal beneficiary societies, orders, or associations be exempted from taxation; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented memorials of Rev. Frank Blomfield and sundry other citizens of Dexter; of Jacob C. Winning and sundry other citizens of Adrian; of Rev. Thomas Middlemes and sundry other citizens of Alpena; of W. S. Hazelton and sundry other citizens of Leonard; of James H. Gaglier and sundry other citizens of Detroit; of William J. Hatton and sundry other citizens of Escanaba, and of William P. Warren and sundry other citizens of Saginaw, all in the State of Michigan, remonstrating against the support of the Government in maintaining the present system of sectarian Indian education, etc.; which were referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. SQUIRE presented a petition of sundry members of the bar of Yakima County, Wash., praying for the establishment of a district and circuit court term for the courts of the United States at North Yakima, to embrace the counties of Yakima, Kittitas, and Klickitat, in the State of Washington; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of the Chamber of Commerce of Astoria, Oregon, praying that an appropriation of $30,000 be made for the establishment and maintenance of one or more fish hatcheries upon the waters of the Columbia River, in that State; which was referred to the Committee on Fisheries.

He also presented sundry petitions of citizens of Seattle, Wash., praying for the passage of Senate bill No. 2115, to provide for the regulated free coinage of silver bullion into standard dollars of the United States, and for the preservation of the parity of value of the various kinds of coined money of the United States; which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented sundry memorials of citizens of Spokane, Tacoma, Reardan, Seattle, Ballard, Castle Rock, Bellingham Bay, Davenport, Ellensburg, Kalama, Sumner, Shelton, Medical Lake, Port Angeles, and Puyallup, all in the State of Washington, remonstrating against the support of the Government in maintaining the present system of sectarian Indian education, etc.; which were referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. LODGE presented the memorial of Samuel H. Tuttle and 27 other citizens of Concord, Mass., remonstrating against the support of the Government in maintaining the present system of sectarian Indian education; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. VILAS presented the memorial of P. A. Colby and sundry other citizens of Waupaca, Wis., remonstrating against the support of the Government in maintaining the present system of sectarian Indian education, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. SHERMAN presented a memorial of 150 citizens of Cincinnati, Ohio, remonstrating against the support of the Government in maintaining the present system of sectarian Indian education, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. CULLOM presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Chicago, Ill., and a memorial of sundry citizens of Rockford, Ill., remonstrating against the support of the Government in maintaining the present system of sectarian Indian education, etc.; which were referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. PATTON, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2107) granting to the Northern Mississippi Railroad Company right of way through certain Indian reservations in Minnesota, reported it with amendments.

Mr. GALLINGER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 2275) granting a pension to Elizabeth New, widow of Jethrow New; and

A bill (H. R. 4811) to pension Mary Trimble.

MARINE HOSPITAL SERVICE.

Mr. GALLINGER. I am directed by the Committee on Epidemic Diseases, to whom was referred a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury under date of August 4, 1894, and the draft of a bill for the amendment of the act granting additional quarantine powers and imposing additional duties upon the Marine Hospital Service, to report a bill, and, as there is an emergency in this case, to ask for its immediate consideration.

The bill (S. 2280) to amend section 2 of the act approved February 15, 1893, entitled "An act granting additional quarantine powers and imposing additional duties upon the Marine Hospital Service," was read the first time by its title.

By unanimous consent, the bill was read the second time at length and considered as in Committee of the Whole, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 2 of the act approved February 15, 1893, entitled "An act granting additional quarantine powers and imposing additional duties upon the Marine Hospital Service," is hereby amended by adding to the end of said section the following:

"The provisions of this act shall not apply to vessels plying between foreign ports on or near the frontiers of the United States and ports of the United States adjacent thereto; but the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized, when, in his discretion, it is expedient for the preservation of the public health, to establish regulations governing such vessels."

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

OCALA, FLA., A PORT OF ENTRY.

Mr. RANSOM. I am instructed by the Committee on Commerce to report back favorably, with an amendment, the bill (S. 1885) to extend the privileges of the transportation of dutiable merchandise without appraisement to the city of Ocala, in the State of Florida.

Mr. CALL. I ask unanimous consent that the bill may be put on its passage. There can be no objection to it, and it is a matter of necessity.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The amendment of the Committee on Commerce was, after the word "Florida," in line 7, to insert "and the said city of Ocala is hereby constituted a port of entry;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the privileges of the seventh section of the act approved June 10, 1880, governing the transportation of dutiable merchandise without appraisement, be, and the same are hereby, extended to the city of Ocala, in the State of Florida, and the said city of Ocala is hereby constituted a port of entry.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL INTRODUCED.

Mr. CULLOM introduced a bill (S. 2281) to authorize the Postmaster-General to credit account of James A. Sexton with amount of funds stolen; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

MINNESOTA SCHOOL AND TIMBER LANDS.

Mr. DAVIS submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Interior be directed to transmit to the Senate copies of all correspondence between such Department (or any office thereof) and the officers of the Territory or State of Minnesota, or any Delegate, from such Territory, or Senator, or Representative of such State, respecting the claim or rights of Minnesota to the sections 16 and 36 as school lands, in cases where such sections are or have been situate in any Indian or military reservation or in any unceded lands. Also, copies of all rulings or decisions by such Department or by any officer thereof touching said rights or claims of Minnesota.

The Secretary of the Interior is also directed to inform the Senate how many acres (and in what sections and townships) have been examined and appraised as to the pine timber existing thereon, under the provisions of the act approved January 14, 1889, and other legislation on that subject. Also, to inform the Senate by stating what Government subdivisions have thus been examined and appraised, and by stating the quantity of pine reported to be on each of such subdivisions.

ELIHU ROOT.

Mr. HILL. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 966) to compensate Elihu Root for services rendered by direction of the Attorney-General.

Mr. DOLPH. Will the bill take any time?

Mr. HILL. No, sir.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be read for information.

The Secretary read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, $2,000, the amount approved by the Attorney-General, to compensate Elihu Root, United States attorney, southern district of New York, for services rendered as the attorney for the defendant in the suit of the Yale Lock Manufacturing Company vs. Thomas L. James, in March, 1894, by direction of the Attorney-General.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

Mr. DOLPH. I ask leave to withdraw from the further consideration of the Senate the conference report made last evening upon the river and harbor bill. It has been discovered that when the report was made up the clerks of the conference committee used the House print of the bill as received in the House after it had passed the Senate and not the official engrossed copy, which is now printed on blue paper instead of being engrossed by hand as heretofore. According to the rule now adopted in the House, the House print of the bill with the Senate amendments numbered was not the one to be referred to. The Clerk of the House informs us that the House Committee on Enrolled Bills will not report that the bill is properly enrolled unless the clerical changes are made in the conference report so that the references will conform to the numbers in the blue print, which is the official copy.

Therefore I ask leave to withdraw the report, in order that the House, when it meets at 12 o'clock on Monday, may recall the conference report and submit a correct report, correcting the clerical errors caused by referring to page and line in the last print made in the House of the bill with the Senate amendments rather than the official print which is made for the use of the clerks.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. WHITE. I interpose no objection to the request of the Senator from Oregon, but I wish to call attention to one item in the conference report before the report is withdrawn, as a correction ought to be made with reference to it. I know that it is not in order to make the correction now, but at the same time I wish to make a statement.

Mr. DOLPH. I have no objection to hearing what the Senator from California has to say, but I do not understand that an objection would lie to my request. I suppose that as a matter of course the report can be withdrawn. I do not understand that it is subject to an objection.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The report is withdrawn by the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. WHITE. If the Chair will permit me——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair recognizes the Senator from California for the purpose of making a statement on the subject.

Mr. WHITE. I desire to interpose simply for the purpose of offering a suggestion, to which I understand the Senator from Oregon has no objection.

On page 19 of the bill as it was before the Committee on Commerce of the Senate there was the following item:

Improving harbor at Wilmington, Cal.: Continuing improvement, $40,000.

This provision was inserted by the House, and it came to the Senate in the bill. The Senate made no amendment whatever so far as this item is concerned, and it went to the committee of conference without any change whatsoever. In the conference report which is about to be withdrawn we find that this item is entirely eliminated, and the elimination is sought to be accomplished by making it an amendment to another provision, thus securing the result.

On page 259 of Jefferson's Manual, which according to the rules of the Senate is authority here, I understand that that can not be done; the item not having been amended by the Senate it is without the jurisdiction of the conference committee. I make the suggestion so that when the matter goes back to conference, as it must if the report is withdrawn from the Senate, the error which I have stated in the report may be corrected; for I understand that only the disagreeing votes of the two Houses are submitted to the conference. The Senate itself made no amendment in the item and there has been no opportunity for its consideration by the conference.

Mr. BLANCHARD. I desire to inquire of the Senator from Oregon whether the effect of the withdrawal of the report and of a reconsideration by the other House after the adoption of the conference report there will be to send the bill back to conference?

Mr. DOLPH. That is it. Is the report withdrawn?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The request of the Senator from Oregon for the withdrawal of the report is granted.

STATE TAXATION OF NATIONAL CURRENCY.

Mr. TURPIE. I ask unanimous consent to call up the bill (H. R. 4326) to subject to State taxation national-bank notes and United States Treasury notes.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The pending question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR], which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. After the word "currency," in section 1, line 6, insert "and gold, silver, or other coin."

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, I do not think my amendment is necessary. I agree with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE] that it would not change the legal effect of the bill. But I thought it was better as a precaution against somebody raising the question that as you made an expression of the legislative will in regard to notes and said nothing about silver or gold coin, they would of course be included. However, I do not think any court would come to that conclusion, and if the gentlemen who are managing the bill on the other side think that they do not want the amendment I shall not press it. I leave it to the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE]. If he thinks it should not go in the bill I will withdraw it, and if he would like to have it kept in the bill I will insist on it.

Mr. GEORGE. We agreed on consultation to accept the amendment.

Mr. TURPIE. The amendment is certainly nugatory and harmless.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

Mr. PLATT. Now I desire to have the bill read as amended, and I would be obliged to Senators if they will refrain from conversation, so that I may be able to hear the reading of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be read. The Chair requests the attention of Senators to the reading of the bill.

The Secretary read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That circulating notes of national banking associations and United States legal-tender notes and other notes and certificates of the United States payable on demand and circulating or intended to circulate as currency, and gold, silver, or other coin shall not be exempt from taxation as money on hand or on deposit, under the laws of any State or Territory: Provided, That any such taxation shall be exercised in the same manner and at the same rate that any such State or Territory shall tax other money or currency circulating as money within its jurisdiction.

SEC. 2. That the provisions of this act shall not be deemed or held to change existing laws in respect of the taxation of national banking associations

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, the amendment inserted on the motion of the Senator from Massachusetts in my judgment tends to confuse the matter. I suppose it has never been provided by law that coin money on hand can not be taxable. Gold and silver when on hand at the time of making up the tax list is always subject to taxation like any other property. I do not therefore think it is wise to put in the bill those words. The Senator from Massachusetts himself admits that there is no necessity for the clause, and I think it had better be omitted.

Money on hand, whether it be in the form of United States notes or gold or silver coin, or State bank notes, has always been taxable; and I think in every State money is regarded as property, to be taxed like other property. Therefore the principle is right. An exception, however, was made during the war in favor of United States notes; and that was the only exception I know of. The reason for that exception, however, has passed away, as I stated yesterday.

Now that the notes are redeemable in gold or silver coin on demand of the holder, there is no reason why they should be exempt from taxation. They should be treated as other property. During the war, when they were constantly declining day by day, owing to the exigencies of the war, it was deemed necessary, as a matter of favor to the United States notes then circulating, that they should be exempted from taxation, and they were so exempted.

I think, therefore, that the bill as it stood had better be passed, so that the States may be restored to their right to levy taxes upon money in any form, or property in any form, provided no discrimination is made against United States notes.

Mr. TURPIE. I entirely concur with what has been said by the honorable Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] in respect to the confusion which would be produced by the amendment of the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR]. We can, however, remove that confusion, I think, by striking out the word "other," in the tenth line. That will reduce the clause to a state, at least, of intelligibility, and I think will reproduce the original meaning of the section.

The exemption from taxation of any property in the United States is a very high privilege. It is only justifiable from extreme reasons and in the last emergency—the one referred to by the honorable Senator from Ohio, a state of war—and the necessity for the maintenance of the national credit during that condition. But I do not think it was ever contemplated by Congress, even during the war—that having relation only to the original amount of Treasury notes issued—there now being in circulation $346,000,000, that such a large amount of property should be perpetually exempted from taxation. It is equivalent to exempting three hundred and forty-six persons worth a million dollars each from all State and municipal taxation. It is an unjust and unfair immunity.

There are no words in the contract from which perpetuity of exemption can be implied. The words are simply that these notes and other currency of the United States shall not be taxable by or under State or municipal authority. If the contract said "shall not be taxable" there would have been permanent, absolute, and perpetual immunity; but when it is said all through "under State authority" it is a clear reservation of the power of Congress by the authority of Congress to tax these notes when they are money on hand or when they constitute money deposited, the same as any other property.

One very good reason for the passage of this bill is the fraudulent use which is made of the immunity existing under the terms of the original enactment. Honest men go to work and habitually accumulate greenbacks for the purpose when the day of assessment comes of having greenback Treasury notes as a surplus and reporting no money on hand for taxation; and dishonest men make use of the same amount of Treasury notes repeatedly, so that the same sum of money in greenbacks, deposited at a bank or some other place of safety, I have no doubt serves the purpose of shielding one, two, three, four, and sometimes ten different persons from taxation by reason of the rapidity of access, by reason of the felicity and facility of transfer.

Again, there is another reason, and a very high and sound monetary reason, why these notes should be subject to taxation. So long as they are the beneficiary of this immunity, so long as any portion of the funds circulating as money are privileged from taxation, these notes will be hoarded and be taken out of the bulk of the currency; they will not circulate as money, although they are used as such; they are hoarded by banks, by individuals, by corporations, for the simple reason that they are not subject to taxation. The passage of the pending bill will destroy this propensity to hoarding, because it will destroy the reason, the profit, and the advantage of such hoarding.

This bill passed the Senate nem. con., without division, unanimously in September, 1890, and no reason has accrued since why the same unanimity should not prevail as to its passage now.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. President, so far as I can understand this bill—I hold the official copy in my hand, but it is so covered and scratched with marks indicating amendments that it is somewhat difficult to understand what it does mean—I understand it to say that a State shall not exempt from taxation any currency or moneys of any description. It is commanding the States to tax.

Mr. GEORGE. Oh, no; it is that the notes shall not be exempt from taxation on account of Federal law.

Mr. HAWLEY. I understand; but why not say "may be taxed." Suppose a State chooses to exempt deposits from taxation——

Mr. GEORGE. It amounts to the same thing. As the bill has been fixed in that way there is no use of amending it.

Mr. HAWLEY. I think there is a point to be made there. There is a command on the States to tax all these obligations of all descriptions. I do not say but that the States and Territories will be very glad to avail themselves of this permission, perhaps they will, but I affirm that it has never been customary in Federal legislation to command taxation by a State.

Mr. GEORGE. The bill does not do that.

Mr. HAWLEY. I do not see why it does not do it. It reads "shall not be exempt from taxation as money on hand or on deposit under the laws of any State or Territory."

Mr. GEORGE. That was the language of the bill which passed the Senate at the time referred to by the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE].

Mr. HAWLEY. I am not speaking of what has been done here or elsewhere at any time. I am speaking of what is here in this bill. I think myself it ought to be amended so as to say "may be taxable." Then the States will take care of the right to tax all sorts of property.

Mr. WHITE. Will the Senator permit me to make a suggestion?

Mr. HAWLEY. Certainly.

Mr. WHITE. Does not the bill simply say that the notes shall not be exempt? Does not that merely mean that their status is that they shall be taxable?

Mr. HAWLEY. I do not think it does. I do not think a State could exempt them from taxation under this bill. How could it? The language here is: "Shall not be exempt under the laws of any State or Territory."

Mr. WHITE. I will suggest to the Senator from Connecticut that the State may not tax, but the Federal Government has the power to grant the permission. Then the Federal Government says that they shall not be exempt. Of course the Federal Government can not enter within the State and make a State levy. That is obvious. Therefore, the Federal Government, it appears to me, merely removes the restriction which was formerly placed upon this kind of property, and permits the State to tax. I think that would be the construction.

Mr. HAWLEY. The Senator and I do not disagree as to what is the purpose of the bill. He wishes to have the National Government say that these obligations need not be exempted.

Mr. WHITE. Yes, sir.

Mr. HAWLEY. But you say now they shall not be exempted. I think there is a difference.

Mr. GEORGE. Will the Senator from Connecticut allow me?

Mr. HAWLEY. Yes.

Mr. GEORGE. As the bill passed the House of Representatives it read: "Shall be subject to taxation under the laws of any State or Territory." That language was perfectly satisfactory to me.

Mr. HAWLEY. Very well.

Mr. GEORGE. But the Committee on the Judiciary struck out those words.

Mr. HAWLEY. That would be satisfactory.

Mr. GEORGE. Let me get through. On consideration by the Judiciary Committee, not on my motion, it was deemed better to use the language as at present stated in the bill. I hope the Senator, therefore, will allow it to go, especially as this is the exact language used in the bill on a former occasion when it passed the Senate.

Mr. HAWLEY. I do not know whether a motion to amend is now in order or not. I do not know but it is closed, as the amendment has been already adopted.

Mr. SHERMAN. I wish, while the Senator has the floor, to call his attention to just the thing we want to correct, which is this: The present law provides that United States notes shall be exempt from taxation by or under State or municipal authority. All that is intended in this bill is to declare that such notes shall not be exempt from taxation while under State or municipal authority. That simply repeals the clauses in the several acts providing for issuing United States notes. It seems to me that makes the bill very simple and avoids all this verbal criticism.

Mr. HOAR. If I can have the attention of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE] for a moment, I shall be much obliged to him. I do not myself think that any practical difficulty would arise from the point suggested by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY].

Mr. GEORGE. Nor do I.

Mr. HOAR. But as some Senators think it might be well, instead of saying "shall not be exempt from taxation," to say "shall be liable to taxation"——

Mr. HAWLEY. Certainly.

Mr. GEORGE. Or "subject to taxation." Let us take the language of the House bill, and disagree to the amendment, as that satisfies the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. HAWLEY. Certainly.

Mr. GEORGE. Then I move that the vote by which the amendment of the committee was agreed to, in lines 6 and 7 of section 1, be reconsidered, and that the words "be subject to" shall be restored, and the words "not be exempt from" stricken out.

Mr. HAWLEY. If I understand the Senator, that will leave the House expression "shall be subject to taxation" in the bill?

Mr. GEORGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. HAWLEY. That is right. That is just what I wanted to do.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Mississippi that the vote by which the amendment referred to by him was agreed to be reconsidered.

The motion was agreed to.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question now recurs on agreeing to the amendment of the committee, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 1, line 6, after the word "shall," strike out "be subject to" and insert "not be exempt from."

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. TURPIE. I move to strike out the word "other" in line 10. Owing to an amendment which has been made I think it is necessary to strike out that word.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Indiana, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 1, line 10, after the word "tax," it is proposed to strike out the word "other."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

CAPT. EDWARD WHEELER.

Mr. SQUIRE. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the joint resolution (S. R. 19) authorizing the Secretary of War to correct the military record of Capt. Edward Wheeler, Fifty-sixth New York Volunteers.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

Mr. SQUIRE. I have here the favorable report submitted in the case by the Committee on Military Affairs, which can be read if desired by any Senator.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN O'KEANE.

Mr. SQUIRE. I ask unanimous consent for the consideration at this time of the bill (S. 646) for the relief of John O'Keane, of the State of Washington.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to pay to John O'Keane, of the State of Washington, $125, as salary due him for services as a farmer in charge of Tulalip Indian Agency, Washington Territory, for the month of October, 1882.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ARREDONDO GRANT.

Mr. PASCO. Mr. President, there was a concurrent resolution passed yesterday in relation to the Arredondo grant in the State of Florida, the language of which should be changed by the substitution of a word. I ask unanimous consent that it may be reconsidered, corrected, and again passed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the reconsideration of the vote by which the concurrent resolution was passed? The Chair hears none, and the concurrent resolution is before the Senate.

Mr. PASCO. I move to amend the resolution by striking out the word "directed" and inserting the word "requested."

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was concurred in.

MISSISSIPPI RIVER BRIDGE AT ST. LOUIS, MO.

Mr. MILLS. I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Texas.

Mr. CHANDLER. Will the Senator allow me to make a suggestion to him?

Mr. MILLS. I withdraw the motion.

Mr. PALMER. I ask unanimous consent of the Senate to proceed to the consideration at this time of House bill 5645.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Illinois asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of a bill, the title of which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 5645) authorizing the construction of a bridge over the Mississippi River to the city of St. Louis in the State of Missouri, from some suitable point between the north line of St. Clair County, Ill., and the southwest line of said county.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GALLINGER in the chair). Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. CULLOM. I will state to my colleague that yesterday I talked with the Representative from the district in which the bridge is proposed to be built, and I told him what I wish to say to my colleague. I desire to ask that the bill be laid over until I can hear from a gentleman from whom I received a letter a few days ago stating that the bill ought not to be passed. I immediately wrote the gentleman to know what reason he had to urge why the bill should not be passed, and I should like to hear from him before action is taken. I have no doubt I shall hear from him within a day or two.

Mr. PALMER. If the present consideration of the bill is objected to, of course I can not help it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will again inquire as to whether there is objection to the present consideration of the bill.

Mr. CULLOM. I simply desire to have the bill go over until I can hear from the gentleman to whom I have referred, which will be in a day or two.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made, and the bill will go over.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. CULLOM. I ask leave to call up House bill 3309, a pension bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of a bill, the title of which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 3309) to pension Ambrose Giseburt.

Mr. MANDERSON. I suggest to the Senator from Illinois and to his colleague, the chairman of the Committee on Pensions, that this would be a very opportune time to take up the pension bills in their order on the Calendar. I should be very glad to have that course pursued, and that would dispose of the case for which the Senator from Illinois [Mr. CULLOM] asks present consideration.

Mr. CULLOM. Let us dispose of this case, and then the Senate can proceed with the order indicated by the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. MANDERSON. I shall not object to the Senator's bill.

Mr. PALMER. I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the private pension bills on the Calendar.

Mr. CULLOM. I should like to have the bill considered that I have called up. It is a pension bill.

Mr. GORMAN. I understand, and I have been informed by Senators who were here when the Senate adjourned last night, that at the suggestion of the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HAR-

RIS], the Senate adjourned to meet to-day for the purpose of considering the conference report on the river and harbor bill, with the understanding on the part of quite a number of Senators that no other business should be transacted to-day. I suggest that there is no objection to the consideration of the pension bills, and that unanimous consent be given to go through with those on the Calendar, and that then the Senate should adjourn.

Mr. CULLOM. If there is any opposition to the bill I desire to have considered, of course I will withdraw the request.

Mr. CHANDLER. I wish to make a suggestion to the Senator from Maryland. The senior Senator from New York [Mr. HILL] intends to move that the Senate take up a bill submitted by the Secretary of the Treasury excluding anarchists from admission to this country, which has been under consideration by the Committee on Immigration. I can not conceive that any absent Senator would object to the consideration of that bill, and I trust that the attempt will not be made to limit the proceedings of to-day's session.

As the Senator from Maryland is aware, we have been here a very long time, and it is desirable, as we are detained here in this hot weather, that if there is any public business to be done, it shall be transacted. I hope the Senator from Maryland will not, as one of the leaders of the majority in the Senate, undertake to prevent the Senate from proceeding to do all the business upon the transaction of which other leaders on his side are inclined to enter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill called up by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. CULLOM]?

Mr. SHERMAN. I have no objection to the bill, but I think it is fairer and better to take up the pension cases reported and on the Calendar. It can not be subject to objection. The Senator from Illinois calls up one bill, when there are a great many pension cases before it on the Calendar, just as meritorious. I hope the Senator from Illinois will assent to that agreement.

Mr. GORMAN. I trust the Senator from Illinois will agree to that course and let us take up all the pension cases on the Calendar.

Mr. CULLOM. I have no objection, if the Senate will go through the list.

Mr. SHERMAN. We can do it in a half hour.

Mr. GORMAN. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the pension bills on the Calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland asks unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of unobjected pension cases on the Calendar.

Mr. HILL. I ask how many pension cases there are?

Mr. SHERMAN. If the Senate will devote an hour or three-quarters of an hour to their consideration they will all be out of the way.

Mr. HILL. I have no objection that an hour be given for that purpose. I wish then to move to take up the bill to which the Senator from New Hampshire has referred.

Mr. HOAR. What bill is that?

Mr. HILL. It is a bill in relation to anarchists, reported from the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. PALMER. I desire to enlarge my motion so as to include bills reported from the Committee on Military Affairs to correct military records. It will not take an hour, I am sure, to dispose of all the pension bills and these private military bills on the Calendar.

Mr. MANDERSON. The latter are practically bills of the same character.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request as modified by the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. HILL. What is the request?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The request of the Senator from Illinois is that unobjected pension bills on the Calendar and bills to correct military records be taken up for present consideration.

Mr. HILL. I have no objection to the next hour being given to that purpose, if it be limited to that length of time.

Mr. GORMAN. Until 2 o'clock.

Mr. HILL. All right.

Mr. ALLEN. I desire to ask whether the morning business has been concluded. I have not heard the call for the consideration of resolutions coming over from a previous day.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The present occupant of the chair is scarcely able to answer the question of the Senator from Nebraska, having been invited to the chair after other than routine business had been transacted.

Mr. ALLEN. My recollection is that after the order of introduction of bills and resolutions was reached various bills were called up and considered, and that the regular morning business has not been concluded. While I do not desire to interfere with the consideration of pension bills I should like to have the routine business concluded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. In answer to the interrogatory of the Senator from Nebraska, the present occupant of the chair will state that he is informed that morning business has not closed.

Mr. ALLEN. Then I shall object to the order suggested for a sufficient length of time to have the morning business concluded.

Mr. HOAR. There was a very general disposition in the Senate last night to adjourn until Monday, and I think that motion would undoubtedly have been carried but for the unanimous-consent agreement that the Senate should meet to-day for the purpose of considering the conference report on the river and harbor bill. Consent was given that that should be taken up immediately after the reading of the Journal, to the exclusion of the morning business and all other matters. I understand that for some good reason the conference report has been withdrawn, but I do not think the Senate ought, after that unanimous-consent agreement, to spend the entire day here on all sorts of miscellaneous business. I have no objection to taking up the pension measures, of which I am in favor, and I have no objection to the Senate taking up the measure which the Senator from New York has in charge, but after that business is disposed of I think the Senate ought to carry out the understanding and adjourn.

Mr. GORMAN. That is right.

Mr. HOAR. I shall move an adjournment after the Senator from New York gets through, if nobody else does.

Mr. GORMAN. That is right.

Mr. CHANDLER. The Senator from Massachusetts will allow me to say that I think he is mistaken in assuming that there was any such understanding. The language of the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS] which governs this case was as follows:

> I think the understanding is that we meet to-morrow especially to consider this matter. When it is considered, then the Senate can determine what further order it will make.

This excludes the idea that there was any understanding that no other business would be transacted to-day.

Mr. HOAR. I will use the phrase "general expectation." I for one should not have assented to the proposition that the conference report on the river and harbor bill should be taken up immediately after the reading of the Journal if I had not expected that when it was over the Senate would adjourn. I do not wish to interfere with any Senator's desire——

Mr. HILL. If I had supposed that that was all the business to be done to-day, I certainly should have objected. I carefully noted the fact that other business could be done if the Senate wanted to do it. I am disposed to stay here; we have nothing else to do; it is the most pleasant day we have had in the week, and if we are going to adjourn finally sometime during the summer or fall we must get through with business. As we are here to-day, let us go ahead and dispose of unobjectionable bills.

Mr. HOAR. I will say to the Senator from New York that all I have given notice of is that I shall move that the Senate adjourn after the bill he has in charge has been disposed of.

Mr. CULLOM. If we could proceed with the pension bills we would get them out of the way in the time that is being consumed by this talk. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of unobjected pension cases.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair desires to know whether any Senator has interposed an objection to that course.

Mr. MANDERSON. Unanimous consent has been asked that pension bills and bills removing charges of desertion or correcting military records may be taken up in their order on the Calendar.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. HILL. I desire to limit it to the next hour.

Mr. MANDERSON. All right; for one hour.

Mr. HILL. With that limitation I make no objection.

Mr. PALMER. I accept the modification.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. As modified, the Chair hears no objection to the request.

Mr. GEORGE. What is the request?

Mr. PUGH. One hour for pension bills.

Mr. GEORGE. I have a little bill on the Calendar which I should like to have taken up. I know the Senate will pass it as soon as it is read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Mississippi asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of a bill which will be read for information.

Mr. SHERMAN. I hope that the hour rule will be adhered to, and that the pension cases will be proceeded with.

Mr. PALMER. Allow me to say to the Senator from Mississippi that in an hour we can get through with these bills.

Mr. GEORGE. The bill for which I ask present consideration is the bill (H. R. 3130) to repeal in part and to limit section 3480 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. SHERMAN. I understand the Senate has already agreed to devote one hour to pension bills and to private bills from the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. GEORGE. Let me get this bill through first, and then we can go on with the others.

Mr. SHERMAN. Oh, no; let it come afterwards. I do not think the Senator should stand in the way of matters in which we are all interested.

Mr. GEORGE. This is a pension matter in a sense. It relates to bounty land warrants.

Mr. SHERMAN. Then it will be reached in its order. I insist upon proceeding regularly.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection to the request of the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. ALLEN. I rose for the purpose of objecting to any other business until the morning business is closed.

Mr. PALMER. May I ask the Senator from Nebraska a question? Do I understand that there is objection to my request that an hour shall be devoted to the consideration of these bills?

Mr. ALLEN. Not at all, but I think the morning business can be concluded in twenty minutes, and then all the rest of the morning hour can be devoted to the consideration of the pension bills.

Mr. PALMER. Of course if there is objection, I can say no more.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Chair understand the Senator from Nebraska to object to the request to proceed with the pension bills?

Mr. ALLEN. I do, until the morning business is concluded.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection.

Mr. ALLEN. Now, let my resolution, which comes over as a part of the morning business, be laid before the Senate.

PROPOSED ISSUE OF TREASURY NOTES.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution submitted by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN], coming over from a previous day. The resolution will be stated.

The SECRETARY. A resolution proposing to discharge the Committee on Finance from the further consideration of the bill (S. 2264) for the relief of the several States of the Union, and for other purposes.

Mr. ALLEN. A few days ago I introduced Senate bill 2264, which was referred to the Committee on Finance. Assuming that the committee has had no opportunity——

Mr. GORMAN. Will the Senator from Nebraska permit me to interrupt him?

Mr. ALLEN. Certainly.

Mr. GORMAN. As stated by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR], and as I stated also, the understanding of quite a number of Senators was that no business should be transacted to-day except to consider the conference report on the river and harbor bill. Under the circumstances, in view of the important public matter that is in conference, no member of the Finance Committee from this side of the Chamber can be here to-day, I ask the Senator from Nebraska to permit the resolution to go over with the understanding that it shall come up in its regular order on Monday.

Mr. ALLEN. That will be satisfactory. Any course will be satisfactory so that the resolution does not lose its place.

Mr. GORMAN. Let the resolution go over, with the understanding that it shall not be placed on the Calendar but shall come up on Monday.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

CONSIDERATION OF PRIVATE BILLS.

Mr. GORMAN. I trust the pension bills and those from the Committee on Military Affairs may be considered for an hour, and after the Senator from New York [Mr. HILL] calls up the bill to which he has referred I shall move that the Senate adjourn, because I know that Senators on this side are compelled to be away from the Chamber.

Mr. MANDERSON. That is right; now let us proceed.

Mr. PALMER. I renew my request.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Illinois asks unanimous consent that for one hour the Senate shall consider pension bills and bills to correct military records which are not objected to. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the first bill on the Calendar under the order will be proceeded with.

ELIZABETH VOSS.

The bill (H. R. 855) to amend an act granting a pension to Elizabeth Voss was announced as the first pension bill on the Calendar, and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration. It proposes to amend the act approved March 3, 1883, entitled "An act granting a pension to Elizabeth Voss," so as to read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and hereby is, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Elizabeth Voss, formerly the widow of Jacob Mann, late of Company A, Sixteenth Regiment Iowa Infantry, to take effect from date of said former act.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES M'CONNELL.

The bill (S. 857) to correct the military record of James McConnell was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with amendments: In line 3, after the words "Secretary of," to strike out "the Interior" and insert "War;" and in line 7, after the word "discharge," to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That no pay, bounty, or emolument shall become due or pension granted by virtue of the passage of this act.

So as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of James McConnell, late private in Company B, Fifth Regiment Connecticut Infantry, and grant him an honorable discharge: Provided, That no pay, bounty, or emolument shall become due or pension granted by virtue of the passage of this act.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of James McConnell, late private in Company B, Fifth Regiment Connecticut Infantry."

HENRY LANE.

The bill (S. 1233) for the relief of Henry Lane was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to set aside the special orders of the War Department dismissing from the service Henry Lane, late first lieutenant Company F, Thirtieth Regiment New Jersey Volunteers, to date March 1, 1863.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ALBERT LOCKE, ALIAS SHIPLEY.

The bill (S. 837) for the relief of Albert Locke, alias Shipley, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment in line 8, after the word "service" to insert "as of date November 15, 1862;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to remove the charge of desertion now standing against Albert Locke, alias Shipley, late of Company D, Nineteenth Massachusetts Infantry, on the records and rolls of the War Department, and to grant and issue to said Locke, alias Shipley, an honorable discharge from said service, as of date November 15, 1862.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM B. BARNES.

The bill (S. 1857) granting an honorable discharge to William B. Barnes was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to issue an honorable discharge to William B. Barnes, late major of the Eleventh New York Heavy Artillery.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JEREMIAH L. DALY.

The bill (S. 473) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Jeremiah L. Daly was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment, in line 6, after the word "by," to strike out "removing the charge of desertion standing against his name and," and to insert:

Notwithstanding the sentence of the court-martial promulgated November 5, 1863, said discharge to bear the date of November 5, 1863.

So as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to correct the military record of Jeremiah L. Daly, late private of Company E, Ninth Connecticut Regiment, United States Volunteers, by granting him an honorable discharge from his said service, notwithstanding the sentence of the court-martial promulgated November 5, 1863, said discharge to bear the date of November 5, 1863.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to grant an honorable discharge to Jeremiah L. Daly."

MARY DOUBLEDAY.

The bill (S. 1956) granting an increase of pension to Mary Doubleday, widow of Bvt. Maj. Gen. Abner Doubleday, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Mary Doubleday, widow of Maj. Gen. Abner Doubleday, and to pay her a pension of $100 per month in lieu of the pension she is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JEREMIAH F. BROWN.

The bill (S. 1375) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Jeremiah F. Brown was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with amendments: In line 5, after the word "Brown," to insert "named upon the rolls as Franklin Brown;" and in line 8, after the word "discharge," to insert "to date October 3, 1862;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to remove the charge of desertion standing against the military record of Jeremiah F. Brown, named upon the rolls as Franklin Brown, late of Company F, Fifty-eighth Indiana Infantry, and grant to said Jeremiah F. Brown an honorable discharge, to date October 3, 1862.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Jeremiah F. Brown, alias Franklin Brown."

GEORGE L. FRYMIRE.

The bill (H. R. 3076) granting a pension to George L. Frymire was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of George L. Frymire, a permanently helpless son of William C. Frymire, late a member of Company B, Fifty-sixth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN A. JACK.

The bill (H. R. 3032) to remove the charge of desertion from the record of John A. Jack was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to remove from the record of John A. Jack, late of Company I, One hundred and twenty-eighth Regiment Illinois Volunteers, any charge of desertion that may exist against him as a private in that company, and issue to him an honorable discharge.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

J. MADISON CUTTS.

The bill (S. 399) for the relief of Bvt. Lieut. Col. J. Madison Cutts was read.

Mr. HAWLEY. I am more or less familiar with this case. Was Col. Cutts a captain in the regular Army?

Mr. PALMER. I think he was.

Mr. HAWLEY. The rule adopted by the committee in restoring men, as the Senator from Illinois is well aware, has been to restore them to the precise rank they held when they left the Army.

Mr. PALMER. I will consent that the bill may be passed over for the present.

Mr. HAWLEY. I am not objecting to the bill, but I want to keep up the custom, which was adopted on mature consideration by the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. PALMER. I hope to get the attention of the Senate to the bill, when I shall be prepared to explain it more fully.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over at the request of the Senator from Illinois.

ELIZABETH ELLERY.

The bill (S. 1935) granting a pension to Elizabeth Ellery was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Elizabeth Ellery, widow of Frank Ellery, late commodore United States Navy, at the rate of $20 per month, in lieu of the pension she is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN ECKLAND.

The bill (S. 1584) granting a pension to John Eckland was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 4, after the word "roll," to strike out "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws," and insert "at the rate of $30 per month;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, at the rate of $30 per month, the name of John Eckland, late a Government laborer in the quartermaster's department of the army of Gen. Thomas, who has become totally blind from an injury received while unloading a Government vessel with supplies, said injury being due to the unsafe and slippery condition of the gangway.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. LUCINDA C. WHEELER.

The bill (H. R. 1463) granting a pension to Mrs. Lucinda C. Wheeler, widow of John H. Wheeler, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Mrs. Lucinda C. Wheeler, widow of John H. Wheeler, late private in Company L, Seventh Regiment Tennessee Cavalry, in the war of 1861, and to grant her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES LANE.

The bill (H. R. 3065) to increase the pension of James Lane was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to increase the pension of James Lane, late a member of Company I, Third Regiment of Illinois Volunteers, in the war of the United States with Mexico, from $12 to $20 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMANDA J. LANE.

The bill (H. R. 3033) granting a pension to Amanda J. Lane was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 4, after the word "roll," to strike out "subject to the provisions and limitation of the pension laws" and insert "at the rate of $10 per month;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, at the rate of $10 per month, the name of Amanda J. Lane, dependent and permanently helpless sister of John M. Lane, late a member of Company F, One hundred and thirty-first Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

JOHN SCOTT.

The bill (H. R. 1313) to increase the pension of John Scott was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of John Scott, late a sergeant in Company A, One hundred and twenty-sixth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and to pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month for total disability (amputation) of left leg and gunshot wound of right leg, in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE WHITTAKER.

The bill (S. 1229) to correct the military record of George Whittaker, late a private of Company C, Twelfth New Jersey Volunteers, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY P. BROUGHTON.

The bill (H. R. 953) to increase the pension of Mary P. Broughton was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to increase the pension of Mary P. Broughton by allowing her a rate of $2 per month in addition to her present rate as widow of Wilbur F. Broughton, late of Company I, One hundred and twelfth Illinois Infantry, the increase being on account of Allie Dill Broughton, the permanently helpless daughter of the above-named soldier.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMBROSE GISEBURT.

The bill (H. R. 3309) to pension Ambrose Giseburt was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Ambrose Giseburt, of Company K, Thirty-third Regiment of Enrolled Missouri Militia, at a rate proportionate to the degree of disability from injury to right hip and right shoulder, the injury to be shown to the satisfaction of the Pension Bureau to have been incurred in an engagement with armed enemies of the United States.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

A. F. NEELY.

The bill (H. R. 6206) granting a pension to A. F. Neely was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of A. F. Neely, late private Company B, Second Kansas Militia, who was wounded in the right thigh at the battle of the Blue, to be paid a pension proportionate to the degree of his disability from gunshot wounds of right thigh, incurred in that engagement, and disabilities resulting therefrom.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOEL A. WALTERS.

The bill (H. R. 3840) to pension Joel A. Walters was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension roll the name of Joel A. Walters, of unsound mind, and son of James E. Walters, late a private in Company C, Fifty-ninth Regiment Indiana Volunteers, the pension to be paid his lawfully appointed guardian.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SARAH ODDY.

The bill (H. R. 5374) granting a pension to Sarah Oddy was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Sarah Oddy, of Eldorado, Butler County, Kans., widow of William Oddy, deceased, late of First Battery Colorado Volunteer Light Artillery.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JULIA BEWS.

The bill (H. R. 3992) to increase the pension of Julia Bews was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to increase the pension of Julia Bews by allowing a rate of $2 per month in addition to her present rate as widow of Alexander Bews, late of Company A, Sixteenth Regiment New York Volunteers, and Company H, Eighty-third Regiment New York Volunteers, the increase being on account of Margaret Bews, the permanently helpless daughter of the above-named soldier.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELIZA HOLMES.

The bill (H. R. 1717) granting a pension to Eliza Holmes was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Eliza Holmes, widow of John Holmes, deceased, late of Company A, Seventy-ninth Regiment New York Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN STOCKWELL.

The bill (H. R. 856) granting an increase of pension to John Stockwell was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of John Stockwell, late of Company K, of the Seventy-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, at the rate of $36 per month, in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PATRICK KELLEHER

The bill (H. R. 6405) to remove the charge of desertion standing against Patrick Kelleher, late private Company C, Thirty-eighth Illinois Volunteers, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HENRY C. SEAMAN.

The bill (S. 1189) for the relief of Capt. Henry C. Seaman was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment, to add the following proviso:

Provided, That no pay or emoluments shall be due said soldier by reason of the passage of this act.

So as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and is hereby, directed to remove the charge of absence without leave and desertion standing on the rolls of the Adjutant-General's Office against Capt. Henry C. Seaman, late of Company D, Fifth Kansas Cavalry Volunteers, and set aside the order of dismissal and accept his resignation as of the date of July 7, 1863, and issue to him an honorable discharge of that date: Provided, That no pay or emoluments shall be due said soldier by reason of the passage of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

L. S. WOODWORTH.

The bill (S. 1675) to remove the charge of a dishonorable dismissal, after the battle of Stone River, standing against the name of L. S. Woodworth, to correct the record and issue him an honorable discharge, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. PALMER. I move to correct the name in line 6, so as to read "Seth L. Woodworth."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PALMER. I move to further amend the bill by adding at the end the following proviso:

Provided, That no pay or emoluments shall be due said soldier by reason of the passage of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to remove the charge of a dishonorable dismissal, after the battle of Stone River, standing against the name of Seth S. Woodworth, to correct the record and issue him an honorable discharge."

HARRIET R. TATE.

The bill (H. R. 6213) to pension Harriet R. Tate was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll at $12 per month the name of Harriet R. Tate, widow of William S. Tate, late a private in Company L, Thirteenth Regiment Indiana Cavalry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY ANN DONOGHUE.

The bill (H. R. 5816) granting a pension to Mary Ann Donoghue was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Mary Ann Donoghue, widow of Timothy Donoghue, late of Company F, Fourth Regiment United States Infantry, and allow her a pension of $8 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WARREN ALONZO ALDEN.

The bill (H. R. 2108) to perfect the military record of Warren Alonzo Alden was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to enter the name of Warren Alonzo Alden upon the roll of Company H, of the Ninety-second Ohio Volunteer Infantry, with a statement of the fact that he faithfully served the United States in that organization, commencing August 15, 1862, and continuing until January 5, 1863.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ADA J. SCHWATKA.

The bill (S. 2056) granting a pension to Ada J. Schwatka, widow of the late Lieut. Frederick Schwatka, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reporetd from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 7, before the word "dollars," to strike out "fifty" and insert "thirty;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to place on the pension roll the name of Ada J. Schwatka, widow of the late Frederick Schwatka, late first lieutenant, Third Cavalry, United States Army, at the rate of $30 per month.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM J. MURRAY.

The bill (S. 1692) granting a pension to William J. Murray was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of William J. Murray, who served in the Department of the Gulf in the telegraph department in 1862 and in the Red River campaign in 1864, and to pay him a pension of $25 per month, he having become totally blind by reason of said service.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CAPT. E. M. IVES.

The bill (H. R. 2133) to correct the military record of Capt. E. M. Ives was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to amend the record of Capt. Ed. M. Ives, late of Company A, Forty-second United States Colored Infantry, so as to state that his resignation was accepted January 1, 1865.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELIZABETH NEW.

Mr. GALLINGER. I reported favorably two pensions bills this morning, and as there will be no objection to them, I ask that they be now considered.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from New Hampshire? The Chair hears none.

The bill (S. 2275) granting a pension to Elizabeth New, widow of Jethrow New, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Elizabeth New, widow of Jethrow New, late captain of Company D, Twenty-ninth Indiana.

Mr. TURPIE. After the word "Indiana," at the end of line 7, I move to insert the words "Volunteer Infantry, of the war of 1861."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY TRIMBLE.

The bill (H. R. 4811) to pension Mary Trimble was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension roll the name of Mary Trimble, the permanently helpless daughter of Benjamin Trimble, jr., late a private in Nevins' Independent Battery, Light Artillery, Pennsylvania Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SUBPORT OF ENTRY AT OAKLAND, CAL.

Mr. PERKINS. The hour set apart for the consideration of pension bills not being exhausted, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 7187) to make the city of Oakland, county of Alameda, State of California, a subport of entry.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ESTATE OF WALTER S. M'LEOD.

Mr. WASHBURN. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 6384) for the relief of Walter S. McLeod.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It directs the Secretary of the Treasury to adjust and audit the account of Walter S. McLeod, late farmer and special disbursing agent of the Medawakanton band of Sioux in Minnesota, and remove the suspensions in his account, by the Second Comptroller of the Treasury, on account of expenditures made by him, not to exceed $1,556.66, disbursed subsequent to June 30, 1887, when the money appropriated by act of Congress May 15, 1886, was no longer legally disbursable, provided it shall appear to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Treasury that the money was expended in purchasing goods for the Indians, and that they received the benefits thereof.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill for the relief of the estate of Walter S. McLeod."

GEORGE H. PLANT.

Mr. PASCO. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 429) for the relief of George H. Plant, of the District of Columbia.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, in line 6, after the words "sum of," to strike out "six" and insert "five;" in the same line after the word "thousand," to strike out "seven" and insert "two;" and at the end of line 11, after the words "Potomac River" to insert "and to be received by him in full satisfaction of all claims and demands in consequence of the said collision;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to George H. Plant, of the District of Columbia, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $5,216.85, the same being the amount found to be due to him by the Court of Claims for losses and damages sustained by him by reason of a collision between the United States steamship Gettysburg and the steamboat Lady of the Lake, on the Potomac River, and to be received by him in full satisfaction of all claims and demands in consequence of the said collision.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BENJAMIN ALFORD.

Mr. PASCO. There is a small bill on the Calendar, which comes from the House of Representatives, the consideration of which will take but a minute. I ask that it may be now considered. It is the bill (H. R. 522) for the relief of Benjamin Alford.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to Benjamin Alford $79.20.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

W. D. MACK.

Mr. MANDERSON. I ask the unanimous consent of the Senate for the present consideration of the joint resolution (S. R. 68) for the relief of W. D. Mack, a clerk in the Record and Pension Division of the War Department.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution. It proposes to exempt William D. Mack, a clerk in the Record and Pension Office, and a veteran of the late war, who lost both feet in a railroad accident while returning from the anniversary ceremonies of the battle of Gettysburg, on July 4 last, from the operation of so much of the act approved March 3, 1893, making appropriations for legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, as limits the amount of sick leave with pay that may be granted by heads of Departments, and authorizes the Secretary of War to pay him such portion of his salary as has been withheld from September 11 to October 14 (thirty-four days) on account of injuries so received.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RESTRICTION OF IMMIGRATION.

Mr. HILL. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 5246) providing for the inspection of immigrants by United States consuls.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported by the Committee on Immigration, with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That no alien anarchist shall hereafter be permitted to land at any port of the United States, or be admitted into the United States, but this shall not be construed as to political refugees or political offenders.

SEC. 2. That at the hearing of aliens charged with being anarchists the board of special inquiry shall diligently inquire of the accused, by pertinent questions, as to his antecedents, political opinions, whether he belongs to any society or association of known anarchistic tendencies, and he may examine the person for marks indicative of such membership; he may accept evidence of the immigrant's common reputation as an anarchist, and the orders, degrees, or judgments of foreign governments and police notifications as prima facie evidence, which shall be sufficient, unless successfully controverted, to sustain an order of deportation. The Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized, in case he shall be satisfied that an alien has been allowed to land, or has come into the United States, contrary to the immigration laws, to issue a warrant and cause such alien to be taken into custody and returned to the country whence he came, at the expense of the importing vessel, or if he entered from an adjoining country, of which he is not a citizen, then to the country of his nativity, at the expense of the United States. In such cases the Secretary may authorize any immigration official to summon witnesses, administer oaths, and take testimony, to be submitted to him, and inspectors of immigration may execute such process and make arrests and convey to port of departure all such persons ordered deported.

SEC. 3. That in cases where, upon the trial and conviction of any foreign-born and unnaturalized person of any crime or misdemeanor in any United States court, or court of record of any State or Territory or the District of Columbia, the presiding judge shall certify that from the evidence produced at the trial he is satisfied that such alien is an anarchist, or that he is not attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States and well disposed to the peace and good order of the same, and that his remaining in this country will be a menace to the Government, or to the peace and well being of society in general, such convict, in addition to other punishments adjudged, shall be taken before a commissioner of immigration, at a port of entry, who shall order his deportation, at the expense of the United States, to the country from which he came. Should he return to the United States he shall be arrested and sentenced to confinement in the penitentiary for a period not exceeding four years and afterwards again deported.

SEC. 4. That the Secretary of the Treasury shall appoint at such foreign ports of departure as he may deem necessary an immigrant inspector, at a salary not exceeding $2,500 per annum, whose duty it shall be, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may from time to time prescribe, to inspect passengers embarking for the United States; he shall have power to erase from the list or manifest of passengers required by section 1 of the act of 1903 the name of any immigrant who he is satisfied should not be permitted to land in this country, and may forbid the transportation of any person belonging to the excluded classes in the first or second cabin or in any part of any vessel; he shall transmit a written report of his proceedings, and give information as to all suspected persons whose landing in the United States should be specially investigated, with the reasons therefor, and shall warn and admonish the master or the officer in command of the departing vessel as to the character of any intended immigrant if objectionable or undesirable. This report shall be signed by the inspector and delivered by him, inclosed under seal, to the master or officer in command of the vessel, who shall deliver the same to the immigration officer at the port of arrival, in the same manner as said manifests or lists of alien immigrants are required to be delivered, under a penalty of $500 in case of failure of said master or officer in command so to do; and should the master or officer in command of said vessel embark any objectionable or undesirable immigrant, after notice of said inspector not to do so, he shall pay a penalty of $100 in each case, which shall be paid within twenty-four hours after arrival and be a lien on the vessel bringing said passenger. Said inspectors shall also diligently inquire and inform themselves as to the character of intended immigrants, whether criminals, anarchists, insane, paupers, or diseased persons, availing themselves of police records, decrees of expulsion, and any and every source of information useful and obtainable, so as to enable them to arrive at correct conclusions, and shall execute such other duties as the Secretary of the Treasury may impose. And for the purpose of enforcing this law and paying the salaries of these inspectors the sum of $60,000 is hereby appropriated.

SEC. 5. That the fact that an immigrant has declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States shall constitute no bar to proceedings against him under this act or under the acts to which it is an amendment.

Mr. PEFFER. Mr. President, this is an exceedingly important measure, and it appears from the preliminary matter on page 1 that it was reported to the Senate but yesterday. I did not know until a few moments ago that such a bill was pending. I think that it involves too many considerations of grave importance to be considered without the presence of a full Senate. I do not intend to suggest the absence of a quorum, but I do ask that the bill may be laid over until we can have a little more time to look into it.

Mr. CHANDLER. I suggest to the Senator, if he has no objection, that the discussion go on, if there is to be discussion of the bill, and meantime he can consider its provisions and possibly it may meet so completely his own ideas that he will wish to have it passed to-day. If not, of course the bill can go over.

Mr. PEFFER. I am satisfied that there are a number of members of this body who would like to be consulted and to be present when the bill is considered. I myself should like a little more time to consider it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kansas object to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. PEFFER. I object to the present consideration of the bill if it is subject to objection.

Mr. HILL. What is the objection?

Mr. PLATT. I thought the bill had been taken up by a vote of the Senate.

Mr. LODGE. There was a unanimous agreement to take up the bill for consideration.

Mr. HILL. No objection was made to its consideration.

Mr. PLATT. I thought it had been taken up by a vote of the Senate.

Mr. HILL. Let me say to the Senator from Kansas that I do not think there will be a disposition to press a vote upon the bill to-day. I think it might as well be proceeded with and be considered for a while, and then we shall probably adjourn, leaving the bill the unfinished business.

Mr. PEFFER. I have no objection to that; but I give Senators notice that, if a vote is insisted upon, I shall call attention to the absence of a quorum.

Mr. CHANDLER. What is the question before the Senate, Mr. President?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole, and the question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the Committee on Immigration, which has been read.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President, the situation of this bill and the proposed amendment is this: The bill on the 20th of July passed the House of Representatives. It is absolutely simple in its provisions. It requires that every alien immigrant coming to this country to make his permanent home here shall procure from the consul nearest to his place of residence a certificate showing that he is entitled to come into the United States under existing law; and it provides that regulations for the enforcement of this requirement shall be made by the Secretary of State. In other words, the bill nominally provides for a system of compulsory consular certificates. It does not, however, provide any penalty if an immigrant does not have such a certificate; it does not even say that he shall be excluded from entering and remaining in the country. If he does not procure the certificate which the law says he shall bring, then the question whether or not he can enter depends as before, upon the provisions of now existing law.

He may be admitted or he may not be admitted according to the present law. So the bill as it has come from the House is the mildest possible requirement of consular certificates from immigrants seeking to enter this country.

In nearly every bill which has been introduced into Congress during recent years there has been inserted in some form a provision for a consular certificate such as is contemplated by this bill as it comes from the House, but never until this time has such a law passed either House. I am in favor of the passage of the bill in its present form without delay.

If I could have my own way and have that done which I believe to be for the true interests of the country, I should have this bill pass the Senate to-day and sent to the President for his signature. But the Secretary of State, the Secretary of the Treasury, and the officials of the Government engaged in administering the present immigration laws, I believe without exception, oppose the passage of the bill as it comes to the Senate from the House.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, and there being no unfinished business, the Calendar under Rule IX is in order.

Mr. HILL. I move that the Senate proceed with the consideration of the bill.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. Does the Senator from New Hampshire prefer to go on to-day?

Mr. CHANDLER. Yes; I prefer to go on to-day and make a brief statement.

A few days ago there appeared before the Senate committee in opposition to the bill representatives of the various steamship companies which bring immigrants into the United States. So we have arrayed against the passage of the House proposition the steamship companies, and we have also the Secretary of State, the Secretary of the Treasury, and the National Superintendent of Immigration. Moreover, the Secretary of the Treasury antagonizes the demand for consular certificates with a counter proposition of his own, which is section 4 of the substitute reported by the committee.

This opposition plan is a provision that the Secretary of the Treasury may appoint immigrant inspectors at such foreign ports of departure as he may deem necessary, and his scheme contemplates the examination of all the immigrants by those Treasury inspectors upon the docks of the steamship companies in the ports of departure of the immigrants, in order in each case that the inspector may form an opinion as to the right of the immigrant to enter the United States. If the immigration inspector believes that an immigrant has the right to come he may make a report to that effect. If he believes the immigrant ought not to come he can forbid the steamship company from bringing him here. Here, then, are the two conflicting plans, the one a requirement of consular certificates to be issued by our consuls abroad to persons intending to immigrate to the United States, the other a proposition for Treasury officials upon the docks of the steamship companies abroad.

Mr. President, I am not only in favor of the House bill as it stands, providing for consular certificates, but I am, as at present advised, opposed to any system of Treasury inspectors upon the steamship docks in foreign countries. I shall not now enlarge upon my reasons for opposing the appointment of Treasury inspectors to act in foreign ports. For my present purpose I simply present to the Senate the two opposing plans, which are now before us upon the report of the committee.

Mr. PLATT. I ask the Senator from New Hampshire whether we have any right to appoint an official of the Treasury Department to go abroad and perform such duty on the wharf of a steamship company? Would such an official have any right to be there if he were simply an appointee of our Treasury Department?

Mr. CHANDLER. It is entirely clear that the Treasury Department can not appoint officers to perform any such function as that contemplated by the Department bill, without the consent of the foreign governments, which they would never give unless the Treasury officials were made a part of the consular system of the United States. That difficulty could perhaps be obviated by making the officials who might be sent abroad in pursuance of this provision, if it should become a law, officers in the consular service. That is a matter of detail. But the difficulty stated by the Senator from Connecticut is one objection to the passage of this clause as it has been submitted by the Secretary of the Treasury.

There are, as I have said, other objections which I shall not now recite, but I call careful attention to the antagonism that exists between the advocates of the House bill and all the present officials of the State and Treasury Departments.

Mr. President, under these conditions I realize that at this late period of the session it will be impossible to pass either the House bill for consular certificates or the provision for Treasury inspectors abroad, which the Secretary of the Treasury has proposed, and which by a pro forma vote of the Committee on Immigration has been reported as a substitute for the House bill. Therefore I submit to the chairman of the Committee on Immigration an important suggestion as to what I think ought to be done and may be done at this time.

Mr. PLATT. May I ask the Senator from New Hampshire one more question?

Mr. CHANDLER. Certainly.

Mr. PLATT. The Senator from New Hampshire suggested that perhaps the difficulty to which I have alluded might be removed by making the officers of the Treasury Department, who are proposed to be sent abroad to enforce the law in foreign countries, also officers of the State Department, or have them in some way connected with the consular or diplomatic service abroad. I do not exactly see how an officer of the Treasury Department can, even by law, be made a diplomatic or consular officer. It seems to me he must be one or the other. He must be a consular or diplomatic official, appointed by the State Department, or he must be a Treasury agent. I do not see how he can be both. Does the Senator from New Hampshire see how he can be both?

Mr. CHANDLER. I must confess that I see great difficulty in enabling Treasury officials to become a part of the consular service, but doubtless the Senator from New York, the chairman of the committee, who is in favor of this proposition, will be able to enlighten the Senator from Connecticut.

But even under present circumstances I make a practical proposition growing out of certain additional provisions of law which are recommended by the Secretary of the Treasury in his communication. The scheme for Treasury officials abroad is contained in section 4, but the Secretary also submits a proposed act, comprised in sections 1, 2, 3, and 5, for the exclusion from this country of anarchists and for the deportation of anarchists who have succeeded in gaining admission. I will read the first section of the bill which the Secretary of the Treasury transmits:

That no alien anarchist shall hereafter be permitted to land at any port of the United States, or be admitted into the United States; but this shall not be so construed as to apply to political refugees or political offenders.

Then follow sections 2, 3, and 5, which are designed to enforce the exclusion provided for in section 1.

These laws for the exclusion and deportation of anarchists have been drawn by the Secretary of the Treasury with great skill. I have read them with care and attention, and I believe that they are well chosen to accomplish an object which the Secretary of the Treasury, the Congress of the United States, and all the people of the United States wish to reach. I am confident there will be a unanimous assent on the part of the Senate to the adoption of these four provisions which the Secretary of the Treasury has submitted. They can be separated without difficulty from the fourth section, to which I make objection, which provides for the appointment of Treasury inspectors abroad, and they can be enacted into law, I do not doubt, by a unanimous vote of both Houses.

I think I have clearly stated the whole case now before the Senate. The Senator from New York, the chairman of the Committee on Immigration, is not prepared to assent to the passage of the House bill, and I am not willing to surrender the House bill. Certainly I am not ready to adopt in the place of the House bill the fourth section of the bill of the Secretary of the Treasury, and other Senators take the same position. So, in the present condition of Congress, neither of these provisions can become a law at this session.

I am willing, however, to advocate the passage of the four sections directed against anarchists, and I respectfully suggest to the chairman of the committee that these four sections alone be embodied in a new bill; and that this bill be now passed by the Senate and sent to the House, where I have no doubt it will be taken up without delay and enacted into a statute at the present time. Thus while we may not all agree upon a bill for consular certificates, while we may not all agree upon a bill for Treasury inspection of immigrants abroad, we all shall agree upon these carefully drawn provisions for the exclusion and deportation of anarchists, which I believe the whole people will welcome as a wise and judicious statute of Congress at this particular time.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, I shall not reply to the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER] this afternoon. I shall reserve what I have to say upon the subject until the bill shall be taken up on Monday next.

I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. CHANDLER. Will the Senator from New York withdraw that motion for one moment?

Mr. HILL. Certainly.

Mr. CHANDLER. I introduce a bill containing the four provisions, proposed to be enacted into law, submitted by the Secretary of the Treasury. I ask that the bill may be printed and go over until Monday, to be considered in connection with the House bill.

The bill (S. 2282) to amend the various acts relative to immigration, and to provide for the exclusion of alien anarchists, was read twice by its title.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BLACKBURN in the chair). The bill will go over, and be printed, as requested by the Senator from New Hampshire.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. HILL. I renew my motion that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After 5 minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened and (at 2 o'clock and 20 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Monday, August 6, 1894, at 12 o'clock m.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate August 4, 1894.

POSTMASTERS.

Andrew J. Sibley, to be postmaster at Montpelier, in the county of Washington and State of Vermont.

W. A. Hopkins, to be postmaster at Eminence, in the county of Henry and State of Kentucky.

John M. Martin, to be postmaster at Ocala, in the county of Marion and State of Florida.

Jerome W. Pierce, to be postmaster at Springfield, in the county of Windsor and State of Vermont.

SENATE.

MONDAY, August 6, 1894.

Prayer by Rev. J. H. M'CARTY, D. D., of the city of Washington.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of the proceedings of Saturday last; when, on motion of Mr. SHERMAN, and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLES, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7477) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, and for prior years, and for other purposes, asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. BRECKINRIDGE of Kentucky, Mr. SAYERS, and Mr. CANNON of Illinois managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House of Representatives requested the Senate to return to the House the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6518) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House of Representatives returned to the Senate, in compliance with its request, the bill (S. 2151) to amend an act to authorize the construction of a steel bridge over the St. Louis River between the States of Wisconsin and Minnesota, approved April 24, 1894.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6542) to change the lines between the eastern and western judicial districts of North Carolina and fixing time for holding courts in said eastern district.

The message further announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 7680) to authorize purchasers of the property and franchises of the Choctaw Coal and Railway Company to organize a corporation and to confer upon the same all the powers, privileges, and franchises vested in that company; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

A bill (H. R. 868) for the relief of Charles B. Stivers;

A bill (H. R. 2582) to authorize the appointment of James William Abert to the retired list of the Army;

A bill (H. R. 2996) for the relief of Mrs. E. S. Luke, widow of John L. Luke, late a soldier in the Black Hawk war;

A bill (H. R. 3858) to pension Mrs. Eliza B. Peirce, widow of John Peirce, of New Bedford, Mass.;

A bill (H. R. 5371) for the relief of certain enlisted men of the Marine Corps;

A bill (H. R. 5481) making appropriations to provide for the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 6042) to authorize sale of lot 8, block 93, city of Hot Springs, by school directors thereof, and use of proceeds for school purposes;

A bill (H. R. 6921) for the relief of George B. Cosby;

A bill (H. R. 7419) for the construction of a military road from the city of El Paso to Fort Bliss, Tex.; and

A bill (H. R. 7494) disposing of four condemned cannon of the Navy.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask that the action of the House of Representatives on the deficiency appropriation bill be laid before the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7477) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, and for prior years, and for other purposes, and asking a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, and accede to the request of the House of Representatives for a conference thereon.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. COCKRELL, Mr. BRICE, and Mr. HALE were appointed.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

Mr. DOLPH. I move that the request of the House of Representatives for the return of the conference report on the river and harbor bill be granted.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. SHERMAN presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Ohio, remonstrating against the support of the Government in maintaining the present system of sectarian Indian education, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. MARTIN presented a petition of sundry citizens of Miami, Ind. T., praying for the passage of the bill providing for the organization of the town of Miami, in the Indian Territory; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

He also presented memorials of J. W. Hile and sundry other citizens of Kansas City; of W. P. White and sundry other citizens of Kansas City; of H. L. Wykoff and sundry other citizens of Axtelle; of A. J. Irwin and sundry other citizens of Hutchinson; of M. O. Webb and sundry other citizens of Ossawatomie; and of Izri Hall and sundry other citizens of Larned, all in the State of Kansas, remonstrating against the support of the Government in maintaining the present system of sectarian Indian education, etc.; which were referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. DOLPH presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Portland, Oregon, remonstrating against the support of the Government in maintaining the present system of sectarian Indian education, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. PERKINS presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Alameda, Cal., remonstrating against the support of the Government in maintaining the present system of sectarian Indian education, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. PATTON presented the memorial of Rev. J. A. Johnston and 239 other citizens of Kalamazoo, Mich., remonstrating against the support of the Government in maintaining the present system of sectarian Indian education, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. KYLE presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Huron, S. Dak., remonstrating against the support of the Government in maintaining the present system of sectarian Indian education, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. CULLOM presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Chicago, Ill., and a memorial of sundry citizens of Sterling, Ill., remonstrating against the support of the Government in maintaining the present system of sectarian Indian education, etc.; which were referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. TELLER presented sundry memorials of citizens of Denver, Colo., remonstrating against the support of the Government in maintaining the present system of sectarian Indian education, etc.; which were referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. PASCO, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1470) to relieve George L. Sullivan from the charge of desertion, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was agreed to, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. BERRY, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4952) to amend section 2455 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. ROACH, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2270) to enable the Secretary of the Interior to pay JOHN T. HEARD for professional services rendered the "Old Settlers," or Western Cherokee Indians, out of the funds of said Indians, reported it without amendment.

Mr. MARTIN, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4242) directing the Secretary of the Interior to make certain investigations concerning consolidations of land districts in California, and for other purposes, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was agreed to, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. PEFFER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2032) to grant a pension to Ida C. Martin, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. RANSOM, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6577) to authorize the construction of a wagon and foot bridge across the Chattahoochee River at or near the town of Columbia, Ala., reported it without amendment.

THANKFUL ROBBINS.

Mr. GALLINGER. I am directed by the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4780) to pension Thankful Robbins, to report it without amendment and I ask for its immediate consideration. It will take but a moment.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Thankful Robbins, and to pay her a pension of $12 per month, as the foster mother of George E. Squires, late private Company C, One hundred and twelfth New York Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REPEAL OF FEDERAL ELECTION LAWS.

Mr. CAMDEN, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to whom was referred the following resolution, submitted by Mr. CHANDLER March 20, 1894, reported it without amendment, and it was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to:

Resolved, That the sum of $52.92, being the expense of printing 2,000 extra copies of Senate Report No. 113, part 2, be paid from the appropriation for the contingent expenses of the Senate.

MINERAL LANDS IN MONTANA AND IDAHO.

Mr. POWER. From the Committee on Public Lands, I present two letters from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated August 29, 1893, and July 30, 1894, respectively, and also a letter from the Secretary of the Interior to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated July 9, 1894, in reference to House bill 3436, to provide for the examination and classification of certain mineral lands in the States of Montana and Idaho, which I ask to have printed.

Mr. DOLPH. And also the letter of the Secretary of the Interior transmitting the report.

Mr. POWER. Certainly. Let that be printed also.

Mr. BERRY. Let the bill also be printed with the papers.

Mr. POWER. Very well.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

JOSEPH G. UTTER.

Mr. DAVIS. I should like to have the bill for the relief of Joseph G. Utter laid before the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a bill returned from the House of Representatives by request of the Senate.

The SECRETARY. A bill (S. 1343) to remove the charge of desertion standing against the name of Joseph G. Utter.

Mr. DAVIS. I ask for action on the motion entered by me to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed.

The motion to reconsider was agreed to.

Mr. DAVIS. I move to indefinitely postpone the bill, a similar bill having passed both Houses.

The motion was agreed to.

DEALING IN OPTIONS AND FUTURES.

Mr. DAVIS. I desire to call attention to Senate bill 2277, in respect to options, which I introduced on Friday. The bill I introduced had indorsed upon it a notation that it should lie upon the table. Some confusion arose as to the disposition to be made of the bill, I having had to leave the Chamber. I move that the bill be read a second time and that it lie on the table.

The bill (S. 2277) defining options and futures and imposing special taxes on dealers therein, and for other purposes, was read the second time by its title, and ordered to lie on the table.

DISTRICT REAL ESTATE ASSESSMENT.

Mr. HUNTON. I ask unanimous consent to call up the bill (H. R. 6415) to provide an immediate revision and equalization of real-estate values in the District of Columbia; also, to provide an assessment of real estate in said District in the year 1896, and every third year thereafter, and for other purposes.

Mr. SHERMAN. I venture to suggest to the Senator from Virginia whether it would not be better to take up the Calendar under the eighth rule and go on with it regularly and not waste time by calling up one bill after another, which gives an unfair advantage.

Mr. HUNTON. I have no objection to that course.

Mr. SHERMAN. I hope that we shall proceed with the Calendar as soon as the morning business is concluded.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Bills and joint resolutions are in order.

Mr. HUNTON. I desire to state to the Senator from Ohio that the bill I propose to call up is an important matter and requires speedy action, because the Commissioners are about arranging for an assessment of the valuation of land upon which taxation is based,

Mr. SHERMAN. I will interpose no objection to this bill.

Mr. HUNTON. Then I ask unanimous consent that it be put on its passage.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Virginia for the immediate consideration of the bill indicated by him?

Mr. PALMER. I desire to introduce a joint resolution.

Mr. SHERMAN. I give notice that I shall insist upon taking up the Calendar when the bill called up by the Senator from Virginia is concluded.

Mr. BATE and Mr. ALLEN addressed the Chair.

Mr. HUNTON. Without yielding the floor, I give way to any gentleman who desires to present morning business.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. BATE introduced a bill (S. 2283) for the relief of Slater and William Cowart, of Hamilton County, Tenn.; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. ALLEN introduced a bill (S. 2284) to grant a pension to Mrs. Lucinda Harrington; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PALMER introduced a joint resolution (S. R. 100) to procure a marble bust of the late Gen. Joseph Holt; which was read twice by its title.

Mr. PALMER. I ask that the joint resolution may lie on the table temporarily, to be called up at some future time with the view of submitting some remarks to the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The joint resolution will lie on the table for the present.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

On motion of Mr. COCKRELL, it was Ordered, That Adolph Liebschutz be permitted to withdraw from the files of the Senate, on leaving copies of the same with the Secretary, the papers relating to Senate resolution No. 45, Fifty-third Congress, "granting a medal to Byt. First Lieut. A. Liebschutz."

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Mr. COKE. I ask that the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads be discharged from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 3334) authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to the heirs or legal representatives of C. P. Gooch certain money due him for carrying the mail, and that it be referred to the Committee on Claims. It was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads by mistake. I make that motion.

The motion was agreed to.

PRINCIPLES OF TARIFF TAXATION.

Mr. MILLS submitted the following resolution; which was read:

Resolved, That in the revision of the existing system of national taxation the following principles should be observed:

First. That all taxes are burdens upon the taxpayer, and can only be rightfully imposed to raise revenue to support the Government.

Second. When taxes are imposed upon imported goods the rates should be so low as not materially to restrict the importation of the articles upon which the taxes are imposed.

Third. In selecting the articles to be taxed, only those ready for consumption should be chosen, and all articles imported for manufacture or remanufacture should be exempt from duty.

Mr. MILLS. I ask that the resolution may lie on the table for the present. I shall call it up in a few days and submit some remarks on it.

Mr. BATE. Let it be printed.

Mr. MILLS. Yes; let it be printed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will lie on the table, and be printed.

REPORT ON DISTRICT SEWERAGE.

Mr. PROCTOR submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That there be printed for the use of the Senate 500 copies of Senate Report No. 623 (without the appendix) on Senate bill No. 2066, to provide for continuing the system of trunk sewers in the District of Columbia, to provide for sewage disposal, to lay out highways, and for other purposes.

WALTER S. M'LEOD.

Mr. WASHBURN. I move to reconsider the vote by which the title of the bill (H. R. 6384) for the relief of Walter S. McLeod was amended on Saturday.

The motion to reconsider was agreed to.

Mr. WASHBURN. The title of the bill should remain as it came from the House, and I ask the Senate to disagree to the amendment by which the title was made to read: "A bill for the relief of the estate of Walter S. McLeod."

The amendment was rejected.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on the 3d instant approved and signed the act (S. 1999) for the relief of Charles T. Russell.

The message also announced that the President of the United States had on the 4th instant approved and signed the following acts:

An act (S. 320) authorizing the Purcell Bridge and Transfer Company to construct and maintain a bridge over the South Canadian River, at or within 1 mile of the town of Lexington, county of Cleveland, Territory of Oklahoma;

An act (S. 822) granting a pension to Frances Corse, widow of Gen. John M. Corse; and

An act (S. 1377) for the relief of William Hendershott, of Butteville, Oregon.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 7680) to authorize purchasers of the property and franchises of the Choctaw Coal and Railway Company to organize a corporation and to confer upon the same all the powers, privileges, and franchises vested in that company, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

ST. LOUIS RIVER BRIDGE.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the bill (S. 2151) to amend an act to authorize the construction of a steel bridge over the St. Louis River, between the States of Wisconsin and Minnesota, approved April 24, 1894, which had been returned from the House of Representatives at the request of the Senate.

Mr. WASHBURN. I move to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed.

The motion to reconsider was agreed to.

Mr. WASHBURN. I move that the bill be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was agreed to.

PROPOSED ISSUE OF TREASURY NOTES.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution coming over from a previous day, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. ALLEN on the 3d instant, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Finance be, and the same is hereby, discharged from the further consideration of the bill (S. 2264) for the relief of the several States of the Union, and for other purposes, and that said bill be placed on the Calendar for present consideration by the Senate.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, on the 30th day of July I introduced a bill (S. 2264) for the relief of the several States of the Union, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Finance. On the 3d instant I introduced a resolution to discharge the Committee on Finance from the further consideration of that bill——

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, the resolution of the Senator from Nebraska and the remarks he is making relate to a bill which is before the Committee on Finance, all of the members of which, with the exception of myself, are absent from the Senate on public duty, as is known by all Senators. I hope, therefore, without displacing the resolution, that it will be continued until some other members of the committee shall be here. As I have stated, I am the only member of the committee present, and I have no knowledge about the matter to which the resolution refers.

Mr. ALLEN. The course suggested by the Senator from Ohio is satisfactory to me.

Mr. SHERMAN. I have no objection to the resolution coming up to-morrow, when the members of the committee are present.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, the resolution will be passed over, retaining its place.

ALLEYS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. FAULKNER. I ask the Senate to take up for consideration the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 971) to open, widen, and extend alleys in the District of Columbia, simply with a view to asking the Senate to nonconcur in the amendment of the House, and having a committee of conference appointed.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the amendment of the House of Representatives.

Mr. FAULKNER. I move that the Senate nonconcur in the amendment of the House of Representatives, and ask for a conference with the House on the bill and amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. FAULKNER, Mr. MARTIN, and Mr. MCMILLAN were appointed.

DISTRICT REAL ESTATE ASSESSMENT.

Mr. HUNTON. I now ask that House bill 6415 be taken up.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The title of the bill will be stated.

The SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 6415) to provide an immediate revision and equalization of real estate values in the District of Columbia; also to provide an assessment of real estate in said District in the year 1896 and every third year thereafter, and for other purposes.

Mr. CHANDLER. I move to proceed to the consideration of Order of Business 622, being the resolution in relation to the Dominion Coal Company.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair has recognized the Senator from Virginia [Mr. HUNTON].

Mr. CHANDLER. I desire to supersede the bill which the Senator from Virginia has asked to have taken up by moving to proceed to the consideration of Order of Business 622.

Mr. HUNTON. I desire to state that the bill the Senate was about to proceed with is a bill to equalize the values of real estate in the District of Columbia. It is a very important bill, and it is very important that the Senate should at once pass it, so that the Commissioners of the District can enter upon the reassessment of real-estate values in the District of Columbia.

Mr. CHANDLER. The resolution I desire to have considered——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New Hampshire object to the request for unanimous consent made by the Senator from Virginia?

Mr. CHANDLER. I did not object, but I moved to proceed to the consideration of a resolution on the Calendar, if that is in order.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I rise to a question of order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Oregon will state his question of order.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I submit that the Senator from New Hampshire can not make the motion to take up another subject pending the motion made by the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. CHANDLER. I supposed that it was in order to move to proceed to the consideration of a subject on the Calendar at any time.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair desires to state, in answer to the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL], that the Senator from Virginia [Mr. HUNTON] has not made a motion. The Senator from Virginia has asked unanimous consent to proceed to the consideration of the bill indicated by him.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I understood the Senator had made a motion to proceed to the consideration of a certain bill.

Mr. CHANDLER. Pending the consideration of that, I move to proceed to the consideration of Order of Business 622 upon the Calendar.

Mr. HUNTON. I submit, after unanimous consent has been given for the consideration of House bill 6415, it is not in order to supersede that unanimous consent with the transaction of other business.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state that unanimous consent has not been given. The Chair announced that the Senator from Virginia asked unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill indicated, and the title of the bill was read for information. The Senator from New Hampshire, while not formally objecting, as the Chair understands, interposes a motion.

Mr. CHANDLER. That is the state of the case, Mr. President.

Mr. HUNTON. What is the Senator's motion?

Mr. CHANDLER. To proceed to the consideration of Order of Business 622, being a resolution for the investigation of the Dominion Coal Company, Limited.

Mr. HUNTON. I hope the Senate will proceed with the bill I have indicated.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New Hampshire object to the request of the Senator from Virginia?

Mr. CHANDLER. I do not; but when the bill is before the Senate I shall move to proceed to the consideration of the resolution to which I have referred.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If there be no objection, the bill referred to by the Senator from Virginia is before the Senate.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. HUNTON. I ask that the amendments be agreed to which have been reported by the Committee on the District of Columbia. I beg leave to state for the information of the Senate that the bill has very carefully considered by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR] and myself, in conjunction with the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, and we have agreed upon the amendments which are incorporated in the printed bill. I ask that the amendments may be acted upon as they are reached in the reading of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, it will be so ordered.

The Secretary proceeded to read the bill.

The first amendment reported by the Committee on the District of Columbia was, in section 2, line 6, before the word "years," to strike out "three," and insert "four;" and in line 8, after the word "thousand," to strike out "five hundred;" so as to read:

SEC. 2. That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia shall appoint three discreet persons, who shall have been bona fide residents of the District of Columbia for the period of at least five years, and conversant with real estate values therein, as a permanent board of assistant assessors, who shall hold office for a term of four years, unless sooner removed by said Commissioners for cause satisfactory to them, and shall each receive a salary of $3,000 annually, and the assessor of the District of Columbia shall hereafter receive a salary of $3,500 per annum.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, line 41, before the word "existing," to strike out "then;" so as to make the proviso read:

Provided, That the collection of taxes on real property and improvements thereon which will become due and payable in the month of November, 1894, be, and the same is hereby, suspended until the month of May, in the year 1895, at which time said taxes shall be due and payable, and the collection thereof shall be enforced in all respects as provided under existing law for the collection of taxes on real property and improvements thereon, for the second half of the tax year ending June 30, 1895.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, line 44, after the date "1895," to insert the following proviso:

Provided further, That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to advance to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary from time to time to meet their requisitions for the general expenses of the government of said District for the fiscal year 1895, and to reimburse the Treasury for the one-half of said advances payable by said District out of the taxes collected, as herein provided for, in the month of May, 1895.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 5, line 5, before the word "assessors," to insert "assistant;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 5. That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are hereby authorized and directed to make such rules and regulations touching the manner in which the real property shall be described in the assessments returned by the assistant assessors as they may deem best.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 6, line 1, after the word "shall," to strike out "acting collectively in all cases;" in line 9, after the word "lot," to strike out "and shall perform such," and insert "and said assistant assessors shall also perform such;" and in line 11, after the word "duties," to strike out

"not inconsistent with the proper discharge of the duties specially imposed by this act;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 6. That said board of assistant assessors shall, from actual view and from the best sources of information in its reach, determine the value of each separate tract or lot of real property in the District of Columbia in lawful money, and shall separately estimate the value of all improvements on any tract or lot, and shall note the same in the proper field book, which shall be carried out as part of the value of such tract or lot, and shall also return the dimensions of each tract or lot, and said assistant assessors shall also perform such other official duties as may be required of them by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 8, line 1, after the word "any," to strike out "one of said board of assistant assessors" and insert "person;" and in line 8, after the word "court," to insert "for each offense;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 8. That any person who shall refuse or knowingly neglect to perform any duty enjoined on him by law, or who shall consent to or connive at any evasion of the provisions of this act shall, on conviction thereof, be liable to removal from office and to a fine not exceeding $500, or imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both, in the discretion of the court, for each offense.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HUNTON. I beg leave to call the attention of the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR] to what I am about to say. In line 7, of section 9, I think the words "third year thereafter" ought to be "fourth year thereafter." The assessment is to be made every fourth year. I move to strike out the word "third" before the word "year" and insert "fourth."

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment reported by the Committee on the District of Columbia was, in section 9, line 26, after the word "thereof," to strike out:

It being the intent of this provision to require the assessment of all property to be based on the true value of the property—such value as the said property would sell for on the terms usual in sales of real property in the District of Columbia.

Mr. SHERMAN. I desire to ask the Senator from Virginia whether any other rule has been adopted in place of the matter proposed to be stricken out?

Mr. HUNTON. No, sir. We thought it best, upon consultation with the Commissioners, that the board should determine upon the value of property.

Mr. SHERMAN. I am satisfied with what is stated by the Senator from Virginia.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the Committee on the District of Columbia.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on the District of Columbia was, in section 10, line 5, after the word "complaints," to strike out "of overassessments" and insert "as to valuations;" and in line 9, after the the word "provided," to insert "and the Commissioners shall fix the rate of tax to be collected thereon, not exceeding the rate fixed by present law;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 10. That the valuation of the real property made and equalized as aforesaid shall be completed as nearly as practicable on the first Monday of June, 1896, and of every third year thereafter, after which date no other or further complaints as to valuations shall be received, and when approved by the Commissioners shall constitute the basis of taxation for the next succeeding period of three years and until another valuation is made according to law, except as hereinafter provided, and the Commissioners shall fix the rate of tax to be collected thereon, not exceeding the rate fixed by present law.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 14, line 1, before the word "salaries," to insert "different in the;" and in line 2, before the word "board," to insert "assessors and the;" so as to read:

SEC. 14. That a sum sufficient to pay the difference in the salaries of the assessors and the board of assistant assessors and the clerk herein provided for up to and including the year ending June 30, 1895, is hereby appropriated, etc.

Mr. HUNTON. In line 2, section 14, for the purpose of making it good grammar, I move to amend the committee amendment by striking out the word "salaries" and inserting the word "salary;" and in the same line by striking out the word "assessors" and inserting the word "assessor."

The SECRETARY. In section 14, line 2, strike out "salaries" and insert "salary;" and in the same line strike out "assessors" and insert "assessor;" so as to read:

That a sum sufficient to pay the difference in the salary of the assessor and the board of assistant assessors, etc.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on the District of Columbia was, in section 15, line 1, before the word "assessors," to insert "assistant;" so as to make it read:

SEC. 15. That said board of assistant assessors shall hereafter constitute the excise board of the District of Columbia, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was concluded.

Mr. HUNTON. In line 7, section 9, I made a mistake in offering an amendment to strike out the word "third" and insert the word "fourth." The theory of the bill is to have an assessment every three years by assistant assessors appointed for four years. Therefore the word "third," in line 7, is correct. I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was adopted, and that the original text of the bill be restored.

The motion was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HUNTON. I move that the Senate request a conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. HUNTON, Mr. FAULKNER, and Mr. PROCTOR were appointed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLES, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6518) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes.

DOMINION COAL COMPANY OF NOVA SCOTIA.

Mr. CHANDLER. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the resolution proposing an investigation into the facts connected with the organization and history of the Dominion Coal Company, Limited, of Nova Scotia.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. CHANDLER on the 1st instant, as modified by him August 2, as follows:

Resolved, That a committee of five Senators be appointed to inquire into the facts connected with the organization and history of the Dominion Coal Company, Limited, of Nova Scotia, for the purpose of ascertaining whether such company was formed or is being conducted by reason of any assurances that the tariff duty on coal shall be repealed by Congress; and, if so, to ascertain who gave such assurances; and whether or not any officer of the Government or any member of Congress is or was interested in said company; and what action, if any, has been taken by any person in fulfillment of such assurances.

Mr. MILLS. I offer a substitute for the resolution. Has the resolution been taken up?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from New Hampshire that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the resolution.

Mr. HILL. I suggest to the Senator from New Hampshire whether the resolution might not go over until to-morrow?

Mr. CHANDLER. I will say to the Senator from New York that he has interrupted the reading of the substitute of the Senator from Texas. If the substitute can be offered and printed I shall make no objection to the discussion of the resolution and the substitute going over until to-morrow.

Mr. MILLS. I shall wait until the resolution is taken up, and then offer the substitute.

Mr. CHANDLER. Then I ask for a vote on my motion.

Mr. HILL. With that understanding I shall not object.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from New Hampshire that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the resolution.

The motion was agreed to.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution is before the Senate.

Mr. MILLS. I offer the substitute which I send to the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The substitute proposed by the Senator from Texas will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved, That the special committee appointed to investigate the charges of bribery against Senators be instructed to inquire into the facts connected with the organization and history of the Dominion Coal Company, Limited, of Nova Scotia, for the purpose of determining whether such company was formed or is being conducted by reason of any assurances that the tariff duty on coal shall be repealed by Congress, and, if so, to ascertain who gave such assurances, and whether or not any officer of the Government or any member of Congress is or was interested in said company, and what action, if any, has been taken by any person in fulfillment of said assurances. And said committee is also directed to investigate and report to the Senate whether or not any officer of the Government or any member of Congress is or was interested in any corporation or company which is engaged in mining coal in any of the States or Territories of the United States or in any railroad company which is engaged in transporting coal which would come into competition with Nova Scotia or Dominion coal in any of the markets of the United States, and whether influence has been used by any of said coal or railroad companies to maintain a tariff tax on coal for their benefit; and also to report to the Senate whether the removal of the duty on coal would reduce its price to consumers of coal in any part of the United States, and, if so, what part of the United States would be so benefited.

Mr. HILL. I understood the other day that the Senator from New Hampshire modified his resolution so as to have a special committee, rather than the sugar committee, if I may use that expression.

Mr. CHANDLER. That is true. The substitute of the Senator from Texas, however, reverts to the special committee now in existence. Does the Senator from Texas prefer the old committee or a new committee?

Mr. MILLS. I thought it was better to have inquiry made by the old committee. They have been engaged in investigations, and have had some experience in this business. I have not a doubt that the result of their investigation in this case would be the same as the result of their investigation in the sugar matter.

Mr. CHANDLER. May I ask the Senator from Texas what that result is, as he understands it?

Mr. MILLS. They have not discovered anything.

Mr. CHANDLER. Is that the reason why the Senator prefers to select that committee?

Mr. MILLS. No; I mean that I think no committee, special or otherwise, will accomplish anything in investigating the private affairs of citizens of the United States.

Mr. CHANDLER. Then we had better not appoint the committee. But if we are going to appoint a committee, it seems to me we ought not in advance to put a stigma upon the committee we are to appoint. Therefore I should prefer a special committee, if it is agreeable to the Senator from Texas. However, I wish to accommodate him about all these matters so far as I can.

Mr. MILLS. I think the committee which we have is a very fair and a very able committee and that it would do justice to all sides of this question. I know it would be very flattering to the Senator from New Hampshire to be on the committee, as he would be by parliamentary law.

Mr. CHANDLER. I will waive, in behalf of the Senator from Texas, all my rights in that respect.

Mr. MILLS. No; I do not want to go upon any of these smelling committees. I have a great aversion to that sort of business in Congress, and especially when the investigations are beyond the jurisdiction of either branch of Congress, as they are, and as the courts of the country have held that they are. Such a committee, under the authority of the resolution of the Senator from New Hampshire or the one I have offered as a substitute for it, would not have the power to compel a single witness in this country to answer a single question.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the substitute proposed by the Senator from Texas [Mr. MILLS].

Mr. MILLS. I understand it is desired that the resolution shall go over until to-morrow, and I have no objection to that course. I like to accommodate Senators. I will withdraw my objection to the special committee if the Senator from New Hampshire or any other Senator prefers that committee: I want to accommodate the Senators who wish to have this matter deferred until to-morrow.

Mr. CHANDLER. Then I understand the Senator to modify his amendment so as to provide for a special committee of five.

Mr. MILLS. I do.

Mr. CHANDLER. I have not desired that the resolution shall go over until to-morrow. I think it would be wise to act upon it at this time and have the subject disposed of.

Mr. MILLS. I ask the Senator from New York if he desires to have the resolution to go over until to-morrow?

Mr. HILL. I think we might as well dispose of it now.

Mr. MILLS. Then I have no objection and I am willing to take a vote on the resolution. I do not care further to discuss the question. I am willing to abide by the decision of the Senate on the adoption of the substitute. I desire the yeas and nays on its adoption.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is the Senate ready for the question on the substitute offered by the Senator from Texas, as modified?

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, I desire to say a word upon this subject, as explanatory of the vote I intend to give.

I am opposed to the adoption of resolution and substitute. I think that it proposes a useless expenditure of time.

Mr. GRAY. And money.

Mr. WHITE. And, as a Senator has suggested, and money. If there was any possible practical result to be reached, something that might inure to the advantage of any part of the country, I would be in favor of going on with the investigation. But there is no charge before the Senate susceptible of investigation by any respectable organized body on the face of the earth. There is no accusation which anyone is called upon to meet.

There is nothing, as the Senator from Texas has well said, which gives this body any jurisdiction in the premises. With contempt a witness, or a supposed witness, might treat any committee appointed by this body under this resolution. He would have a right to ignore the process of the committee, and the Senate would not dare to incarcerate him, because the law of the land declares that the Senate has not the power.

This is to be a committee to be appointed for the purpose of furnishing texts for amusing speeches. No one listened with more pleasure to the remarks of the Senator from New Hampshire than I did, because those remarks were exceedingly funny. He not only amused himself, but he amused us all. Still no one seriously thinks that the Senator from New Hampshire has any idea that this investigation will result in bringing any material proposition to the attention of the American people. That the Senate should appoint committees and direct them to investigate, knowing in advance that nothing can result, seems to me to be worse than a waste of time.

For these reasons I shall oppose the passage of the resolution. I would gladly vote for any proposition which would lead to placing before the Senate and the country any matter important to the decision of a question pending here; but I will not vote for the appointment of a committee to consume time uselessly. It appears to me that there are matters of grave importance demanding the immediate and sole attention of this body. Hence I shall vote against the substitute and against the original resolution.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President, I am very happy to be able to amuse the Senator from California. He has been in a chronic state of being amused all winter. He has been very much amused at the condition in which his party finds itself upon the tariff question, and now when the proposition is to investigate the Dominion Coal Company, which has been formed upon the basis that the existing duty on coal shall be removed, and that investigation is to be made for the purpose of removing scandal which has been circulating in this country for the last three months, or else for the purpose of finding out what this company has been doing to influence the legislation of Congress, the Senator from California finds nothing in it except amusement.

Mr. President, there is one serious feature in the remarks of the Senator from California. He has taken occasion to advertise to the world that no witness need open his head before this committee if the investigation takes place. The Senator has seen fit to proclaim to those witnesses who may tell us about this coal company, why it was organized, how it proposes to influence Congress—he has undertaken to tell Mr. Dimock, a director in this company, who is in this city to-day, possibly with his pockets filled with certificates in this watered stock, that he is not obliged to say a single word to this committee when it is organized. I think, Mr. President, that that is something serious for the Senator from California to do. It is getting to be very much the fashion in the Senate whenever an investigation is to be made which may prove something that ought to be proved in the public interest, for Senators to get up here and say there is no use in the investigation, because no witness is obliged to testify.

Mr. President, I think when an organization of this kind is formed, with thirteen and a half million dollars of watered stock, and when there is so much scandal about the country as there is in connection with it, the Congress of the United States can afford to investigate and find out whether this town is full of certificates, whether they surround the Senators when they go to their hotels and their lodgings, whether the Senator from New York or the Senator from California may not be in danger of being approached unduly in connection with this subject, whether they should be compelled to rely upon their own virtue alone to resist temptation, and whether the Senate should not surround them by a report upon an investigation of facts so that their youthful innocence in the Senate and in the city may be properly protected and guarded.

It seems to me that this is not a matter of amusement simply. I hope to convince the Senator from California that I am in earnest about it.

Mr. MILLS. May I ask the Senator from New Hampshire, as he is very anxious to have a thorough, fair, and full investigation of both sides of this question, if he will not accept my substitute, which embraces every word of the Senator's own resolution?

Mr. CHANDLER. I shall vote for the Senator's substitute. The difference is simply this: The coal company is organized upon the basis and condition in its prospectus that the duty upon coal is to be removed. I do not suppose the Senator can produce here the prospectus of any domestic coal company or of any railroad company transporting coal which contains a condition that the company is not to be organized and to do business unless it can succeed in maintaining the duty upon coal. If the Senator can produce any such prospectus the cases will be parallel; but if there are undue influences exerted upon that side of the question, I propose to vote for the amendment of the Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAY. I ask the Senator from New Hampshire what difference he perceives in morality, if it be a question of morality, between a company organized upon the condition, hope, or expectation that a tariff duty shall be taken off and one organized upon the hope, condition, or expectation that a tariff duty shall be put on?

Mr. CHANDLER. None whatever, I will say.

Mr. GRAY. I ask the Senator if he never heard in the past three or four years of any mills, factories, or other concerns being organized for the purpose of reaping the benefit of the so-called McKinley law—tin-plate mills, for instance?

Mr. CHANDLER. I will say to the Senator, first, I know of no difference whatever; and that if any company is organized the fundamental condition of which is that it shall have $13,000,000 of watered stock, and that a certain duty on the article to be produced by the company shall either have a duty imposed upon it or a duty taken off from it, I would have that company investigated by Congress to find out how it proposes to influence legislation in the Halls of Congress.

Mr. GRAY. It does not make any difference, so far as the tariff bill is concerned, what the methods of the corporation may be as to watered stock, but I merely wanted to know whether the Senator sees any difference, and the Senator says he sees none——

Mr. CHANDLER. None whatever.

Mr. GRAY. Between a corporation organized for the purpose of carrying on business to be benefited by exemption from taxation and a company organized by reason of the fact that taxation is to be placed upon the people of the United States for the benefit of that particular so-called industry. The Senator agrees that there is none. Now, I do not see any difference, nor do I see that it makes any particular difference to the people of the United States how the corporations or individuals composing such corporations are organized. We are interested, however, in what is done under the impulse and stimulus of private greed, if you please, when legislation gives an opportunity to gratify it. If a high tariff bill operates upon those ordinary motives of human nature, I suppose when a low tariff goes into operation somewhere for the first time it may operate in the same way. I see no particular immorality in that on either side of the question. I do object, however, to tariff taxes being laid which shall give an opportunity to anybody to tax the whole people of the country for his private benefit.

Mr. CHANDLER. Then I welcome the Senator from Delaware in aid of the resolution, which it appears now both the Senator from Texas and myself seek to have passed.

Mr. GRAY. No; I think that the motives of those who pass tariff bills for the sake of benefiting private interests and giving them the power to use the great tax-levying power of the United States for private benefit had better be investigated rather than the motives of people who very naturally avail themselves of the advantages which legislators give them. That is all I can say.

Mr. CHANDLER. I will simply restate the case in this way: Whenever a corporation is organized with $13,500,000 of watered stock, and the condition expressed in the prospectus of the company is that there is to be a tariff duty either imposed or taken off, that company ought to be investigated by Congress.

Mr. DOLPH. Mr. President, I shall probably vote for the resolution of the Senator from New Hampshire or the substitute of the Senator from Texas, because I do not want to put myself in the attitude of opposing an investigation. But I should like to ask the Senator from New Hampshire and the Senator from Texas what is the use of continuing this farce of investigation by the Senate? What is the use of ordering investigations when the Senate has not backbone enough to exercise the authority which every tribunal authorized to investigate a question of fact has, from a police court up to the highest legislative body or judicial tribunal in the land?

We have just had a report made from the special committee which have been investigating the sugar trust. They have reported to the Senate that a number of witnesses—I do not know the number—have refused to answer, and that they have refused to answer material questions. The majority of the committee simply propose to turn them over to the district attorney of this District, and but one or two members of the committee propose that the Senate shall exercise any authority to compel them to answer. It is not alone a question concerning correspondents of newspapers; it is a question that affects brokers, the officers of the sugar trust, and others who refused to testify. What reliance can be placed upon the report of a committee of this body that allows witnesses to refuse to answer pertinent questions and to keep from the Senate and the public information which they are supposed to possess in regard to the facts to be investigated?

I see by the newspapers (I have not read the report) it is stated that everybody is exonerated; that nobody has been improperly influenced; that the sugar trust has exercised no improper influences upon anybody; but how does that committee know, when half the witnesses before them refused to testify, when the witnesses who were supposed to know more about the case than others are the very ones who refused to testify, and there has been no attempt to compel them to testify or to punish them for contempt? I say the whole proceeding is a farce; and e very investigation that is ordered by the Senate must be a farce just so long as we refuse to compel witnesses to testify. You can not get at the facts unless you can get the testimony. You can not get at the facts if you will not compel witnesses to testify before your committees. Such an investigation must necessarily be partial and unsatisfactory, and the committee ought not to come into the Senate or before the public on a report made upon such testimony and under such disadvantages.

Mr. FAULKNER. Mr. President, I do not know how I should have voted on the original resolution proposed by the Senator from New Hampshire, but I feel under an absolute obligation to support the substitute, because it seems to imply (and I do not think it should have been offered unless there was some reason actuating and controlling the Senator from Texas in offering the latter clause) that some improper influence has been exercised by Senators who are in favor of dutiable coal, owing to private interests in that subject-matter.

Having personally advocated on the floor of the Senate and at all times a reasonable revenue duty upon coal, if there is any doubt or suspicion in the mind of any Senator or anyone else that I was influenced in my public action by reason of any private interest, I feel that that subject should be investigated. Fortunately or unfortunately for me, I do not know which, I do not own a foot of coal lands in the State of West Virginia or any other State, nor do I own a cent's worth of stock in any transportation company. Therefore, I can look at this matter, I suppose, in a very impartial manner; but, under the circumstances, I feel that it is my duty to vote for the substitute.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. President, I shall not vote for the original resolution, nor shall I vote for the substitute. I regard this proceeding and the conduct of the Senate in aspersing itself as presenting one of the most humiliating pictures I have ever witnessed. In another point of view I regard it as unfortunate. We are in the habit of speaking of this as one of the most distinguished bodies on earth. It is said that the English Parliament is a court; and yet we have condescended to apply to a court to enable us to get testimony to use in an investigation that we thought it proper to order.

The Senate has apparently parted with one of these most valuable powers. We have appealed to the courts of law. We have abdicated the right which pertains to every court to compel witnesses to testify when they were required to do so, and we have quietly asked of the courts punishment of recalcitrant witnesses. The whole thing to my mind is something worse than a farce, as the Senator from Oregon characterized it.

Now, it is proposed to begin another investigation. We are about starting again in pursuit of a shadow. The Senator from New Hampshire, who proposes to institute this investigation, has not vouched for a single fact upon his responsibility as a Senator. The loose scandals which are published in the newspapers or are repeated by those who are fond of whispers are brought here, and we are gravely asked to institute an investigation. Somebody has formed a corporation in Canada, and some American citizens are interested in that corporation. It is said that they have possibly exerted themselves either to remove the duty or to maintain the duty on coal and iron ore, as if there have not been a hundred thousand citizens who are employing all the influence they have to effect one or the other of those ends.

Mr. President, I appeal to Senators to spare the Senate this further humiliation. Let us not render ourselves more ridiculous than we are now regarded in the popular estimation. We are charged with idling away our time and the public time. We are charged with being regardless of the present condition of the country. Yet we are pursuing these mere shadows. I suggest that no term in the language is sufficient to describe the infinite littleness of the stories we are gravely advised to put our committee in pursuit of. It is proposed to start somebody out to hunt that which has no existence possibly, or which if it was found to exist would amount to nothing when we discovered it. If any Senator here thinks he needs investigation I am willing to indulge him. If, as intimated by the Senator from New Hampshire, any of us need a guard I am entirely willing that an application shall be made for guards to protect us from the improper solicitation of the wicked and seductive men——

Mr. MILLS. Will the Senator from Illinois pardon me a moment?

Mr. PALMER. I will.

Mr. MILLS. I fully and thoroughly concur in all the Senator from Illinois says, and the other day when this question came up I voted against the resolution of the Senator from New Hampshire for the reasons the Senator has given to-day. But the Senate determined that there should be an investigation, a one-sided investigation, and all I ask is that if the Senate intends to embark in this business it shall investigate both sides of the question.

Mr. PALMER. The Senator from Texas is, I think, entirely reasonable and logical. If we are to pursue these shadows in one direction why not pursue them in another? But let us get rid of the whole thing. We are simply aspersing ourselves and disgracing ourselves in leaving it to be inferred that there are some Senators here who are corrupt. If I believed that there was a Senator here who is corrupt I would vote for the investigation.

Mr. President, I have said all that I desire to say. I deprecate this waste of the public time. I deprecate this further humiliation of the Senate. I believe that it ought to be ended now.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, I wish to briefly respond to the Senator from New Hampshire, who objects to me because he says that I have been in chronic and incessant good humor. His proximity accounts for that condition. I do not seek any controversy with him. I remember that some time ago it was said by one of poetical impulses, whose language I apply to my friend, that—

Men fear him,
And even angels don't aspire to go too near him.

I am not especially anxious to seek for the protection offered by the distinguished Senator. My friend says that being youthful (which I will always admit, now and hereafter) I need, perhaps, the advantage of some protection. If I ever feel in such necessity I shall dislike to seek refuge with my friend from New Hampshire. Certainly he will never be able to woo me to his side for that purpose. However innocent I may be, I will not commit that error.

Now, to the merits of this matter: The resolution offered by the Senator I said presents nothing material. He objects to my remarks because he says I have thus served notice upon sundry witnesses that they need not testify. Well, let us see what his resolution is:

That a committee of five Senators be appointed to inquire into the facts connected with the organization and history of the Dominion Coal Company, Limited, of Nova Scotia—

That would be a very interesting inquiry, I have no doubt; but now the object is outlined—for the purpose of ascertaining whether such company was formed or is being conducted by reason of any assurances that the tariff duty on coal shall be repealed by Congress.

What an investigation! To inquire whether a corporation has been constituted because of assurances that Congress will legislate in a certain definite way about a particular thing! Does the Senator imagine that that is a proper subject for investigation here—a material inquiry upon which we can afford to expend time?

Conducted by reason of any assurances that the tariff duty on coal shall be repealed by Congress, and if so, to ascertain who gave such assurances.

That is, Mr. President, the Senator from New Hampshire wishes a committee of five Senators to summon witnesses and ascertain whether it was Tom, or Bill, or Jim who gave these assurances. What an important affair! How vital it is that some one, name and rank undisclosed, went to a person interested in this Dominion Coal Company and said: "We assure you that there will be free coal when Congress passes a tariff bill."

And whether or not any officer of the Government or any member of Congress is or was interested in said company; and what action, if any, has been taken by any person in fulfillment of said assurances.

Who charges that there has been any improper action taken? Does the Senator from New Hampshire intimate that a solitary person has given an assurance that he would do a corrupt act in any contingency or that anyone else would act corruptly? Does he pretend that any person has done wrong? No; but he wishes to inquire whether some one has visited Congress and has advocated free coal. He wishes to find out whether some one interested in this matter has appeared at the Capitol and has spoken to Senators concerning free coal. Would my friend from New Hampshire think that he was personally outraged and that he had a cause for war if some one asked him whether he would or would not vote in a particular way upon a named measure, and if that person adduced arguments of a legitimate character could anyone rationally object? I do not speak of improper arguments, for I assume that such would not be offered to anyone, much less to the Senator from New Hampshire.

But my criticism of this resolution is that there being in it no charge of crime, no charge of wrong, no imputation of want of rectitude, there is nothing for the Senate to investigate. If the Senator from New Hampshire had asked for information which might bring facts regarding the economic features of the tariff before the Senate, that would be a matter proper for the Finance Committee to examine in regular order; but here is a mere effort to find out whether an unnamed individual has given assurances that the duty upon coal will be removed, and whether an officer of the Government, also unnamed, is interested in this company or corporation.

Mr. President, suppose an officer of the Government is interested in this company. I do not know whether that be so or not. I have no idea who the stockholders are, except as my friend from New Hampshire has told us publicly.

But if it be true that an officer of the Government is interested in this enterprise—and my friend has not even charged that much—it is absolutely a private affair, which we can not investigate. If I or you, Mr. President, were put upon the witness stand and asked as to the stockholders in this company we might refuse to reply, it being immaterial to any issue of importance here, and we could never be prosecuted successfully for contempt.

My friend from Texas has offered an amendment which, as he says, is equally irrelevant, but it is also equally relevant to any material matter in hand. He proposes to inquire whether officers of the Government are interested in the maintenance of a high duty equally immaterial, equally not a subject of investigation, equally a matter with which the Senate has no concern.

If the Dominion Coal Company has sent its emissaries here, if they have talked to Senators, they had a right to do so. So far as I know, so long as there were no improper propositions made, so long as there were no undue advances made, I can not see that we have any right to investigate the matter. No one charges impropriety.

If my friend from New Hampshire believes that there has been wrong attempted, why does he not ask a committee to investigate whether there was a crime committed; why does he not recite that it has been charged by somebody that a crime has been done, that a wrong has been done, that something more than legitimate argument has been utilized? Why does he not accuse some one of something? Why does he ask for an omnibus investigation, which will accomplish no more than consume time and bring about no valuable result, which will naturally make us ridiculous in the eyes of the people?

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, I understand the Senator from Texas [Mr. MILLS] offers a substitute for the purpose of killing not only the substitute but the original resolution. I understood him to state that neither of these investigations ought to take place.

I think there is a distinction which can fairly and properly be drawn as to the original investigation proposed and the investigation now suggested by the Senator from Texas. As I understand the statement made by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER], it is that a great corporation has been formed in the Dominion of Canada for the purpose, first, of controlling all the coal measures in Nova Scotia and Cape Breton; and, secondly, to remove the duty upon coal now existing, in order that they may secure a market in a large section of our country. The ostensible object of removing the duty on coal, as I understand from those who favor the removal of that duty, is that coal may be cheaper in the United States to those who consume it.

If it be true, as alleged, that these coal measures, existing in a limited area in a neighboring country, are now wholly under the control of one corporation, that corporation having leased all those coal lands for ninety-nine years, and having promised to pay a royalty to the Dominion Government, then it is worth while for us to inquire if the effect of this newly created monopoly in the sale of their coal to the people of the United States will reduce the price of coal, whether we have a duty on coal or no duty on coal. Therefore, I should have welcomed this inquiry early in December, and I should then have insisted that it should go to the Committee on Finance as a proper and legitimate subject of inquiry in connection with the great question of removing the duty on coal.

Mr. GRAY. Then, why not restrict the inquiry to just what the Senator says is a proper one? I agree with him about that.

Mr. ALLISON. Very well.

When we look at the distribution and production of coal, we find that in the United States we have coal measures in nearly every State in the Union. We know perfectly well that in the interior States a duty upon coal is not a duty which affects the price of coal in that region. We produced last year in the State of Iowa 5,000,000 tons of coal. I do not suppose that directly that production was influenced by the duty of 75 cents a ton on coal. It may be, and probably will be, in the future that the coal measures of Iowa may be used to a certain degree in furnishing Manitoba and the Western regions of the Dominion of Canada with coal, but it is also true that in Virginia, West Virginia, Alabama, and Pennsylvania, there are large coal measures, which are very near the sea, but which require railway transportation before they can reach the seaboard.

If it be true that here is a monopoly in the Dominion of Canada with a capital $31,000,000, whether real or fictitious, which intend by means of the removal of the duty on coal to charge the people of the United States, as they state in their prospectus, such a price for coal as will yield them a dollar a ton profit, it is worth while to consider whether or not we shall take away the market of the United States from the people of Virginia and West Virginia and Pennsylvania who are now in competition with them in the production of coal. I put that inquiry upon a very different relation from an inquiry respecting our own people. There is no more reason for the inquiry proposed by the Senator from Texas as to the domestic production and consumption of coal than there is for making the same inquiry with reference to the other five hundred and fifty items in the tariff bill.

It is a question of great public policy about which the two sides of this Chamber differ, but do not differ so much as we supposed when we began the present session of Congress. But we, upon this side of the Chamber, suppose that these duties are levied in order to enable the people of the United States to be employed, so as to secure the development of our industries, especially in comparison with the development of industries in other countries.

What obligation are we under as a Government, or as a people, to so legislate in this Chamber and in the other as to put into the treasury of the Dominion of Canada 12½ cents a ton upon every ton of coal consumed in the United States or sold by them to us? What obligation are we under to encourage the development of a foreign corporation, with practically $31,000,000 capital, against the people of our own country who are in sharp competition with each other in the production of coal? Are there great profits to those who produce bituminous coal in the United States and transport that coal across our railways and by means of our coastwise transportation to the different portions of our country? It seems to me there is a great and wide distinction as to these two inquiries.

I am not interested as to who may be the owners of the Dominion Coal Company. I know we have an energetic and an active population in our country, men of capital, who are willing not only to go into Canada, but everywhere else, and invest their money; but are we to legislate for the benefit of such investors against our own producers?

I believe that the proposed inquiry as to the Dominion Coal Company and its relations to the people of the United States, to our own production and our own prices, is a legitimate and proper inquiry for us to make in connection with the removal of the duty on coal. For that reason I am very willing to favor such an inquiry. But for the Senator from Texas to kill the inquiry by means of enlarging the investigation so as to inquire into the production of coal in the United States and all who may be interested in it, and all the corporations who transport it, it seems to me is a futile proceeding, for it will never end.

Mr. GRAY. May I ask the Senator from Iowa how the investigation of the current gossip, which is proposed by the Senator from New Hampshire, will help along the inquiry, which he suggests is a very broad subject of policy, which I admit, and a much broader question than the one which challenges our attention?

Mr. ALLISON. That is all that is involved, I understand, in the resolution of the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GRAY. Then, if there is a real personal relation, it is involved on both sides of the question.

Mr. ALLISON. I am not speaking of the gossip; I am speaking of a great question, which I understand to be involved in the resolution of the Senator from New Hampshire, and the question of who are interested in it is a mere incident to the inquiry, as I understand it.

Mr. GRAY. That is the principal thing in the inquiry. What difference does it make who is interested in it?

Mr. ALLISON. I admit that a citizen of the United States has a right, if he chooses, to invest in a foreign coal company, but I claim when we investigate this question on the broad lines laid down by the Senator from New Hampshire, we can inquire into all these questions; and especially I think it is proper to inquire whether or not this coal company was formed for the purpose of removing the duty on coal. If that is the company which is behind the effort that is being made here now to take coal from the dutiable list of the tariff bill and put it upon the free list, I say that is a legitimate inquiry.

Mr. WHITE. Will the Senator allow me to make an inquiry?

Mr. ALLISON. Certainly.

Mr. WHITE. Does the Senator think that the assurances referred to in the resolution of the Senator from New Hampshire would affect the economic question as such?

Mr. ALLISON. I shall not be hypercritical as to the phraseology of the resolution. The Senator from New Hampshire is usually very careful and very accurate in his phraseology, and I should not pretend to criticise him on that subject.

Mr. ALDRICH. Mr. President, I am surprised that there should be any opposition to the adoption of this resolution, and I am more surprised that that opposition should come from so distinguished a friend and defender of the Administration as the Senator from California [Mr. WHITE]. It is an open secret that all progress towards tariff legislation is and has been for weeks arrested by a dispute between a Democratic Administration and a Democratic Senate in regard to the duty upon coal. It has been intimated rather than alleged that this contest is really between the Dominion Coal Company and its friends, determined to have free coal on one side, and certain great transportation and coal companies who are determined to have a duty upon coal on the other. The public interests, what is best for the people of the United States, who are the consumers of coal, does not seem to have entered into this controversy at all.

If we are to believe the statements of leading Democratic newspapers we are confined to a choice of evils. We are to take the duty off coal for the benefit of the Dominion Coal Company and its friends and allies, whoever they may be and wherever they are located, or to retain it for the benefit of these transportation companies.

It is a question worthy of investigation by the American Senate whether this state of affairs exists. If it is true, as intimated by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER], who makes the statement on his responsibility as a Senator, from investigations which he has made, that attempts are being made to influence legislation in the interest of a foreign syndicate, the facts should be known and communicated to the American people.

If, on the other hand, as is intimated in Administration circles, the only reason for maintaining the duty on coal is found in the interest of certain transportation companies, that fact should also be known. I think there can be no Senators on either side of the Chamber who will in this crisis seriously object to this inquiry. It is not a question that affects alone the well-being and existence of the Democratic party. The Senate and the Administration will certainly lose the respect and confidence of the American people if we stay here for weeks, after having been in session a year, haggling over a duty upon coal simply to serve either the interest of the Dominion Coal Company or of certain transportation companies.

Mr. CHANDLER. I recognize the Senator from California [Mr. WHITE] as the permanent defender of the Administration. I recognize the Senator from New York [Mr. HILL] as only employed temporarily in its defense. [Laughter]. I find them both engaged in suppressing, or attempting to suppress, this inquiry, which, upon my responsibility as a Senator, in apt language I have proposed shall be investigated.

Mr. President, it may be that the Senators who have spoken in opposition to this resolution and it may be that the Administration of President Cleveland are not sensitive upon the subject which is taken up in the resolution, but the people of the country are sensitive, and the Senate has shown that it is sensitive upon the question of whether or not it is legislating free from improper extraneous influences.

The President of the United States, I know, is not sensitive, and I find that he is not sensitive upon the question of sugar. I read from his letter to a distinguished member of the other House dated July 2, 1894, in which he says:

> I suggest that we ought not to be driven away from Democratic principle and policy which lead to the taxation of sugar by the fear, quite likely exaggerated, that in carrying out this principle and policy we may indirectly and inordinately encourage a combination of sugar-refining interests. I know that in present conditions this is a delicate subject, and I appreciate the depth and the strength of feeling which its treatment has aroused.

Mr. President, notwithstanding all the words of admiration and commendation which I have had occasion to speak of the distinguished President of the United States during this session, there I differ with him. I believe that in legislating at this time we should be afraid of indirectly and inordinately encouraging trusts, and the Senate of the United States has agreed with me upon this subject. Early in the session it began an investigation of the sugar trust, and the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY], with all his learning and acumen and ability, has been doing the best he could to remove every stain connected with the sugar trust from either the executive branch of the Government or of Congress, notwithstanding the President of the United States all the time has said that we should not be sensitive upon this subject.

I am now equally sensitive with reference to the Dominion Coal Company and this vast corporation, with its watered stock ready to place where it will help the company, basing its operations upon the avowed proposition that the duty on coal shall be removed. I am sensitive about this company whose agents swarm the capital city, and which is supposed to have had certificates of stock by the hundreds laid away in some safe in Nova Scotia, or some safe in Boston, or some safe in New York, ready to be produced when the occasion required.

The President of the United States and his defenders upon this floor need not be sensitive unless they choose to be, and I do not understand that the President is sensitive either about the sugar trust or the Dominion Coal Company. No, Mr. President, he plants himself away up in the sky, consecrating himself always to high principles, and recommends us to protect both the sugar trust and the Dominion Coal Company, and not to be afraid of our reputations. I am not afraid of my reputation. I will not say that I am afraid of the reputation of any Senator upon this floor; but I believe that we ought to investigate upon due suggestion.

The Senator from Delaware the other day wanted me to call two or three names. I referred him to the New York World, and said that he could read the names from the New York World if he pleased. The Senator has not done so.

I say there is scandal enough on this subject, so that we should investigate, and we should have as faithful, as zealous, as penetrating, and as earnest a committee to remove the Dominion Coal Company scandal as we have had endeavoring to remove from all branches of the Government the scandal in connection with the sugar trust.

Mr. President, I shall be glad if the result be that which the Senator from Texas [Mr. MILLS] asserts it will be, the finding of everybody innocent and the finding out of nothing, which result, expected by him, he gave as a reason why he preferred the committee of which the Senator from Delaware is chairman to a new committee of five, as proposed ultimately by my resolution.

I say the Senate owes it to itself to be sensitive on this subject, whether the President of the United States is sensitive or not, or whether the Senator from New York is sensitive or not, or whether the Senator from California is sensitive or not. I say treat these two trusts alike; investigate them both. If there are improper influences surrounding this Chamber, affecting any officer of the Government, or affecting the members of the Senate of the United States, drag them to the light. If there are none, let there be a report such as the Senator from Texas hopes and looks for; but do not let the Senate of the United States show the stolid indifference to its own good name and fame which the President of the United States shows to his own name and fame and the name and fame of his Administration in connection with the sugar trust.

I ask unanimous consent to annex to my remarks a copy of the prospectus of the Dominion Coal Company, Limited.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

The prospectus referred to is as follows:

KIDDER, PEABODY & CO., BOSTON, MASS.

Offer for subscription:

$1,500,000 first mortgage 6 per cent twenty years sinking fund gold bonds,
$1,500,000 8 per cent cumulative stock, preferred as to principal and dividends,
$1,500,000 common stock

of the

DOMINION COAL COMPANY, LIMITED,

In blocks, on following terms:

$500 bonds } for $1,050.
$500 preferred stock }
$300 common stock }

Payments to be made on each block:
$50 on application.
$250 on allotment.
$250 on April 15, 1893.
$250 on August 15, 1893.
$250 on December 15, 1893.

Payment in full may be made under discount at the rate of 5 per cent per annum.

The subscription lists will be opened on Thursday, February 23, and will close on or before Saturday, February 25, 1893.

The right is reserved to reject or reduce the amount of any subscription.

Block certificates will be issued upon allotment.

Bonds and certificates of stock will be issued upon fully-paid blocks as soon as received from the engraving company.

Capitalization of the company outstanding:
$1,500,000 bonds.
$1,500,000 preferred stock.
$15,000,000 common stock.

One million five hundred thousand dollars additional bonds and $1,500,000 additional preferred stock are reserved in the treasury for the future needs of the company.

The issue of bonds is limited to $3,000,000. The issue of preferred stock is limited to $3,000,000.

The bonds, dated March 1, 1893, and due March 1, 1913, are issued in coupon form. Principal may be registered, if desired, or registered certificates will be issued, holders of which will receive their interst by mail. Interest payable March 1 and September 1. Principal and interest payable in gold coin of the United States, of the present standard of weight and fineness, secured by a first mortgage upon all the company's property, real and personal; and secured also by a sinking fund, which buys at not over 110 and interest, and if it can not buy, draws at 110 and interest.

The preferred stock has priority over the common stock as to principal in case of liquidation, and is entitled in priority over the common stock to cumulative dividends, at the rate of 8 per cent per annum, payable semi-annually on the first days of January and July, in each year. The first semi-annual dividend will be due July 1, 1893, and will amount to 3 per cent.

After all the outstanding bonds shall have been called, the sinking fund will apply to the purchase and retirement of the preferred stock at 115 and accrued dividends.

Immediate application will be made to have these securities listed on the Boston Exchange.

Owners (and their friends) of some of the properties which are united in this company have taken one-third of this subscription, and that amount will be allotted to them.

The company is organized under the laws of Nova Scotia, both its preferred and common stocks full paid and nonassessable.

The company has been formed to carry on the business of mining, transporting, and selling bituminous coal from the county of Cape Breton, Nova Scotia. It has a charter from the government of the Province, and will operate under a lease which gives it a tenure of its mining property of ninety-nine years, the royalty for the whole period being fixed at a maximum of 12½ cents per ton, with a minimum gross amount for each year to be paid on at least as many tons as were, in the year 1891, sold by all the mines included in the new company.

Mr. Irving A. Stearns, manager of the coal companies of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, visited Cape Breton, and made an examination of the properties, rendering his report on September 20, 1892.

Mr. Stearns stated in his report:

"The developments made show that the different seams are remarkably uniform in thickness and quality, and unusually free from faults and disturbances of any kind; and are also very free from gas and water, both of which are very important factors in the cost of mining.

"As all of the coal is shipped in vessels, and navigation is closed for several months during the year these mines are compelled to suspend operations during that time or to stock whatever coal is mined. This, of course, adds largely to the cost, and materially increases the amount of slack coal when it is put in stock.

"If the mines were working steadily the average cost of mining of all the collieries referred to, exclusive of royalty and new improvements, should not exceed 80 cents per ton, and by the use of coal-cutting machinery could be still further reduced.

"The different mines and colliery plants are, as a whole, in good condition.

"If the different operations were consolidated considerable saving could be effected in various ways.

"It might be found expedient to abandon some of the shafts or slopes for hoisting purposes, and take the coal through other openings in close proximity, thereby increasing the output and reducing the fixed charges. At present each of the operations have shops for doing the colliery work, which could be consolidated at convenient points, and the cost of this department very much reduced.

"A very important advantage in such a consolidation would be in opening new collieries, which could be located with a view to mining the greatest amount of coal with the smallest expenditure of money, thereby enabling one plant to do the work which, with different interests as at present, would require two or more.

"While there is no doubt that the consolidation of the different interests in the Cape Breton coal field would result in decreased cost of operation and a corresponding increase in the profits at present realized, these profits could be further increased by reducing the cost of mining, if steady work prevailed throughout the year instead of about one-half the year as at present, as there are certain fixed charges that have to be met whether the mines are idle or working. To do this would necessitate a shipping point open at all times and a more extended and constant market."

E. Gilpin, jr., inspector of mines of Nova Scotia, states the amount of available coal on these various properties as over 750,000,000 tons.

Mr. Stearns suggested in his report that an examination of the books of some of the companies be made by an expert coal accountant, and recommended Mr. Frederick Schneider, formerly and for many years chief accountant of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company, who examined the last five years' accounts of four of the principal companies, and made a report under date December 31, 1892. Mr. Schneider examined the books of the "Little Glace Bay," "Gowrie," "Caledonia," and "International" companies; and his report shows that they have been making during the last five years an average profit of about 40 cents per ton on their output.

These mines are at present operated for only about six or seven months of each year, as their harbors are usually impeded by ice during the winter. About 500,000 tons are sent to ports on the St. Lawrence, the balance going to the various ports of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Newfoundland.

The interruption to work has had a serious effect on the economies of the companies now operating these mines; and, as it is, no one of them has had sufficient business, even if it were prepared to make the outlay, to justify the application of those modern methods of mining, shipping, and transporting coal, which, when used on a sufficient scale, so materially reduce the cost of these operations.

The administration of some ten individual companies has necessarily been expensive, and competition among themselves has probably increased to some extent the cost of operating, and most certainly has reduced the net returns of their product.

It has been arranged to unite and consolidate all these companies, except perhaps one, on which the company holds an option and which can be acquired if thought desirable, under the title of the Dominion Coal Company (Limited), and all of them are now owned by or under refusal to it. The cost of these properties, of the Black Diamond Steamship Company (whose steamers transport coal up the St. Lawrence River), and of the railroad spoken of below, will be considerably in excess of the amount of bonds and preferred stock issued; and the company will have in its treasury a large amount of money to be devoted to improvements.

Under the new organization, which proposes to immediately construct a railroad of about 27 miles to Louisburg, equipping it in the most substantial manner for the carriage of the heaviest freight (its cost, including equipment, being estimated by Mr. Thomas C. Clarke, of New York, to be about $750,000), the mines will be worked throughout the whole year, as this port is open and easily accessible all winter. The new company by concentration will be enabled to employ the most modern appliances for mining, handling, and shipping its product, and to do the work at an economy in time and labor which should reduce the cost materially below that reached by any of the present organizations.

It will be able to introduce large savings by furnishing adequate terminal facilities at principal ports and by supplying cheaper water transportation, the greater part of which is at present handled by small vessels under charter and unfitted to do the work economically. So, too, the concentration of the administration of the company will prevent the internal competition between these different companies, and will enable Cape Breton coal to meet that of other districts in the markets on its merits.

Should the United States duty of 75 cents per ton be removed, it seems evident that this company will find a large market on the New England seaboard, for which its position at tide-water would enable it to compete on advantageous terms.

It is estimated that it could put coal f. o. b. vessel at Louisburg for about $1 a ton, probably cheaper than coal is shipped at any port in the world.

The accountant's statement shows that the companies whose books he examined have been making during the past five years an average profit of about 40 cents per ton on their output, not including various sources of revenue, such as profits of the company stores, revenue from railroads outside of coal traffic, and profits of the steamship company. This profit per ton should be considerably increased by consolidation, but even this as a basis shows an annual profit, for the combined present output (about 825,000 tons) of all the mines except the one above mentioned, operated individually, of about $330,000

The annual interest on the present issue of bonds is	$90,000
The annual dividends on the present issue of preferred stock are	120,000
The sinking fund, estimated on basis of the present output of coal will be: First year, at 2 cents per ton, about.....	15,000
		225,000

The sinking fund will receive 3 cents per ton the second year, 4 cents per ton the third year, and 5 cents per ton thereafter.

The formation and organization of this company, the legal validity of its issues of securities, the title of the properties to be taken over, the company's franchises and privileges, have been passed upon by counsel, who have rendered us the following opinion:

"BOSTON, February 17, 1893.

"Messrs. KIDDER, PEABODY & Co.:

"GENTLEMEN: We are of the opinion that the Dominion Coal Company, Limited, is legally organized; that the proceedings of the company, authorizing the issue of its preferred and common stock and of its bonds, and the mortgage securing the same, are legal and valid; and that the titles of the vendors to the various mining properties to be taken over by the company are good and valid.

"We are also of opinion that the concessions and franchises conferred upon the company by its act of incorporation, and the act of the Legislature of Nova Scotia of the year 1893, entitled 'An act for the further encouragement of coal mining,' are legally and effectively vested in and assured to the company, according to the terms expressed in said acts.

"Yours, respectfully,

"HUGH McD. HENRY, Q. C.
"WILLIAM B. ROSS, Q. C.
"GASTON & SNOW."

Officers of the company: President, Henry M. Whitney, of Boston; treasurer, John S. McLennan, of Montreal; chief engineer, F. S. Pearson, of Boston; resident manager, David McKeen, of Glace Bay, Cape Breton.

Directors: Henry F. Dimock, of New York; Sir Donald A. Smith, K. C. M. G., of Montreal; Hugh McLennan, of Montreal; W. C. Van Horne, of Montreal; F. S. Pearson, of Boston; Henry M. Whitney, of Boston; W. B. Ross, Q. C., of Halifax; Alfred Winsor, of Boston; Robert Winsor, of Boston.

Trustees and transfer agents of the bonds: New England Trust Company.

Transfer agents of the stocks: American Loan and Trust Company.

BOSTON, February 18, 1893.

Mr. GRAY. The difficulty seems to be, Mr. President, that the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER] has come to take himself seriously in these later days of the summer, and I think the people of the United States were inclined to take him seriously the other day—whether he intended them to take him seriously or not is another question—but I am sure they took him seriously when he spoke of—

That magnificent man in the White House, who always stands upon principle, who sacrifices himself upon every occasion when duty calls him, and who always subordinates personal ambitions to the public good.

I think the public and the Senator from New Hampshire are at one there; I think he will find a very ready response to that eulogium of the President of the United States, and that he will in this respect bask in the sunshine of popular favor as he has, perhaps, even in his successful life, never basked before.

But, Mr. President, whether the Senator from New Hampshire takes himself seriously or no, there is one thing that is very apparent to everybody else, that the Senator's enthusiasm and zeal are never manifested and exploited except when he thinks he can defeat a low tariff bill or help to defeat a low tariff bill by such exploitation. The Senator's eloquent voice, his invective, and his cutting sarcasm were never heard in 1890 when these corridors and committee rooms were thronged with the representatives of every syndicate and trust in this country that expected benefit from high tariff legislation; yet the Senator from New Hampshire here to-day says that he is so sensitive and the public is so sensitive on this matter of trusts that we ought to investigate every trust which is endeavoring to get the best bargain it can and the best result it can out of tariff legislation now as it did in 1890, and the Senator says this bill ought to be defeated, and has said over and over again that he will vote against it if he has an opportunity, when he knows there is nothing that can go to the sugar trust that will be so grateful and so beneficial and will secure to them so large an opportunity of plundering the people of this country as the McKinley law, which would be left in force if the pending tariff bill were defeated.

It is pretty hard to follow the Senator from New Hampshire in all this matter; and while I am disposed to admire him and give him the meed of my praise for his eloquence and his ingenuity in managing, to a large degree, the opposition to this bill, I am at a loss now to reconcile his different positions in this regard. I think he will have some difficulty in persuading the people of this country to understand how he can be so zealous, as he seems to be, and doubtless he is, in regard to the sugar trust, when he is quite willing the sugar trust should enjoy the largest measure of protection they ever can hope to enjoy under any legislation that is possible from the Congress of the United States.

Mr. RANSOM. I beg leave to submit at this time the report of the committee of conference on the river and harbor bill, and I ask that it may be now acted upon.

Mr. GRAY. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator will suspend for a moment. The Senator from North Carolina has submitted a privileged question, the report of a committee of conference, which will be read.

Mr. RANSOM. I shall wait until the Senator from Delaware concludes. I give notice that I shall not give way after that.

Mr. GRAY. My friend from New Hampshire and myself differ entirely on this question of protection, as to what ought to be the policy of this country in regard to tariff taxation; but I feel and I believe, and I think that the people of this country will believe, that the question of morality lies back of any of the matters or things suggested by the Senator's resolution. It lies back at the very basis of this question which divides the two sides of this Chamber. I believe, and I think the majority of this country believe, that we can never have decency, we can never have high public morality in legislation on these matters, until we get rid of the notion that all the business interests of the country must depend upon legislation for their support.

I do not believe, Mr. President, that it is possible that we should go on indefinitely and keep this Government in partnership with the great trusts and business enterprises of this country and not seriously injure the moral tone of the Government itself. I do not think it is possible that we should give the opportunity for self-interest, for human greed, if you please, to get benefit by legislation and not have constantly these grounds for suggesting scandals in legislation. That is one of the great reasons why I believe that the Government should divorce itself entirely from legislation which brings the Government into partnership with the business of the country.

If it is a scandal, as I said awhile ago, and there is any public immorality in a syndicate or a corporation or an individual being affected by taking taxes off, equally so are all these things attached to those who are benefited by taxes being kept upon the commodities of commerce. There can not be a scandal one way unless there is a scandal the other; and if the people of this country are not to be allowed to buy where their necessities dictate they should buy and to spend the dollar that they earn as they choose to spend it, then it seems to me we might as well investigate both sides of this question.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President——

Mr. GRAY. If the constituents of the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] are not allowed to buy coal in Nova Scotia, where Providence has placed it right within arms' length of them, where they can put out their hands and touch it, for the benefit of the favored owners of coal mines in the United States, or transportation companies whose lines lead from those mines to New England, we had better know it. If this tribute must be paid by New England, so be it.

Mr. HOAR. I wanted to ask the Senator a question before he sat down with reference to the point he made a minute or two ago. He said that in 1890 (drawing a parallel with the present condition of things with regard to this great Nova Scotia coal company) the great manufacturing interests of the country were here thronging the corridors for the purpose of pressing their desires upon legislation. I wish to ask the Senator if he does not think that there is a great difference between the two cases in one respect. In 1890 these representatives were here in the face of day to be heard by the legislative power, coming at its invitation, and the two sides of any question meeting and encountering each other in the committee room, subject to cross-examination and rigid scrutiny by hostile Senators as well as by hostile manufacturers and persons in interest in regard to their methods of procedure. Can the Senator put his finger on a manufacturing establishment or a manufacturing interest which was summoned here by the Committee on Finance in 1890 that was not exposed to the most rigid scrutiny and examination in regard to all its business methods, if any whisper of wrongful interest was suggested? Is not that the difference?

Mr. GRAY. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Delaware will suspend. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which will be stated by title.

The SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 5246) providing for the inspection of immigrants by United States consuls.

Mr. RANSOM. I rose to insist upon the consideration of the conference report upon the river and harbor bill, but at the request of the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY] I give way to him to reply to the question of the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR].

Mr. GRAY. The Senator from Massachusetts certainly did not understand me aright if he understood me to cast any serious reflections on the representatives of the interests who were affected by the tariff bill of 1890. My criticism is directed not at the individuals, not at the Senator from Massachusetts, who thinks that is right because he starts from different premises, but to the policy which invites those people here and makes the industries of the country dependent upon the legislation of the country. I say that is a high public immorality. Of course, the Senator from Massachusetts does not understand that there is any imputation on any Senator who differs with me.

Mr. HOAR. I understood the Senator to say, if he will pardon me, that a parallel case to that stated by the Senator from New Hampshire was when representatives of the industries of the country affected by that legislation were here in 1890 thronging the corridors.

Mr. GRAY. Certainly they were.

Mr. HOAR. That is what I pointed out. Do I now understand the Senator from Delaware to say that he thinks legislation can be conducted without reference to its effect upon the industries of the country?

Mr. GRAY. I say that legislation ought not to be so conducted that it will be to the interest of those industries to come to the Capitol and besiege committees and members of the House and the Senate in order to procure special advantages, at the expense of the mass of the people. That is what I say.

Mr. HOAR. That is where I differ with the Senator from Delaware.

Mr. GRAY. I said that we differed there; but I should like to ask the Senator if there is any immorality in citizens of the United States, if they be such, owning stock in a Nova Scotia coal company? I do not know whether they are citizens of the United States.

Mr. HOAR. Does the Senator from Delaware ask me that question?

Mr. GRAY. Yes.

Mr. HOAR. I have not undertaken to deal with that question at all. The Senator from New Hampshire introduced that subject. I do not think there is a great deal of patriotism, not to say immorality——

Mr. GRAY. I wish the Senator from Massachusetts would answer my question.

Mr. HOAR. I do not know whether the Senator from Delaware considers lack of patriotism immorality. I must therefore state my answer in my own way. I do not think there is much patriotism in a lot of wealthy American men going into partnership with the Canadian Government to get a monopoly and to break down certain United States interests. Whether that is immorality or not the Senator from Delaware may state.

Mr. GRAY. The Senator from Massachusetts apparently was not able to answer a very simple question, and I do not think he has answered it. I do not think the Senator will say that there is any immorality, patriotic or otherwise, in any citizen of his State or in any member of this body owning an interest in an industry which is located across the border. I know he will not say it is immoral. I think he has covered up the answer that I should have had by an ingenious evasion of the question, if he will allow me to say so.

Of course, there is no difference, and if they be affected, or if such an interest be affected by the lowering of taxes, there is no more reason why they should not say they are interested, and speak of their interest, if they be citizens of the United States, than that those who are interested in keeping up taxes should be heard. So I agree with the Senator from California [Mr. WHITE] that it is an entirely immaterial question. I do not know that any Senator of the United States, or any member of the House, or anyone connected with the Government is interested in such a company.

I do not believe they are, but this Government can stand, and it is strong enough to stand, a refusal on the part of its friends to enter upon any such futile and insincere attempt at investigation as is proposed by the resolution of the Senator from New Hampshire. I am strong enough to do it. I do not want to be investigated about such an impertinent and absolutely irrelevant matter as whether I own or do not own stock in a foreign corporation. I am able to stand up and say so and to defy any criticism by reason of my opposing it and refusing to investigate myself or investigate my fellow-Senators upon a matter of this kind, which is absolutely irrelevant.

Mr. RANSOM rose.

Mr. HOAR. Will the Senator from North Carolina pardon me for one second?

Mr. RANSOM. I will pardon the Senator for one second, but no more. I can not yield further.

Mr. HILL. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FAULKNER in the chair). The Senator from New York will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. HILL. At 2 o'clock, as I understood, the unfinished business, being the immigration bill, was laid before the Senate. I wish to know how that bill was sidetracked.

Mr. RANSOM. I will tell the Senator from New York.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state that the immigration bill is before the Senate.

Mr. RANSOM. I called up the conference report on the river and harbor bill, which is a privileged matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state that according to the understanding of the Chair the bill to which the Senator from New York refers is still before the Senate.

Mr. HOAR. I thought I had the consent of the Senator from North Carolina to proceed?

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

Mr. RANSOM. I moved immediately before the unfinished business was laid before the Senate that we proceed to the consideration of the conference report upon the river and harbor bill; but I gave way to the Senator from Delaware. I afterward asked when the hour of 2 o'clock arrived that we should proceed to its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state that he did not understand the motion of the Senator from North Carolina as being put and carried by the Senate.

Mr. RANSOM. It is a privileged motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is a privileged motion, but the Chair understood the Senator from North Carolina to withdraw the motion in order to allow the Senator from Delaware to submit some remarks.

Mr. RANSOM. I took the floor and yielded to the Senator from Delaware, who stated that he had it with my consent. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the conference report on the river and harbor bill. I can not give way further.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the conference report on the river and harbor bill.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the report, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6518) "making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes," having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 3, 20, 23, 28, 32, 33, 35, 39, 84, 113, 122, 126, 133, 135, 150, 155, 185, and 229.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 2, 5, 6, 7, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 18, 21, 22, 26, 34, 37, 38, 39, 40, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 59, 60, 61, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 80, 81, 82, 83, 85, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 96, 99, 101, 103, 104, 105, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 124, 125, 127, 128, 130, 131, 132, 136, 139, 141, 144, 146, 147, 148, 149, 154, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 169, 182, 183, 184, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 224, 226, 227, and 228, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 1, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$30,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 4, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$200,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 8, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$40,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 9, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: After the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate insert the following as a new item:

"Merrimac River, Massachusetts: The Secretary of War is directed out of the appropriation on hand to make a resurvey of said river with a view of obtaining a depth up to Haverhill equal to that over the bar at Newburyport."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 17, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$15,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 19, and agree to the same with an amendment in the nature of a substitute, as follows: Strike out all of amendment numbered 19, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Improving Bay Ridge and Red Hook Channels, New York Harbor, New York: Continuing improvement of Bay Ridge Channel by dredging out and opening the same from a point at its junction with the Gowanus Creek Channel (near Twenty-eighth street), southerly therefrom, along and in front of Gowanus Bay and Bay Ridge to a point where the said Bay Ridge Channel so to be opened, encounters a 26-foot contour or depth of water, so that the channel, so to be opened, shall be of a uniform depth of 26 feet and a width of 800 feet at low water, and continuing improvement of Red Hook Channel from its junction with the Bay Ridge Channel to its connection with the Buttermilk Channel, to obtain a depth of 26 feet at mean low water and a width of 400 feet, $150,000: Provided, That the Secretary of War may, in his discretion, expend $20,000 of said appropriation in improving Gowanus Creek Channel under the project to obtain 21 feet depth of water."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 24, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out the matter proposed to be inserted and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Improving Niagara River from Tonawanda to Port Day with a view to obtaining a channel of 12 feet depth to Schlosser's Dock by cutting through the shoal at the head of Conners Island as indicated in the report of the Chief of Engineers for 1893, page 313, $10,000; and the unexpended balance of the appropriation heretofore made in the river and harbor act of July 13, 1892, for the improvement of the Niagara River from Tonawanda to Port Day is hereby reappropriated for this purpose."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 25, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$50,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 27, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate, and insert on page 77, after line 7, the following as a new item:

"Baltimore Harbor: To widen the ship channel to 1,000 feet."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 29, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$100,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 30, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$110,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 31, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate insert the following:

"Improving the outer bar of Brunswick, Ga., $30,000, the whole of which shall be paid to C. P. Goodyear for depth of water heretofore obtained over said outer bar. And the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to pay to said C. P. Goodyear, his heirs or assigns, upon procurement by the said Goodyear, his heirs or assigns, of a practical channel over said outer bar at Brunswick at least 100 feet in width and of a minimum depth of 23 feet at ordinary mean high tide on or before November 1, 1895, the sum of $30,000; upon the procurement as aforesaid, on or before the 1st day of January, 1897, of a depth of water in said channel over said outer bar of a minimum depth at ordinary mean high tide of 24 feet, and of said width, $40,000, to be paid in manner aforesaid; upon the procurement as aforesaid, on or before January 1, 1898, of a depth of water in said channel of a minimum depth at ordinary mean high tide of 25 feet, and of said width, $50,000, to be paid in manner aforesaid. And should the depth of 25 feet at ordinary mean high tide in said channel over said outer bar be procured as aforesaid and maintained for two years thereafter for the width above named, $25,000 in addition shall be paid in manner aforesaid. The said C. P. Goodyear, his heirs and assigns, shall procure said work on said outer bar by the explosion of dynamite on the bottom of said channel or sunk beneath the bottom thereof, in his or their discretion, and not otherwise, and shall use the necessary auxiliary means for smoothing the bottom of the bar. The money necessary to carry out the provisions of this item is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated: Provided, That no payments except the first, of $30,000, shall be made except upon a certificate of a majority of a board of officers, two of whom shall be officers of the Engineer Corps, detailed for that purpose by the Secretary of War, and the third shall be the Chief of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, that the said C. P. Goodyear, his heirs and assigns, have complied with all the conditions as to any of the depths and widths named or as to the maintenance of a depth of 25 feet accomplished in accordance with the provisions of this item."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 36, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$30,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 41, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$275,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 47, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$70,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 48, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$20,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 58, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$20,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 69, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out the following item as contained in lines 10 and 11, page 19: "Improving harbor at Wilmington, Cal.: Continuing improvement, $40,000;" the same having been inserted in the bill by mistake, the improvement having been heretofore completed; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 79, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$15,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 86, and agreed to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$170,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 87, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Restore the matter proposed to be stricken out by the Senate; strike out the period at end of line 12, page 24, and insert in lieu thereof a semicolon; and in lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate insert the following: "And also to take testimony as to the value of said improvements, and the commercial importance of free navigation of said river, and the Secretary of War shall report thereon to Congress at its next succeeding session, to the end that Congress may determine as to the expediency of making the navigation of said river free from tolls;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 108, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate and insert in lieu thereof the following: "For the survey of the water ways through the sounds of North Carolina and for the survey of the Dismal Swamp Canal, Virginia and North Carolina, with a view of obtaining a depth of 9 feet and the necessary width of a ship canal, and for the survey of the rivers and water connections connecting said canal with the sounds of North Carolina, $5,000, or so much thereof as is necessary;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 95, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$150,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 97, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed, insert "$30,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 98, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed, insert "$4,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 100, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$14,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 102, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate insert the following:

"Improving Cape Fear River, North Carolina, from Wilmington to its mouth: Continuing improvement, $200,000."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 107, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$7,000;" and the Senate agree to the same

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 121, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: On page 35, line 8, after the word "hundred," insert "and ten."

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 123, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$40,000;", and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 129, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out the sum proposed and insert in lieu thereof the following: "$135,000, of which $10,000 shall be used in improving Rough River, Kentucky;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 134, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$30,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 137, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: At the end of the paragraph proposed to be inserted strike out the period and insert a colon and the following proviso: "Provided, That nothing herein shall be construed to commit the Government to proceed with the construction of said improvement;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 138, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$51,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 140, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate, insert the following: "Improving the Mississippi River between the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha Railroad bridge at St. Paul to the Washington avenue bridge at Minneapolis, $51,000, which, together with the unexpended balance standing to the credit of this improvement, shall be expended under the project or plan to extend navigation from St. Paul to the flour mills at Minneapolis, estimated for by Maj. A. McKenzie, as appears by his report made to Gen. Thomas L. Casey, Chief of Engineers, United States Army, under date of March 1, 1894, by the construction of a lock and dam numbered 2 in the same project;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 142, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$110,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 143, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: After the word "dollars," in line 15, page 46, strike out the period and insert a comma and the following words: "of which $10,000 may be used in dredging the mouth of the Wolf River, in the discretion of the Secretary of War;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 145, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: At the end of the paragraph proposed to be inserted by the Senate strike out the period and insert in lieu thereof a comma, and add the following: "and the said Commission is directed to report to Congress, in their next regular report, their views on the advisability of effecting a separation between the Mississippi and Red Rivers at the present junction thereof and maintaining navigation between the same through Bayou Plaquemine or by means of a canal;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 151, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate insert the following: "to be expended by the Missouri Commission;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 152, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out the entire paragraph proposed to be inserted and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Missouri River, from its mouth to the lower limits of Sioux City, Iowa: The Missouri River Commission is authorized and directed to expend from the appropriations for the improvement of said river $75,000 in the rectification of the river at Omaha, Nebr.; $35,000 at Atchison, Kans.; and $50,000 at St. Joseph and other localities on the river in the State of Missouri where the Commission may deem such improvement necessary."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 153, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate insert the following:

"Upper Missouri River between Stubbs Ferry, in Montana, and the lower limits of Sioux City, Iowa, $110,000, of which $10,000 may be expended in the protection and completion of the works at Sioux City; $40,000 are to be expended in the rectification of the river at Pierre and Fort Pierre; $40,000, in the discretion of the Secretary of War, may be used for the protection of Bismark Harbor and the rectification of the river by works to prevent the river from eroding the banks, and cutting a new channel at or near that point; $20,000 shall be expended between the Great Falls of said river, in Montana, and Stubbs Ferry, in Montana."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 161, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the paragraph proposed to be inserted by the Senate insert the following:

"Improving Columbia River, Oregon and Washington, at Three-mile Rapids, and the construction and equipment of a boat railway from the foot of The Dalles Rapids to the head of Celilo Falls, said boat railway to be provided at each terminus with hydraulic lifts, and other necessary appliances, for the purpose of raising and lowering the boats on suitable cars to and from its tracks, the whole to be located, constructed, and equipped for the passage of eight boats of 600 tons each in each direction in twelve hours, on the south side of the Columbia River, substantially in accordance with the location and plans submitted by the board of engineers, appointed by the President in pursuance of the provision of the act of Congress approved July 13, 1892, and entitled 'Act making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes,' with their report, which is contained in Senate Executive Document No. 7, Fifty-third Congress, first session, $100,000: Provided, That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed to proceed to acquire without necessary delay by purchase or condemnation, in the manner and according to the conditions now prescribed by law, the necessary right of way for said boat railway and the right to the use of lands required for terminal and other facilities for said boat railway, and to expend so much of the amount hereby appropriated as may be necessary for that purpose."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 168, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of sum proposed insert "$25,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, and 181, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out all of section 2 of the bill, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"SEC. 2. It shall be unlawful for any person or persons to engage in fishing or dredging for shellfish in any of the channels leading to or from the harbor of New York, or to interfere in any way with the safe navigation of those channels by ocean steamships and ships of deep draft.

"Any person or persons violating the foregoing provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by fine or imprisonment, or both, such fine to be not more than $250 nor less than $50, and the imprisonment to be not more than six months nor less than thirty days, either or both united, as the judge before whom conviction is obtained shall decide.

"It shall be the duty of the United States supervisor of the harbor to enforce this act, and the deputy inspectors of the said supervisor shall have authority to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person or persons who may commit any of the acts or offenses prohibited by this act: Provided, That no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the presence of the supervisor or his inspector or deputy inspectors, or either of them: And provided further, That whenever any such arrest is made the person or persons so arrested shall be brought forthwith before a commissioner, judge, or court of the United States for examination of the offenses alleged against him; and such commissioner, judge, or court shall proceed in respect thereto as authorized by law in case of crimes against the United States."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 215, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out all of line 3, page 68; after the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate strike out the period and insert in lieu thereof a comma and the following: "And Sasanos River, from Bath to Boothbay;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 225, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate and insert in line 6, page 93, after the word "improvement," the following: "including survey from Magnolia to the city of Dallas;" and the Senate agree to the same.

M. W. RANSOM,
A. P. GORMAN,
J. N. DOLPH,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

T. C. CATCHINGS,
RUFUS E. LESTER,
THOS. J. HENDERSON,
Managers on the part of the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on concurring in the report of the committee of conference.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, I rise for the purpose of making a remark with reference to one item contained in the report. I ask to have read the action of the conference committee on amendment numbered 69.

The Secretary read as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 69, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out the following item as contained in lines 10 and 11, page 19: "Improving harbor at Wilmington, Cal.: Continuing improvement, $40,000," the same having been inserted in the bill by mistake, the improvement having heretofore been completed; and the Senate agree to the same.

Mr. WHITE. The item proposed to be stricken out is correctly cited as being on page 19, lines 10 and 11:

Improving harbor at Wilmington, Cal.: Continuing improvement, $40,000.

This was found in the bill as it came from the other House. It came to the Senate in that condition, and it was sent to the Senate Committee on Commerce in that state. It left the Senate Committee on Commerce and the bill was passed upon by the Senate without any change whatsoever in this item, and it was received by the conference committee without the slightest variation from the bill as it came from the House of Representatives. On page 259 of Jefferson's Manual I find the following:

So the Commons resolved that it is unparliamentary to strike out at a conference anything in a bill which hath been agreed and passed by both Houses.

Mr. REED, in his collection of rules applicable to Congressional legislation, says:

The conference may report any agreement on amendments, but may not change any item already agreed to by both Houses.

That is exactly the condition in which this item stands. The Senate will observe that the item is proposed to be stricken out on the ostensible ground that it was inserted by reason of a mistake, but I suggest that it is unwise and dangerous to adopt any rule which will permit a committee of conference to determine that which is or is not included by a mistake. The report to the Senate, and the action of the Senate upon the bill, the bill having come from the other House with the language therein found, are conclusive negations of the assertion made in the report. In other words, the testimony furnished by the bill itself is conclusive as to whether it was or was not a mistake. If the matter had been before the Senate, or before the Committee on Commerce, I believe I could have given reasons why it ought to have been retained, notwithstanding the reasons which actuated the committee, but that opportunity, of course, was not afforded, as it was never discussed on the floor of the Senate.

I cite this so that hereafter, if a question shall arise as to the power of a committee of conference to strike out an item contained in a bill which was not altered by the House to which it was transmitted by the other, we may have something of record as the judgment of the Senate justifying such action. The rule seems to me plain enough, and I call attention to it so that, as I have said, this may not be considered a precedent. It is incorporated as an amendment to another item. The next item in the bill is as follows:

Improving harbor at San Diego, Cal.: Continuing improvement, $40,000.

It is attempted to style the striking out of lines 10 and 11 an amendment to another and wholly distinct item found at lines 12 and 13. The one is the improvement of the harbor at San Diego, the other is the improvement of the harbor at Wilmington, a hundred miles away. The two items have no connection whatever, either in the bill or elsewhere.

I do not criticise the committee of conference or the Senate members of the committee. I know the circumstances surrounding the matter and the importance of having a river and harbor bill passed, the necessity of its passage being paramount to any item regarding which any Senator might or might not be interested. For that reason I do not urge that the Senate shall take any action that would prevent the adoption of the report. The river and harbor bill is a measure too important to permit any individual interest to intervene.

Mr. RANSOM. The committee of conference on the part of the Senate was extremely anxious to consult the wishes of the Senator from California in every respect, for the true reason that those conferees appreciated his ability and zeal in securing proper appropriations for his State. This question arose in the conference, if I may speak of it, in the way he has stated, and the conference committee settled it in the way stated. I may say with great respect to my friend from California that at last his amendments made in the Senate have given his State an increase of $39,000. The increases reached $179,000 in the Senate, and I think I am not going outside of propriety when I say that I do not know anyone else who could have had such large additions to the appropriations proposed.

As chairman of the committee, I want to thank him for his proper and good course to-day in throwing no obstruction in the way of the adoption of the report and the final enactment of the bill into a law.

Mr. WHITE. I simply desire to say, as I before stated, casting not the slightest criticism upon my associates in the committee, that while it is true there were appropriations to the amount of $179,000 added to the Senate appropriations by the committee as far as California was concerned, there was a deduction of $140,000; that the average amount of the Senate addition yielded in the conference was 40 per cent, and in that particular State it was 80 per cent. That was due, nevertheless, to the circumstances to which I referred, and over which the committee had no control.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on concurring in the report.

The report was concurred in.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLES, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6777) to amend an act entitled, "An act to incorporate the Washington and Great Falls Electric Railway."

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills:

A bill (S. 16) granting a pension to Nettie Seaver;

A bill (S. 470) for the relief of George H. Jewett, of Arlington, Washington County, Nebr.;

A bill (S. 876) granting a pension to Rebecca H. Chambers;

A bill (S. 1640) granting a pension to Otis Smith; and

A bill (S. 2217) to provide for the closing of a part of an alley in square 185 in the city of Washington, D. C.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled bill (S. 1836) to provide for the payment of the 8 per cent greenback certificates of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; and it was thereupon signed by the Vice-President.

RESTRICTION OF IMMIGRATION.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5246) providing for the inspection of immigrants by United States consuls.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the substitute reported by the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. HILL. Does the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PEFFER] desire to be heard on the bill?

Mr. PEFFER. I do.

Mr. HILL. If the Senator is ready to proceed he will have an opportunity now.

Mr. PEFFER. I should like to know what amendment has been made.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment pending before the Senate is to strike out the original bill and insert the amendment reported by the Committee on Immigration, which was read at the time the bill was first taken up.

Mr. PEFFER. Mr. President, all I care to say is that I think the bill is lame in its failure to describe particularly the character of persons at whom the prohibitive features of the bill are aimed. I understand that, while the bill has a somewhat general application, it is aimed specially at a class of men known as anarchists, and I think the bill is lame in the particular that it does not define, nor does it provide for any means of ascertaining prior to arrest, who shall be declared an anarchist.

I understand that when an educated anarchist is permitted himself to define what he believes or what he understands to be meant by the word anarchist in his definition he will describe about the highest type of human development. There is nothing destructive, nothing violent, nothing denunciatory or derogatory to human happiness or human government in such a definition as a man of that kind would give, and yet he calls himself an anarchist.

We are accustomed in this country, and I suppose in English-speaking countries generally, to regard an anarchist as one who stirs up violence and discord and strife in a community. With that understanding, if it be only properly described in the bill, I should not object to it. I shall not propose any amendment, because I have not had time to give sufficient thought to it, yet I want to put the thought upon record in connection with the passage of the bill, if it is passed, that it would be well now or soon hereafter to more particularly define not only the class of persons at whom the bill is aimed, but to define more in accord with American institutions the kind of tribunal which shall determine who is and who is not an anarchist.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. PEFFER. Certainly.

Mr. GALLINGER. I rose to ask the Senator if the definition in section 3 of the committee amendment, "that such alien is an anarchist, or that he is not attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and well disposed to the peace and good order of the same," is not a pretty good definition. Does he think it would be an easy matter to better the definition, that it is a man who is not attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and is not well disposed to the peace and good order of our Government? It strikes me that that is a very good definition.

Mr. PEFFER. I think persons of that character ought not to be permitted to land on our shores for any purpose. The first bill I believe that I had the honor to introduce when I first became a member of the Senate was a bill including language somewhat similar to that just read by the Senator from New Hampshire, and that bill was aimed largely at the class of persons at whom this bill is aimed. That bill provided that the consuls representing the United States in foreign countries should be clothed with power to examine all persons applying for permission to come to this country for any purpose, and unless the consuls were satisfied upon careful examination that such persons did not come within the purview of our prohibitive law they should not grant a certificate, and without a consular certificate no such person should be permitted to land upon American shores anywhere for any purpose.

It seems to me upon a cursory examination that there is no provision that will require such a careful examination of persons immigrating to the United States as they are entitled to receive before being denied the privilege of coming here.

I merely want to call attention to that feature of the bill. I think it is lame in that respect. I will go as far as any Senator, and it has already been demonstrated repeatedly that I will go a good deal further than most Senators in keeping out of the country all such persons as will endanger the peace and safety and happiness of the people of the United States; for I think a nation is just like a family and has the same right to protect itself against intruders.

I appreciate as well as anyone the abstract rights of men and believe that any well-behaved person has a right to go anywhere he pleases up and down the earth and settle upon land that has not already been occupied properly by some other person. I do not think that those rights depend upon the nativity of men and women or their color or on anything connected with them beyond their rights as men and women. All that I ask in legislation of this kind is that human rights shall be guarded, the rights of men, the rights of women, which we as Americans here are very careful to guard in our own interests. That is all I ask.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, I propose to speak in the first instance in relation to the provisions of the bill which apply to the anarchists, so called. Those provisions are new. There is no authority under the existing laws of the United States to prevent the landing of persons who are commonly known as anarchists. They are the only additional class of persons now deemed necessary to provide against. Our laws in regard to immigration seemed to be remarkably well framed, and if honestly and vigorously carried out will do much towards preventing what is known as undesirable immigration.

I do not propose to call the attention of the Senate to the classes who are now excluded, and unless a property qualification should be added, which is not deemed wise, every other improper class is excluded by existing laws except the persons who may be called anarchists. The necessity for this portion of the bill arises not only from what is patent to everyone who understands the existing situation, but also from the fact that nearly all the principal European countries are now legislating against this class of people, and if they are not excluded from the United States this country will soon be the dumping ground of the anarchists of the world. Hence the necessity for the proposed legislation at this time.

Mr. President, it is not proposed by this measure to make belief in anarchy a crime. Therefore it is not necessary by the express terms of the bill to define what anarchy is. No provision is made for an indictment; no provision is made for punishment; but provision is made that such a person known as an anarchist shall not land in this country, and if he does land, by certain proceedings to be taken by or through the Secretary of the Treasury that person may be deported.

The first section of the substitute provides—

That no alien anarchist shall hereafter be permitted to land at any port of the United States or be admitted into the United States; but this shall not be so construed as to apply to political refugees or political offenders.

That last clause was deemed necessary so as to avoid all question in regard to persons in other countries who are engaged in some proceeding to overturn one government in order to replace it with another.

An anarchist, according to all well-defined definitions, does not believe in any civil government whatever. He can not be a political refugee within the meaning of the statutes upon that subject. He believes in no form of civil or social government. He is a disturber of the peace of society. He believes in social chaos. He believes in having no government whatever with which to guide humanity. That provision which I have read is the first section of the bill.

Under laws passed heretofore a board of special inquiry is appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury. At the port of landing this board makes inquiry and inspection of all immigrants who land. It is made the duty of this board by the second section of the bill to propound "pertinent questions" to the party charged with being an anarchist whose landing is objected to because of his being an anarchist. What we mean by "charged" is not a crime, the charge of being an anarchist having been made against him simply as a ground why he should not land. This board proceeds by "pertinent questions" to inquire of his "antecedents, political opinions," etc. The bill will have to be amended; there are some misprints, which I will propose to correct later—"whether he belongs to any society or association of known anarchistic tendencies," and the board may "examine the person for marks indicative of such membership."

The object of that provision is because in Europe it has been shown by the trials had that certain of these societies have stamped upon their persons certain marks by which they are known. Owing to that well-known fact in other countries it is deemed wise to place this provision in the bill.

It is also provided that the board of special inquiry "may accept evidence of the immigrant's common reputation as an anarchist." That is proper in such a proceeding. Of course I would not sanction such a provision if it was upon a trial where a person was charged with a crime, but on the question of the protection of the United States from undesirable immigrants it is proper to accept evidence of the "immigrant's common reputation." In almost any trial in this country a man's general reputation can be admitted in evidence.

We have the spectacle now presented of a well-known English anarchist, well understood to be such in England, who comes to this country, lands here—there is no provision for stopping him—and he is actually attempting to deliver addresses in the cities of New York and Brooklyn in favor of the principles of anarchy—if we can speak of the doctrine of anarchy as principles—and there is no way to deport him or send him back, although he is now prevented by the police authorities of those cities from speaking in behalf of his doctrine.

Also, it is provided that "the orders, decrees, or judgments of foreign governments and police notifications" may be received "as prima facie evidence, which shall be sufficient, unless successfully controverted, to sustain an order of deportation." The Secretary of the Treasury, when he is satisfied "that an alien has been allowed to land, or has come into the United States contrary to the immigration laws, may issue a warrant and cause such alien immigrant to be taken into custody and returned to the country whence he came." He "may authorize any immigration official to summon witnesses," etc.

Now, there is no difficulty about this provision, I will say to the Senator from Kansas. The rights of these alien immigrants are well protected. It is a summary inquiry, of course. It must necessarily be so. If the person is well disposed he can satisfy these officials of that fact. It is proper that he should be bound by his general reputation. In other words, the question as to whether the person should be allowed to remain here is a matter for the wise discretion of our Government officials and there it must be left, and we must give our officials broad discretion in such cases.

The bill provides further, in the third section, where there is in this country a "trial and conviction of any foreign-born and unnaturalized person of any crime or misdemeanor in any United States court," if it shall appear "from the evidence produced at the trial that such alien is an anarchist or that he is not attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and well disposed to the peace and good order of the same, and that his remaining in this country will be a menace to the Government or to the peace and well-being of society in general, such convict, in addition to other punishments adjudged, shall be taken before a commissioner of immigration at a port of entry, who shall order his deportation at the expense of the United States, to the country from which he came."

Mr. GRAY. May I ask the Senator from New York a question?

Mr. HILL. Certainly.

Mr. GRAY. Do I understand the provision means that where the person upon trial has been convicted and shall appear to the judge to be a person who is not well-disposed towards the peace and good order of the United States he may be ordered to be deported in lieu of other punishment.

Mr. HILL. No; "in addition to other punishments."

Mr. GRAY. Suppose he is an anarchist to be imprisoned——

Mr. HILL. At the expiration of the term of imprisonment.

Mr. GRAY. Ought not the bill to say so?

Mr. HILL. I think that is implied. I think possibly it might be well enough to add that clause. It reads:

> Such convict, in addition to other punishment adjudged, shall be taken before a commissioner of immigration.

I think perhaps it may be well to add, after the word "convict," the words "after the expiration of any term of imprisonment." I will move that amendment after I finish my remarks, Mr. President.

That, Mr. President, is the theory of this bill so far as anarchists are concerned. It deals with them summarily, and necessarily so.

Mr. SHERMAN. I am very much in sympathy with the objects of this bill, and I wish to make a suggestion to the Senator from New York. In the naturalization laws, which have stood upon the statute books ever since the formation of the Government, the language of the old mandate has always been preserved. The language at the bottom of page 3 of the bill is partially copied from the naturalization laws. The bill reads:

> The presiding judge shall certify that from the evidence produced at the trial he is satisfied that such alien is an anarchist, or that he is not attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States and well disposed to the peace and good order of the same.

The bill follows the language that has been on the statute books, I believe, ever since the formation of the Government, except that in the statutes the words "and happiness of the same" are used instead of "the peace and good order of the same." I think the language of the statute is a little better and fuller than that contained in the bill.

Mr. HILL. I think "well disposed to the peace and good order of the same" is a little better phrase than "well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same."

Mr. SHERMAN. I will read the language of the naturalization laws:

> And that during that time he has behaved as a man of good moral character, attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same.

I would insert those words, and that would cover the whole case. The alien has to prove the affirmative of this when he is attempting to get his naturalization papers. We know ordinarily that that can not be enforced against aliens.

Mr. HILL. If the Senator from Ohio will put the amendment in form and propose it at the proper place, I think it will be satisfactory.

Mr. SHERMAN. Very well.

Mr. HILL. So far as this bill is concerned and so far as it relates to anarchists, there was no question whatever in the Committee on Immigration. All the members were in favor of it. The Senator from New Hampshire, I regret to say, differs from the majority of the committee in regard to one provision of the bill. He favors what is known as consular inspection abroad.

A word as to the history of this bill. The bill as first introduced in the House of Representatives by a gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. STONE]—it was the first section of this bill which is now eliminated—provided for the inspection of immigrants by consuls abroad, and that was all the bill contemplated. It was referred to the Committee on Immigration of the House of Representatives.

Mr. CHANDLER. I desire to say to the Senator from New York that, as I understand, it is not in order to refer to the parliamentary history of a bill in the House of Representatives. The bill comes here from the House of Representatives. There is probably nowhere in the United States such a complete master of parliamentary law as the Senator from New York, and therefore I confidently appeal to him not to make statements in this Chamber in reference to the history of this bill in the House of Representatives that, if he were occupying the chair of the Senate, he would be obliged to rule out of order.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, if there is anything in the rules of the Senate which provides that we can not speak of the history of a bill in the House of Representatives, that is only an additional argument why the rules of the Senate should be amended. I am not casting any reflection upon the House of Representatives, but I submit to the good sense of the present occupant of the chair that the history of a bill, and simply a statement of its procedure through the House of Representatives, is not a violation of any rule of this body or of any other body, and unless the Chair rules—I do not understand the Senator from New Hampshire to make any point of order——

Mr. CHANDLER. I made it in advance, knowing something of what I thought the Senator intended to say, so that by way of caution he might refrain from making any unparliamentary reference to proceedings in the other House.

Mr. HILL. I was not making any unparliamentary reference. I was proceeding to give the history of this bill; and I think that is perfectly proper. The bill, as I said, was introduced by a Representative from Pennsylvania, and simply provided for the inspection of immigrants. That was all there was of it, in one section. The bill was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

The Committee on Immigration was about to take up the bill and proceed to the consideration of it when a motion was made by Mr. STONE to discharge the committee from its further consideration, which was agreed to, and it was then referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, of which he was a member. Subsequently, when bills of this character were being called up in the House of Representatives and when the House was depleted, when, as I understand, a large number of its members were here in the Senate Chamber——

Mr. CHANDLER. I rise to a question of order, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire will state his point of order.

Mr. CHANDLER. The point of order is that it is not competent for the Senator to state what he is about to state with reference to the passage of this bill through the House of Representatives. For instance, the Senator is proceeding to say that the bill was taken up when a large number of the members of the House were out of the House, attending in this Chamber, perhaps listening to a speech by the Senator himself.

Mr. President, it is entirely incompetent for the Senator to say anything in connection with the passage of this bill through the House of Representatives that is in derogation of the text of the bill as it comes to us with the certificate of the Clerk of the House that it has passed the House of Representatives.

Mr. HILL. Possibly what I have to say may be in commendation of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands the Senator from New Hampshire makes the point of order as to what the Senator from New York was about to say. It is utterly impossible for the Chair to rule upon a question of that kind.

Mr. CHANDLER. The Chair will allow me to say that I make the point of order as to what the Senator has already said.

Mr. HALE. What is the Senator's authority? I wish we could have his authority for the point of order.

Mr. CHANDLER. The Senator from New York proceeded to state that when this bill was taken up in the House of Representatives a large number of the members of the House were absent from the House. I suppose he is about to criticise——

Mr. HILL. I was about to say there was no rule——

Mr. CHANDLER. I infer from what the Senator has said that he was about to criticise the bill because it passed in a thin House.

Mr. HILL. That is no reflection upon the bill.

Mr. CHANDLER. That is in derogation of the bill, and it is not within the rules.

Mr. HALE. What is the Senator's authority when he says that no remark shall be made in derogation of a bill? What is there in the rule, and where is it found, which forbids comment upon the proceedings of one House of Congress by a member of the other?

Mr. CHANDLER. Of course I am not so familiar with parliamentary law as the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE], but I understand, not that there is a specific rule, but that under the general rule of parliamentary law it is not competent to refer to proceedings at the same session in the House of Representatives, except to the formal acts of that House.

Mr. HALE. My recollection about it is—I am not very familiar with the rules upon this subject—that this has been invoked many times heretofore during my service here, but rather as a matter of courtesy between the two Houses, which should be observed by members of either House, than in any express provision. I do not know of anything in our rules which forbids such a reference.

If it has ever had any force as a part of the body of parliamentary law between the two Houses, it is to prevent unseemly and improper comment in one House upon the proceedings of the other; but it has always seemed to me that that must rest largely in the discretion of the Senator or Member of the House of Representatives himself. I do not remember that a Presiding Officer has ever arrested such a reference. The old Senator from Vermont [Mr. EDMUNDS], whom we all know, invoked the point, as I remember, and possibly while in the chair may have so ruled, though I am not certain about that; but generally pretty large liberty has been permitted and it has been left to the discretion of the Senator who is upon the floor.

Mr. GRAY. I think, if the Senator will allow me, there has been a ruling at this session by the Chair on that matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will have read for the information of the Senate the general parliamentary law and its limitations as found on page 216 of Jefferson's Manual.

Mr. HALE. Not in the Senate rules?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No, the general parliamentary law.

The Secretary read as follows:

It is a breach of order in debate to notice what has been said on the same subject in the other House, or the particular votes or majorities on it there; because the opinion of each House should be left to its own independency, not to be influenced by the proceedings of the other; and the quoting them might beget reflections leading to a misunderstanding between the two Houses.—6 Grey, 22.

Mr. HOAR. It is very well known, I suppose, that Jefferson's Manual was prepared by Mr. Jefferson for his own government and for the information of the Senate when he became its Presiding Officer. So that in point of fact Jefferson's Manual, though not adopted in terms into our rules, as far as I now remember, is an authoritative statement of the rule of order.

It is very well settled, I suppose, that it is out of order to refer to the votes or proceedings in the House of Representatives, to what has been said there, or to the particular votes or majority there; but that rule is taken from the English rule, and the authority for it is Grey's Precedents, in the passage which the Chair has just caused to be read; but it is absolutely as well settled as the other that that is a rule of form and not of substance, and that it is in order to speak of the House as "another place," or as "a body whose proceedings are reported in a document placed on our tables known as the RECORD," or any other mode of getting out the thing except by actually naming it.

It is done every day here, and I suppose frequently in the British Parliament. It is just like the rule which prohibits the naming of a member of the Senate. It is not in order to speak of what was said by Mr. GRAY, of Delaware, but it is in order to speak of what was said by the senior Senator from Delaware, which is exactly the same thing. I suppose that there is nothing better settled in parliamentary procedure, both in this country and in England, than that there is a perfect right to use the substance of that thing, simply avoiding the little formality of the name.

Mr. HALE. Has it not been very common, in the observation of the Senator, that Senators upon the floor quote in terms from speeches made in the House of Representatives? They say "in another place," and in that way everything is brought up which is done in the other body.

Mr. GRAY. Mr. President——

Mr. HOAR. I wish to make one other suggestion before the Senator proceeds.

Mr. GRAY. I am not going on. I merely wished to ask the Senator a single question.

Mr. HOAR. The fact that at large expense everything which is said and done in the other House is laid upon our tables every morning, and that at equally large expense everything we say and do is laid on their tables, would make it seem exceedingly preposterous that we should not avail ourselves of the information thus obtained.

Mr. GRAY. This question is an interesting one, though I have no interest in it, except to see administered the well-established rules of procedure; but after the interesting statement which the Senator has given of what this rule means, which I am not at all prepared to take issue with him about, I ask how he interprets that part of Jefferson's Manual which gives the reason for the rule by saying that it is in order to preserve the independency of the two Houses as to each other? If that be the object of the rule, how is that object attained if we may by circumlocution destroy it?

Mr. HOAR. It is not.

Mr. GRAY. I merely wished to ask the Senator that question for information.

Mr. HOAR. It is not. It is a rule which was established, and that reason was assigned for it; but the same parliamentary custom which established it has departed from it.

Mr. GRAY. That reason, then, would not be consistent with the interpretation the Senator from Massachusetts puts on it as a rule of form and not of substance, would it?

Mr. HOAR. Not wholly. I do not suppose any man would now seriously contend that each House ought to be left to its own independency and not be influenced by the proceedings of the other. It would be an absurd position for either branch to take. You might as well say that each member of the Senate ought to be left to his own independency and not be influenced by the reasons or authority of another Senator.

Mr. GRAY. The Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE] spoke of it as being an unusual thing to call a Senator to order for the transgression of that rule. I recollect, at this session, not a great while ago, the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH] was called to order for reading extracts from a speech made in the House of Representatives, and the point of order was sustained by the occupant of the chair; I forget whether it was the Vice-President or someone else.

Mr. HOAR. If the Senator from Oregon had said "an interesting speech has been made in another place by a member of a body whose proceedings we have laid on our tables every morning" he would have been perfectly in order, and the point of order could not have been sustained. Of course, it is a distinction without a difference.

But to complete the illustration—and I think every Senator who hears me will agree with me—it is the well-established custom of these two bodies, while the rule prohibits me from speaking of the Senator from Delaware by his name, I may otherwise refer to him and speak of him as "the handsome Senator from Delaware."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. This discussion is proceeding, of course, by unanimous consent.

Mr. HALE. Only a word, Mr. President. The truth is the rule, and the reasons which have been given for it, have become absolutely obsolete.

Mr. GRAY. That may be.

Mr. HALE. They are of no account. The conditions which are presupposed in the reading from Jefferson's Manual do not exist. It is not expected that either House will be in any way influenced by the action of the other any more than, as suggested by the Senator from Massachusetts, any one member shall not be influenced by the action or the argument of another, and it never has been thought worth while to incorporate any part of this old, obsolete rule, based upon obsolete reasons, in the rules of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state that this question has been frequently ruled upon since the present occupant of the chair has been a member of the Senate, and very frequently by the former Senator from Kansas, Mr. Ingalls, who was so long the President pro tempore of the Senate. That Senator always held that the provision of Jefferson's Manual which has been read should govern the Senate, and the chair is of opinion that that ruling has been fully sustained by the Senate on an appeal at the present session.

In the case alluded to by the Senator from Delaware when the point of order was made as to a quotation from a speech delivered by a member of the other branch of Congress, which was referred to by the Senator from Oregon, and commented upon by him, when the point of order was made, the Vice-President decided that during the same Congress no speech made by a member of the other branch of Congress could be read or criticised during such Congress. An appeal was taken from that decision, and the Chair was sustained by a vote of 42 to 2.

The Chair will, therefore, simply ask the Senator from New York [Mr. HILL] to be governed by the limitation provided in the parliamentary rule which has been read from the desk.

Mr. PLATT. Mr. President, if the Senator from New York will allow me, I have never known the point of order to be made more than two or three times during my experience in the Senate that it was improper to refer to what had been said in debate in the other House. Two or three times that point of order has been raised, and, as stated by the Chair, under the excitement of a political tariff debate, the point of order was raised against the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH], when he was reading from a speech which had been delivered in the House of Representatives: and it was decided that it was improper to read from a speech which had been delivered there.

I think there was something said about it having been delivered at this session; but since that decision was made by the Senate, I venture to say that I have known the same thing done in the Senate twenty times without any point of order being made upon it.

Mr. DOLPH. The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS] read elaborately the other day, without being called to order, from a speech made in the House of Representatives.

Mr. PLATT. It is frequently done, and done without the interposition of any point of order. The last time that I remember to have heard the matter discussed in the Senate and a point of order made was when the then Senator from Kansas, Mr. Ingalls, was in the chair. Speaking merely from recollection, though I think I am not mistaken, he said that, strictly speaking, it was not in order to refer to anything which had been said in the other House, but that the practice of the Senate was such that that rule and the strictness of that rule was avoided day by day by referring to what had been done in another place, which he did not think was any violation whatever of that rule. That is the last time I remember to have heard the matter discussed before the case which has been alluded to here.

I do not want even this decision to pass so that it shall stand as a rule of the Senate that under no circumstances can anything which has been done or said in the House of Representatives be alluded to here, without some protest on my part. I do not wish to take up further time now in discussing it, but at some future time I shall be glad to discuss the question more fully.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, then I suppose I am at liberty to state that at another place, which I shall not mention, there was no roll call, that a Committee on Immigration did not report this bill, and that, finally, this bill came to this Senate?

Mr. CHANDLER. I rise to a question of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire will state his point of order.

Mr. HILL. That is all I am going to say.

Mr. CHANDLER. I make the point of order that the statement of the Senator ought not to have been made.

I should like to have closed the discussion of the question of the point of order; but inasmuch as it was discussed by such learned parliamentarians as I see before me, I waited in the hope that I should be allowed to say a few words before the final decision. I do not read what I am about to read in order to convince——

Mr. HOAR. I desire to ask that the words excepted to be taken down, under the rule, before the Senator proceeds.

Mr. CHANDLER. I wait for the action of the Chair upon the point made by the Senator from Massachusetts.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands that the request of the Senator from Massachusetts only refers to a personal question.

Mr. HOAR. If the Chair will have the rule read, it will be seen that when a Senator is called to order for words in debate the words excepted to must be taken down. That is the rule.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will have the rule read upon the question made by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER], but as the Senator from New Hampshire made the question of order, the Chair thought it proper to allow him to present the authority to which he was referring.

Mr. HOAR. I object to it, Mr. President. I desire to have the point understood that there is objection. I hope the Chair will take that course.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire will designate the language which he considers to be out of order.

Mr. CHANDLER. I designate the language out of order which the Senator from New York [Mr. HILL] has just uttered; and, following the example of a great lawyer in another place, I only want to show, not that the Chair is wrong—because the ruling of the Chair as to matters spoken in debate or as to reading a speech made in the other House is correct—but as to the remarks of the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE] and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR], I want to show how utterly ignorant of parliamentary law Mr. Luther Stearns Cushing was; and it seems to me I ought to be allowed to do that, if the Chair will permit me.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will require the language of the Senator from New York to be read if the Senator from Massachusetts insists upon it.

Mr. HOAR. I insist upon it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Reporter will read the remark of the Senator from New York referred to.

Mr. HILL. I could refer to what took place in the hearing before the Senate committee, but I might be met with another objection, that I have no right to disclose what took place before the Senate committee which reported the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York will suspend until the stenographer reads the language of the Senator from New York to which the Senator from New Hampshire took exception.

Mr. HILL. I withdraw the remark, if that will satisfy the Senator from New Hampshire.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. CHANDLER. My feelings are not wounded. I merely want the same right to speak to the question of order that the Senator from New York has had.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands that by unanimous consent the remark of the Senator from New York is withdrawn.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. HILL. For what purpose?

Mr. CHANDLER. In order that I may show how little Luther Stearns Cushing knew of parliamentary law.

Mr. HILL. That will be conceded.

Mr. HALE. There is no use of spending time on that.

Mr. PLATT. I suggest that there is no quorum present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut suggests the lack of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aldrich,	Dolph,	Jarvis,	Perkins,
Allison,	Faulkner,	Jones, Nev.	Platt,
Bate,	Frye,	Kyle,	Power,
Berry,	Gallinger,	Lindsay,	Proctor,
Blackburn,	George,	Lodge,	Pugh,
Blanchard,	Gibson,	McMillan,	Roach,
Brice,	Gorman,	Manderson,	Sherman,
Call,	Gray,	Mills,	Stewart,
Camden,	Hale,	Mitchell, Oregon	Teller,
Chandler,	Hawley,	Palmer,	Turpie,
Cockrell,	Higgins,	Pasco,	Washburn,
Coke,	Hill,	Patton,	White.
Davis,	Hoar,	Peffer,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-one Senators have answered to their names. A quorum of the Senate is present. The Senator from New York [Mr. HILL] is entitled to the floor.

Mr. CHANDLER. What has become of the request of the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR], that the words of the Senator from New York be taken down?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York asked unanimous consent that the words be withdrawn, which was granted.

Mr. CHANDLER. I was on the floor endeavoring to speak at that time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair stated the request for unanimous consent deliberately, and announced that there being no objection, the remarks were withdrawn.

Mr. CHANDLER. I now ask unanimous consent to be allowed to say a few words in reference to the point of order. The Senator from New York went on after the Chair had ruled on the point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. HILL. Certainly.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Cushing says:

In order to the preservation of these essential privileges of equality and independence it is important that neither branch should encroach upon the other by undertaking any matter of business which the Constitution has confided exclusively to such other branch or interfere in any matter depending before us so as to preclude, or even influence, that freedom of debate or of action which is essential to a free council, or claim and much less undertake to exercise any control or authority over the persons of the members or officers of the other.

Hence it is a general rule that neither of the two Houses can properly take notice of any bill or other matter depending in, or of votes given, or of speeches made, by the members of the other until the same are communicated or otherwise promulgated in the usual parliamentary manner.

The first two quotations are from sections 1702 and 1703; but in section 1705 it says:

In consequence of this regular publication of the debates, there is a strong temptation constantly presented to members to disregard the rule. The same questions are discussed by persons belonging to the same parties in both Houses, and speeches are constantly referred to by members which this rule would exclude from their notice. The rule has been so frequently enforced that most members, in both Houses, have learned a dexterous mode of evading it by transparent ambiguities of speech; and, although there are few orders more important than this for the conduct of debate, and for observing courtesy between the two Houses, none, perhaps, are more generally transgressed. An ingenious orator—

Doubtless Mr. Cushing had reference then to the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR]— may break through any rules, in spirit, and yet observe them to the letter. In order to render the rule, as above stated, fully intelligible in its practical application, it will be necessary to consider it in a threefold point of view.

Then the author proceeds:

Second, as forbidding all reference to or introduction of the proceedings or debates of the other House, for the purpose of commenting on them, either by way of answer, explanation, commendation, discussion, or animadversion.

Section 1710 says:

It is irregular also to refer to or introduce the proceedings or debates of the other house, though there is no question pending at the time, for the purpose of making them the subject of comment, whether in the way of answer, explanation, commendation, discussion, or animadversion, and whenever any such allusion is made in any form in which it can be brought within the control of the house as disorderly, it is immediately checked by the Speaker; though, perhaps, the matter itself might with strict regularity be introduced into the debate, were it not for the impropriety of referring for it to the other house.

The following are instances, taken at random, in which references of this kind have been checked as irregular: Where a member said he was astonished to hear that a particular clause in a bill was the production of a noble lord; where a member said "he thought it likely that this day would not pass without a motion being made by a noble lord in another place;" where a member said "he had read the argument of a noble earl in another place on this subject," etc.; making the clauses of a bill in progress through the other house the subject of discussion; where a member "congratulated the house and the country on the patriotic, open, and manly declaration made last night by an individual, a most illustrious member of the upper house;" where a member attempted to read the minister's speech, in the lords, from a newspaper, beginning with the words "my lords;" where a member said that he "saw in a publication of that morning expressions attributed to a noble lord which he believed and hoped he had never made use of—the marquis of Londonderry was reported to have stated in a public place," etc.; where a member said "that a certain individual had stood up in his place in another house to stigmatize the people of Ireland," referring to the majority by which a bill had passed in the other house, and commenting on the constitution of that majority; where a member said "that a noble lord in another place had thought proper to make the interests of a mighty people and the captivity of Don Carlos the subject of merriment."

I submit that the remarks made by the Senator from New York, which he withdrew after making them, were absolutely out of order as a reference to the proceedings in the other House of Congress.

Mr. HALE. Will the Senator from New York yield to me for a moment?

Mr. HILL. Certainly.

Mr. HALE. I merely wish to read a half dozen lines from the Journal of the Senate, showing how this matter has been considered here and as being of some practical force contrasted with anything which is found in Cushing's Manual. I may say here that I do not know of any more dreary, unsatisfactory reading in any book upon any subject than is found in Cushing's Manual:

FEBRUARY 28, 1883.

* * * * * * * *

On motion of Mr. Garland, that the Senate reconsider its vote agreeing to the committee of conference asked by the House of Representatives on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5538) to reduce internal-revenue taxation,

Mr. Garland asked to have read an extract from the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of the 27th instant of the proceedings of the House of Representatives relating thereto.

Mr. Ingalls raised a question of order, viz, that it was not in order to refer to any action had in the House of Representatives upon any question not officially communicated to the Senate.

The President pro tempore sustained the question of order.

From the decision of the Chair Mr. Garland appealed to the Senate.

On motion of Mr. MORRILL to lay the appeal on the table,

It was determined in the negative, { Yeas ..... 24 / Nays 26

Reversing the ruling of the Chair and deciding that the allusion could be made, then the point of order was withdrawn. That is the practical result, and I will set it against Cushing's Manual any day or any hour.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, in the place of the House bill, which contains simply one section providing for consular inspection abroad, the Immigration Committee of the Senate substituted the bill which relates to anarchists, to which there is no objection on the part of the Senator from New Hampshire, and also add a provision for inspection by certain Treasury agents to be appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury. The real and only point of difference between the Senator from New Hampshire and myself in regard to the bill is this: Shall there be the consular inspection, which was provided in the House bill, or shall there be certain Treasury agents to be appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury? That is the entire point involved here.

I regret that the Senator from New Hampshire sees fit to antagonize the substitute. It is known that for many years he has been in favor of consular inspection. He has given this subject great study, and I am here to acknowledge that the Senate and the country are indebted to him for much valuable service rendered in the perfection of our immigration laws. He has prepared, and mainly and largely through his efforts many good laws relating to the subject have been put upon the statute books. He is entitled to a large share of the credit for what good has been accomplished by those laws, and certainly much good has been accomplished during the past few years.

I regret to differ with him upon the subject. I entered upon the consideration of the pending bill without any prejudices whatever. I did not know but that I might be in favor of this provision which he favors. The first thing I was met with against consular inspection was that during the administration of President Harrison there was a commission appointed under the Treasury Department to go abroad to investigate among other things consular inspection. The commission consisted of Hon. J. B. Weber, then commissioner of immigration of the port of New York and formerly a member of Congress from the county of Erie in New York State; Capt. Judson N. Cross, Mr. Walter Kempter, Mr. Joseph Powderly, and Mr. H. J. Schulteis. All but Mr. Weber were immigrant inspectors.

The commission, consisting of five persons, went abroad to investigate the whole subject of consular inspection with others. I hold in my hand the report transmitted to Congress in 1892, wherein four out of five of these gentlemen, having given the subject their personal investigation, find that it is inexpedient to have this inspection abroad. Thereupon a law was passed, in the enactment of which I think the Senator from New Hampshire largely participated, whereby a system of inspection was provided for here at home. Having read this report I was convinced that the majority, four out of five of the commission, consisting of Mr. Weber and the others, were right in opposition to this form of inspection.

Mr. FRYE. Did the commission report against consular inspection?

Mr. HILL. Exactly. Here is an elaborate report made upon that subject, but unless some one desires it I shall not have it read. Having read that report I, for one, having no preconceived opinions upon the subject whatever, thought such inspection unwise. The execution of the immigration laws is now in the hands of the Secretary of the Treasury and his subordinate bureaus. The matter is directly in the hands of the Superintendent of Immigration, who is the head of a bureau in the Treasury Department.

It is deemed wise by those who have given this subject much investigation, and in that respect I say that I regret to differ from the Senator from New Hampshire, not to have two Departments of the Government meddling with the same subject, but that it is best that to the Treasury Department, which is invested under existing laws with the carrying out of the immigration system, should be given whatever authority is to be given, and that the Department of State, which has charge of the consular service, should have nothing to do with it. Now, that strikes me as right and proper.

In addition I mailed a copy of the House bill to the Secretary of State and the Secretary of the Treasury, asking them to give their opinions in regard to the propriety of the bill as it came to the Senate, and we have before us a copy of their replies. I hold in my hand the report of the Secretary of State, in which he sees practical objections to the proposed House bill.

The Secretary of the Treasury also replies in an elaborate communication, in which he thinks it unwise to proceed in that way. He suggests that the administration of our immigration laws should be left where they are now, in charge of the Secretary of the Treasury and the Treasury Department, and he says that he ought to have authority for the appointment of some inspectors to go abroad, to be stationed at some of the principal ports, and there to conduct an inspection; and he gives his reasons for it in the communication.

The committee therefore reported in favor of the proposition. The substitute, as it comes here, was prepared at the Treasury Department and submitted to the Immigration Committee, and the committee concluded to report the bill.

Mr. FRYE. Does the Secretary of the Treasury suggest how many inspectors will be required?

Mr. ALLISON. As many as may be deemed necessary.

Mr. HILL. That is it.

Mr. FRYE. Does the Secretary make any suggestion as to what number he may deem necessary?

Mr. HILL. He does not; but of course the number will always be limited by the appropriation. The substitute reads:

At such foreign ports of departure as he may deem necessary.

There are supposed to be about nine principal ports from which immigrants come. We provide simply that that salary of each inspector shall be $2,500, and it is proposed to appropriate for the whole carrying out of the proposed law the sum of $60,000, which was regarded by the full committee as a proper sum.

Mr. President, there is no politics in the bill. I am not here pleading that any additional patronage, as such, be given to the Secretary of the Treasury. I am under no obligations to that official, as the Senate well knows. In the original appointment of the commissioner of immigration for the port of New York neither my colleague nor I was consulted in regard to the appointment, although I was chairman of the Committee on Immigration. I favor the bill not because I desire to give any additional patronage to the Secretary of the Treasury, but because, in my judgment as a Senator, it, under all the circumstances, is the proper thing to do.

Whether wisely or unwisely, these gentlemen are to be in charge of public affairs for the next two years. Both the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of State being opposed to consular inspection, it seems to me it would be unwise for the committee, and they took that view, or for the Senate or Congress to impose those duties upon the consuls. It is better under all the circumstances to take the bill as the Secretary of the Treasury has presented it to us here, and see what satisfactory results may be brought about by its honest enforcement.

It was said Saturday that the inspectors would have no authority as officials abroad. They would not come in contact with the Governments. It is not necessary that they should be attached to the consular service. They are simply there to inspect, to report, and to send forward their reports with each vessel. They would have no authority, of course, to control the vessel. The vessels may bring such people here, if the company insist upon it, but the reports come with the vessel, and are an additional precaution. Besides, the inspectors stationed at these various ports will make inquiries.

That is to be their sole business, to make inquiries in all places from which immigrants come, for the purpose of ascertaining the true character of those immigrants. The consuls scattered throughout foreign countries are not adapted for this service, I am free to say. Some of them who have been appointed and confirmed here I do not think are adapted for that sort of business. Besides, I say it is not necessary for the purpose of discharging these duties that they should be in any manner connected with the Department of State. The Treasury Department now has Treasury agents abroad to look after matters of revenue.

The Secretary now has four or five different Treasury agents stationed abroad, who are discharging duties relating to commerce. They have nothing to do with the Department of State, and if they can discharge their duties, so can the inspectors proposed to be appointed for this purpose. Therefore, the point that the Treasury officials should have something to do with the Department of State is not well taken.

The bill does not interfere with the inspection which is to be had at the port of arrival. Our board of inquiry authorized under the act of 1893 is still in force, and inspection is had here by that board. This simply is an additional inspection abroad under charge of the Treasury officials.

This is an important subject. The $60,000 proposed to be appropriated by the bill is a mere pittance compared with the great subject of immigration.

I think it is best under all the circumstances to take the bill as the Secretary of the Treasury recommends it. In the light of his opposition, in the light of the opposition of the Secretary of State, and in the light of the report made by Mr. Weber and others who went abroad expressly to investigate this subject, it strikes me that it is the wise and proper thing to do to have Treasury agents abroad for this purpose instead of consular inspection.

Mr. President, it is not our object, while desiring to prevent improper immigration, to place unreasonable obstacles in the path of honest emigrants. The emigrants are situated in the interior. They desire to come to this country. How can our consuls at one of those ports know anything about the circumstances, the history, or the character of the man? He is hundreds of miles away from the place where the consul is. Before the emigrant knows whether he is coming, he must travel to find the consul. The consul is not in a situation to make proper inquiries. It would be a useless and unnecessary expense to the emigrant.

It puts him to unreasonable trouble, and it would only operate to the inconvenience of the honest emigrant. I do not know that it is a proper argument to urge here, but I simply say that all the German papers in the United States, without regard to party, are against a provision for consular certificates. They do not desire to have such a system adopted. They do not object to this bill; they do not object to any strict regulation; but they think consular certificates would be an unreasonable obstacle put in the way of and would cause unnecessary inconvenience and unnecessary travel to all those people. Therefore I think that under all these circumstances we had better adopt the suggestion of the Secretary of the Treasury and provide for inspection abroad by Treasury agents.

That is all there is of this question. The Senator from New Hampshire, as I said, seems to adhere with a tenacity worthy of a better cause to the system of consular inspection abroad. If it had been tried years ago it might have proved a success. I do not say that it would not prove a success, but I think under the circumstances it is not good policy for us to try it now. I desire to say right here that under existing laws, and the Senator from New Hampshire is entitled to large credit for their enactment, our immigration has fallen off one-half.

Twenty-three hundred undesirable immigrants were returned from the port of New York last year at the expense of the steamship companies. A better class of people are coming in now. There was a reduction of over one-half in the amount of immigration to this country during the past year as compared with the preceding year. As I say, our existing laws are working well. It is desirable that there should be this additional precaution, namely, the nine Treasury agents sent abroad, whose sole business it shall be to make inquiries and to report with every vessel.

The theory is that they will look over the manifest and the list, make inquiries as to who the passengers are, get all the facts concerning them, and if an emigrant is undesirable protest against his being sent. They can not prevent his coming, if the master of the steamship desires to take him, but the inspector gives to the master a protest. The master is required to submit the protest at New York, and there it goes as additional evidence before this board.

I have thus briefly and concisely stated the points of difference involved in the measure.

There is no dispute between the Senator from New Hampshire and myself or any other member of the committee in regard to the provisions of the bill which relate to anarchists. All are agreed upon that. The only point of difference is that the Senator from New Hampshire desires inspection by the consuls who are abroad, and I think it wiser, under the circumstances, not to impose this additional duty upon them, and that we shall appoint these additional Treasury agents who are to have charge of this business exclusively.

Mr. WASHBURN. I should like to inquire of the Senator from New York whether he understands that the inspectors to be appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury would have the same powers and the same scope of action as consuls in performing the same kind of an investigation?

Mr. HILL. Their scope of action would be greater, because the consuls of course in the discharge of their other duties must remain more or less at the port where they are stationed, whereas the agents, having other duties to discharge, can go into the country and can make inquires. I am inclined to think that it is far better that they should be entrusted with this power.

The laws are working satisfactorily. Our present Superintendent of Immigration seems to be a vigilant officer, and is doing the best he can. The results show well, and if the Treasury officials in their wisdom think this is a proper thing to do, I think it is wise upon the part of Congress to pass the bill. Those are the reasons and I think the only reasons why the committee reported the present bill as a substitute for the House bill.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, both the bill as it came from the other House and the substitute proposed by the committee seem to me inadequate for the subject of immigration, but I recognize fully that in dealing with the question of immigration it is necessary to deal with it slowly and to take up one subject at a time. The bill as it came from the House put no additional restrictions on immigration. It simply provided for a method of enforcing the laws of the United States by consular inspection abroad in addition to the inspection of the Treasury officials here which now exists. That has seemed to me a valuable measure. I greatly regret that the committee would not agree to adopt it.

But the moment that measure was passed the Administration, which had hitherto taken no apparent interest in the question of immigration, appeared by the Commissioner of Immigration and by letters from the Secretary of the Treasury and the Department of State in opposition to that bill and with a bill of their own. The bill of their own is that which is reported by the Senator from New York [Mr. HILL] as a substitute passed by the House. It divides itself into two parts. There are certain clauses relating to the exclusion of anarchists. As to the wisdom of those provisions the committee is absolutely agreed. We all of us think that those clauses ought to become law, and to become law without delay; and I shall not enter into any discussion of those provisions.

The fourth section provides for Treasury agents, designed, I understand, to take the place of the consular inspection proposed in the bill as passed by the House. I have not the least objection to the Treasury agents. I am in favor of establishing every possible means of properly sifting the immigration now coming to this country, and there is no doubt that the present period is peculiarly favorable for such action, because the immigration has fallen off very largely. There is no need to go into the reasons for it now, but the fact is that the immigration has fallen off one-half on the figures, and if we take the statements of the Immigration Commissioners about returning immigrants, it will be found that there has practically been no addition to the population of the country this year in the grand total by immigration. Therefore it is a peculiarly fortunate time to make any changes or additions to the law.

The difficulty with Treasury agents is that they have no powers at all on the other side of the water. The Senator from New York says they will examine the manifests; that they will go on the ships and examine the immigrants. That is purely a permissive right. They go there if the owner of the ship allows them to go and look at the manifest. They are clothed with no authority whatever. I do not mean to say they would not do some good and effective work. I think they would. I think also that they would probably in practice be allowed to inspect the immigrants and to send out a great deal of valuable information such as the Senator from New York has described; but I think it is distinctly an inferior method to that proposed in the bill as passed by the other House.

I should like very much to see that bill become a law. I recognize that the opposition of the Administration to consular inspection has rendered the passing of the House provision in any form very difficult, but I think that it is at least due to the House which passed the bill by a unanimous vote that a portion of the bill should go back at least into conference, so that the other House should have an opportunity of deciding further with us upon the fate of its own measure.

Mr. HILL. Will the Senator allow me? Of course that would be done. We simply propose to amend the House bill.

Mr. LODGE. The proposition I make to the Senator from New York would be that the clauses relating to anarchists and Treasury agents, which comprise the whole of the substitute, should be sent back, not as a substitute, but as amendments to the bill. Perhaps it would go back in any event——

Mr. HILL. That is the effect of it.

Mr. LODGE. What I desire is simply to carry back the consular inspection clause to the conference committee. Very properly moving as a substitute the amendment of the committee would have the same effect, but the proposition I make is that we should not make it a substitute, but simply add it as an amendment to the text of the House bill and then send the whole bill back.

Mr. HILL. I think calling it a substitute does not add anything to it. It is in fact an amendment to the bill, and when it shall go back to the House, if the House does not concur in the amendment they can strike out any portion and reinstate clauses, or insist upon reinstating their bill. There is no practical difficulty about it if the House desires to do it.

Mr. LODGE. What is the Senator's objection to adding the committee amendment instead of substituting it?

Mr. HILL. The first section of the House bill provides for consular inspection. We strike that out, of course.

Mr. LODGE. The Senator thinks, then, he would be estopped from striking out in conference the first part if we simply add the committee amendment to the text?

Mr. HILL. Oh, no; but we do not want to pass the provision for consular inspection and also a Treasury inspection provision. The conferees may take either, as the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL] suggests.

Mr. LODGE. I do not see that there is the least inconsistency between consular inspection and inspection by Treasury agents. I should be very glad to have them both, for I do not think that we can make too strong a provision for the enforcement of the existing laws on immigration.

Mr. HILL. We must strike out the first section, because if we leave that alone and simply add to it and pass it there would be nothing in conflict between the two Houses.

Mr. LODGE. That is the point on which I ask the Senator. Of course the majority of the committee do not desire the passage of the House provision, and if we simply add to it and agree to it that prevents further dealing with it in conference. I see that that would, of course, prevent the majority of the committee from carrying out their views. But I do not want to get the whole measure into conference, and as I understand the Senator from New York he expects to take it all back into conference and discuss all the features of the bill with the House conferees.

Mr. FRYE. Every line of the bill will undoubtedly be in conference.

Mr. LODGE. I understand every line will be in conference as agreed upon now if the bill is amended as proposed by the committee. To that of course I should not think of offering any objection. I am most anxious to see any proper legislation for the restriction of immigration, no matter how trifling it may be in amount. I am anxious to expedite it and see it passed. I think the anachist clauses drawn by the Secretary of the Treasury are particularly valuable at this time. Therefore, so far as I am concerned, I propose to give my support to the bill as proposed by the Department.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President, in view of the suggestions of the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE], and on account of the very great importance of some legislation at this session, I will waive my objection to the substitution of the Treasury provision for the House provision, so that the whole subject may go into conference. After the Senate has considered certain amendments which the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR] and the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PEFFER] wish to propose, I think there need be no difficulty in passing this afternoon the bill as reported by the Senator from New York. Though I am not willing to give up the idea of consular certificates I will not take the responsibility of preventing the action proposed by the committee if the bill can be passed and a conference requested this afternoon.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. President, I address myself to the substitute reported by the committee that I may get at its real meaning. I find by the third section—

That in cases where, upon the trial and conviction of any foreign-born and unnaturalized person of any crime or misdemeanor in any United States court, or court of record of any State or Territory or the District of Columbia, the presiding judge shall certify that from the evidence produced at the trial he is satisfied that such alien is an anarchist, or that he is not attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, etc.

And that the judge may order his deportation.

In addition to other punishments adjudged, shall be taken before a commissioner of immigration, at a port of entry, who shall order his deportation.

I wish to know whether that will apply to immigrants who are now in the United States or whether it is intended to apply to such as may hereafter come to the United States.

Mr. HILL. I think the bill would be held to apply to any objectionable alien immigrant who is in the United States now.

Mr. PALMER. That, then, I accept as the true construction of the proposed act. I find by the fifth section of the proposed act—

That the fact that an immigrant has declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States shall constitute no bar to proceedings against him under this act or under the acts to which it is an amendment.

I infer, then, that an alien who has come to the United States and may have declared his intention to become a citizen is still an unnaturalized alien, and that is he would be probably liable under this proposed act to trial and conviction of any crime. I desire to understand the provision. I read again from the third section—

That in cases where, upon the trial and conviction of any foreign-born and unnaturalized person of any crime.

I assume that an unnaturalized person who has declared his intention to become a citizen would not be protected by that declaration.

SEC. 3. That in cases where, upon the trial and conviction of any foreign-born and unnaturalized person of any crime or misdemeanor in any United States court, or court of record of any State or Territory or the District of Columbia, the presiding judge shall certify that from the evidence produced at the trial he is satisfied that such alien is an anarchist, or that he is not attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States and well-disposed to the peace and good order of the same, and that his remaining in this country will be a menace to the Government, or to the peace and well-being of society in general, such convict, in addition to other punishments adjudged, shall be taken before a commissioner of immigration, at a port of entry, who shall order his deportation.

To put a case to illustrate what I apprehend would be the proper interpretation of this act: An alien comes into the United States and makes a declaration of his intention to become a citizen. If he is tried and convicted of any crime or any misdemeanor (it will be observed that the term misdemeanor comprehends almost every offense that is merely an act prohibited, not a felony at common law), then that person, at the discretion of a judge, becomes liable to deportation.

I do not see that any appeal is allowed, and according to the views of the judge as to whether the party was or was not a good citizen, not well disposed to the peace and order of the country, I suppose the judge might order the alien to be transported to any one of the ports of entry of the United States and there be deported. I submit that that is pretty severe.

Now, I turn again to the third section of the amendment, which is not a wise one, it strikes me. I am aware of the prejudice against anarchists. They are odious, and they are deservedly odious, but there are indefinite shades between anarchy as avowed by some and that sentimental anarchism which produces socialism. I do not know where the line of separation is.

Man may entertain merely speculative notions in regard to anarchy; it may be nothing more perhaps than a mere sentiment, and personally he may be one of the most innocent men in the country. I know such men, who teach many great follies, and if their teachings were concrete rather than abstract they would be very bad men. I should dislike to see a simple issue made upon the question whether a man entertained anarchistic beliefs, and I should dislike to see him tried upon the rules prescribed in the second section of this proposed act.

SEC. 2. That at the hearing of aliens charged with being anarchists the board of special inquiry shall diligently inquire of the accused, by pertinent questions, as to his antecedents, political opinions, whether he belongs to any society or association of known anarchistic tendencies, and he may examine the person for marks indicative of such membership; he may accept evidence of the immigrant's common reputation as an anarchist, and the orders, degrees, or judgments of foreign Governments and police notifications as prima facie evidence, which shall be sufficient, unless successfully controverted, to sustain an order of deportation.

There are other provisions of the substitute which seem to me excessively severe. I believe in the right of every human being to change his residence at his pleasure, according to his inclinations or convenience.

Mr. FRYE. A Chinaman?

Mr. PALMER. That is God's law, but we are wiser than the Almighty, it seems, and have determined otherwise.

I am willing to restrict it. It was the custom once to limit it to white men. I believe we have so modified our institutions that the black man, but not the man whose color lies between black and white is allowed to come here. However, I do not believe that mere abstract beliefs about the powers of government or the claims of individuals on society should furnish a cause to inhibit immigration. I think there ought to be an overt act; there ought to be something tangible.

I saw the other day that somebody in Chicago, where almost all unbeliefs find a home, a Baptist preacher, said that Christ was an anarchist. That would be the abstract belief of many men. So I do not like the idea of a conviction based upon mere abstract beliefs when there is no overt act, when the man does nothing except to think foolishly and perhaps speak foolishly. Unless he speaks dangerously, unless he menaces the welfare, the peace and order of society, I should not like to see him punished; and if he is a meritorious man and is guilty of no crime I should not like to see him prohibited from entering this country.

I suggest, therefore, that this measure is in the spirit of our fears rather than in the exercise of wise political judgment. We are agreed to punish anarchists; but it must be remembered that in our eagerness to punish the guilty we ought not to subject the innocent to danger.

I do not like the mode of evidence prescribed. The general rules of evidence have been found adequate for the administration of justice. I do not want to legalize police reports. Decrees and judgments of foreign courts when properly certified would be admissible at common law. I do not like to make any allowance for irregularities or imperfections, and especially do I object to the personal examinations provided for and the weight given to reports of mere irresponsible police authority. I think this is a very dangerous measure, not because it punishes anarchists, but because it may result in inflicting punishment upon the innocent. It is for the innocent that I desire to have protection. The guilty will always find means to take care of themselves.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, the provision contained in section 5 is inserted for the purpose of preventing some of these anarchists from coming to this country and, having neither the fear of God nor man before their eyes, going to the nearest clerk's office and filing an affidavit or certificate of an intention to become a citizen. Foreigners have no abstract right to come into this country. The whole question is, of course, subject to the wise judgment of this country and the people who own the country and have built up its Government.

Aliens who have simply filed a certificate of intention to become citizens are to a certain extent the wards of the Government, under the control of the Government, under the inspection of the Government. The provision is a necessary and proper one, or else a person like Mr. Mowbray, who is now here trying to propagate his sentiments throughout the country, could go to the clerk's office in the city of New York and file his certificate, and of course he would by that means evade the terms of the bill. Therefore it is proper that this provision should be in it. Although an alien has filed a certificate of intention to become a citizen, he is nevertheless an alien all the while until he passes the requisite time and the requisite examination and becomes a full-fledged citizen. The provision is necessary for the purpose of perfecting the bill.

Mr. President, we must legislate pretty severely at this particular time. I hold in my hand the act passed by the British Parliament recently. The English do not attempt to say that an anarchist shall not stay in their country. They give to their authorities absolute authority to remove from the realm any alien when in their judgment it is expedient that he should be removed. It is a very strong act, and it seems to be made necessary by the recent events which have occurred abroad. In other words, her Majesty's officers can deport any alien from the realm whenever it is deemed expedient that it shall be done. I do not advocate that here. We propose to provide, first, that he shall be an alien; and second, that under the wise discretion of our officials the person may be deported. What shall be received as evidence? Is there any question that the young man who killed Carnot showed the other day upon his own statement upon the examination that he was an anarchist of well-known anarchistic tendencies?

I have explained why it is necessary to have a provision for an examination of the person, because there are certain societies which have the mark of their membership placed upon the person in indelible ink. That is well known to be the case in other countries, and it seems to me this alien immigrant must be bound by his common reputation as every citizen in this country is bound by his general reputation.

The orders, decrees, or judgments.

Suppose a well-known anarchist is ordered out of France tomorrow under the severe laws they have just enacted there. He comes to this country. Are we to shut our eyes to what that man has been? Of course we may do the man injustice, but it strikes me that in carrying out a great beneficial law of this character we must make stringent provisions.

It is not conclusive. These "orders, decrees, or judgments" may be accepted as conclusive; and so of the notifications of the police authorities. They are officials of the Government. If the person is ordered out of a city we have a right simply to take that into consideration and, in view of all the other matters disclosed, the party may be ordered out of the country. It appears to me that if we are going to have a law which will be effective, it needs to be strict and it needs to be capable of enforcement.

I agree with all the Senator from Illinois says about the abstract rights of citizens, but I have no sympathy whatever with these people, because they owe no allegiance to God, nor man, nor any government. They strike at everybody.

They strike not only at Government officials and heads of Government, but they strike at their next-door neighbor. They aim to strike down society, and I would slay them as quickly as I would strike a wild beast that came into my track to attack me. To some extent the Government must participate in that spirit for the protection of our Government. We are not troubled except with these people. The honest Irish immigrant gives us no trouble, the German immigrant, the Norwegian, and lots of other people who come here give us no trouble. It is simply a special class that we are aiming at.

It seems to me that the bill proposed as a substitute is in that particular fairly well drawn. Let us try it, and if we discover in its enforcement that any injustice is done to any honest class of people, it can of course be remedied. I think we are obliged to do something like this, or we shall soon witness the scenes that other countries have witnessed.

I propose to offer several amendments to perfect the substitute. Perhaps I may as well do it now as at any other time. In section 2, line 4, after the word "opinions," I move to insert the word "and."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HILL. In line 5, of the same section, before the word "may," I move to strike out the word "he" and insert "it;" so as to read, "And it may examine the person for marks," etc., referring to the board.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HILL. In the same section, on page 3, line 6, before the word "may," I move to strike out "he" and insert "it."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 2, line 6, before the word "may," it is proposed to strike out "he," and insert "it;" so as to read:

It may accept evidence of the immigrant's common reputation as an anarchist, etc.

Mr. HILL. That was a misprint.

Mr. CHANDLER. It has reference to the board.

Mr. HILL. It should read "and it may accept evidence," referring to the board.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HILL. In line 6, of section 3, after the word "or," I move to insert "that he is not a man of good character or."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from New York to the amendment of the committee will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 3, line 6, after the word "or," it is proposed to insert "that he is not a man of good character or;" so as to read:

If such alien is an anarchist, or that he is not a man of good character, or that he is not attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HILL. In line 8, of the same section, on page 4, I move to strike out the word "and" where it first occurs and insert the words "or is not."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 3, line 8, after the words "United States," it is proposed to strike out the word "and" and insert "or is not;" so as to read, "attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States or is not well disposed to the peace and good order of the same."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HILL. In the same line, I move to strike out the words "peace and," and insert the word "happiness." I will state that these are amendments which were suggested by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN].

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In line 9, of section 3, after the word "order," it is proposed to insert "and happiness."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HILL. In the same section, line 12, after the word "shall," I move to insert "after the term of his imprisonment shall have expired."

Mr. CHANDLER. I suggest to the Senator that there may be some other punishment inflicted besides imprisonment, and therefore it would be better to say "in addition to other punishments adjudged and suffered."

Mr. HILL. I think that would be an improvement. Then, instead of the amendment I have proposed, I will move, in section 3, line 12, after the word "adjudged," to insert the words "and suffered."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I call the attention of the Senator from New York to the language in the bill in line 9, of section 4, "required by section 1 of the act of 1893," I suggest to the Senator that he should there insert the date of the act referred to, which is the act of March 3, 1893.

Mr. HILL. In section 4, line 9, after the words "act of," I move to insert "March 3;" so as to read, "the act of March 3, 1893."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HILL. The Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR] has an amendment he desires to offer.

Mr. PROCTOR. I am in favor of the whole of what is known as the Treasury bill. I also think there are some excellent provisions in the bill as it came from the House of Representatives and some that are very unwise. If they both go into the conference the good may be saved and the unwise rejected.

It has been objected to the fourth section of the Treasury bill that it would tend to do away with the inspection now required under the very excellent bill formulated by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER], and known as the act of March 3, 1893. I think, therefore, it would be well to make some declaration expressing the purpose of this bill, and I offer an amendment to that effect.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment of the Senator from Vermont will be stated.

The SECRETARY. At the end of the bill it is proposed to insert the following as a new section:

SEC. 6. The inspection at the port of departure authorized by this act shall not in any manner take the place of, limit, or modify the inspection required at the port of arrival by the act of March 3, 1893, but shall be preliminary and auxiliary thereto.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Vermont to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. FAULKNER. I suggest to the Senator whether he had not better also make that declaration cover the inspection by the officers of the steamship companies. We do not want to do anything to relieve the steamship companies from their obligations in this matter. It seems this only refers to inspection by the officers at the ports in this country.

Mr. CHANDLER. I will say to the Senator from West Virginia that I do not think that is necessary. We do not require specific inspections by the steamship companies, but we require, as he will remember, lists or manifests, and the word "inspections" is not properly applicable to those.

Mr. FAULKNER. It is not exactly applicable, I will say to the Senator from New Hampshire; but yet, in order to make those lists, the steamship companies have to make a very thorough examination of immigrants.

Mr. CHANDLER. The Senator ought to say "nor to relieve any steamship company from responsibility under existing law." There would be no objection to that.

Mr. FAULKNER. That is what I desire the Senator from Vermont to insert in the proper place in his amendment.

Mr. PROCTOR. If the Senator will prepare the amendment I will accept it.

Mr. FAULKNER. I will send the amendment to the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to modify the amendment of the Senator from Vermont by adding:

Nor shall be construed to relieve the steamship company from any duties or responsibilities under existing law.

Mr. PROCTOR. I will accept that.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Vermont, as modified, to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HILL. The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] calls my attention to a misprint in line 8 of section 2, on page 3, where the word "degrees" is used instead of "decrees." It should read "orders, decrees, or judgments of foreign governments." I move that amendment to the committee amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PEFFER. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk, to be added as a separate section.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Kansas will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to add the following as a new section:

SEC. 7. That on and after the 1st day of January, 1895, there shall be collected from each and every alien person coming into the United States a poll tax of $10, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe, and the moneys so collected shall be covered into the Treasury.

Mr. HILL. I wish the Senator from Kansas would not press that amendment now. This bill does not touch any of the questions involved in the point of charging head money. I am disposed to concede that the time may come when it will be desirable to increase that amount. We have not amended those sections of the Revised Statutes, nor have we considered that subject. I should prefer to let it go over until December, and in the meantime, after consultation with our officials, if it be deemed desirable to increase the amount of head money I shall be one to propose the increase; but I wish the Senator would not press the amendment at this time.

Mr. PEFFER. This is one of those ideas that I think it well to keep before the public, and on every appropriate occasion I feel it my duty to present it.

I appreciate the situation as presented by the Senator from New York, and it is not my purpose to make any particular noise about the matter; but it is a very simple process to vote down the amendment if the Senators present do not want to incorporate it in the bill.

I suggest, however, that the bill will probably go into conference, inasmuch as the Senate has materially amended the bill as it came from the House; and, in view of that fact, this additional amendment might as well be called to the attention of the conference committee, and let the members of that committee dispose of it.

Mr. CHANDLER. I desire to call the attention of the Senator from Kansas to the fact that the head money has been already increased at the present session by the sundry civil appropriation bill now in conference from 50 cents to $1. While that is not a sufficient increase so far as the Senator is concerned, it is a provision which will probably be ample for paying the expenses of administering the immigration laws.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kansas to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question recurs on the amendment reported by the committee as amended.

Mr. KYLE. Before the bill passes, I should like to have the Senator from New York define what he means by the word "anarchist." I do not wish to quibble upon this matter, but I think its definition very important in connection with this bill. The Senator from Illinois [Mr. PALMER] a few moments ago spoke about how the word "anarchist" is sometimes used interchangeably with the word "socialist."

Mr. HILL. It was not deemed advisable in this bill to attempt a definition of what constitutes an anarchist. We can refer to the dictionary for that. An anarchist is one who is opposed to all forms of civil government; an anarchist is also defined as a man who is opposed to all social order, and in various forms the word is described in that sort of way.

We provide, first, that no anarchist shall be admitted into this country. That leaves, of course, a broad discretion, but not so broad as is left in England, where the officers have a right to keep out or to deport any person whose presence is not deemed desirable who is an alien—it refers to no one else, of course—and then there is a sort of limitation afterwards; "but this shall not be so construed as to apply to political refugees or political offenders."

Political offenders, in the ordinary sense of the term, believe in overturning one government, perhaps, for the establishment of another; but an anarchist does not believe in any government. He does not believe it is unlawful to kill, to stab, to rob, or to do anything he desires to do. There is no question about that.

Mr. KYLE. I beg the Senator's pardon upon that point. The theory of anarchism does not extend to any such thing as that. There are anarchists in the city of Boston to-day, men who are professors, who hold to the theoretical view that people can attain to such a high state of perfection where they believe they can live without any law at all, except that one man shall treat another fairly and that men shall live one with another.

Mr. HILL. If there is such a class of people in Boston or anywhere in the world, we do not want any more of them here.

Mr. KYLE. They discountenance every sort of violence, as I discountenance every sort of violence. We do not want anybody in this country who carries the torch and the bomb and who intends to destroy human life or human liberty. That is certain. But it seems to me this term ought to be defined in some way so that the inspectors can get at these people and ascertain those who are bent upon violence.

Mr. HOAR. The Senator from South Dakota will allow me to inquire of him of what those gentlemen in Boston are professors?

Mr. KYLE. I have read articles from certain men in Boston—I do not propose to give their names—who hold to the theoretical view that people can arrive at such a high state of society that they can live without law.

Mr. HOAR. The Senator speaks of them as professors, which would imply that they were professors in colleges or schools.

Mr. KYLE. I do not mean to intimate that they are professors in public institutions.

Mr. HOAR. Of what are they professors?

Several SENATORS. Of anarchy.

Mr. HOAR. What evidence has the Senator from South Dakota that there is anybody described as a professor in the city of Boston or other place who holds such views? I do not think there are any in Boston.

Mr. KYLE. I read an article very recently, written by a gentleman in Boston, a man of culture and of letters, who held to that view.

Really, according to the definition of anarchism, it is anarchy—there is no question about that—because it is living without law. What do we mean by "anarchists"? Do we mean those who believe that people can live together in a state of society without law, treating mankind as their brethren, or do we mean those who are going to use the torch and the bomb for the purpose of killing others, and who are trying to override every form of good government that we have in our country?

Mr. HILL. If persons who do not believe in any law go further and want to overturn all law and all government, they are just as bad as the man who stabs another in the back or who applies the torch to a house; but if they content themselves with their theories, if they stop right there and do not endeavor to put those theories into effect, of course they are harmless creatures, if they obey the law; but if they go further, and think they have the right to carry out their views and bring them to perfection by violence or any other means, they are just as bad as any others.

Mr. KYLE. That is just what I want to define in this bill.

Mr. HILL. You will define the law away. That is the difficulty about it. Something must be left to the good sense of the American people, our officials, and our magistrates.

The Senator from South Dakota would not want the class of people referred to to be countenanced, and I do not want them to be. I think there will be no practical difficulty about the enforcement of this bill should it become a law.

Mr. KYLE. I assure the Senator that we entirely agree upon that matter; but I wish to say that if the board do not know anything more about anarchy or about socialism and some other isms that we have heard upon this floor sometimes in discussions, we shall get into a great deal of difficulty very soon.

Mr. HILL. As a general proposition the world-over an anarchist is a bad person, and should be deported from any civilized society. That, as a general proposition, is true, is it not?

Mr. KYLE. Of a violent anarchist, yes.

Mr. HILL. Of "a violent anarchist"?

Mr. KYLE. If a man wants to hold such a theory as that of a high state of society where people can live without law, let him hold his theory, but I do not believe in anarchy.

Mr. HILL. I have no objection to his belief in his theory, but he must hold it in some other country than ours.

Mr. KYLE. There is another point which strikes me. In section 2, line 5, the Senator from New York has changed the word "he" to "it." That is correct so far, but the word "may" is then used; "It may examine the person for marks indicative of such membership." Why not make it "shall"?

Again, on the first line of page 3, in section 2, the bill reads, "it may accept evidence of the immigrant's common reputation as an anarchist," etc. Why not say "it shall accept," and make the language mandatory all the way through?

Again, in line 22 of the same section, the word "may" is used, instead of "shall."

Mr. CHANDLER. I suggest to the Senator from South Dakota that a man may be charged with being an anarchist, and the board of inquiry may be satisfied, without examining him, that he is not. We do not want to enact a law which shall compel the board to examine the person of every one who happens to be charged with being an anarchist.

Mr. KYLE. I suggest these amendments, because without them I fear the bill will be absolutely inefficient.

Mr. CHANDLER. In one breath the Senator is for treating the anarchists very tenderly, and now he is for treating them more severely than are any of the rest of us.

Mr. KYLE. I wish the Senator from New Hampshire to understand that I do not want an anarchist, in my interpretation of that word, to come into this country. I am not an anarchist myself, though I have frequently been charged with being one by the newspapers of the country; but when we find an anarchist seeking to come here for the purpose of subverting our institutions, taking human life, and destroying property, I want him kept out of our country by a "shall," by a mandate, and not by a "may."

Mr. CHANDLER. He is kept out by a mandate, but there is a discretion given to the board of inquiry as to how they shall ascertain the facts.

Now, I want to call the attention of the Senator from South Dakota to a fact. Various bills have been introduced into Congress hitherto excluding anarchists and socialists, but none of them have become laws. It was felt that it would be very difficult to exclude the socialist, because a socialist may be a very harmless person, notwithstanding the opinions he holds that all property should be held in common. Very estimable people, as a matter of theory, may be socialists, and here we now do not exclude socialists in attempting to deal with anarchists. An anarchist is a man who seeks destruction. He is not a man who has a theory that all property should be owned in common; he is a destroyer.

We have reached the point now in the exclusion of immigrants where we are prepared, the people are prepared, and the Senator from South Dakota himself is prepared, to say that a man who is an anarchist, that is to say, a man who believes in the destruction of everything in order to build up nothing upon it, ought to be kept out of this country. As the Senator from New York says, the question must finally be determined as to whether he shall be admitted by the inspection officers and the Secretary of the Treasury. After he gets in, the question whether he shall be deported is to depend upon the judgment of a court upon proof submitted to it. I do not see how we can any more carefully or wisely guard all persons desiring to come to this country and all persons who have come.

The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] just now asked me about the board of inquiry. I will say it is a board of four inspectors. Before the strict provisions of this law can be applied to a man charged with anarchy, he must be excluded by three of the inspection board, and the fourth inspector can take the case upon appeal to the Secretary of the Treasury.

It seems to me that the provisions of the existing law and of this bill are so carefully guarded that Senators need not be afraid that even anarchists will be unjustly treated by the great nation to which we belong.

Mr. HOAR. I suggest to the Senator from New York to add at the end of the first section the words "other than such anarchists." The phraseology literally is that if a person be a political refugee or a political offender he is not included in the inhibition, even if he be an anarchist. Probably nobody will construe it so, but I think the language should be amended so as to remove all doubt.

Mr. HILL. The object of that language is to make it correspond to the provisions of our treaties so as to be sure that we do not violate them as to political offenders.

Mr. HOAR. That is all right, but if an anarchist has committed a political offense abroad, is still an anarchist, and avows himself such, you would let him come into the country. For instance, suppose the man who has just murdered the French President had made his escape and was trying to enter this country, we would not want to let him enter the country, although as a political offender he would be admitted within the provisions of a treaty.

Mr. HILL. I think it will make the bill meet the popular judgment better to allow it to remain as it is.

Mr. HOAR. The provision of the bill is that no anarchist shall be permitted to enter this country, but this shall not apply to any political offender or any political refugee. The literal meaning of that is that, although he is an anarchist, if he is a political offender or refugee he may come in. I thought if the words were added, "other than such anarchists," it would make the meaning clear; but I shall not press the amendment if the Senator from New York does not like it.

Mr. HILL. This was subjected to the criticism of the Secretary of State, Mr. Gresham, and he thought this was the proper phraseology.

Mr. HOAR. I would rather have the opinion of the Senator from New York than that of Secretary Gresham on this subject.

Mr. HILL. I prefer to leave the language as it stands.

Mr. TELLER. I do not think there can be any doubt as the language stands but that it will admit an anarchist if he can prove that he is a political offender.

Mr. HOAR. So it reads.

Mr. TELLER. If the Senator from New York does not intend to permit that, he ought to change the phraseology.

Mr. HILL. What is the precise suggestion?

Mr. HOAR. To insert "other than such anarchists."

Mr. TELLER. Or "not anarchists."

Mr. HILL. I will accept the amendment suggested by the Senator from Massachusetts if he will offer it in that form.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Massachusetts to the amendment of the committee will be stated.

The SECRETARY. After the words "political offenders," at the end of section 1, in line 6, it is proposed to insert "other than such anarchists."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HOAR. If the Senator from New York will give me his attention, I desire to ask what is to be the limit of the power and duty of the inspectors provided for in section 4. The only power that is given is "to erase from the list or manifest of passengers the name of any immigrant who he is satisfied should not be permitted to land in this country." No matter who the person may be, the inspector has absolute discretion. I do not want somebody with whom I have a quarrel or some person who is indiscreet in speech or anything else to have such a power over me.

Mr. HILL. The inspector can not stop such persons if the shipowners desire to take them, but his statement is forwarded by the master of the vessel to be delivered to the officer at the port of landing.

Mr. HOAR. He "may forbid the transportation of any person belonging to the excluded classes in the first or second cabin or in any part of any vessel."

Mr. HILL. The steamship companies bring them at their peril.

Mr. HOAR. So nothing happens if he forbids the bringing over of a person, except that his action in so forbidding the companies to bring persons here is brought to the knowledge of the officers here.

Mr. HILL. That is all.

Mr. HOAR. Very well, then; I understand it.

Mr. HILL. That is the theory of the bill.

Mr. HOAR. The third section provides "that upon the trial and conviction of any foreign-born and unnaturalized person," who is described as a person who "is not attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same"——

Mr. HILL. I have moved an amendment to that, which has been agreed to, so as to comply with the suggestion of the Senator from Ohio as to the test put when a foreignor is naturalized.

Mr. HOAR. "And that his remaining in this country will be a menace to the Government," and so on, he is to be deported. Is there any provision in this bill by which a person of that class, not an anarchist, can be excluded from coming in: that is, is there any provision in the bill under which a person not a criminal, not found to be an anarchist, can still be excluded if he be found to be not attached to the principles of the Constitution, etc.?

Mr. HILL. No.

Mr. HOAR. That is the way the bill reads. I want it made clear.

Mr. HILL. The bill so provides.

Mr. HOAR. Very well.

Mr. HILL. If a man stays here and behaves himself, although not attached to the principles of the Constitution, if he does not come in conflict with the authorities in any way, he is permitted to remain.

Mr. HOAR. He is permitted to land?

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, I do not propose to object to this bill in whichever of its two forms it shall pass the Senate. In the first place, it deals with an admitted evil, a very great and growing evil. It deals with a terror to all civilized nations, all governments, all property, and all social order.

After a great deal of consideration and reflection, and after various propositions which have failed, it is the best that the committee having charge of the subject has been able to agree upon and propose. It has the great authority of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER], who has been studying the subject for years, and of my colleague [Mr. LODGE], who has been studying the matter very carefully since his entrance into public life, and I do not therefore wish, in a matter so grave and serious, to put my individual scruple and reluctance against the judgment of these gentlemen who have given so much honest and unbiased study to the question. If it were an ordinary evil, if it were a criminal law, if it were an ordinary matter of regulation, in a matter of consequence but still not vital, I should resist the bill, because there is a very serious objection to it in principle. It is a principle which, if it is adopted, will return to plague us, and one which I hope that hereafter the legislative bodies of the United States, after trying this measure a little while, will find a means of improving.

It strikes at the serious and valuable human right of expatriation, a right which the United States has asserted and vindicated for mankind, and which the diplomacy of President Grant and the new power and authority with which the United States was clothed after the rebellion had been put down, extorted from the unwilling nations of Europe one by one. It is one of the chief glories of that great Administration, as it is one of the chief glories of the Republic itself, that we compelled all mankind to agree to the proposition that a human being anywhere might lay down one nationality and take upon himself another, and that so long as he behaves himself as a good citizen and as a good member of society he might go wherever in the world he pleased and there find a home.

The pending bill says that when a majority of the board, three nonjudicial officers belonging to the board of special inquiry, determine, not that a man has done anything, not even that he has said anything, but that he is a character defined by the vague, indeterminate word "anarchist," which the Senator from New York with great ingenuity and with great wisdom thinks it is better not to attempt to define in the debate, he shall be excluded and sent back to the country whence he came.

I think the Senator from New York manifested his consummate wisdom when, I think for the first time in our legislative history, the author and defender of a bill of this kind thought it was better that it should be passed without stating what it meant.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. May I ask the Senator from Massachusetts a question?

Mr. HOAR. If the Senator from Oregon please, I should like to finish this point first. Then I will listen to the Senator's question.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. All right.

Mr. HOAR. If we were talking about ordinary matters, if we were dealing with American citizens and American citizenship, I think these reasons would compel me, and I believe they would compel the majority of the Senate, to deny their assent to the bill. But I agree that we have the absolute right to exclude persons of other countries from coming here, and we have a right to put upon them the burden of showing their fitness, not merely in the light of their past conduct, but their fitness, judging them by their purposes, judging them by their opinions, judging them by the nature of their pursuits and thoughts, and the burden of showing that they come with safety and benefit to the country to which they come.

Mr. President, I repeat that I think the objections to the bill in principle ought to be stated, so that this nebulous method of legislation shall not get into our general legislative precedents in reference to dealing with our own citizens, so that it shall not be extended, and so that the wit of committees, of members of legislative bodies, and of the American people may hereafter set itself to devising a substitute which may be better. But having stated these objections and confessing the great weight they have with me, I still say that if the committee come to us saying this is the best they can do, I am prepared to concur with them in passing the bill as a means of meeting the present evil and the present condition.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I think the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts has substantially answered the question which I rose to ask. Is it not a fact that the doctrine of the right of expatriation, to which the Senator referred as being one of the glories of the Administration of President Grant and of the Republic, has always been considered in the light of the other doctrine, that each government has a right to determine whether the presence of a particular person or any particular class of persons in a country would be pernicious to the government itself, and that it may exclude such persons?

Mr. HOAR. The Senator from Oregon asks me in substance whether I think the doctrine which has been our glory and pride has been fearfully demoralized in the matter of Chinese legislation, that has been thrust upon us by the representatives of the Pacific coast. I think it has.

Mr. TELLER. I should like to suggest to the Senator from Massachusetts that these rights are absolutely distinct. The one is a right of the government and resides in the government. The other is a right of the man. The right to get up and leave a country and go to another is one which resides in the individual.

Mr. HOAR. I said all that, although the Senator from Colorado said it a great deal better than I did, as he always does.

Mr. TELLER. But the Senator from Massachusetts insists that the right to say who shall come and reside in a country is a violation of the first principle which I mentioned. The right of a man to leave the neighborhood where he was born and to throw off the allegiance of the government under which he was born is a right upon which we have insisted. There is no line in our history anywhere in favor of abrogating or abandoning the universal right of every nation to say who shall come within its borders. But the two are so distinct that in my judgment there can be no possible connection between them.

Mr. HOAR. The affirmation of that right, made in the Burlingame treaty, in the legislation which followed it, and in the constitution of the State of California, goes very much further than does the Senator's statement.

Mr. TELLER. I am not talking about that. Everybody in the United States believes in the right of expatriation, and we have brought the world to believe in it at last. It is denied nowhere that I know of to-day among the nations of the earth. That is one doctrine. It is not inconsistent, I repeat, with the doctrine that the United States shall say that while a man in Germany has a right to emigrate, if he sees fit, we have a right to say he shall not come here if his coming is obnoxious to us.

Mr. HOAR. That is only saying, if the Senator from Colorado will pardon me, that every bird has a right to fly when it chooses, but that it may only alight when it finds a place.

Mr. TELLER. The right of expatriation was never anywhere tortured into the idea that a man had a right to go where he was not wanted. He can only go where the people say they will have him. That is a principle of international law which was established after tribulation and trial, until I think I may say, it is international law now.

Mr. President, the evil of promiscuous and unrestricted immigration is a very great one, I admit. I think we are suffering very severely in this country from it now, but it is not so great, in my opinion, that we should violate a fundamental principle of free government without at least an effort being made to correct the bill if it does violate it.

The Senator from Massachusetts seems to think the bill does violate it. Yet he says that if the committee say they can not do any better he will accept the bill. I am not willing to do that. I will take a hand at fixing it. I think the Senate might do that, and that that is the first thing for us to do. If the committee have brought here a bill which we do not think is a proper bill, there ought to be enough wisdom in the Senate, if there is not in the committee, to frame a bill which will be within the principles of free government.

With all due deference to the committee, it seems to me the bill has been hastily drawn. It seems to me that the committee is in a hurry, and I think the bill ought to go back to the committee. I wish to make a few suggestions, however, as to what I conceive to be the objectionable features of the bill.

Mr. HOAR. Before the Senator from Colorado passes to that part of the argument, will he allow me to make a suggestion?

Mr. TELLER. Certainly.

Mr. HOAR. I should like to read a part of the statute, still in the Revised Statutes of the United States, passed in 1868, when this country was all aglow with the Burlingame treaty:

> Whereas the right of expatriation is a natural and inherent right of all people, indispensable to the enjoyment of the rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; and whereas in the recognition of this principle this Government has freely received emigrants from all nations, and invested them with the rights of citizenship

And so on.

When that language was enacted into law, it was substantially the universal belief of the American people not merely that a well-meaning citizen had a right to sever his connection with his old government, but that he had a right to go wherever on the face of the earth he chose, behaving himself properly and decently, and attach himself to the new government at his choice, and that the right of any government to reject him was a right to reject him for cause and for unfitness. The government is to be the judge of that, to be sure, but if he were a fit and suitable man he had the right to be received. That was the doctrine of the State of California in those days. Their Chinese experience led them very largely to change their minds.

Mr. TELLER. The Senator from Massachusetts and I do not particularly differ. I am speaking of the right of a nation to prohibit those whom it does not desire, and of that the nation must be the judge. Nobody else can judge of it. If the nation says that a red-haired man or a black-skinned man must not come here, that settles it. It may be all wrong——

Mr. HOAR. Will the Senator from Colorado allow me one other sentence, and then I shall sit down?

Mr. TELLER. Certainly.

Mr. HOAR. That is a good illustration. If, in 1868 this nation had said we will not admit red-haired men, or if the Congress had proposed such a provision of law, it would have been received with abhorrence by the entire people as a violation of the inherent natural rights of manhood. That is precisely what I say.

Mr. TELLER. I think it would be rather straining it to say that a man shall be excluded simply because his hair is red; but if there had been no black men on this continent the American Congress might have said that the citizens of Africa should not land in this country, because they were a people who never could become harmonious or homogeneous with our own people. That is a right which I claim the nation has, and that is all I do claim. Of course if the nation saw great danger in red-haired men they might keep them away as they would any others.

I do not wish to waste any time over that question, but I wish to say a word or two about the measure, as there seems to be a determination to pass it to-night. The substitute begins, it seems to me, in rather a roundabout way. The fourth section ought to be the first section instead of the last section or next to the last section, because it begins with the appointment of somebody to supervise the departure of the emigrant from the foreign country. That seems to be a logical way to begin, and that is the way the measure ought to begin. Instead of that we have in the first section—

> That no alien anarchist shall hereafter be permitted to land at any port of the United States.

That does not mean very much.

Mr. CHANDLER. Will the Senator from Colorado allow me to state that every bill relating to immigration which has ever been passed has first defined the persons who should be excluded and then has gone and furnished the machinery for excluding them?

Mr. TELLER. That might be better, but is it not a matter of taste?

Mr. CHANDLER. Yet the Senator says he would not provide the machinery until he had provided for the exclusion.

Mr. TELLER. I will take section 2:

> That at the hearing of aliens charged with being anarchists the board of special inquiry shall diligently inquire.

I inquire of the Senator from New York what the board of special inquiry is, and of whom it consists?

Mr. HILL. The board of special inquiry consists of four officials in the city of New York, who are designated by the Secretary of the Treasury in writing to act as inspectors.

Mr. TELLER. It is a sort of a semicourt, I suppose, although not a court.

Mr. HILL. They examine the manifests, etc.

Mr. TELLER. It is a tribunal of some kind for determining the facts.

Mr. HILL. Yes; they determine every other question as to exclusion, whether the person is insane, whether he is a pauper, whether, so far as they can find, he has ever been convicted of any crime, or has any disease.

Mr. TELLER. This inquiry, I understand, is made before the parties have landed.

Mr. HILL. They have landed on Ellis Island.

Mr. TELLER. I so understand.

Mr. HILL. Before they make a legal landing.

Mr. TELLER. I wish to call the attention of the Senate to this provision:

The board of special inquiry shall diligently inquire of the accused by pertinent questions as to his antecedents, political opinions, whether he belongs to any society or association of known anarchistic tendencies, and he may examine——

Mr. HILL. "It may examine;" the board.

Mr. TELLER. That has been changed?

Mr. HILL. Yes, sir.

Mr. TELLER.

It may examine the person for marks indicative of such membership.

I do not know whether that means his arms or the body.

Mr. HILL. His person.

Mr. WHITE. For marks and brands.

Mr. TELLER.

It may accept evidence of the immigrant's common reputation as an anarchist, and orders, decrees, or judgments of foreign governments and police notifications as prima facie evidence, which shall be sufficient, unless successfully controverted, to sustain an order of deportation.

That is, if it is absolutely necessary to violate one of the fundamental principles of free government, and provide that the accused shall be compelled to convict himself, I suppose that may be done.

Mr. HILL. The immigrant is not charged with a crime.

Mr. TELLER. But it deprives him of what he claims as a privilege and a right.

Mr. HILL. Will the Senator from Colorado allow me?

Mr. TELLER. Certainly.

Mr. HILL. There is another provision which applies. The proposed law and all United States laws in regard to immigration are posted up at every port in Europe and in all places where immigrants congregate. It is made the duty of the officials to do that, and the steamship companies have to do it at every place where tickets are sold. So the person coming to this country knows what he must submit to.

Mr. TELLER. I understand all that, and what is proposed may perhaps be done without violating the provisions of the Constitution of the United States in letter, although I think it does violate it in spirit.

Mr. HILL. The party is not charged with any crime. It is a mere question of governmental policy, is it not, as to whether he shall be admitted?

Mr. TELLER. You deprive him of a right which he insists is his.

Mr. HILL. He owes no allegiance to us.

Mr. TELLER. No.

Mr. MILLS. I wish to ask the Senator from New York, in charge of the bill, if he will not let us have an executive session? I do not think we can get through with the immigration bill to-night. We have struck some hard places.

Mr. HILL. It depends upon the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. TELLER. I shall take but a few minutes more. I wish to make a few suggestions. I do not want to antagonize the bill but I do not like it.

Now, here is an anomaly:

The Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized, in case he shall be satisfied that an alien has been allowed to land, or has come into the United States contrary to the immigration laws—

There are two classes, one where a man has been allowed to land and has already come in without objection, and the other is where he has entered in violation of the law.

Mr. HILL. He might have come in without permission to land.

Mr. TELLER. "Contrary to the immigration laws."

Mr. HILL. Through Canada or in some other way.

Mr. TELLER.

To issue a warrant and cause such alien to be taken into custody and returned to the country whence he came, at the expense of the importing vessel, or if he entered from an adjoining country, of which he is not a citizen, then to the country of his nativity, at the expense of the United States.

I do not see how under this provision you will return such a person to Canada if he has walked over the bridge or has come over the river.

Mr. HILL. It has to be done at the expense of the Government, if he did not come in a ship.

Mr. FAULKNER. There is the same provision in the general law now and it limits the time in which an immigrant can be sent back to one year after landing.

Mr. TELLER. That may be, but the substitute does not seem to limit it to any time whatever. The Secretary of the Treasury may seize any man who is an alien and deport him.

Mr. FAULKNER. On proof.

Mr. TELLER. He need not have any proof.

Mr. FAULKNER. Oh, yes.

Mr. TELLER. "In case he shall be satisfied," is what the provision says.

Mr. HILL. If the Senator from Colorado will allow me, I will state that that is precisely the provision of the law which has just been passed in England.

Mr. TELLER. I do not care anything about that. I am stating my objections to the pending bill. I think the committee could make the bill better by changing the phraseology. Then the substitute provides that—

In such cases the Secretary may authorize any immigration official to summon witnesses, administer oaths, etc.

Now, I think that is a loose provision.

Mr. HILL. It says "to be submitted to him."

Mr. TELLER. The truth is that after people who come here have landed they have certain rights which we are bound to respect. We are not to treat them as citizens, perhaps; they are not citizens, but they have the rights of personal protection, indemnity from improper arrest and seizure, etc.

Now, if it is necessary that we should be harsh with these people (as may be the case, and I believe it is), I think the committee should define some system by which the usual rules of evidence shall be applied. That is all I complain of. I am willing that an alien shall be brought before a tribunal, carefully guarded, to determine the question whether he is of the character that we say we will put out, and if he is not of that character, we say he shall stay here. If he is not a bad man, he has a right to come under the laws and to stay. It is only when he is among the prohibited classes that we say we will put him out. What I complain of as to the entire substitute is that it is loose in its whole tenor. It does not provide with the care which ought to be observed for the preservation of the rights of the person brought in question.

Mr. HILL. The Senator from Colorado would not advocate that they should be tried by jury?

Mr. TELLER. I would not try them by jury, but I would try them by a board that would observe the rules of evidence, and I would not let hearsay testimony send a man across the water. Because somebody said he was an anarchist I would not send him home.

Mr. HILL. No; and we do not do that.

Mr. TELLER. That is what you do here.

Mr. HILL. No, sir; except by common reputation.

Mr. TELLER. Common reputation as an anarchist. I suppose Mr. Mowbray and perhaps Herr Most——

Mr. HILL. I think Mowbray would be glad to hear the Senator from Colorado discuss this subject.

Mr. TELLER. I do not think the committee have taken the care in framing the proposed law that they ought to have taken. That is all I desire to say. I am in full accord with them in desiring to keep out this kind of immigration. My own opinion is that the place to make the examination is abroad and not here. A careful examination should be made on foreign soil; and if the emigrants escape and come here, as some would, then let us resort to the ordinary methods by which we determine facts in a country of law and not leave it arbitrarily to the Secretary of the Treasury or any official who may be appointed by him. Let us give these people an opportunity to be heard.

Mr. FAULKNER. If the Senator from Colorado will permit me, we do that by the inspectors, who are provided for and who perform the work that is done in addition to that which is entailed, and is really an obligation imposed upon the agents of the steamship companies. I will state to the Senator that we have been so guarded in the pending bill that this is the only bill which has been passed designating an excepted class who can not come into this country in which we have limited the board of inquiry as to the character of evidence that they must take before they can exclude an immigrant. As to every other excepted class, it is absolutely in the discretion of the board; but here we have tried to limit it as much as possible, so as not in any way to affect the rights of these parties.

Mr. TELLER. I am very certain that the bill could be improved with fifteen or twenty minutes' work on the part of the committee, and a great deal better bill drawn. But if the committee say they have exhausted the whole subject, I may possibly be willing, like the Senator from Massachusetts, to rely upon the committee.

Mr. HILL. The Senator from Colorado is aware that this is a difficult subject to handle.

Mr. TELLER. I know it is a difficult subject to handle.

Mr. CHANDLER. Will the Senator from Colorado allow me to say a word?

Mr. TELLER. I am going to yield the floor. I have stated my objections to the measure.

Mr. CHANDLER. I wish to say a word before the Senator concludes.

Mr. MILLS. I hope the Senator from Colorado will yield for a motion to proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. CHANDLER. Will the Senator from Texas allow me? The session is, we hope, nearing a close. The pending measure is what is called an Administration bill. It was prepared at the Treasury Department and has only had a few days consideration by the committee. I hold that the writ of habeas corpus could always be resorted to in the case stated in section 2, and I would suggest to the Senator——

Mr. TELLER. Does the Senator from New Hampshire say it can not now be resorted to?

Mr. CHANDLER. I think it can be, as the measure stands.

Mr. TELLER. I presume it can be.

Mr. CHANDLER. I suggest to the Senator and to the Senate that the bill will undoubtedly go into conference, and that it be allowed to pass at this time. When the bill goes into conference the conferees will undoubtedly give the suggestions of the Senator from Massachusetts and the Senator from Colorado careful consideration, and make such amendments as justice seems to require. But I am afraid that if the bill is not passed now it will not become a law at the present session.

I have waived my objection to the report of the committee in order that we may this afternoon get the bill through, and I hope that Senators will treat it as of sufficient importance to stay here and finish it to-night.

Mr. TELLER. I should like to say that I did not rise to antagonize the bill. I had no idea of doing that.

Mr. HILL I know the Senator did not.

Mr. TELLER. I thought the committee might make some improvements in the bill. If it is admitted that the bill can not be improved, if neither the Senate nor the committee can improve it, and it must be taken as it comes from that source of all wisdom, the Treasury Department, I do not know that I care to say anything further.

Mr. CULLOM. Let us vote.

Mr. CHANDLER. I ask for a vote

Mr. TELLER. I will say before I sit down, if the Senator from New Hampshire will allow me, that the bill does not commend itself to me at all because it came from the executive department of the Government. I think the idea that the executive department of the Government is to be called upon on every occasion to draft bills for the legislative body is a pernicious one. It is a growing evil, and one which, as far as I am concerned, I do not intend to encourage.

Mr. CHANDLER. I hope we may now have a vote on the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee as amended.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. HILL, the title was amended so as to read: "A bill to amend the various acts relative to immigration and the importation of aliens under contract or agreement to perform labor."

Mr. CHANDLER. I move that the Senate request a conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. HILL, Mr. FAULKNER, and Mr. CHANDLER were appointed.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. MILLS. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After fifteen minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock and 45 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Tuesday, August 7, 1894, at 12 o'clock m.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate August 6, 1894.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT JUDGE.

Amos M. Thayer, of Missouri, to be United States circuit judge for the eighth judicial circuit, as provided for by act approved July 23, 1894.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGES.

Henry S. Priest, of Missouri, to be United States district judge for the eastern district of Missouri, upon the confirmation as circuit judge of the eighth judicial circuit of Amos M. Thayer, this day nominated as such circuit judge.

James D. Porter, of Tennessee, to be United States district judge for the eastern and middle districts of Tennessee, vice D. M. Key, resigned.

POSTMASTERS.

John W. Hamerly, to be postmaster at Colton, in the county of San Bernardino and State of California, in the place of William Henry Wright, whose commission expired June 14, 1894.

Luther M. Embry, to be postmaster at Shelbyville, in the county of Shelby and State of Illinois, in the place of Ambrose M. Chaddick, resigned.

C. E. Smith, to be postmaster at Correctionville, in the county of Woodbury and State of Iowa, in the place of Willis W. Overholser, resigned.

B. W. Hero, to be postmaster at Westboro, in the county of Worcester and State of Massachusetts, in the place of Frank W. Bullard, whose commission expired March 7, 1894.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY.

Infantry arm.

First Lieut. Edward E. Hardin, Seventh Infantry, to be captain July 31, 1894, vice Burnett, Seventh Infantry, retired from active service.

First Lieut. Richard H. Wilson, adjutant, Eighth Infantry, to be captain July 31, 1894, vice Hutton, Eighth Infantry, dismissed.

Second Lieut. Charles S. Farnsworth, Twenty-fifth Infantry, to be first lieutenant July 31, 1894, vice Hardin, Seventh Infantry, promoted.

Second Lieut. Charles Gerhardt, Twentieth Infantry, to be first lieutenant August 1, 1894, vice Terrett, Eighth Infantry, appointed regimental adjutant.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate August 6, 1894.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY.

Commodore Henry Erben, to be a rear-admiral.
Capt. Charles S. Norton, to be a commodore.
Commander Frank Wildes, to be a captain.
Lieut.-Commander William W. Reisinger, to be a commander.
Lieut. Albion V. Wadhams, to be a lieutenant-commander.
Lieut. (junior grade) John H. L. Holcombe, to be a lieutenant.
Lieut. (junior grade) William L. Burdick, to be a lieutenant.
Ensign Joseph L. Jayne, to be a lieutenant (junior grade).
Ensign James G. Dayle, to be a lieutenant (junior grade).

SURVEYOR-GENERAL.

Clayton Belknap, of Virginia City, Nev., to be surveyor-general of Nevada.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS.

Francis L. O'Reilly, of Rhode Island, to be collector of customs for the district of Providence, in the State of Rhode Island.

RECEIVERS OF PUBLIC MONEYS.

John A. Ely, of Towner, N. Dak., to be receiver of public moneys at Minot, N. Dak.

William H. McDonald, of North Platte, Nebr., to be receiver of public moneys at North Platte, Nebr.

REGISTERS OF THE LAND OFFICE.

Michael J. Barrett, of Jamestown, N. Dak., to be register of the land office at Minot, N. Dak.

John F. Hinman, of North Platte, Nebr., to be register of the land office at North Platte, Nebr.

INDIAN AGENT.

Louis F. Pearson, of Medicine Lodge, Kans., to be agent for the Indians of the Pottawatomie and Great Nemaha Agency in Kansas.

POSTMASTERS.

Peter Geschwind, to be postmaster at Sleepy Eye, in the county of Brown and State of Minnesota.

C. F. Buck, to be postmaster at Winona, in the county of Winona and State of Minnesota.

Eugene J. O'Neil, to be postmaster at Chicopee Falls, in the county of Hampden and State of Massachusetts.

Woodbury A. Ham, to be postmaster at Everett, in the county of Middlesex and State of Massachusetts.

Frank Q. Mitchell, be postmaster at Mound City, in the county of Holt and State of Missouri.

George Wallwork, to be postmaster at White Sulphur Springs, in the county of Meagher and State of Montana.

Mrtin E. Conlan, to be postmaster at Alexandria, in the county of Hanson and State of South Dakota.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, August 6, 1894.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Rev. WILLIAM E. PARSON, D. D.

The Journal of the proceedings of Friday was read and approved.

JUDICIAL DISTRICTS, NORTH CAROLINA.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (H. R. 6542) to change the lines between the eastern and western judicial districts of North Carolina, and fixing the time for holding courts in said eastern district, with amendments of the Senate thereto.

The Senate amendments were read.

Mr. WOODARD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendments.

Mr. BURROWS. Mr. Speaker, I judge from the amendments as read that most of them are merely verbal. There appears, however, to be one in relation to the meeting of the terms of court.

Mr. WOODARD. The only substantial change made by the Senate is one postponing until the 15th of October the time when the bill shall go into effect. The other amendments are merely verbal.

The amendments of the Senate were concurred in.

COMPENSATION OF OFFICIALS OF UNITED STATES COURTS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a joint resolution (S. R. 91) providing for the printing of a digest of the laws and decisions relating to the appointment, salaries, and compensation of officials in United States courts; which was referred to the Committee on Printing.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. MOON, indefinitely, on account of sickness.

To Mr. CORNISH, indefinitely, on account of sickness.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed bills and joint resolutions of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

A bill (S. 2269) providing for reconveyance by the District Commissioners of certain lands to Andrew J. Curtis and Mary E. Curtis;

A bill (S. 2173) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a United States court in the Indian Territory, and for other purposes," approved March 1, 1889, and an act entitled "An act to provide a temporary government for the Territory of Oklahoma, to enlarge the jurisdiction of the United States court in the Indian Territory, and for other purposes," approved May 2, 1890; to provide for the redistricting of the Indian Territory for judicial purposes, for an additional judge and more United States commissioners, and to prescribe the jurisdiction, duties, and authority of such judges and commissioners, and for other purposes; and Joint resolution (S. R. 91) to provide for the printing of a digest of the laws and decisions relating to the appointment, salary, and compensation of officials of the United States courts.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed the following resolution; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring). That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, requested to suspend the opening of the land in the Arredondo grant of 2,000 acres in Columbia County, Fla., to entry under the land laws of the United States until the close of the present Congress, unless there is further consideration with reference thereto before that time.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments bills of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

A bill (H. R. 86) for the protection of persons furnishing materials and labor for the construction of public works;

A bill (H. R. 7477) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, for prior years, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 7683) to remove the charge of desertion against James Fay; and

A bill (H. R. 7827) to authorize a bridge across the Perdido River between the States of Florida and Alabama.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed, with amendment, the bill (H. R. 7803) to amend sections 2401 and 2403 of the Revised Statutes, asked a conference with the House on the bill and amendments, and had appointed Mr. PASCO, Mr. MARTIN, and Mr. DOLPH as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendments bills of the following titles:

A bill (H. R. 855) to amend an act granting a pension to Elizabeth Voss;

A bill (H. R. 3076) granting a pension to George L. Frymire;

A bill (H. R. 3032) to remove the charge of desertion from the record of John A. Jack;

A bill (H. R. 1463) granting a pension to Mrs. Lucinda C. Wheeler, widow of John H. Wheeler;

A bill (H. R. 3065) to increase the pension of James Lane;

A bill (H. R. 1313) to increase the pension of John Scott;

A bill (H. R. 953) to increase the pension of Mary P. Broughton;

A bill (H. R. 3309) to pension Ambrose Giseburt;

A bill (H. R. 6206) granting a pension to A. F. Neely;

A bill (H. R. 3840) to pension Julia A. Walters;

A bill (H. R. 5374) granting a pension to Sarah Oddy;

A bill (H. R. 3992) to increase the pension of Julia Bews;

A bill (H. R. 1717) granting a pension to Eliza Holmes;

A bill (H. R. 856) granting an increase of pension to John Stockwell;

A bill (H. R. 6405) to remove the charge of desertion standing against Patrick Kelleher, late private Company C, Thirty-eighth Illinois Volunteers;

A bill (H. R. 6213) to pension Hariet R. Tate;

A bill (H. R. 5816) granting a pension to Mary Ann Donoghue;

A bill (H. R. 2108) to perfect the military record of Warren Alonzo Alden;

A bill (H. R. 2133) to correct the military record of Capt. E. M. Ives;

A bill (H. R. 4811) to pension Mary Trimble;

A bill (H. R. 7187) to make the city of Oakland, county of Alameda, State of California, a subport of entry; and

A bill (H. R. 522) for the relief of Benjamin Alford.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. PEARSON, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (H. R. 868) for the relief of Charles B. Stivers;

A bill (S. 1896) to provide for the payment of the 8 per cent greenback certificates of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 2996) for the relief of Mrs. E. S. Luke, widow of John L. Luke, late a soldier in the Black Hawk war;

A bill (H. R. 3858) to pension Mrs. Eliza B. Peirce, widow of Charles Peirce, of New Bedford, Mass.;

A bill (H. R. 5371) for the relief of certain enlisted men of the Marine Corps;

A bill (5481) making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 6042) to authorize sale of lot 8, block 93, city of Hot Springs, by school directors thereof, and use of proceeds for school purposes;

A bill (H. R. 6921) for the relief of George B. Cosby;

A bill (H. R. 7494) disposing of four condemned cannon of the Navy; and

A bill (H. R. 2582) to authorize the appointment of James William Abert to the retired list of the Army.

GENERAL DEFICIENCY BILL.

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House nonconcur in the amendments of the Senate to House bill 7477, the general deficiency bill, and ask for a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses; also that the bill be printed with the Senate amendments.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The SPEAKER appointed as conferees on the part of the House Mr. BRECKINRIDGE of Kentucky, Mr. SAYERS, and Mr. CANNON of Illinois.

KANSAS CITY, OKLAHOMA AND PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. COCKRELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 6122) authorizing the Kansas City, Oklahoma and Pacific Railway Company to construct and operate a railway through the Indian Territory, and for other purposes.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Kansas City, Oklahoma and Pacific Railway Company, a corporation created under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Kansas, be, and the same is hereby, authorized and invested and empowered with the right of locating, constructing, owning, equipping, and operating, using, and maintaining a railway and telegraph and telephone line through the Indian Territory, beginning at a point to be selected by said railway company at or near the town of Coffeyville, in the county of Montgomery, State of Kansas, and running thence in a south and west direction over the most practicable route, through the Indian Territory to a point at or near Pawhuska, and also Guthrie and Kingfisher, in the Territory of Oklahoma, and thence to the east line of Wheeler County, State of Texas, thence to the east line of the Territory of New Mexico, and through the Territory of New Mexico to the city of Albuquerque, in the Territory of New Mexico, with the right to construct, use, and maintain such tracks, turn-outs, sidings, and extensions as said company may deem to their interests to construct along and upon the right of way and depot grounds herein provided for.

SEC. 2. That the said corporation is authorized to take and use, for all purposes of a railway and for no other purpose, a right of way 100 feet in width through said Indian Territory, and to take and use a strip of land 200 feet in width, with a length of 3,000 feet in addition to right of way, for stations for every 5 miles of road, with right to use such additional grounds where there are heavy cuts or fills as may be necessary for the construction and maintenance of said right of way, or as much thereof as may be included in said cuts or fills: Provided, That no more of said addition of land shall be taken for any one station: Provided further, That no part of said lands herein authorized to be taken shall be leased or sold by the company; and they shall not be used except in such manner and for such purposes only as shall be necessary for the construction and convenient operation of said railroad, telegraph, and telephone lines; and when any portion thereof shall cease to be so used such portion shall revert to the nation or tribe of Indians from which the same shall have been taken.

SEC. 3. That before said railway shall be constructed through any lands held by individual occupants, according to the laws, customs, and usages of any of the Indian nations or tribes through which it may be constructed, full compensation shall be made to such occupants for all property to be taken or damages done by reason of the construction of such railway. In case of failure to make amicable settlement with any occupant such compensation shall be determined by the appraisement of three disinterested persons or referees to be appointed, one, who shall act as chairman, by the President, one by the chief of the nation to which said occupant belongs, and one by said railway company, who, before entering upon the duties of their appointment, shall take and subscribe, before a district judge, clerk of the district court, or United States commissioner, an oath that they will faithfully and impartially discharge the duties of their appointment, which oath, duly certified, shall be returned with their award to and filed with the Secretary of the Interior within sixty days from the completion thereof; and a majority of said referees shall be competent to act in case of the absence of a member after due notice; and upon the failure of either party to make such appointment within thirty days after the appointment made by the President the vacancy shall be filled by the district judge of the court held at Wichita, Kans., upon the application of the other party. The chairman of said board shall appoint the time and place for all hearings within the nation to which the occupant belongs. Each of said referees shall receive for his services the sum of $4 per day for each and every day they are engaged in the trial of any case submitted to them under this act, with mileage of 5 cents per mile. Witnesses shall be allowed the usual fees allowed by the courts of said nation. The costs, including the compensation of the referees, shall be made a part of the award, and to be paid by said railway company. In case the referees can not agree, then two of them are authorized to make the award. Either party being dissatisfied with the findings of the referees shall have the right, within ninety days after the making of the award and notice of the same, to appeal by original petition to the district court held at Wichita, Kans., which court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine the subject-matter of said petition according to the laws of the State of Kansas providing for the determining of damages when property is taken for railway purposes. If, upon the hearing of said appeal, the judgment of the court shall be for a larger sum than the awards of the referees, the costs of said appeal shall be adjudged against the railway company. If the judgment of the court shall be for the same sum as the award of the referees, then the costs shall be adjudged against the appellant. If the judgment of the court shall be for a smaller sum than the award of the referees, then the costs shall be adjudged against the party claiming damages. When proceedings have been commenced in court the railway company shall pay double the amount of the award into court to abide the judgment thereof, and then have the right to enter upon the property sought to be condemned and proceed with the construction of the railway.

SEC. 4. That the said railway company shall not charge the inhabitants of said Territory a greater rate of freight than the rate authorized by the laws of the State of Kansas for services or transportation of the same kind: Provided, That the passenger rate shall not exceed 3 cents per mile. Congress hereby reserves the right to regulate the charges for freight and passengers on said railway, and of messages on said telegraph and telephone lines, until a State government is formed and shall exist in said Territory, within the limits of which said railway, or a part thereof, shall be located, and then such State government, or governments, shall be authorized to fix and regulate the cost of transportation of persons and freight within their respective limits by said railway; but Congress expressly reserves the right to fix and regulate at all times the cost of such transportation by said railway company whenever such transportation shall extend from one State into another, or shall extend into more than one State: Provided, That the rate of such transportation of passengers, local or interstate, shall not exceed the rate expressed: Provided further, That said railway company shall carry the mail at such prices as Congress may by law provide, and until such rate is fixed by law the Postmaster-General may fix the rate of compensation.

SEC. 5. That said railway company shall pay to the Secretary of the Interior, for the benefit of the particular nations or tribes through whose lands said line may be located, the sum of $20, in addition to the compensation provided for in this act for property taken and damage done to individual occupants by the construction of the railway, for each mile of railway constructed in said Territory, said payments to be made in installments of $200 as each 10 miles of road is finished and in operation: Provided, That if the general council of either of the nations or tribes through whose lands said railway may be located, as shall, within four months after the filing of maps of definite locations, as set forth in section 6 of this act, dissent from the allowance provided for in this section, and certify the same to the Secretary of the Interior, then all compensation to be paid to such dissenting nations or tribes under the provisions of this act shall be determined as provided in section 3 for the determination of the compensation to be paid to the individual occupants of lands, with the right of appeal to the courts upon the same terms, conditions, and requirements, as therein provided: Provided further, That the amount awarded or adjudged to be paid by said railway company for said dissenting nation or tribe shall be in lieu of the compensation that said nation or tribe would be entitled to receive under the foregoing provisions. Said company shall also pay, so long as said Territory is owned and occupied by the Indians, to the Secretary of the Interior, the sum of $15 per annum for each mile of railway it shall construct in the said Territory. The money paid to the Secretary of the Interior, under the provisions of this act, shall be apportioned by him, in accordance with the laws and treaties now in force among the different nations or tribes, according to the number of miles of railway that may be constructed by said railway company through their lands: Provided, That Congress shall have the right, so long as said lands are occupied and possessed by said nations or tribes, to impose such additional taxes upon said railroads as it may deem just and proper for their benefit. And any Territory or State hereinafter formed, through which said railway shall have been established, may exercise the like power as to such part of said railway as may be within its limits. Said railway company shall have the right to survey and locate its railway immediately after the passage of this act.

SEC. 6. That said railway company shall cause maps, showing the route of its located line through said Territory, to be filed in the office of the Secretary of the Interior; and also to be filed in the office of the principal chief of each of the nations or tribes through whose lands said railway may be located; and, after the filing of said maps, no claims for a subsequent settlement and improvement upon the right of way shown by said maps shall be valid as against said company: Provided, That when a map showing any portion of said railway company's located line is filed, as herein provided for, said company shall commence grading said located line within six months thereafter or such location shall be void. And such locations shall be approved by the Secretary of the Interior in sections of 25 miles before the construction of any such section shall be begun.

SEC. 7. That the United States circuit and district courts for the district of Kansas, and such other courts as may be authorized by Congress, shall have, without reference to the amount in controversy, concurrent jurisdiction over all controversies arising between said Kansas City, Oklahoma and Pacific Railway Company and the nations and tribes through whose territory said railway shall be constructed. Said court shall have like jurisdiction, without reference to the amounts in controversy, over all controversies arising between the inhabitants of the said nations or tribes and said railway company; and the civil judisdiction of such courts is hereby extended within the limits of said Indian Territory without distinction as to citizenship of the parties so far as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

SEC. 8. That the officers, servants, and employés of said company, necessary to the construction and management of said road, shall be allowed to reside, while so engaged, upon said right of way, but subject to the provisions of the Indian intercourse laws, and such rules and regulations as may be established by the Secretary of the Interior, in accordance with said intercourse laws.

SEC. 9. That said railway company shall build at least 50 miles of its railway within said Territory within four years after the passage of this act or the rights herein granted shall be forfeited as to that portion not built. That said railway company shall construct and maintain continually all fences, road and highway crossings, and necessary bridges over said railway wherever said roads or highways do now or may hereafter cross said railway's right of way, or may be, by the proper authorities, laid out across the same.

SEC. 10. That the Kansas City, Oklahoma and Pacific Railway Company shall accept this right of way upon the express condition, binding upon itself, its successors and assigns, that they will neither aid, advise, nor assist in any effort looking toward the changing or extinguishing the present tenure of the Indians in their land, and will not attempt to secure from the Indian nations or tribes any further grant of lands, or its occupancy, than is hereinbefore provided for: Provided, That any violations of the conditions mentioned in this section shall operate as a forfeiture of all rights and privileges of said railway company under this act.

SEC. 11. That all mortgages executed by said railway company conveying any portion of its railway, with its franchises, that may be constructed in said Indian Territory shall be recorded in the Department of the Interior, and the record thereof shall be evidence and notice of their execution, and shall convey all rights and property of said company as therein expressed.

SEC. 12. That Congress may at any time alter, amend, or add to this act.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill?

Mr. HUDSON. Mr. Speaker, I think the bill ought to be carefully considered, and I object to its consideration now.

ALLEY IN SQUARE 185, WASHINGTON, D. C.

Mr. CHARLES W. STONE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill which I send to the Clerk's desk.

Mr. CATCHINGS. Mr. Speaker, I desire to offer a resolution.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman withhold the resolution for one moment? The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. CHARLES W. STONE] asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of a bill which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

An act (S. 2217) to provide for the closing of a part of an alley in square 185 in the city of Washington, D. C.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are hereby authorized and instructed on the petition of the owner of all the property fronting on that part or portion of an alley 15 feet wide, and running north and south through lot 30, square 185, to declare said part or portion of said alley to be closed, and the title therein is hereby declared to be vested in the owner of all the property fronting on said alley.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. CHARLES W. STONE]?

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, and was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. CHARLES W. STONE, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. CATCHINGS. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. CATCHINGS] presents a privileged matter, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Clerk be directed to request the Senate to return to the House of Representatives the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses to the amendments of the Senate to House bill 6518, entitled "An act making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes."

Mr. CATCHINGS. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say a few words in explanation of that resolution. I wish to say that one of the amendments which was agreed to by the Senate and House conferees was lost by the inexcusable carelessness or negligence of somebody. Hence the report as printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, and as it now stands, is not the report which was made by the conferees.

The enrolling clerk says this amendment was not lost in that office.

Mr. Speaker, if it was not lost in that office it was lost by me. Now, I desire to make a simple statement to the House, and it can then form its own judgment as to what the probabilities are on this question.

The report of the conferees was first prepared in the room of the Committee on Commerce of the Senate by the clerk of the Senate Committee on Commerce. It was then taken and carefully copied by the clerk of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors. After that had been done, I sat down myself and took one copy in my hand and the clerk took the other in his hand, and we made a careful and accurate comparison, and found it to be entirely correct. But lest there might have been some error, these two reports were again carefully compared on the next morning by the clerk of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors of the House and the clerk of the Senate Committee on Commerce. The comparison was again found to be absolutely correct.

These amendments, as gentlemen know, are on separate sheets of paper. They were then taken and put carefully together and a rubber band put around them, and brought straight from the Senate Committee on Commerce, and handed in by me, from my seat here. Now gentlemen can form some sort of an opinion as to whether there was any possibility of that sheet, containing one of the amendments, being lost by me under the circumstances.

As soon as the House had agreed to the conference report I said to one of the young gentlemen standing at the Speaker's desk that I wished it to be carried at once to the Senate, so that they could act upon it that afternoon, and I myself saw him go out with it in his hand. Some considerable time after that the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. HERMANN] came to me and said that the bill had not gone to the Senate, but that it was then out in the clerk's office and being fumbled over and handled and hauled about by a number of gentlemen. I went out myself, and saw eight or ten gentlemen standing there pulling and hauling over the conference report.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Were they members of Congress?

Mr. CATCHINGS. No, they were not.

Mr. KILGORE. How would it do to name them?

Mr. CATCHINGS. I do not know their names. I then complained to the Clerk that I had given directions for the report to go straight to the Senate. Maj. TOWLES had just come in, and he said he was not aware of that condition of things, and that he had just reprimanded the enrolling clerk for permitting this thing to be done. The report was then sent to the Senate. Now, one of the sheets was lost. The House can form its own opinion as to whether I lost it or whether it was lost in the Clerk's office. I have no sort of doubt myself that it was lost in the Clerk's office.

Mr. DALZELL. What was contained in the sheet which was lost?

Mr. CATCHINGS. An amendment reducing the appropriation for Boston Harbor. I do not mean to say that it was done intentionally. It was simply a piece of carelessness. Nobody could have had an object in misplacing it. I have not the slightest doubt in my own mind that it was lost in this confusion which took place in the Clerk's office.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I desire to say another thing. A mare's nest was also discovered by the enrolling clerk.

The conference report was prepared, Mr. Speaker, precisely as the conference report on the last river and harbor bill was prepared; that is to say, wherever it became necessary in indicating to the House an amendment to a Senate amendment to make some reference to pages and lines in order to give a more accurate description of the amendment, the reference was made to the print of the bill containing the Senate amendments, instead of the original bill as passed by the House. That was done in the Fifty-second Congress; and the matter passed the scrutiny of the enrolling clerks and the Committee on Enrolled Bills; the bill was enrolled correctly from that conference report and became a law. The conference report in this instance was, as I have said, prepared under the direction of the conferees in exact accordance with that precedent. But when it came here it was discovered by some man's eagle eye and massive brain that that was a thing which could not be done; that a conference report was absolutely a nullity which did not in such cases refer to the original bill.

Why, Mr. Speaker, the sole requisite of a conference report is that it shall give such suitable descriptions and illustrations as will enable the clerk to enroll the bill so as to represent what the two Houses intend shall become the law. You may refer to anything you choose; you may use any sort of language, formal or informal, artificial or otherwise; and so long as it furnishes to the clerk the evidence of what the two Houses mean to be the act of Congress, he can enroll from it, and it is absolutely legal.

I will state, however, that standing in great awe of the gentleman referred to, we have, for the purpose of avoiding any further controversy, had the clerks of the two Houses, in the half a dozen or more instances in which reference was made to pages and lines, change the report so as to conform to the high and mighty views of this gentleman.

Mr. Speaker, I now ask a vote on the resolution.

Mr. REED. What is the resolution?

Mr. CATCHINGS. It is a resolution recalling the conference report so that we may put in another with the lost amendment in it.

Mr. REED. Does the gentleman from Mississippi propose any action with regard to this mismanagement of the bill?

Mr. CATCHINGS. Oh, none at all; it was a mere piece of carelessness.

Mr. REED. But it seems to me it was a piece of carelessness calculated to shake public confidence in the operations of the office the business of which was to attend to this matter, and that for our own protection we ought to make a decided impression upon somebody's mind on this subject, because if we are liable to have such things as this occur merely by accident, it leaves open a tremendous chance to do something of the same sort by design.

Mr. CATCHINGS. Oh, there is no question that this was a purely accidental loss—none in the world.

Mr. REED. I have no reason to differ with the gentleman on that point; but it seems to me this is an instance of carelessness which is pretty nearly criminal——

Mr. CATCHINGS. I quite agree that there was gross carelessness somewhere.

Mr. REED. And of a sort that ought to be repressed so as to prevent completed bills from being pawed over by gentlemen who are not even members of Congress.

Mr. CATCHINGS. I agree with the gentleman absolutely about that.

Mr. REED. I respectfully suggest to the gentleman from Mississippi that he really ought to take some action on this matter.

Mr. DUNN. That can come afterwards.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. I want to ask the gentleman from Mississippi, for information, whether this is the only instance among the clerks of various committees of the House of Representatives where errors of this kind have been committed? Is it not worth while that we should have a complete investigation of the efficiency of the clerical service in reference to the House and its committees.

Mr. CATCHINGS. This is the only case of the kind that ever came under my personal observation.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. I thought it might be well if we should examine into this whole question.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Errors of this kind have occurred frequently. One occurred in connection with the McKinley bill, which was corrected afterwards by legislation.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. I asked my question not in any partisan view at all, but with reference merely to the betterment of the service.

The question being taken, the resolution offered by Mr. CATCHINGS was adopted.

GEORGE H. JEWETT.

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 470) for the relief of George H. Jewett, of Arlington, Washington County, Nebr.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read subject to the right of objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to pay to George H. Jewett the sum of $734, being the amount due him for material furnished and work done by him by an order from the military authorities at Fort Duchesne, Utah, in 1889.

Mr. COOMBS. We would like to have the report read in that case.

Mr. BURROWS. Let the report be read.

The report (by Mr. RICHARDS) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 470) for the relief of George H. Jewett, of Arlington, Nebr., report as follows:

Jewett entered into a contract with the chief quartermaster of the Department of the Platte, at Omaha, Nebr., to construct at Fort Duchesne, Utah, two sets of officers' quarters, and as these buildings approached completion a controversy arose about the work to be done in the houses. Jewett was ordered by the chief quartermaster to put in certain water connections which did not form a part of his original contract, and he notified the quartermaster in writing that if he performed the work he should do it under protest and ask compensation therefor.

The quartermaster insisted upon the performance of this extra work against the protest of Jewett, and an account therefor was afterwards approved by him, as also by the post commander of the post and by the Quartermaster-General of the Army, who ordered the vouchers made up and forwarded to Washington for settlement; but this work not being embraced in the original contract, the account therefor was disallowed on December 12, 1890.

Jewett did not voluntarily perform this extra work, but did so in order to save controversy, and because he was ordered peremptorily to do so. It seems further that the work was proper and necessary.

Your committee think that under the circumstances he should be paid therefor, and recommend that the bill do pass.

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to a third reading, and being read the third time, was passed.

On motion of Mr. HUNTER, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. SMITH of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 1465) for the relief of the city of Cairo, in the State of Illinois.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Speaker, I think now would be a good time to follow the regular order for a while. I demand the regular order.

Mr. SMITH of Illinois. I hope the gentleman will yield to me for a moment.

Mr. KILGORE. Oh, no. We are even now on each side.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is demanded, which cuts off all recognitions for unanimous consent.

This being Monday, there is no call of committees. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] desires to submit a report on the Indian bill.

CONTESTED-ELECTION CASE, WILLIAMS VS. SETTLE.

Mr. PAYNTER. Mr. Speaker, pending that, I desire to make an announcement to the House. A few days ago I stated that on to-day I would call up for consideration the contested-election case of Williams vs. Settle. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WOODARD], however, who presented the minority report, has received a telegram informing him of the serious illness of a member of his family, which necessitated his leaving the city, and we agreed to let this case stand over until December. I ask unanimous consent that it be postponed until then.

The SPEAKER. The case will go over; and the gentleman from Kentucky gives notice that it will not be called up during this session.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I could not understand the announcement of the gentleman from Kentucky.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky stated that this case by agreement would not be called up during this session.

Mr. MCCALL. I would like to say, Mr. Speaker, that there is a substantial agreement among all parties in interest that the case will not be called up by anybody. In other words, that no attempt will be made by anybody to get it up during this session.

Mr. BUNN. That is correct. It was agreed to by all parties.

The SPEAKER. That is the understanding, as the Chair is informed, that it has been agreed to that the case shall go over until the next session.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. COOPER of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask unanimous consent for the consideration of a matter.

The SPEAKER. The regular order has been demanded by the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. COOPER of Indiana. Can it not be withdrawn for a little while?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has not done so. The Chair had recognized the gentleman from Illinios [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. KILGORE. The House does not seem to be doing anything in particular now, and I am willing to withdraw the demand for a few moments.

The SPEAKER. Then the Chair will submit the request of the gentleman from Illinois for unanimous consent to consider the bill (H. R. 1465) for the relief of the city of Cairo, in the State of Illinois.

Mr. BUNN. I would like to inquire, Mr. Speaker, how that bill comes up?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent for its consideration.

Mr. BUNN. I object, and wish to state the reason I do so. The Committee on Claims have instructed me about that class of bills; and I can not consent to let that one come up to the exclusion of the others.

Mr. SMITH of Illinois. You object to this bill?

Mr. BUNN. Yes; by instruction of the committee I am directed to report a general bill as a substitute for all bills of this character, and let the one question be raised upon that bill.

Mr. SMITH of Illinois. This has been reported favorably by the committee.

Mr. BUNN. I understand that; but I am acting by instruction of the committee.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina objects.

Mr. BALDWIN. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, for the present consideration of the bill (S. 1458) granting to the Duluth and Winnipeg Railroad Company a right of way through the Chippewa and White Earth Indian Reservations in the State of Minnesota.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read.

The bill was read at length.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. SMITH of Illinois. I object.

GREAT FALLS RAILWAY BILL.

Mr. HEARD. Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit a conference report.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 6777) to amend an act entitled "An act to incorporate the Washington and Great Falls Electric Railroad."

Mr. HEARD. I ask that the statement of the conferees be read.

The statement was read, as follows:

After the Great Falls bill passed the House certain residents on Prospect street, in Georgetown, objected to the use of the eastern portion of that street for railway purposes; and in order to meet every objection the Senate amended the bill so that all property owners are satisfied. The merchants of Georgetown complained about the blockade caused in M street by switching cable cars in that narrow thoroughfare. The bill now provides for a union passenger station for both the Great Falls and the Washington and Georgetown roads, and for doing away with the switching nuisance. Following out the legislation already enacted to prevent the duplication of tracks, the amendment provides that the Eckington road shall be allowed to reach the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad station and the Central Market. These changes the managers on the part of the House agree to.

Mr. HEARD. Mr. Speaker, as the statement sets out, after the Great Falls bill had passed the House, one of the property owners in the block between M and Prospects streets, and Thirty-fifth and Thirty-sixth streets, objected to the tracks of the road terminating on the street, and insisted that they should go on the private property in the block, which the Commissioners had suggested to be used as a central union station. The Senate amended the bill so as to compel the road to run into the station on said block, when constructed, and which the bill provides for being constructed by the Washington and Georgetown road.

The amendment also contains the substance of the bill which was before the House and the Senate, authorizing the extension of the Georgetown and Washington road to this point; and it provides, further, for the construction of a central station there as recommended by the Commissioners, and provided for in said bills. The objection to the bill when it was considered here, was that it gave the right of condemnation, and one of the property owners in the block, the one to which I have referred, objected, because she did not want to part with her property. This bill omits the provision for condemnation, as the company has already bought the ground it needs. The bill now provides for the junction of these two roads, under conditions acceptable to said roads and to the public, and it is acceptable to the Commissioners and to the committees of the two Houses.

The additional amendment, Mr. Speaker, relating to the Eckington road, provides that the charter of that road shall be changed in this particular. It now authorizes the road to run from Judiciary Square down Louisiana avenue to a point on the east side of Seventh street. The District Commissioners have recommended to Congress a draft of a bill, that has been introduced in the House but has not yet been considered, for the creation of a central station, a union passenger station, between Sixth and Seventh streets on B street, which point is west of the Baltimore and Potomac depot, and between that place and Center Market

This amendment of the Senate provides that the road, instead of proceeding down Louisana avenue to Seventh street, shall proceed down Louisiana avenue to Sixth street, and cross the avenue on Sixth street to B street, where it makes an intersection with the roads already there, and the one which is provided for by the bill that passed the House, and which is to come from Alexandria and Mount Vernon, called the Washington, Alexandria and Mount Vernon road, and over whose tracks the Falls City and Washington road is also to come into the city.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. Is this the bill that passed the House last Tuesday?

Mr. HEARD. No; it passed two months ago.

Mr. COOMBS. Then there are two bills?

Mr. HEARD. Yes, sir.

Mr. COOMBS. I would ask the gentleman, also, with his permission, whether it is not a part of the policy outlined in the bill passed last Tuesday, that there should be no more roads built north and south, but that they should come down over existing roads?

Mr. HEARD. As far as practicable.

Mr. COOMBS. Is not this practicable so far as the Eckington road is concerned?

Mr. HEARD. This only makes provision for new tracks for a little more than one block.

Mr. COOMBS. Where is that?

Mr. HEARD. From Louisiana avenue along Sixth street to reach B street.

Mr. COOMBS. It adds no more roads running down from the north to the south?

Mr. HEARD. It is just about one block, and it enables this system to connect with the four or five other systems at that point, which is a focal point in street railway travel.

Mr. COOMBS. What are those systems?

Mr. HEARD. The Metropolitan, Anacostia, the Washington and Georgetown, the Alexandria and Washington, which we passed a bill to bring in, and which is pending in the Senate, and the Falls City road, which is to come in over the tracks of the last named company. There are at least four that will connect at that point with the Eckington when they are all completed as now contemplated.

Mr. COOMBS. Are all of those under that provision that there shall be an exchange and transfer?

Mr. HEARD. That provision is general, and applies to every road in the city and all that shall be built hereafter. It is in pursuance of the policy we have entered upon, of providing arrangements for trackage and transfer, and will be in favor of this company and all the companies with which it connects, and of great value to the public. The House committee believes it is a wise provision, and it is in the line of the policy which has been adopted by the House and Senate in the bill which they passed the other day.

Mr. COOMBS. It does not change their power?

Mr. HEARD. Not at all.

Mr. HEPBURN. I would like to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. HEARD. Certainly.

Mr. HEPBURN. Was this provision that you have been speaking of last in the bill prior to the appointment of the committees of conference?

Mr. HEARD. This provision was inserted in the bill by the Senate. It is a bill in the form of an amendment which the Senate put on this Great Falls bill.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. If my colleague will allow me to explain, I think he does not understand the question that the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HEPBURN] asked him. He asked if this had been put on in the conference committee. It was a Senate amendment, and the conference committee had jurisdiction of it.

Mr. HEARD. That is what I said. I have explained as fully as I am able to do the purport of the bill.

Mr. COOMBS. It does not authorize any more roads running north and south.

Mr. HEARD. No; except that it authorizes this Eckington road to run in that direction, as I have stated, for about one block.

Mr. HEPBURN. What is to be the motive power on that part of the road that you have been speaking of.

Mr. HEARD. It is not mentioned at all in the bill; and the motive power now being used by that company is horse power. It is a part of the Eckington system.

Mr. HEPBURN. Is it not the intention to operate this horse-power road on a portion of the roads whose cars are moved by other power?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. It does not touch any other road.

Mr. HEPBURN. Not this extension?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. It keeps the road on to B street.

Mr. HEARD. It will come in on that line.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. It runs on that track.

Mr. HEPBURN. Is it intended to enter on a different track?

Mr. HEARD. If directed by the Commissioners. It leaves that to the Commissioners. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the report.

The previous question was ordered.

The conference report was adopted.

On motion of Mr. HEARD, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the conference report was adopted was laid on the table.

PROPOSED IMPEACHMENT OF JUDGE RICKS.

Mr. JOHNSON of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I send to the Clerk's desk and ask to have read a memorial of the Central Labor Union, of Cleveland, Ohio, presenting charges against Augustus J. Ricks, judge of the district court for the northern district of Ohio.

The memorial was read, as follows:

To the honorable House of Representatives of the United States:

Your memorialists, the Central Labor Union of the city of Cleveland, Ohio, respectfully represent to your honorable body and charge:

First. That Augustus J. Ricks, judge of the district court for the northern district of Ohio, while holding and administering his office as such judge, did unlawfully, willfully, fraudulently, and corruptly on various dates between September 19, 1889, and December 27, 1891, cheat and defraud the United States out of various sums of money, ranging from $12 to $43 in each instance, and aggregating $1,558.75, which had been paid into the circuit court of the United States for said district in certain cases in said court, and did unlawfully, willfully, fraudulently, and corruptly convert the same to his own individual use; and Schedule A, hereto attached and made a part hereof, shows the amount in each instance and the number of the case; and Schedule B, hereto attached and made a part hereof, shows the dates of the receipt thereof by said Augustus J. Ricks in each instance and the number of the case; and Schedule C, hereto attached and made a part hereof, shows the number of the cases, the amount in each of costs due Augustus J. Ricks as a former clerk of said circuit court, footed upon the appearance docket of said court at the time his term of office as such ended, and the amounts to which they were increased on the judgment docket of said court; and Exhibit D, hereto attached and made a part hereof, is a copy of the entries made in one of said cases on the appearance docket of said court, and Exhibit E, hereto attached and made a part hereof, is a copy of the entries made in the same case on the judgment docket of said court; and Exhibit F, hereto attached and made a part hereof, contains a copy from the appearance docket in each of said cases of the entries made therein of the amount due said Augustus J. Ricks as a former clerk of said circuit court, as footed thereon at the expiration of his term as such, and of the subsequent entries therein, showing amount of clerks' costs subsequently earned by his successor and taxed, and the date of the final disposition of the cases by the court; and Exhibit G, hereto attached and made a part hereof, shows the amounts to which the costs due said Augustus J. Ricks as entered upon the appearance docket were increased on the judgment docket and the amounts due his successor as entered upon the appearance docket were decreased upon the judgment docket, and the record of the receipt of the money by said Augustus J. Ricks; and Exhibit H, hereto attached and made a part hereof, is a copy of said Augustus J. Ricks's report as clerk of said circuit court to the Attorney-General from January 1, 1889, to June 30, 1889, of his fees and emoluments as such during said period; and Exhibit I, hereto attached and made a part hereof, is an abstract of the report of said Augustus J. Ricks as clerk of said court to the Attorney-General from July 1 to July 30, 1889 (when his term as such ended), showing his fees and emoluments during said period; and Exhibit J, hereto attached and made a part hereof, is copied from the report of Martin W. Sanders, clerk of said court, to the Attorney-General showing the fees and emoluments of said office from July 31, 1889, to December 31, 1889 (said $1,558.75 earned subsequent to August 1, 1889, and prior to December 31, 1889, being omitted therefrom); and Exhibit K, hereto attached, are copies of those sections of the statutes of the United States that bear upon the subject; and Exhibit L, hereto attached, contains the names and addresses of witnesses and the reference to the documentary evidence to prove the above facts.

Second. Your memorialists further respectfully represent and charge that said Augustus J. Ricks, judge for the district court for the northern district of Ohio, on or about the 10th day of January, 1890, willfully and corruptly counseled, advised, persuaded, and induced Martin W. Sanders, then clerk of the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of Ohio, as such clerk to omit from his report to the Attorney-General of the United States, of the fees and emoluments of said clerk as such, from July 1, 1889, to December 31, 1889, various fees and sums of money earned by him as such, aggregating $1,558.75, as shown more specifically and in detail in the exhibits hereto attached and made a part hereof, referred to in the first specification of this memorial.

Third. Your memorialists further respectfully represent and charge that said Augustus J. Ricks, judge of the district court of the United States for the northern district of Ohio, did on or about the 10th day of January, 1890, willfully and corruptly as such judge, certify to the correctness of said report of Martin W. Sanders, clerk of the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of Ohio, referred to in the second specification of this memorial, he at the time well knowing that the same was false and untrue, and that there was omitted therefrom fees and sums of money earned by him as such clerk, aggregating $1,558.75 as hereinbefore stated.

Your memorialists further respectfully represent and charge that by reason of the facts above stated said Augustus J. Ricks has shown himself to be a person wholly unfitted to properly perform the duties and maintain the dignity and character of such judicial office, and that he is an unsafe and dangerous person to be intrusted with the performance of the important duties thereof, and that the public welfare requires that he be removed.

Wherefore, your memorialists pray that your honorable body take proper and necessary steps and action to impeach said Augustus J. Ricks, judge of the district court for the northern district of Ohio, for the crimes, offenses, misdemeanors, and corruption aforesaid, and duly present the articles thereof to the Senate of the United States and secure his removal by that body from said position.

The Central Labor Union of the city of Cleveland, Ohio, by Robert Bandlow and Robert Barthels, committee.

THE STATE OF OHIO, Cuyahoga County, ss:

——— ———, ——— ———, being duly sworn, say that they are members of the Central Labor Union of the city of Cleveland, Ohio, duly authorized to act in the premises, and that the facts and allegations set forth in the foregoing memorial are true, as they verily believe.

ROBERT BANDLOW.
ROBERT BARTHELS.

Sworn to before me by said Robert Bandlow and Robert Barthels, and by them subscribed to in my presence this 2d day of August, 1894.

[SEAL.] KARL A. RAEDER, Notary Public.

Mr. JOHNSON of Ohio. I move that this memorial be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that upon a matter of such importance as this, going to the country on the action of this House, it ought to be stated at least on behalf of Judge Ricks that he has had knowledge of the statements contained in that memorial and claims to be able to show that the memorialists are laboring under an entire misapprehension and that there is no foundation whatever for these charges; further, that a special agent of the Department of Justice has been sent some days ago, upon the request, as I understand, of my colleague [Mr. JOHNSON], and is now engaged in making an investigation of the subject-matter of this memorial.

I only want to add that, while I know nothing about the facts and have no disposition to interfere with a full investigation from any source whatever, it will be a matter of profound surprise to the bar of Ohio, regardless of party affiliations, if it should be found that there is any stain upon the judicial ermine of Judge Ricks. That is all I care to say.

Mr. JOHNSON of Ohio. I ask that the memorial be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The motion of Mr. JOHNSON of Ohio was agreed to; and the memorial was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. I ask unanimous consent to take up——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SMITH] demanded the regular order.

Mr. DOCKERY. He is now absent from the Hall.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. When a demand has been made for the regular order and the gentleman who makes the demand leaves the Hall, does that demand operate indefinitely?

The SPEAKER. Any member has the right to demand the regular order.

Mr. DOCKERY. But the gentleman from Illinois evidently intends by his absence to withdraw the demand.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the following titles:

A bill (H. R. 4780) to pension Thankful Robbins; and
A bill (H. R. 6384) for the relief of Walter S. McLeod.

The message also announced that the Senate had insisted upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 7477) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, and prior years, and for other purposes, disagreed to by the House of Representatives, and had agreed to the conference asked by the House of Representatives on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. COCKRELL, Mr. BRICE, and Mr. HALE as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Secretary be directed to return to the House of Representatives in compliance with its request, the bill (H. R. 6518) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes.

RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. CATCHINGS. Mr. Speaker, I desire to move that the conference report on the river and harbor bill be recommitted to the committee of conference.

The SPEAKER. It would be best to reconsider the action of the House.

Mr. CATCHINGS. I meant to have that done.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi asks that the vote of the House on agreeing to the conference report on the river and harbor bill be reconsidered so that the conferees may be again in possession of the papers.

There was no objection; and it was ordered accordingly.

KANSAS CITY, OKLAHOMA AND PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. COCKRELL. Mr. Speaker, the objection has been withdrawn to the request I made awhile ago.

The SPEAKER. But the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SMITH] demanded the regular order.

Mr. COCKRELL. I have looked for the gentleman and have sent three pages hunting for him; we can not find him. If he desires the regular order he ought to have stayed here.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SMITH] did not object to the bill of the gentleman from Texas; he called the regular order on the bill of the gentleman from Minnesota. Who objected to the bill of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. HUDSON. I objected; and I wish to say that having examined the bill and the report, I withdraw my objection.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will again submit the request for unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill the title of which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 6122) authorizing the Kansas City, Oklahoma and Pacific Railway Company to construct and operate a railway through the Indian Territory, and for other purposes.

Mr. DOCKERY. I wish to ask the gentleman from Texas [Mr. COCKRELL] what is the width of the right of way granted by this bill?

Mr. COCKRELL. The amendment provides for 100 feet.

Mr. DOCKERY. All right.

Mr. HUDSON. The report of the committee explains the matter, I think, satisfactorily.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

The amendments reported by the committee were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. COCKRELL, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. I ask unanimous consent that the bills reported last Friday evening from the Committee of the Whole House may be now taken up and acted on.

There was no objection.

PENSION BILLS, ETC., PASSED.

House bills of the following titles were severally taken up, the amendments (if any reported) agreed to, the bills ordered to be engrossed, read the third time, and passed; and motions to reconsider the votes by which the bills were respectively passed were laid on the table:

A bill (H. R. 4686) to correct the military record of Alexander Magaan, of Battery H, Fourth United States Artillery;
A bill (H. R. 4490) granting a pension to Henry C. Field;
A bill (H. R. 5703) for the relief of Johanna Gleason;
A bill (H. R. 6923) for the relief of Matthew T. Lewis; and
A bill (H. R. 5994) granting a pension to Rosanna Cobb, widow of Edmond Cobb, deceased, late of the Black Hawk war (title amended by striking out "Black Hawk" and inserting "Sac and Fox").

Senate bills of the following titles were severally taken up, order to a third reading, read the third time, and passed; and motions to reconsider the votes by which the bills were respectively passed were laid on the table:

A bill (S. 16) granting a pension to Nettie N. Seaver;
A bill (S. 1690) granting a pension to Otis Smith; and
A bill (S. 876) granting a pension to Rebecca H. Chambers.

PENSION BILLS LAID ON TABLE, ETC.

The bill (H. R. 6941) granting a pension to Mary Danahay, mother of Daniel Danahay, late a private Company H, Eighteenth New York Cavalry, was taken up and, in accordance with the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole House, laid on the table.

The bill (S. 1427) granting an increase of pension to Mrs. Helen G. Heiner was taken up and, in accordance with the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole House, indefinitely postponed.

EDWARD CHASTINE.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 4724) for the relief of Edward Chastine.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read, after which the Chair will ask if there be objections.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to recognize Edward Chastine as a private of Company C, Eighty-seventh Regiment Illinois Volunteers, and to place his name on the rolls of that organization as having been enrolled August 2, A. D. 1862, and discharged the service of the United States February 10, 1863.

The committee recommend the adoption of the following amendments:

In line 7 strike out the words "August second," and insert the words "September twenty-second."

In line 9 strike out the words "February tenth," and insert in lieu thereof "March twelfth."

There being no objection, the bill was considered, the amendments agreed to, and the bill as amended ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. WILLIAMS of Illinois, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

Mr. CATCHINGS. Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit a conference report on the river and harbor bill.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the title of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 6518) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the statement furnished by the House conferees.

The Clerk read as follows:

The bill as it passed the House carried appropriations amounting to $9,538,689.56.

It was increased by the Commerce Committee of the Senate $3,087,490.44, and amendments carrying appropriations amounting to $184,500 were made in the Senate.

As the bill passed the Senate it carried $12,790,680.

It has been reduced in conference $1,292,500, and as reported by the conferees it carries $11,478,180.

Mr. CATCHINGS. I demand the previous question on the adoption of the report.

The previous question was ordered, under the operation of which the report was adopted.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 475) for the relief of John Little and Hobart Williams, of Omaha, Nebr.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read subject to the right of objection.

The bill was read at length.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman?

Mr. DOCKERY. I hope this bill will go over until to-morrow.

Mr. MERCER. This bill has been amended by the House committee, and I hope the gentleman will not object.

Mr. KILGORE. I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The demand for the regular order is equivalent to an objection.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the conferees on the part of the House, I desire to submit a partial agreement on the Indian appropriation bill for the fiscal year 1895. I ask that the report of the conferees as well as the accompanying statement be read.

The report was read, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6913) making appropriations for current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 63.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 47 and 116, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 21, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

Strike out the matter inserted by said amendment, and strike out on page 34 of the bill all after the word "dollars," in line 13, down to and including the word "buildings," in line 19; and on page 47 of the bill, after the word "dollars," in line 3, insert the following:

"Provided, That whenever it shall be made to appear to the Secretary of the Interior that by reason of age, disability, or inability any allottee of Indian lands, under this or former acts of Congress, can not personally and with benefit to himself occupy or improve his allotment or any part thereof, the same may be leased upon such terms, regulations, and conditions as shall be prescribed by the Secretary for a term not exceeding five years for farming and grazing purposes, or ten years for mining or business purposes: Provided further, That the surplus lands of any tribe may be leased for farming purposes by the council of such tribe under the same rules and regulations and for the same term of years as is now allowed in the case of leases for grazing purposes;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 62, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$105,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 119, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

Add at the end of said amendment the following: "Of March 3, 1893, and this provision shall not be construed to extend the time nor to increase the amount of the liability of the Government as provided in section 19 of the said act of March 3, 1893;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 120, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lines 31 and 32 of said amendment, strike out the words "except lands containing asphaltum, gilsonite, or other like substances, which are hereby reserved from sale;" and after the word "States," in line 35 of said amendment, insert the following: "Provided that no person shall be entitled to locate more than two claims, neither to exceed 10 acres, on any lands containing asphaltum, gilsonite, or like substances; and the Senate agree to the same.

The committee of conference have been unable to agree on the amendments of the Senate numbered 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, and 115.

W. S. HOLMAN,
JOHN M. ALLEN,
JOHN L. WILSON,
Managers on the part of the House.
WILKINSON CALL,
F. M. COCKRELL,
H. M. TELLER,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The statement of the House conferees was read, as follows:

The managers on the part of the House of the conference on the remaining disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the Senate amendments to the bill (H. R. 6913) making appropriations for the Indian Department, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The conferees have been able to agree on all of the disagreeing votes of the two Houses except Senate amendments numbered 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, and 115.

The House conferees have agreed to Senate amendment numbered 120, with an amendment, as set forth in the conference report, to which special attention is called.

The House recedes from its disagreement to Senate amendment numbered 62, with an amendment fixing the amount of the appropriation for the Carlisle Indian School, Pennsylvania, at $105,000.

The House has agreed to the Senate amendment appropriating $5,000 for the survey of Indian lands.

The Senate amendments upon which no agreements have been reached are those in relation to the agreements with the Siletz Indians in California, the Yankton Sioux of South Dakota, and the Nez Perce Indians. These agreements involve something over $2,440,000. These provisions are still open. Reference is made to the former statement of the House conferees as a more complete statement of the points in disagreement between the two Houses.

WM. S. HOLMAN,
JOHN M. ALLEN,
JNO. L. WILSON,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. HERMANN. Will the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] allow me to call his attention to the fact that in the conference report, as read, there is a clerical error placing the Siletz Indian Reservation in the State of California?

Mr. HOLMAN. It should be Oregon. The gentleman from Oregon calls my attention to a clerical error. The Siletz Indian Reservation is in Oregon, instead of California, as stated in the reading.

Mr. HERMANN. And I understand that item is still open as between the conferees?

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes, it is still open. Mr. Speaker, I believe some gentlemen desire to be heard for a short time on this bill. I will make a very brief statement, and then I hope that reasonable time may be allowed for discussion on the part of gentlemen who desire to speak.

Mr. BRYAN. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. HOLMAN. Certainly.

Mr. BRYAN. On page 49 of the bill, as it was reported to the Senate, is a provision that all persons who are in whole or in part of Indian blood or descent, etc., may try their cases before the courts as citizens?

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes.

Mr. BRYAN. Is that retained in the bill as agreed upon?

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes, except as to the civilized tribes. It does not apply to them.

Mr. BRYAN. Does not apply to those who are holding lands in severalty?

Mr. HOLMAN. Does not apply to the civilized tribes. It does apply to all other Indians claiming citizenship, as I understand the provision.

Mr. BRYAN. The reason why I inquire is, that somewhere in the bill, I am informed—I have not been able to find it—there is a provision in regard to allotment which affects a question now pending before the Secretary of the Interior. There are some Indian descendants named Murphy, living in the northeast corner of Kansas and the southeast corner of Nebraska, and they now have a claim pending before the Secretary of the Interior for the right to take land as Indians. I understand that there is some provision in this bill which affects them, but that they are protected by this provision which I have referred to.

Mr. HOLMAN. Suppose you read that provision.

Mr. BRYAN. The provision here is:

That all persons who are in whole or in part of Indian blood or descent who are entitled to an allotment of land upon any Indian reservation under any law of Congress, or who claim to be so entitled to land under any allotment act or under any grant made by Congress, or who claim to have been unlawfully denied or excluded from any allotment or any parcel of land to which he, she, or they claim to be lawfully entitled by virtue of any act of Congress, may commence and prosecute or defend any action, suit, or proceeding in relation to their right thereto in the same manner as may be done by citizens of the United States.

Now, does this clause remain in the bill as agreed upon in the conference, as it is now?

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes; except that it does not apply to the civilized tribes.

Mr. BRYAN. To the five civilized tribes? That, as I understand, is a technical name applied to certain tribes?

Mr. HOLMAN. The civilized tribes of the Indian Territory.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. The five civilized tribes of the Indian Territory.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, I wish to call attention to only a very few matters, and I will refer to them very briefly. The report which was made some days ago, and which the House concurred in, and also the Senate, covered most of the matters of disagreement, except in relation to the agreements by which certain Indian tribes ceded lands to the United States.

The matters to which I wish to call attention are, first, in regard to the appropriation of $5,000 in this bill for the survey of lands in the Indian Territory; second, in regard to the asphalt lands in Utah; third, in relation to the indebtedness of the United States growing out of the purchase of the Cherokee Outlet; and, fourth, the subject of three agreements with certain Indian tribes for the cession of land. These are all the matters that I think can be fairly regarded as now remaining open.

I wish to say incidentally, however, in relation to the Carlisle school, which has been a subject of some discussion heretofore in the House, that the conferees of the two Houses recommend that no additional appropriation be made for the superintendent of that school, who is a captain in the regular Army. One reason for this action was this. He has heretofore been allowed $1,000 additional; but during the last Congress we provided for the detailing of officers of the Army to Indian agencies wherever, in the judgment of the President of the United States, the public interest would be promoted.

The result of that is that there are twenty-three officers of the regular Army serving as Indian agents, and if Congress thought proper to pay the superintendent of the school at Carlisle, Pa., $1,000 in addition to his salary and perquisites as an officer of the Army, why, then, the argument for paying twenty-three agents would be equally as forcible. I might say these gentlemen are all well provided for. They all, superintendents as well as agents, have good residences; I might say sumptuous residences. They have a large number of perquisites as regular army officers, so that their compensation is exceedingly liberal, away beyond what we pay civil employés as superintendents of schools or agents at the Indian agencies.

The Senate receded from its amendment, and that item is not recommended. In regard to surveying Indian lands, the Senate amendment appropriated $5,000 for the survey of the Indian lands; and also provided that the appropriation of $25,000, made by the last Congress for the survey of Indian lands, under certain conditions, may be made available. That $25,000 is to be expended whenever the Indians themselves desire to have their lands surveyed. Now, as a matter of fact, we surveyed some of these lands in former years. The lands of the Choctaws were surveyed partly or in whole, and some of the Creek lands. In the progress of time, as a matter of course, the Indian lands will all be surveyed. They have a right under the old treaty of 1835 to have their lands surveyed and taken in severalty.

That is the right they have; but up to this time they have never exercised it. The effect of this provision is, we are to make $30,000 available for the survey of these lands, and we have agreed to this, and consent to agree to the appropriation of that money. For one, I am not willing that a false interpretation shall be put upon this appropriation, and if there had been ample time, I think the conferees on the part of the House would have gone into some details in this matter; but the opportunity did not occur.

We can not afford, gentlemen, to threaten these Indians. We can not afford, as the Congress of the United States, to resort to any interpretation that would compel, or seemingly compel, these Indians to accept their land in severalty. I think two ends can be accomplished now. First, a division of the land among themselves, just as the Quapaws have done. They divided the whole of their land, leaving nothing to be disposed of. I think the five civilized tribes would be willing to divide their lands up among themselves. In some of the tribes the individual Indians would receive a very large amount of land. In others, for instance, the Seminoles, the amount of land would be comparatively small.

We have taken a large amount of the Creek land, and therefore there would not be much land to divide there. The same is true about the Choctaws; and still I do not think Congress should enact anything which would possibly be interpreted as a threat that we will violate the solemn enactment our fathers made with these tribes away back in the last generation. I have before me the last of those most important treaties, the one of 1835, in which this provision, which has often been read to the House, occurs:

ARTICLE 5. The United States hereby covenant and agree that the lands ceded to the Cherokee Nation in the foregoing article shall in no future time, without their consent, be included within the territorial limits or jurisdiction of any State or Territory. But they shall secure to the Cherokee Nation the right by their national councils to make and carry into effect all such laws as they may deem necessary for the government and protection of the persons and property within their own country belonging to their people or such persons as have connected themselves with them.

Now, that is the provision in effect. It has been enacted and reënacted over and over again, and nothing should be done in the way of a threat that the Government of the United States will override this solemn engagement if these Indians will not take their lands in severalty and permit the rest of it to be sold. It would be unbecoming, I think, to the dignity and integrity of our Government; so that I will consent to the appropriation of this $5,000 in addition to the $25,000 being made available for the survey of this land, when it is done in an ordinary way, not by way of intimidation, not of intimation that the Government will override its solemn treaties, but simply because it is desirable that sooner or later this land should be surveyed.

Mr. COX. What is the object of the survey?

Mr. HOLMAN. The object of the survey is this. Sooner or later they will wish to take their lands in some form or other in severalty. They are willing now, as I remarked before, to take them and divide them among themselves as the Quapaws have done. That is not what our people want to do. Our people want to get a portion of these lands, and we can not get a portion of the land.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. This is a provision to survey the lands of the five civilized tribes, the Cherokees, the Choctaws, and so on?

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. And it is proposed to go into the reservation and survey these lands?

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes, sir; and it has been intimated to the country——

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. Has it been asked for by the Indians?

Mr. HOLMAN. It is not asked for by the Indians.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. It is proposed to survey it anyway.

Mr. HOLMAN. It is asked for very earnestly by our commission, now negotiating with these tribes, the Hon. Henry L. Dawes being chairman of that commission.

Mr. HUNTER. Is it not true that some few of the Indians desire to take their lands in severalty?

Mr. HOLMAN. The report is that very few of them have any such desire. They believe their present condition is the best for them, and when I had the honor of visiting that region some years ago in company with my friend from Illinois [Mr. CANNON], we found that to be substantially the universal sentiment among them. They claimed that they were in a better condition holding their lands in common than they would be in if they held them in severalty. The idea is to assign a quarter section for each head of a family and a smaller quantity of land for each of the other members of the family, and then to sell the balance.

Now, the effect of that would be to violate the engagement entered into by our fathers with their fathers more than a generation ago, and it is against any possible misinterpretation of this appropriation in that way, against this being construed as even in the slightest degree intended to intimidate those Indians or control their action, that I enter my protest. Whenever they wish to dispose of their lands the United States will be prepared to meet them, but we ought not to force them to do it against their own desire.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Is it not your judgment that the chairman of that committee, ex-Senator Dawes, would decline to recommend anything that he did not believe to be for the best interest of the Indians?

Mr. HOLMAN. Undoubtedly; but Mr. Dawes is the author of the act of 1887 known as the allotment law, the design of which was to break up the Indian tribes, and he has been very much complimented upon it. Now, the only prominent instance of Indians holding their lands in common is that of the five civilized tribes. In almost every other case either negotiations are pending or surveys have been ordered looking to the breaking up of the tribal relations, and in view of the arbitrary character of the management of these reservations, the absolute despotism of the Indian agents, I have slowly reached the conclusion that it would be better for the Indians to be relieved from that despotism, which is backed up by the Indian police, even at the risk of being subjected to temptations and vices of our race from which they have been heretofore in a large measure exempted.

Mr. COCKRELL. Is it not a fact, known of all men, that scarcely a train passes through that country that is not robbed or attempted to be robbed; that almost every day there occur outrages upon the persons and property of citizens traveling through that region? Now, what remedy does the gentleman propose? Does he propose to let that Territory remain as the stamping ground of outlaws and cutthroats?

Mr. HOLMAN. Does not my friend know that almost all those railroads to which he refers run through portions of the country west of the five civilized tribes?

Mr. COCKRELL. These outrages occur all through that country, and the fact is known to all men who live near it or who know what is going on there.

Mr. HOLMAN. My friend says that these outrages occur all over that country, but I think the experience of gentlemen who have visited the Indian Territory of late years is that it is about as safe as any other part of the country, that property is as safe, and that individual rights are as well protected there as anywhere in this country.

We have underestimated the five civilized tribes, gentlemen. There are a great many able men among them. Keokuk, the chief of the Sac and Fox Indians, though he does not speak a word of English, is a man of commanding ability, and there are many instances of able men all through that country. The fact is we have underestimated the Indian character. The future of the Indian race in this country is far more promising than anything that our ancestors could have anticipated. From the development that is going on from year to year their progress is well assured; not so much through your schools, gentlemen, as through the teaching of experience.

One other fact in regard to the five civilized tribes. They are not only willing to divide up their lands, but they are also willing to organize a better territorial government. Those tribes constitute now, as gentlemen are aware, a confederacy, and they hold, at irregular intervals, a meeting where all the leading men of the tribes come together. They are willing to organize a better territorial government, substantially on the plan on which our Territorial governments have been organized in the past and are still, and to send a Delegate to Congress.

The Cherokees now have that right under the treaty, but they have never exercised it. They will send a Delegate to Congress as soon as their government is more systematically organized, and these two ends are about all that can be accomplished at the present time, leading on, I should indulge the hope, in the course of a few years to the formation of an Indian State, which would be very nearly as large as the State of Indiana.

Taking the five civilized tribes, together with the Quapaws and small fragments of tribes located in the northeastern portion of the Indian Territory, you would have a region of country substantially equal in area to the State of Indiana. And, gentlemen, it seems to me it would be a pleasant thing for this generation of men to carry out the humane and benevolent scheme of the men who established that Territory. They were largely Southern men.

In the writings of Jefferson, and later on of President Jackson and John C. Calhoun, more will be found urging a high policy in regard to the Indian tribes than from the men of our Northern or Northwestern section. They indulged the hope that that Indian Territory, embracing as it originally did 42,000,000 acres, would become the home of the Indians, especially their home, forming a great State of the Union where the remnants of those once powerful tribes would display the beneficent fruits of civilization in becoming a great, prosperous, and powerful State. And, gentlemen, this would have been accomplished if it had not been for the fact that the great States all around that Territory, except on the west, found those 42,000,000 acres in their way; they wanted to get the land; and therefore as far back as 1879 or 1880 we extinguished the power which the President had exercised in the days of Jackson of settling friendly Indians in the Indian Territory. And from that day to the present the progress of population in the Indian Territory has been very slow.

The next subject, Mr. Speaker, to which I wish to invite attention for a moment, is in regard to the Cherokee bonds—amendment 119, I believe; and I ask that the amendment may be read; for I wish to call special attention to that provision, as it will be, I apprehend, the subject of some comment hereafter. I am especially anxious, as are my colleagues on the committee, that this subject should be perfectly understood.

Mr. COCKRELL. Before that amendment is read, will the gentleman permit me to make one statement?

Mr. HOLMAN. Very well; I yield.

Mr. COCKRELL. The gentleman from Indiana made the statement just now that on three sides of those five tribes were great States that wanted to gobble up the Indian Territory.

Mr. HOLMAN. Oh, no; I did not say that; I would not use such a term as that with reference to great States.

Mr. COCKRELL. Well, you virtually said that they were disposed to do so.

Mr. HOLMAN. That country did lie in the path of the business of those States, as everybody knows.

Mr. COCKRELL. Exactly. Now, I want to say to the gentleman that so far as concerns the people on one side of that Territory, we are friends to those people and always have been. We are on the very friendliest terms with them. We admit the fact—read and known of all men—that there are in that Territory men of intelligence, of standing, of character; men competent in every way to govern themselves and manage the affairs of that nation. But there is one fact that ought not to be forgotten, that that is a sparsely settled country. And that it is infested by thieves, robbers, and cutthroats, no one can deny. This is not the fault of those Indians.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. May I interrupt the gentleman, in the time of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN], to ask him this question, as he has had a varied experience in connection with this subject: Is it not a fact, within the gentleman's knowledge, that those persons who have resided nearest the Indians, and have lived adjacent to the Indian reservations, have been better friends to the Indians and more disposed to treat them well and to see that they have their rights than those people living far remote who are continually airing their humantarian ideas with reference to the Indians?

Mr. COCKRELL. I do not want to impeach the motives of my friend from Indiana or anybody else who may live remote from the Indian country. But there has always been a false sympathy manifested toward the Indians. The men living upon the border of the Indian country in Arkansas, Missouri, and Kansas are perfectly familiar with those people. No one in these communities wants to rob the Indians or take any advantage of them. But there is in that Indian nation a condition of affairs that must be cured by some means or other. This condition of things is not the fault of the Indians, for as a rule they are law abiding. But, as I have said, that country is sparsely settled. When a gang of outlaws goes in and demands that these Indians feed them, they are bound to do so, for a refusal would subject them possibly to the harshest kind of treatment.

Now, under existing circumstances, gentlemen who read the newspapers, especially those who come from that portion of the country, know that almost daily we hear that some parties who make that Indian country their stamping ground have robbed a bank in Arkansas, or Texas, or it may be up in Wisconsin. When these men are trailed back it is almost always found that they take refuge in the western part of that Territory, in the region of the Kiowas and Comanches. Recently there have been a number of robberies and murders. The other day a man whom I have tried three times, with a number of others, was killed in an attempt to arrest him. There were nine men who broke jail, men some of whom were under sentence for robbery and other crimes in my court, and they have never been captured. We have never been able to get them; and they live in that sparsely settled country, and live off of that people——

Mr. HOLMAN. Now, my friend has made a very good speech and a very interesting statement, if he will just let me conclude my remarks.

Mr. COCKRELL. Oh, I know; you do not want to hear it. [Laughter.]

Mr. HOLMAN. My experience is simply that when you want to reach a given object of high public interest you can make the newspapers bristle in its behalf if you choose. My friend before me, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON], and myself passed through that region of the country not many years ago, and it was just as sparsely settled as now, and we had not the slightest apprehension of danger, or any reason to feel that we were not secure.

Mr. COCKRELL. Oh, you and CANNON had not anything to be robbed of. [Laughter.]

Mr. HOLMAN. On the contrary, they treated us with distinguished consideration.

And that reminds me, Mr. Speaker, of a little incident that occurred. I was present and heard the discussion the other day on some provision in the army appropriation bill, in relation to what are called the Apache Indians, the Cherokee Apaches. There is an interesting history there, gentlemen, in connection with this people.

These Indians for generations were living peaceably and prosperously in New Mexico. In the midst of their harvest they were driven away. They lived in the region known as the Warm Springs region. They were taken from New Mexico and settled among the Mescalero Apaches, and afterwards went to the White Mountains among the Apaches there in Northern Arizona.

Gen. Crook told us, and he had a perfect idea of the Indian character, and we did not meet in all our travels with a single Indian that did not recognize his name as soon as spoken—a humane, kind-hearted man, always truthful, of a larger experience of Indian affairs than any person of our generation—he told us all about the wrongs which had been inflicted on these people, which in his judgment had driven them to desperation. He did not believe that one crime out of fifty attributed to these Indians had really been committed by them.

Why, Mr. Speaker, if I remember correctly all these years, the number of Apaches at the San Carlos Agency at that time, according to Gen. Crook, was but 27 men, headed by Geronimo, and 7 boys and 92 women, and all of the outrages which had been committed during that period was the outgrowth of the desire on the part of these people, according to Gen. Crook, to be permitted to go down into New Mexico amongst their own kin again. My blood rose when I went there and heard of the facts, the outrages which had been perpetrated by the Apaches, but when the facts were made known by Gen. Crook, it seemed different, and I wish to refresh the memory of my friend from Illinois, who I saw listening to that discussion, but not participating in it the other day, that when we reached the little village called Wilcox—there were three or four of us in the party—on the Southern Pacific Railroad nearly south of Fort Grant, that we got there about noon.

It would take us about half a day to reach Fort Grant from that point, and we were admonished, almost with tears in the eyes of our fellow-citizens, that to go 15 miles from that village without a military escort, was a foolhardy act that nobody would consent to perform who had any information or knowledge of the Indian character. But we drove to Fort Grant that afternoon, I suppose 30 or 40 miles distant. During that journey we passed one ranch I believe, but saw no Indians. We stayed at Fort Grant that night and drove to Camp Thomas the next day, and not a single Indian in sight nor a solitary human habitation except one, I believe.

The next morning, when moving down the Gila River to the San Carlos Agency, through the cactus bushes, the first indication of a war character that we saw hove in view through the thick cactus bushes. And what do you think that military demonstration was—the only one we saw? It was six wagon loads of barley driven by six Indians, and they informed our guide that they were going up with their barley, which had been raised on the Gila and San Carlos Rivers, that they were taking it up to Camp Thomas to get a dollar a bushel for it. They were well-conducted drivers. That was all we saw that was warlike.

We got down to San Carlos, and there the only signs of white inhabitants were a military man acting as agent, and his clerk, and two Indian traders, one with a wife, and the other with a wife and two children. The captain—I think it was Capt. Greene—told us it was the safest place in the United States. And yet there were four or five thousand Indians right around us. I have no doubt my friend slept in his little cottage there near Capt. Greene's headquarters, without even thinking of bolting his door. I know I did. So gentlemen, these things are sometimes magnified.

I know they are not magnified by my friend here, for he knows a great deal more about the matter than I do, because I have had comparatively little experience. My friend has spoken so well from his standpoint that I hope he will not ask me another question.

Mr. COCKRELL. When you get through I shall have something to say in my own time.

Mr. HOLMAN. And we shall be glad to hear our friend. I shall, at any rate.

Now, gentlemen, there is an item here to which I wish to call very especial attention. In fact, there are two. I ask the Clerk to read the last clause on page 145 of the bill, beginning with line 18. This is a Senate amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

And the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to issue to the Cherokee Nation or to its assigns evidences of indebtedness of the United States of America, bearing interest at the rate of 4 per cent per annum, payable annually on the 4th day of March of each year, in amounts of $1,000 and $10,000, respectively, for the respective amounts of the second, third, fourth, and fifth installments, maturing respectively on the 4th day of March, 1896, the 4th day of March, 1897, the 4th day of March, 1898, and the 4th day of March, 1899, and amounting in the aggregate to $6,640,000, as specified in said act.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask the Clerk to read the passage which I have marked in the Indian appropriation act of the last session, in regard to that indebtedness of the United States to the Cherokee Indians.

The Clerk read as follows:

And the provisions of said agreements so amended shall be fully performed and carried out on the part of the United States: Provided, That the money hereby appropriated shall be immediately available and the remaining sum of $2,300,000, or so much thereof as is required to carry out the provisions of said agreement as amended and according to this act, to be payable in five equal annual installments, commencing on the 4th day of March, 1895, and ending on the 4th day of March, 1899, said deferred payments to bear interest at the rate of 4 per cent per annum, to be paid annually, and the amount required for the payment of interest as aforesaid is hereby appropriated.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, I hope that gentlemen will see the exact effect of this proposition. The Senate amendment which has been agreed to with an amendment is this: I have not the exact words before me, but added to this provision is a clause that nothing in this provision shall be construed as in any way enlarging the liability of the United States, or extending the time for the payment of this money. The effect of it, therefore, if we understand matters correctly, is this: The Secretary of the Treasury has issued no certificate under the provisions of this act, a passage from which has been read by the Clerk, but a certificate has been issued by the Secretary of the Interior to the Cherokee Indians, for $6,460,000.

That is one certificate. It was stated to the conferees that the Cherokee Nation had transferred this certificate over to a gentleman by the name of Wilson, of New York, and that this proposition was a change of the original agreement only in this, that instead of one certificate, issued by the Secretary of the Interior for $6,460,000, which was perhaps not negotiable—although I do not know as to that—that the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized by this provision to issue bonds or certificates—I believe they are called certificates—of $1,000 or $10,000 each, in lieu of that outstanding certificate for $6,460,000. That seems to be the difference.

The Secretary of the Treasury at one time seemed to understand that the effect of this provision was to increase the duration of these bonds, and that of course would add to their value. But I have had the statute read for the purpose of showing that the time is exactly the same, and that the interest is exactly the same, beginning from the same date, so that the only change is that this sum of $6,460,000 is authorized to be divided up into smaller securities. The question is, Is it the policy of the Government to do that?

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. We owed the Cherokees, under treaty, or rather under agreement, for these lands, $6,000,000 and over?

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. Payable according to the agreement?

Mr. HOLMAN. In five years.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. If I understand the gentleman aright, the Cherokees have sold this claim against the Government.

Mr. ALLEN. To the extent of this claim of $6,460,000.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. And sold it for some price satisfactory to them.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. At a premium.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. Of how much?

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Something over $100,000.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. Something over $100,000. Now, practically, the purchaser of that claim or indebtedness comes in and wants you to give him bonds of the United States.

Mr. HOLMAN. That is the practical result.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. Now, does the Government make anything by that?

Mr. HOLMAN. It does not take in anything.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. Now, wherein does the owner of this claim take anything?

Mr. ALLEN. This gives him his certificates in a more convenient form.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. How much more are they worth in that form than the claim in the present form. Let me add this, as it has now passed out of the Indians' hands: Can we not borrow the money at 2½ or 3 per cent, and negotiate with the man who holds this claim against the United States to take the money instead of giving him 4 per cent bonds?

Mr. ALLEN. Our contract is to give him 4 per cent.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. Well, I understand; but he comes in now, having this claim by virtue of that treaty, which he has bought in substance, and says to the Government of the United States, "I want you to change that and give me bonds at 4 per cent." Now, while we are "dickering" with him, as we are not taking anything, why not borrow the money at 2½ or 3 per cent and pay off the debt and make the difference of 1½ per cent?

Mr. HOLMAN. It was to be paid in five installments, extending over a period of five years.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. Certainly.

Mr. HOLMAN. And it was very obvious that Congress could not enter into a new contract and change that contract so as to make a heavier burden upon the people. I am acquiescing in this matter. Other gentlemen have studied it very thoroughly, and I was anxious that the House should know what is proposed to be done.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. I do not know very much about it; but I do know from the gentleman's statement that this indebtedness was to be paid in five installments at 4 per cent interest. Now, the Indians sold that claim against the Government, according to the gentleman's statement. It has gone into the hands of a third party. The third party comes in and says to the United States, "Now, I would be glad if you would execute me in lieu of the indebtedness"——

Mr. ALLEN. A new certificate in lieu of one of six million.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois (continuing). Bonds of the United States bearing 4 per cent interest. Now, I want to make——

Mr. HOLMAN. The term "bond" is not used.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. It is the same thing. Would not he be glad to get his money; and can not we afford to borrow it at 2½ per cent instead of giving him the 4 per cent?

Mr. ALLEN. The statement was just made that the man who purchased the claim paid a premium of $100,000 for it. He would not be glad to pay out $100,000 for a contract and then take that back in money.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. Why interfere? Why not let the man alone, without any request on the Government.

Mr. ALLEN. We can let him alone, but if we can do a favor to somebody without hurting the Government, if we can give him these securities in a more convenient form, I do not see exactly with the gentleman, that because we are not "beating" a man out of the amount, that we ought not to do anything for him.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. How much are these bonds worth—this present Indian indebtedness?

Mr. ALLEN. They would not be worth a dollar more, except that they would be in a more convenient shape to him.

Mr. PICKLER. This is not to cost the Government a cent.

Mr. ALLEN. It does not cost the Government a single cent.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. The only object I have is this, if they were worth more, that the Indians probably ought to get the benefit of the increased value.

Mr. ALLEN. They are worth more probably to him, being in more convenient shape, but they do not cost us any more and the liability of the Government is not increased a solitary cent.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, I was exceedingly anxious that this matter should be understood, and I hope it is now well understood. I concede that nothing in this contract is beneficial to the United States; but, on the other hand, there is nothing in it detrimental to the United States. The Government suffers no injury. I yielded on this point with reluctance. The Senate was very anxious for it, and, with the amendment to which I have referred, the proposition was finally agreed to.

Up to this point I have spoken altogether of matters upon which an agreement has been reached. It is no easy matter to reach agreements upon a bill like this, which is the most difficult of all the great appropriation bills. One hundred and twenty amendments have been put upon the bill. There are three propositions to which I now desire to ask the attention of the House for a few moments. They are the matters as to which the conferees on the part of the House recommend that the House insist that a further conference be asked for. They cover the contracts with the Siletz Indians of Oregon, the Yankton Sioux of South Dakota, and the Nez Perces of Idaho.

The amount involved is something near two million and a half of dollars. The proposition of the House was that, inasmuch as we held those lands simply in trust for the Indians, we should not appropriate the money directly out of the Treasury for the purpose of paying for them, but that, as the Government received the money from time to time, it should place it to the credit of the Indians on the books of the Treasury. That would seem to be an act of justice to the Government of the United States, as well as to the Indian tribes. For that reason the House did not make any appropriation of the money. The Senate, however, insists on an appropriation direct in all three instances, one case involving over a million dollars.

But that is not the worst feature. When the rate of interest in this country was 8 and even 10 per cent, and when you were paying the Indian tribes 30 and 40 cents an acre for their lands, you paid 5 per cent interest on their money that you held in the Treasury. When you began to pay for these Indian lands something approaching their real value, as in the case of the Cherokee Outlet, where you paid, I believe, $1.25 or about that amount, perhaps $1.40, then you put the rate of interest down to 4 per cent.

The three agreements made with the three tribes that I have mentioned contained provisions that the interest should be allowed on deferred payments at the rate of 5 per cent. You agreed to pay them for their lands from $1.25 to $3 an acre, the latter price in the case of the Nez Perces. I understand that a large portion of that land is not very good, but we agreed to pay $3 an acre for it, and now, in addition to paying for it at that rate, the Senate insists that we shall pay interest at the rate of 5 per cent. There is a case where my friend can see the injustice that is done to the Government. You can borrow money at 2½ per cent, but it is proposed to pay these Indians 5 per cent, and yet you are at the same time paying them a larger price for their lands than you ever paid before.

Mr. MARSH. Did we agree in the treaty to pay them 5 per cent?

Mr. HOLMAN. The men who negotiated these agreements, which had, of course, to be ratified by Congress——

Mr. PICKLER. They agreed to give the Indians 5 per cent, did they not?

Mr. HOLMAN. They agreed to give the Indians 5 per cent.

Mr. PICKLER. Under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior?

Mr. HOLMAN. I do not know under whose direction, but I should think not. I do not think that the Secretary of the Interior or any other officer of this Government would have ventured to give such instructions.

Mr. PICKLER. I suppose he limited them to some rate. He probably did not instruct them to allow 5 per cent, but it is not likely that he would send them out without any limitation.

Mr. HOLMAN. Was there not an example right before him in the case of the Cherokee Outlet, where we paid $1.40 an acre for the land and allowed 4 per cent interest on the money?

Mr. PICKLER. That was $6,000,000, while this is only $500,000.

Mr. HOLMAN. The case in your State is, but in the case of the Nez Perces to which I was referring, the amount is over a million dollars, and upon that it is proposed to pay 5 per cent interest.

Mr. PICKLER. It has always been the practice, I believe, to pay the Indians 5 per cent.

Mr. HOLMAN. Not uniformly.

Mr. PICKLER. It has been nearly universal, has it not?

Mr. HOLMAN. I will not undertake to say how many of the later agreements have been at the rate of 4 per cent, but I call attention to the very prominent instances that I have mentioned.

Now, all I wish to say in conclusion is that the conferees upon the part of the House ask the House to accept our agreements as far as we have been able to agree and to decline to recede from the disagreement to the amendments of the Senate in regard to these three contracts. I am in favor of ratifying the contracts, placing the money to the credit of these Indians and paying 4 per cent upon it, but I do not think Congress ought to go beyond that. Three per cent would be liberal, 4 per cent is very liberal, but 5 per cent is going beyond reason when you are paying the Indians twice as much for their lands as you ever paid before. I believe I have nothing further to add, Mr. Speaker. I am only anxious that there shall be a distinct understanding of what has been agreed upon and what has not been agreed upon.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I am as anxious as the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] can possibly be that there shall be a distinct understanding relative to the ratification of these treaties. While it is true that my colleague [Mr. ALLEN] and I have signed this report, I think he will bear testimony that we were in favor of the ratification of the treaties and were disposed to move when we came back here that the House recede. That was our understanding so far as these agreements were concerned.

Of course, Mr. Chairman, I am more interested in the ratification of the Nez Perce treaty which the gentleman from Indiana has spoken of than any other of the treaties named in this bill, because that treaty virtually affects the immediate section of the country in which I reside. I am more interested in it because it affects my neighbors. The area of country involved is as large as the State of Maryland; and while I do not wish in the slightest degree to criticise the gentleman from Indiana, I do not think he has been entirely fair in the statement he has made to the House.

His main opposition to the ratification of this treaty appears to be based on the rate of interest; but unfortunately perhaps for the Government, the commissioners (one of them a trusted officer of the Interior Department) who made this treaty could not secure from these Indians any lower rate of interest than 5 per cent. Moreover, the statement made that a large portion of this land is not very valuable is not be borne out by the men who reside close to that reservation. I have here the statement of Mr. Robert Schleicher, who has resided upon the borders of this reservation a lifetime, and who was one of the commissioners that made this treaty.

Let me read from his statement; but before doing so I want to say that I know of my own knowledge that there is no more valuable land in the country between the Bitter Root and the Cascade Mountains than the Nez Perces Reservation. It contains 350,000 acres of fine agricultural land, and Mr. Schleicher, who is well acquainted with the land, estimates these 350,000 acres at $3.75 per acre. This is the estimate of a conservative man, who has resided for a lifetime on the borders of the reservation. For the information of the House, I embody the report of the committee in my remarks:

On the 1st of May, 1893, Robert Schleicher, James F. Allen, and Cyrus Beede concluded an agreement with the Nez Perces Indians, of Idaho, by which agreement the said Indians released to the United States about 556,207 acres of land, to be opened to settlement under the provisions of the homestead, town site, timber, and stone and mineral laws of the United States. The bill reported by the committee provides that persons entering these lands shall pay $3.75 per acre for agricultural lands, and $5 per acre for timber and stone and mineral lands.

It is believed that the money received from the sale of these lands at the prices fixed in the bill will fully reimburse the Government for all expenditures made in connection with the purchase of the land or negotiation of the treaty, and all incidental expenses in any manner connected therewith. It is believed that the first payment made under the treaty will be returned to the Treasury as quickly as settlers can make the payments required under the bill. In support of this proposition, two statements are submitted, estimating, each independently of the other, the classes of land and the acreage thereunder, thrown open to settlement by the terms of the treaty referred to.

Robert Schleicher, chairman of the commission which negotiated this treaty, submits the following estimate:

	Acres.
Prairie agricultural land	350,000
Timber agricultural land	70,000
Mineral land	20,000
Timber and stone land	70,000
Mountainous land not estimated	46,207½
Total number of acres under this estimate	556,207½

The estimate thus made at the prices fixed by the bill would bring to the Government the following sum:

350,000 acres agricultural land, at $3.75 per acre	$1,312,500
70,000 acres timber agricultural land, at $3.75 per acre	262,500
20,000 acres mineral land, at $5 per acre	100,000
70,000 acres timber and stone, at $5 per acre	350,000
Total	2,025,000

It further appears that Mr. Schleicher has resided near this reservation, and in the county in which it is situated many years. He is familiar with the resources of that country, a conservative man in all things, and his judgment good with reference to the matter upon which he has expressed an opinion.

Hon. Frank A. Fenn furnishes another estimate covering the same ground. Mr. Fenn was born in the county in which this reservation is situated, has lived there all of his life, and since the organization of a State government for Idaho has been connected with the public lands department of the State. He is as well informed concerning the resources of any section of Idaho, and the resources of the section of land proposed to be ceded by this bill in particular, as any man in the United States. His estimate is as follows:

Agricultural land, 336,207 acres, at $3.75 per acre	$1,260,776.25
Timber agricultural land, 40,00 acres, at $3.75 per acre	150,000.00
50,000 acres timber and stone land, at $5 per acre	250,000.00
30,000 acres mineral land, at $5 per acre	150,000.00
100,000 acres mountainous grazing land, at 50 cents per acre	50,000.00
Total	1,860,776.25

The surplus to the Government at the price paid and at the price sold under the Schleicher estimate, would be $356,378.

The surplus under the Fenn estimate would be $192,154.

Mr. Fenn did not, of course, fix the price per acre of any of this land. The 100,000 acres is estimated at 50 cents per acre for the purpose of showing what the Government ought ultimately to realize out of it, assuming that the estimate is correct. It would not, of course, cut any immediate figure in reimbursing the Treasury.

There are about 1,500 of these Indians. They have taken land in severalty, are well advanced in civilization, and are desirous of becoming citizens of the United States.

A copy of the agreement is included in the substitute. The Indians look upon the sale of this land as being accomplished, and are now anxiously awaiting the consummation of the agreement as signed by them and the commissioners on the part of the United States.

Attention is called to S. Ex. Doc. 31, Fifty-third Congress, second session, which contains the report of the commission, and all of the proceedings under which the treaty was negotiated, and a copy of the agreement and the letters of the Secretary of the Interior and Commissioner of Indian Affairs relative thereto.

Finally, the treaty and its ratification are in line with well-established policy of the Government.

Now, how do we appropriate this money? Some gentlemen have said to me that we had better make an appropriation now for the first installment, next year for the next installment, and so on until the whole is paid. But, gentlemen, that would be a violation of the treaty which we have entered into with these Indians; and certainly the obligations of the Government with the Nez Perce Indians should be as honorably and as sacredly observed as its obligations with the civilized tribes of whom the gentleman from Indiana has spoken so eloquently. Now, the appropriation which we make in this bill is as follows:

In consideration for the lands ceded, sold, relinquished, and conveyed as aforesaid the United States stipulates and agrees to pay to the said Nez Perce Indians the sum of $1,626,222, of which amount the sum of $26,222 shall be paid to said Indians per capita as soon as practicable after the ratification of this agreement. The remainder of said sum of $1,626,222 shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the "Nez Perce Indians, of Idaho," and shall bear interest at the rate of 5 per cent per annum, which principal and interest shall be paid to said Indians per capita as follows, to wit: At the expiration of one year from the date of the ratification of this agreement the sum of $50,000, and semiannually thereafter the sum of $150,000 with the interest on the unexpended portion of the fund of $1,000,000 until the entire amount shall have been paid, and no part of the funds to be derived from the cession of lands by this agreement made shall be diverted or withheld from the disposition made by this article on account of any depredation or other act committed by any Nez Perce Indian, prior to the execution of this agreement, but the same shall be actually paid to the Indians in cash, in the manner and at the times as herein stipulated.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. That is according to the treaty.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. That is exactly according to the treaty.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. What is the contention of the gentleman from Indiana?

Mr. WILSON of Washington. The gentleman's contention is that we should not pay the 5 per cent interest and that we should not make this appropriation. Now, if we are going to pay no interest and appropriate no money we shall have no Indian bill, because that is the whole subject of controversy.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. You mean we shall have no treaty.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Yes, we shall have no treaty.

Mr. MADDOX. I wish the gentleman would state to us precisely what the conferees have agreed on.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. I will do so as soon as I can; but I want to get through with this statement.

Now, if we do not pay this interest of 5 per cent, what will be the result? We shall have to send commissioners again to treat with these Indians; and the cost of such a commission will in my judgment be equal to the difference between 4 and 5 per cent. Moreover, if we send another commission to make a treaty with the Nez Perces it is doubtful whether we can secure a bargain as good as that we have already secured in this treaty.

The Nez Perces Indians are pretty highly civilized; they know the value of their lands, and they are going to realize that value before ceding them to their white neighbors.

We are requiring here that whenever an acre of this land is taken up as a homestead there shall be paid for it $3.75. I believe, knowing something of the conditions that surround this case, that before the Treasury will be called upon to pay the $650,000 that the entire amount of money would be in the Treasury from the sale of the lands on this reservation.

All over the West, all over my State, all over Idaho, as well as other portions of the country, they have been writing to me constantly letters to know when this reservation will be open to settlement. It is exceedingly valuable and fertile land, and will give an opportunity to build up a great agricultural community there.

Now, Mr. Speaker, we have the opportunity here to do it offered to us; and yet we are quibbling whether we shall pay 4 per cent or 5 per cent, a difference of only 1 per cent, or whether we will send another commission to treat with these Indians, the expenses of which will amount to as much money as it will take to ratify the treaty. So that a mere question of interest, which runs only for five or six years, is a mere nothing in the ratification of the treaty and as compared to the importance of the subject.

I can very well see how gentlemen might dissent from the amount of money appropriated or disagree on such an item as that. But I can not bring my mind to discuss the question that involves only 1 per cent running through a period of three or four years, and take the alternative, that we may be compelled to send another commission to treat with these Indians.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. Do I understand the gentleman to maintain that the question is one of ratification or no ratification of this treaty?

Mr. WILSON of Washington. That is it exactly.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. The bill which the Senate proposes, and which you advocate, I understand, ratifies the treaty, and the provision which the gentleman from Indiana advocates sets it aside.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. That is it.

Mr. PICKLER. All three of the treaties.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. The gentleman has stated it in a nutshell. All three treaties are involved—the treaty of my friend from Oregon [Mr. HERMANN], the treaty of my friend from South Dakota [Mr. PICKLER], and the other treaty, all of which were passed upon in the committee. The Committee on Indian Affairs of the House, of which you, sir (referring to Mr. MADDOX), have the honor to be a member, discussed this matter, considered it in all of its details, passed upon it, recommend it to this House, and to-day we are back here with a conference report quibbling over a rate of 1 per cent on the amount as to whether the Government of the United States will carry out its sacred obligations made with a semibarbarous tribe of people, or whether the Government will refuse positively to ratify the agreement made by its own sanction through its own commissioners.

Now, the Indian is peculiar; you know that better than I do.

After he has entered into a treaty with what he pleases to term the Great Father, he is ready to carry it out. He proposes to do it himself. He stands ready to comply with his agreement. Will the Government of the United States be less honorable, or the Congress of the United States less honorable in regard to its contract with a semibarbarous tribe than these people have been or propose to be with the Government?

Mr. Speaker, it is our duty to comply with our agreement with this people. We must maintain the integrity of our dealings with them. This country is greatly interested in the result. We are gradually closing up our reservations; we are gradually getting them settled by the white people. We are gradually educating the Indians—I think myself they ought to be educated on the reservations—but all the same the Indian problem is rapidly passing away, and will soon become a thing of the past.

Only a few more questions remain to be dealt with. But if we are to be continually pressed back here, it is useless to go there, expend labor, time, and trouble and get the treaties into shape, and after they have been properly ratified and agreed to and the sacred obligation entered into, to find the Congress of the United States unwilling to carry out the promises.

It was understood, sir, when we came back with this report, that while we signed the report as conferees to a disagreement, and while my honorable friend, Mr. HOLMAN—and while I am often compelled to dissent from him, he knows as I do that I respect him and honor him and love him for the services he has rendered to the Republic of the United States—yet I must dissent from him, knowing the surroundings and the conditions that exist in the section of country that I have the honor in part to represent; and I can not—I can not agree to again send these treaties back for ratification, again appropriate money for a commission that can go there and undertake to make a new agreement and go over the same ground that has been already covered by the former commission.

Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman must remember that this involves a big appropriation of money.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. I said, while my friend was out, that there might be a disagreement upon the appropriation; and I called the attention of the House and the committee to the appropriation as it exists in the Indian bill. I think those around me will bear testimony that I stated it correctly and as it exists. So I hope, in the interest of the settlers, in the interest of the people of the State of Idaho, in the interest of the people of the State I have the honor in part to represent, and in the interests of all the people of the West who are building up a great empire upon the other side of the Rocky Mountains, that when a motion is made to recede from the disagreement, as it will be made, the House will promptly sustain us.

It is right, it is just, it is fair, it is honorable, and why not carry it out? Now, my friend from Georgia [Mr. MADDOX] wishes to know what we had agreed to.

Mr. HOLMAN. It is fully stated in the conference report.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. In the last report the Senate receded from its amendment of a thousand dollars for additional pay of the officer of the United States Army in charge of the Carlisle school. The gentleman from Indiana has stated that, and as he has also stated, we have twenty-three army officers now in charge of various Indian agencies throughout the country. If we make an appropriation for one army officer, it probably would be just and equitable that we make a similar appropriation for all army officers.

Personally I am opposed now, as I always intend to be, to the Government of the United States detailing any military officer to act as an Indian agent in the West. I am opposed now, as I always intend to be, to the appointment of any Indian agent from any State or Territory other than the State or Territory in which the Indian agency to which he is appointed is located.

I do not believe that the appointment, either of these army officers, or of these outsiders, and the sending of them in our country is a good thing for the Indian service. When I offered my amendment, when this bill was first being considered, I stated upon the floor of the House the reason why I opposed the appointment of my fellow-citizens from other sections of the country to be sent into our country to hold these offices.

The Democratic party as it exists in my State has met me in times gone by in honorable and fair battle. The members of that party have upheld it in that section against an overwhelming majority opposed to them, and when that party came into full and absolute power, it was entitled to the benefit of whatever offices there might be in our midst to which members of that party could be appointed.

Now, they have not received such appointment. The Democratic party of the State which I have the honor in part to represent have no representative upon this floor, and I hope it will be many years before they do have one; but in their name I protest against the honorable Secretary of the Interior sending his men from his section into our midst, in these times of distress among our people, to take that which lawfully and legitimately belongs to them.

I had not intended, Mr. Speaker, to discuss this branch of the question.

Mr. HENDERSON of Iowa. I should like to ask the gentleman from Washington if there are any differences between the two Houses besides this 1 per cent?

Mr. HOLMAN. And the appropriation.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. The gentleman from Indiana says, "And the appropriation." Of course that is always the difference.

Mr. LUCAS. What other difference is there?

Mr. WILSON of Washington. There is no other difference than the 1 per cent and the appropriation of the money. That means in the usual able, artful manner of the gentleman from Indiana, who hopes for the defeat of the treaty, and that is what he is seeking to accomplish. That is all there is in that. If he can defeat the 1 per cent he can send the treaty back, send the commissioners back for another treaty, and thereby obviate the appropriation of the money, and in that way cut down, as he hopes to do, the appropriation of money in this direction. That is all there is in that.

Now, I want to say that we shall probably be met with defeat. The Senate in my judgment will not recede from these amendments. The House of Representatives might just as well recede first as last.

Mr. HENDERSON of Iowa. Ought they to?

Mr. WILSON of Washington. I think they ought to recede, and the majority of the conferees think so. Speaking with all respect, we stand 5 to 1 for the ratification of these treaties.

Mr. COCKRELL. Why do not you so report, then?

Mr. WILSON of Washington. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. COCKRELL] asks me why we do not so report.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I should like to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. I should like to reply to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. GROSVENOR. There are so many of these conferees, representing so many different bodies, that perhaps the gentleman from Washington has not heard from all of them.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Well, the conferees on the Indian bill, unlike the conferees on the tariff bill, had no letter from the President of the United States.

Mr. GROSVENOR. What about the conferees on the part of the sugar-refining interest?

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Well, they have a letter.

Mr. GROSVENOR. What about the conferees on the part of the sugar-growers, and what about the conferees on the part of the people; that is, the Republicans, who have not been called in yet?

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Well, if the gentleman wants to go off on that line, I will say to him in my own time that it is my judgment that when the tariff conferees agree it will be to the Senate bill, the same as when the conferees agree upon the Indian bill, on the differences now remaining; I think it will be upon the Senate bill. When the report on the tariff bill comes in the Democrats shall vociferate a good deal, of course, and gesticulate and talk about the people.

Mr. MAHON. And the farmers.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. And the farmers; but all the same I will say to the gentleman from Ohio that if any tariff bill is passed at this session of Congress, in my opinion it will be the Senate bill.

Mr. HENDERSON of Iowa. You had better stick to your Indian bill.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. I think so myself, and would have done so if it had not been for the interruptions. I have all I want to do on this one conference report.

Mr. HULL. I understood the gentleman from Washington to say that five of the conferees were in favor of the House bill, and only one in favor of the Senate. That being so, why does the gentleman say we must agree to the Senate amendment?

Mr. PICKLER. The gentleman stated just the reverse.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. What I intended to say was that five of us were for the Senate amendment.

Mr. HULL. I understood you to say the House bill.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Five of us are for the Senate amendments to the House bill, for the ratification of the treaty.

Mr. HERMANN. May I make an inquiry of the gentleman?

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Yes, sir.

Mr. HERMANN. From the answer given by you to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HULL] the understanding would seem to be that there was but one main disagreement, and that was as to the 1 per cent interest agreed to be paid to the Indians according to the treaty. I would ask you, then, what is the status of the other disagreement, as to the ratification of the agreement upon the three different reservations?

Mr. WILSON of Washington. The same condition of affairs. The same trouble exists upon the treaty that you are interested in; the same trouble exists with the treaty that the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. PICKLER] is interested in as exists relative to the Nez Perces. Around the Nez Perces revolves all the ratifications of these treaties.

Mr. HERMANN. So that there are more than one disagreement.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. There are three disagreements, involving the same central point. Yours provides for 5 per cent interest and the money appropriated. Now, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. MADDOX] says I cut him off. Has the gentleman any other questions to ask?

Mr. MADDOX. No.

Mr. OGDEN. What amount is involved in the disagreements?

Mr. WILSON of Washington. About $2,000,000; and while it is all appropriated at one time, I wish to be entirely fair and state it does not come out of the Treasury except in installments.

Mr. LUCAS. In five years.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. In five years, and that the first installment is paid as soon as practicable. Now, we people who reside around the Nez Perce Reservation think that the money will be paid in before the Government will have to pay it out. This question of the treaty with the Nez Perces has been battled over since 1887. We have had commission after commission. It has been next to impossible to get the Indians to treat. They know they have valuable lands; and now that we have succeeded, after seven years' work, in securing a treaty—now that we have got it on an Indian appropriation bill, it seems to me that the Congress of the United States can at least afford to ratify this treaty, not only in justice to the commissioners and in justice to the Indians, but also in justice to all those people who wish to develop that country and make it a profitable and rich portion of our section. [Applause.]

Mr. PICKLER. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question right there?

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Certainly.

Mr. PICKLER. Is it not right in line with the general policy we have been pursuing in making treaties with the Indians, and is it not a fact that there is nothing new about this treaty?

Mr. WILSON of Washington. There is nothing new about the treaty except that the Committee on Indian Affairs of the House have adopted the rate of 4 per cent interest.

Mr. BLAIR. Mr. Speaker, I never listen to one of these annual debates upon the appropriation of money, not from the immense accumulations of the Indian funds for the education of their own children, but from the Treasury of the United States, that I am not filled with astonishment at the lamentable inconsistency, not to say folly and wicked negligence of which we are guilty toward our own people in contrast with the broad and philanthropic sentiments which dictate our policy toward the children of 250,000 savages, comprising an educable population of not more than 100,000 children and probably not more than three-fourths of that number, many of whom are provided for in schools of their own.

I do not object to the appropriation of the public money to the education of the Indian child; on the contrary, I demand it. I demand the appropriation thereof for the support of purely public and nonsectarian schools, although it must be admitted that the heathen savage must receive from the education of civilization that inculcation of moral sentiments and of religious ideas and beliefs which the child of a Christianized people acquires mainly from other sources than the schools.

So that the teaching of a nonsectarian Christianity and morality as well as mere intellectual training is almost indispensable in an Indian school; and a public school among the Indians must give much of a broad, moral, and religious as well as intellectual instruction: and to my mind something of this is essential even in the public schools of the country at large, since one-third of the children receive nothing or little of this, either in the family or the church, and without a character built upon the great nonsectarian ideas of morality and Christianty it is impossible to create a competent republican citizenship and give stability to free institutions.

There never yet was a nation that amounted to anything without an affirmative religion and definite moral precepts which were the foundation of its activities, its customs, and laws. In these the child must be instructed at some time by somebody, and if not in the church nor family, then the state, for its own preservation, must perform this great nonsectarian work in the public school.

The education of the Indian child must go on. The sectarian schools among them are entitled to support until we give them something better; that is to say, the nonsectarian school such as I have described. I am, sir, in favor of increasing the appropriations and opening the public school to every Indian child.

The existing schools, school buildings, teachers, and all facilities may well be utilized, but upon condition that all sectarian features be eliminated, if it be found possible; but if not, then the public school, pure and simple, should receive support from the Treasury of the country at large. I would add, however, that I think that means should be taken to train the Indian child in the arts of civilized industry on the spot where he lives as even more important than mere knowledge of reading and writing alone. Men must live, even if they do not read and write.

I think that the people are dissatisfied with the working of the system of denominational schools among the Indians, and we should proceed at once to the elimination of the public revenues from their support, while increasing the public school proper until it becomes adequate to the wants of the entire Indian childhood of the country not otherwise provided for. But, sir, my purpose was to the intellectual and moral and religious wants of these few Indian children with the stupid and brutal treatment we are guilty of toward our own.

TO CONTRAST OUR SENSITIVENESS

Why, sir, the last census, the census of 1890, demonstrated that the public school system is upon the decline in this country; that the children of the American people are not so well provided with the means of primary education now as ten years ago, or as shown by the census of 1880. In the great State of New York and in many other Northern States the superintendents of public instruction, the press, and the watchful citizens have noted and commented upon this alarming fact with well-founded anxiety for the future.

While there has been some improvement at the South in some localities, yet ignorance has increased in the body politic during the decade just over, in which we fondly supposed we were rapidly improving.

The New York World recently showed that seventeen thousand more seats were called for in the public schools than could be supplied in the metropolis alone. There can not be less than 50,000 children of school age uninstructed at all in that city, for ignorance and poverty are seldom heard demanding seats in the schoolhouse unless hunted out and compelled to come in. And here I state a fact which is demonstrable from the school data given us by the last census which I have taken special care to verify.

In the State of Louisiana there are more than 100,000 children of school age unprovided with any school education whatever. This is more than twice the whole number of Indian children throughout the country requiring aid, over whom we are billing and cooing year after year, while our own rising citizens, the progenitors of the Republic or of the despotism that is to be the America of the future, are crying out unto God against their unnatural countrymen because they are deprived of the light of knowledge and of the opportunity to learn now, in the days of their youth, their duty toward man and God.

WENDELL PHILLIPS

once said that "there is no true statesmanship which does not devote itself primarily to education."

The education of the children of the Republic is that without which there is not anything. While endeavoring to neglect nothing else, I have devoted many years of my public life to this cause, for until ample provision is made for the education of our children and our children's children forever, the destruction of our people and of our institutions is sure.

And now while we are providing for the red child let us not forget that we have thirty-six times more black children and two hundred and forty times more white children of our own citizens to educate than of these wild unfortunates, who will many of them roam life away even after we have done for them our best. The schools, public and private and parochial, do not reach efficiently two-thirds of our children, and we have twenty-five millions of them to-day. But we can stick our heads in the sand like the ostrich.

The problem of the education of the children of America is not yet solved. We have the means. We have an efficient system, but it does not yet perform its perfect work. Ignorance is growing faster than knowledge in the land. More and more it is impossible to submit the great issues of self-government to an intelligent constituency. A general election throughout the country is not the verdict of competent sovereignty deciding upon its own weal and woe. And until we have begun at the beginning and made the voter intelligent, more and more rapidly will the elements of ignorance, incompetency, misrule, violence, and disorder increase. Sooner or later, and it should be no later, the country must take up this question of the universal education of all the children of the Republic. It should be constantly agitated in Territories and States, in Congress and the country everywhere.

TO AGITATE IS TO EDUCATE.

The great struggle for the educational bill gave no money to the public schools from the Treasury; but, sir, the agitation of the ten years between 1880 and 1890 wrought much good. But for it the great progress in schools at the South would never have been and the retrograde condition of the whole country would have been deplorable.

I have been furnished with an article meant for the Bureau of Education by the most competent and extensive personal observer and writer upon the origin, progress, and condition of the public schools in this country, and especially throughout the South, within my knowledge. I refer to Dr. A. D. Mayo, of Boston, so widely known for his able, unceasing, unselfish, and fruitful labors for the common school, and in fact for all institutions of learning throughout our country, during the last twenty years.

There are some too flattering personal allusions in Dr. Mayo's article, but as it is prepared as a public document and is of great historic value, and especially pertinent as bearing upon the great corrective importance of a continual agitation of the evils that threaten the country, particularly upon the education of the people, which I am trying to enforce, I beg leave herewith to incorporate the article of Dr. Mayo with these remarks.

If we were gaining upon ignorance we could sit down, trusting that, as we were moving in the right direction, the time would come, even if it were delayed for ages, when we should reach the happy fields of which we dream. But we are on the downward course. The great trouble in our land, tempest-tossed, bewildered, plunging like a wounded animal in her distress, now is that there is no intelligent constituency to which reason can appeal. What better is an appeal to the people than an appeal to the dice? Witness the last Presidential election. Will another be any better? If so, it will be the correction of calamity and not of intelligence.

Knowledge and logical conviction are subverted by ignorance and false influence. Truth is nullified by error, and the national problems remain unsolved in the minds of the people.

There is a remedy for all this, but we have yet to apply it. The sunshine is more powerful than the storm, and which can do any good in this country. Either by general discussion and agitation throughout the country must the people everywhere be stimulated to self-preservation by local effort which shall properly educate every child who is to be a citizen, or the father or mother of a citizen, or the nation, as a nation, for the defense and preservation of itself and of the States and of all the people of all the States, must light and feed the torch of knowledge and virtue in the soul of every child of the Republic and keep it burning there for all time until the flag floats in millennial glory.

EDUCATION BILLS ARE THE ONLY FORCE BILLS

THE RESULTS OF THE DISCUSSIONS IN CONGRESS CONCERNING NATIONAL AID TO EDUCATION, ESPECIALLY OF THE BLAIR BILL, FROM 1880 TO 1890; UPON THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE COMMON SCHOOL IN THE SOUTHERN STATES.

By Rev. A. D. Mayo, M. A.

The educational public of the United States is now sufficiently removed from the notable discussions, in and out of Congress, connected with the movement for national aid to education subsequent to the civil war, to calmly review that interesting episode in public affairs and form a rational opinion in respect to the direct and indirect results of the movement as a whole.

In the present essay, omitting the action of Congress and the National Government in support of education in the South during the war and the period of reconstruction, in several States extending through ten years, I propose to call attention to the remarkable interest awakened by the debates and action in the Senate of the United States on the bill upon national aid to education, of which the author and most efficient supporter was Senator HENRY W. BLAIR of New Hampshire.

In connection therewith I incidentially consider the passage of the law of 1862, for the establishment of colleges of agriculture and the mechanic arts, by the gift of public lands to all the States; and the subsequent enlargement of this plan in 1890, by the grants for experiment stations in agriculture and the further endowment of the forty-one colleges then established; both under the leadership of Hon. JUSTIN MORRILL, of Vermont. Also the project of a measure for the establishment of a national fund for the support of common and normal schools, by the sale of public lands and the appropriation of patent office fees; under the leadership of Hon. GEORGE F. HOAR, of Massachusetts, in the House of Representatives; and a similar bill in the Senate, engineered by Senator MORRILL. These and other similar movements were only the symptoms of a general awakening of interest to the educational needs, especially in the Southern States, in Congress during the thirty years from 1862 to 1892.

The object of this essay is not the discussion of the special merits of either or all these measures; certainly not to revive the excitements and recriminations amid which the so called Blair bill came to an end through its arrest for several years in the House of Representatives by the refusal of the appropriate committees to report it after its passage three times by the Senate and its repulse in 1890. It is rather concerning the results of the entire movement, beginning in Congress and extending in widening circles through the entire Union, that I now write.

There is a class of topics brought before our American State and National Legislatures which often accomplish their ultimate purpose rather by discussion and popular agitation in and out of halls of legislation than if crystallized into statute laws of doubtful enforcement. They concern especially those departments of American life in which it is difficult and often practically impossible to obtain the effective enforcement even of just and righteous laws; while their consideration in the highest realms of public life often awakens an interest among the people which practically accomplishes the end in view.

Having for the past fifteen years been in a position to observe the results of this Congressional handling of educational matters, I am moved to put on record what seems to me a just tribute to the author of this beneficent movement in behalf of American children and youth, with a statement of the widespread and profound results of the discussions, especially of the Blair bill for national aid to education, through the entire decade from 1880 to 1890.

No better text could be found for this essay than a passage from a speech of Senator BLAIR, on December 17, 1880, in the discussion called up by the Morrill bill for the establishment of a national common school fund from the sale of public lands and other sources, to be invested in Government bonds and the income distributed among all the States and Territories, for the aid of common schools, a portion to be given to the agricultural and mechanical colleges, with provision for the education of teachers. It was confessed by the authors of these bills, in both Houses, that the immediate aid would be very small, as far as the actual support of universal education was concerned.

These measures were supported with the hope that the provision would form a nucleus around which, as the years went on, a competent fund could be gathered. Mr. BLAIR said: "Among the good results of this law will be the fact that public attention will necessarily be drawn to the support of education by the imperative requirement that there shall be reports from every school, distinctly showing the status of every child in the country, and leading to discussions among those who are interested in the subject-matter of the education of the people; so that the people of all sections will learn their own wants and seek to relieve them." From this point of view the larger and far more profound and intense discussions awakened by the bill introduced by the Senator one year later takes on a permanent historical interest.

In 1880 the agitation of the educational question in the Congress of the United States had reached one practical result, the establishment of colleges for in forty-one States of the Union, with an attendance of 6,671 students under the charge of 461 professors; including an expenditure of nearly $1,000,000. This law, first enacted in 1858 only to fall under the veto of President Buchanan, was one of the first fruits of the conflict for the Union; passed in 1862 and approved by Abraham Lincoln; an act of sublime confidence in the perpetuity of the Union and grand good will toward the eleven States then in arms for their own unalterable separation from the Republic. Meanwhile, bills for the establishment of a permanent national fund for the support of the common schools had been passed by both Houses of Congress, though failing to secure concurrent action; and another, in charge of Senator MORRILL of Vermont, was under consideration.

INSTRUCTION IN AGRICULTURE AND THE MECHANIC ARTS

It was at this juncture that Senator BLAIR of New Hampshire, one of the younger members of that body, on his appointment to the chairmanship of the Committee on Education and Labor, and who had delivered a widely circulated speech entitled,

"OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS—ARE THEY IN DANGER,"

while a member of the House in 1876, which had excited great attention, conceived a comprehensive scheme, including the bill already under consideration and a new act for the immediate relief of the terrible illiteracy under which especially the Southern States were suffering and the encouragement and national aid of the great Southern movement for the establishment of common schools for the whole people, inaugurated at the close of the war.

Both these measures were contemplated in the motion presented to the Senate in December, 1881, authorizing the Committee on Education and Labor "to inquire into the condition of common school education in the United States and report thereon, and what measures, in the opinion of the committee, Congress can lawfully and properly enact in aid of such education."

It did not require a prolonged examination to show that in the United States in 1880 a larger number of people were unable to read and write than the entire population of the Republic under the Presidency of Washington—4,204,363—equally divided between the two races, and that 2,000,000 of absolutely illiterate and other millions of grossly ignorant voters actually held in their hands the destiny of the country.

In January, 1882, the chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor in the Senate introduced the bill for national aid to education, generally known by his name, and supported it in the first of that remarkable series of Congressional speeches which, if collected in more than one stout volume, would form the most important contribution to the literature of the relation of common-school education to American life since the days of Horace Mann.

The Blair bill as first drafted proposed a gift aggregating in ten years a total of $105,000,000 to all the States and Territories for the common schooling of all children, with provision for the instruction of teachers continued through ten years. The first year's appropriation was to be $15,000,000, with an annual decrease of $1,000,000, the last to be $6,000,000. It was believed that at the end of ten years the permanent national fund would have become sufficiently productive to supply the future needs of all the States, so far as national aid would be found necessary. Every State during the first five years of the distribution was required to raise by public levy one-third, and during the last five years an equal sum to that received from the General Government. The Blair bill did not propose to establish a national system of schools, or even a national supervision of American education, but simply a temporary grant for national aid to education in all, but especially in the Southern States.

All the details of the measure were dominated by this idea. The money was to be distributed through the Department of the Interior, under the agency of the United States Commissioner of Education. An agent of the Government was to act conjointly with the State superintendent of education in every Commonwealth in matters concerned with the distribution of the fund. The money was to be given to the States for the sole purpose of unsectarian common schooling, according to the relative illiteracy of the people over 10 years of age, chiefly for elementary instruction, according to the general methods in operation in all the States.

It was believed by the author of the bill that if fairly applied and economically used, this munificent gift would add three months to the term of the average Southern common school, which, with the three months already enjoyed, would give to the vast majority of children in the open country practically a six-months good common school—about as much as the condition of the people and the state of the country would permit. It would also stimulate the villages and cities to establish systems of graded schools from eight to nine months in the year, and greatly aid in the support of normal schools and institutes for the training of teachers.

It would also enable the

NONFAVORED STATES OF THE NORTH

to originate reforms in their schools hitherto not practicable. And it is not to be doubted that this statesman, even then so well informed on the coming conflict between capital and labor, looked to his bill as a national safeguard against the gross ignorance of millions of immigrant laborers concentrated in the great cities and manufacturing districts of the North, and relied on it as a powerful factor in the effort to lift the multitudes of children of this class from their perilous condition.

The grand discussion of this bill came between its introduction and first passage in the Senate, in 1882-1884. It was then passed by the Senate only to encounter the obstinate and calculated resistance of every committee in the House of Representatives by which it could be reported. For, although there is little doubt that, if fairly treated, it would have passed the House by an ample majority and received Executive approval, yet it was thus interrupted and delayed through three Congresses, and at the fourth trial in the Senate in 1890 was defeated by a small majority, which would probably have been overcome if the motion to reconsider could have been acted upon, but this was prevented by the deadlock in the Senate upon the Federal elections bill in the same Congress.

In its first passage the bill was somewhat modified, the entire sum reduced to $70,000,000, with the first distribution limited to $7,000,000; the States required to appropriate an equal sum to that received from the nation; and the provision for the double supervision stricken out and left entirely to the States. Of the 22 Senators from eleven ex-Confederate States 17 at this time voted "aye" and 5 "no," the 2 from Texas asserting what was true, that their State had an abundant land endowment for a generous system of education. Two of the remaining three were on record as opposed to the public schooling of the negro; the remaining Senator responsible for the wrecking of one of the largest Southern State educational funds at the beginning of the war.

The most determined opposition was from the Senators of the border States of Delaware, Maryland, Kentucky, and Missouri, only one vote in favor of the bill being cast in these States. There was also developed a violent opposition in several of the new Northwestern States beyond the Mississippi that had shared most abundantly in the national land grants for education. With the passage of the years an inroad was made on the vote of the ex-Confederate Commonwealths, although a decided and influential majority persisted in their approval. There was also an evident coldness displayed by some of the most influential Senators from the great States between the Atlantic and the Mississippi.

The fall of the Blair bill carried down the measure for the establishment of a permanent national school fund. But immediately after the defeat of the two came the movement for the larger endowment of the agricultural and mechanical colleges, while during the discussion the act for the formation of the agricultural experiment stations was passed, beside several generous gifts of land and public property to the States of Arkansas, Louisiana, South Carolina, and Alabama, with a continuation of the appropriations for the education of negro and Indian youth at Hampton and Carlisle schools and Howard University, and an annual appropriation of $1,000,000 for education among the Indian tribes, largely under the direction of the different religious denominations.

As this discussion continued in Congress, a determined and singularly violent opposition was developed in the great educational centers of the nation; a combination of ecclesiastical, political, sectional, and social influences, including the considerable party radically hostile not only to this special measure but to the ENTIRE AMERICAN SYSTEM OF COMMON SCHOOLS.

As a result the defeat of the measure was hailed with triumphant satisfaction by this combination, which hastened to give the Blair bill a disgraceful burial and to overwhelm its author with the odium always cast upon the unsuccessful leader of a prominent reform.

But while we may reasonably deplore the outcome of the movement, and believe that the passage and thorough enforcement of this law would have been a great aid to that good common schooling which underlies all practical schemes for the uplift of the Southern States of the Republic, yet there was a result not fully anticipated by the friends and studiously ignored by the opponents of the measure, perhaps more widely extended and profound than could have been predicted by anybody. It may be that, in view of the Providence that guards the foundations and shapes the ongoings of the national life, it was best that this thirty years agitation in the National Congress on the educational question should be left to work its way into the mental and moral convictions of the masses, to reappear as a mighty reserve force in that greater conflict, in which the final destiny of the American system of common schooling for republican citizenship shall be confirmed by its incorporation in the very life principle of the national existence.

1. In considering the final result of this remarkable educational movement which centered in Congress and was especially directed toward the Southern States, I first notice the prodigious impression thereby made upon the people of the South in favor of the American common school. It is not so well understood as it should be that from their earliest settlement a growing public in all the Southern Atlantic States had strongly favored a system of public instruction for the masses of the white population. From the earliest period a determined body of influential public men had foreseen the danger from the prevailing illiteracy which so largely involved the lower orders of their own race and even invaded the realms of social respectability. No treatise on popular education would be more interesting and profitable than a volume containing the deliverances of many of the in professional and public life, anticipating the standard arguments of to-day, in defense of popular education.

MOST EMINENT SOUTHERN LEADERS

These efforts during the one hundred and fifty years before the Revolution culminated at the organization of the Commonwealth of Virginia, in the scheme of Thomas Jefferson in behalf of universal education. Jefferson's plan, as originally outlined, involved the emancipation and industrial training of the negroes for whatever future might await them; a free elementary school for the whites, with an expansion through the public academy or college, crowned by the University of Virginia, organized on a broader foundation than any existing institution of the higher education then in the country. His views were shared by the majority of the Southern fathers of the Republic—Washington, Cabell, Madison, and numerous others, in all the Southern States then organized.

This noble scheme failed; partly from the indifference of the people most in need of it, but largely from the jealousy of the clergy and the great planter aristocracy; both wedded to the British system of private and church secondary and higher education for the superior class, with such inefficient and spasmodic provision for the masses as might be forced upon the upper strata of society by the demands from below.

Before 1860 every Southern State had made more than one effort to put on the ground a system of public elementary instruction for the mass of the white people. The subject had been largely discussed; laws passed; money spent, often for the time, in a generous way. But from various causes, especially the local jealousy of central State control, there had been no satisfactory result. The State of North Carolina had made the nearest approach to a working system in the old Southern Atlantic States. Something valuable had been done in the trans-Alleghany border States and several of the larger cities of the section had adopted a public-school system. The close of the was, in 1865, left the entire system of the secondary and higher education in the majority of these States greatly depressed.

Few of the old institutions were in a condition to meet the demand from the class that had hitherto depended upon them. The universal poverty yawned like an impassable gulf between even the better sort of families and the schools to which they had been accustomed. During attempts were made in all the ex-Confederate States to put in operation the Northern system of common schools. Of course, the people were in no proper mood to receive this gift, especially as it included the education of the freedmen at the public expense. But during the years before 1870 there was a good deal of public schooling in these States, and, for the first time, the humbler classes beheld an open door through which their children could go in even to a scanty feast of knowledge.

THE BRIEF ERA OF RECONSTRUCTION

Partly by reason of this pressure from below; largely from the inability of the leading class to educate its own children at private tuition schools; but far more than has been understood, as the outcome of a long cherished and steadily growing desire of the Southern educational public; every Southern State had been brought to the acceptance and legal establishment of the American common school system before 1880. The movement in Virginia, under the superintendency of Dr. W. H. Ruffner; the admirable work of Hon. John Eaton as military superintendent of the education of the negroes during the war, and State commissioner of education for Tennessee, and the organization of the State system, under Dr. Newell, in Maryland, were the most conspicuous instances up to this period.

At the time of my own earliest visit to the South—extending from Virginia to Texas, in 1880—every Southern State had placed on its statute book a common school law which only needed behind it the force of an intelligent and resolute public opinion and sufficient pecuniary ability in State and district to educate the entire population. All the Southern States, save three, included the freedmen in the full advantages of the new system, and even these had made preliminary arrangements, and afterwards adopted the policy of the majority.

But I found, even in the older and most intelligent of these States, that the common school was still a new-come visitor, not yet quite domesticated. The system was working uphill, against a formidable resistance of ecclesiastical, social, race, and political prejudice. In 1880 no Southern State had an effective provision for even a three months' school for that lived in the open country. Even Texas, with its immense land fund, had not half a dozen graded schools in all its cities. There were not a dozen effective graded public schools in the larger towns either of North Carolina, South Carolina, or Virginia.

THE NINE-TENTHS OF ITS CHILDREN

The Gulf States, outside a few of their chief cities, were even less favored. The common school had evidently "come to stay;" but the decisive question, "What shall it be?" was not answered. Should it be a reflection of the New English system of lower class elementary instruction, only partially favored by the middle and repudiated by the upper class, or a genuine extension of the American common school for American citizenship, reaching from the plantation primary to the State university, accepted by "all orders and conditions of people" as the permanent and most effective method of educating the new generation?

Nobody save one who, like myself, has been living among the Southern people since the year 1880, in the most intimate intercourse with the common school public of every grade and both races, can realize the that came in as the result of the first great discussion of the Blair bill in the Senate of the United States in 1882-'84. From the first the Southern folks have been emphatically a political people; far more under the influence of great public leaders than the masses in the other portions of the country.

PRODIGIOUS UPLIFT IN PUBLIC SENTIMENT

To the multitudes of parents, anxious for the schooling of their children, but almost despairing of the meagre common schools, which were their only reliance; to the abler and more earnest class of their teachers, working on a pittance, often discouraged by the lack of appreciation from the superior families, which is so powerful an element in our American public school life; to the resolute advocates of popular education in the State, city, and county legislatures, confronting a solid wall of indifference or hostility; to the more thoughtful and progressive element of the superior class, who looked to universal education as the soul of all future success in their section, was suddenly revealed a startling spectacle in the Senate of the United States, always the most dignified and influential department of the National Government.

The younger Senator from New Hampshire—the birth State of Daniel Webster—had appeared, "bearing gifts," in a spirit so generous and patriotic, so devoid of sectional and partisan prejudice, that as by common consent almost the entire body of Senators from the ex-Confederate States gave him hearty welcome, and with the uttermost force of their great public influence came to the front in the most earnest support of the measure. With the exception of Senator BLAIR, for ten years the head and front of this movement, himself a walking library of information, better informed on the relations of universal education to American civilization than any public man in the country, the "weight of the meeting" in this early debate was undeniably with the Senators from the ex-Confederate States.

Gibson and Jonas, of Louisiana; Jackson, of Tennessee; Colquitt and Brown, of Georgia; Hampton, of South Carolina; RANSOM and Vance, of North Carolina; PUGH, of Alabama; Jones and CALL, of Florida; Lamar and GEORGE, of Mississippi; Mahone and Riddleberger, of Virginia; Garland and Walker, of Arkansas; seventeen of the twenty-two Senatorial representatives of the States most in need of national aid, rose to the occasion. With only the exception of an occasional discordant note the educational speeches of the majority of the Senators who participated in the debate ranged through a higher altitude of patriotism with a greater display of general information and practical ability and a broader appreciation of the future destiny of the Republic than any series of Congressional discourses heard in that body during the thirty years since the close of the civil war.

Of course this remarkable development from the body of men most eminent for political position in this group of States could have but one result. It came to all people in the South, and longing for the dawn of the children's great day of the Lord, from a Northern winter. At once there was a visible lifting up—a notable revival of courage, hope, and great expectation through the entire common-school public.

LIKE THE OUTBURST OF SPRING

An examination of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of the period containing the list of petitions to Congress during those years; the hearings before the Congressional committees from the most influential public school officials of the South, State Superintendents Newell and Orr, Mayor Courtney, of Charleston, S. C., Dr. J. L. M. Curry, Presidents William Preston Johnson and Gilman, with the faculties of Tulane and Johns Hopkins Universities; the votes of confidence from hundreds of local, State, and the national associations of teachers; petitions from Southern State Legislatures, the pathetic appeals of all the great missionary associations engaged in the superior education of the freedmen; perhaps more significant than all—the devoted labors of the leading women educators and reformers of the whole country, testify to the profound and widespread influence of this new departure.

The assertion that this movement for national aid to education was local, insincere, and unpopular, especially repugnant to the best mind and heart of the South, is absolutely without foundation. There was violent opposition from the characteristic quarters that can always be relied upon to antagonize any national movement toward popular education. Gen. Grant in the White House said: "There is too much reading and writing now for a good many men up in the Capitol." But no movement of similar import has ever been placed before the educational public of the South that has met with a response so enthusiastic, and from which so much was expected in so many ways.

INDEED THIS WAS THE FIRST TIME that the subject of universal education had really been discussed in a commanding way in the Congress of the United States. The original policy of the magnificent national gift of school lands to the new States was a bequest from the Congress of the old Confederation, and adopted almost without debate in the new Congress of the United States. The educational action of the National Government during the civil war was chiefly in the interest of the negro, and so obscured by the rush of great events that it never attracted general public attention. The subsequent discussion connected with the grant of public lands for the establishment of the agricultural and mechanical colleges and a permanent national school fund had been rather a scattering fire, in no large manner arousing a national interest.

But here, at last, the Senate of the United States had boldly faced the radical problem of the new century—the education of the whole American people, in common schools, by the of State and nation. This discussion, with the emphatic vote of the Senate on the first passage of the Blair bill, gave a new aspect to the whole subject of popular education such as never had been felt in all the Southern States. The provision that the national bounty would be proportioned to local effort at once turned the attention, through the whole South, of the influential classes to the subject of local taxation for education. During these ten years, while the subject was really before the public, there was a notable and most gratifying progress through all these States in matters relating to the schooling of the whole people; marked even in the least able and most indifferent of these Commonwealths.

COÖPERATION

And this spirit, once aroused, could never be suppressed. Although the disappointment of the final defeat was great, yet the new energy developed had already "got in its work." It was realized in all quarters that more could be done by local effort than had been supposed. The people of many of the smaller cities and larger villages had been persuaded to embark in the experiment of the graded school, and after even a brief experiment of its merit could not recede. For it is the most notable characteristic of the educational spirit that, once aroused, it allies itself with all that is noblest and most refined in personal character, and progressive and cosmopolitan in public life.

The movement of hundreds of little neighborhoods for the election of school officials and the supervision of a district school was in itself an education in practical "civics" more important than all the theoretical instruction of the universities. It may still be a subject of honest doubt whether the South in 1880 was sufficiently prepared for the reception of a sum of money so large and its economical use in the working of a public-school system. I have never doubted that, far beyond inevitable mistakes and occasional abuses, the result would have been so decisive as to convert the whole people to a permanent policy of national encouragement of that universal education which is the nation's hope through all the generations to come.

But there can be no intelligent doubt of the fact that the great discussion in the Congress of the United States and the corresponding movement through the entire Union in behalf of national aid to education through the memorable decade of 1880-1890 was one of the most potent agencies in generating that wonderful activity of the whole Southern people in behalf of popular education, as one of the most remarkable and hopeful events in the history of the modern world.

OF WHICH OUR CHILDREN WILL SPEAK

2. But the influence of this great movement in Congress was also a powerful agency in bringing together the foremost educators and the common school public of all sections of the country. For the first time, in any large way, these discussions brought face to face the educational public of North and South. There had, in fact, been less of estrangement at any period between the educators than in any body of superior people in the Republic.

The appearance of Dr. Barnas Sears in the South as the agent of the Peabody education fund, and of Dr. Eben Stearns as the chancellor of the revived University of Nashville, Tenn., and the principal of the Peabody Normal School, had been hailed by the limited circle that came in range of the influence of these eminent representatives of Northern interest in Southern education. The beneficent work of the Northern churches and Christian people in behalf of the freedmen had not yet sufficiently disentangled itself from its inevitable environment of social, sectarian, sectional, and race prejudice to be commended to the calm consideration even of the majority of influential Southern educators. Even in Northern educational circles there was almost nothing known concerning the development of the common school through the South.

At my own first educational tour through several of the Southern States, in 1880, I was amazed at the progress already made in the upbuilding of the common school. My own statements concerning these matters, on my return to the North, were at first received with a large discount, as the personal estimate of a susceptible visitor proved a grateful appreciation of a kindly reception. But now, for the first time in the history of the Republic, the leading educators of the North and South were brought face to face by the startling revelations of these years.

The National Bureau of Education coöperated in the most energetic way under the leadership of United States Commissioner of Education, Hon. John Eaton, himself the most distinguished pioneer of the new education in Tennessee and the Southwest, and one of the most conspicuous figures in the educational history of the country. The mass of educational statistics launched upon the public, for the first time skillfully arrayed and presented in the most impressive shape in the Senatorial speeches, especially in the voluminous Senatoria treatises of Senator BLAIR, condensed and explained in the educational press, which then first assumed the form of the Educational Weekly, and to a considerable extent presented in the leading journals and magazines of the country, brought the education of the people into that fraternal relation which now grows with the passing years.

And no man who, like myself, has lived for the past fifteen years among the Southern children and youth, their teachers and young parents, their progressive clergy and the more enlightened circles of every class, can underrate this peculiar influence, so potent for the general reconciliation of the better sort of people in both sections; the steady advance of a genuine patriotism and the gradual wearing away of State, sectional and local provincialism. It is to this silent but irresistable growth of a patriotic and fraternal spirit in the educational public that we must look for the most decisive and permanent contributions to peace and good will, mutual appreciation and mutual helpfulness.

With all due respect to other classes of influential people—the clergy, the leaders of political opinion and national industry, the festive mingling of "blue and gray," the social reciprocations of Northern summer and Southern winter—I am convinced there is no influence now at work so profound, so irresistible, so transforming, so sure to tell in the future development of a high national spirit through the Union, as of the friends of the common school in all sections. And no one cause of this state of feeling was more marked than the Congressional agitation of national aid to education from 1880 to 1890. This is an influence so powerful that no changes in national politics, no ups and downs in our disturbed industrial affairs, can disturb its permanent and beneficent influence upon the national life.

THIS MUTUAL UNDERSTANDING

3. And this fraternal spirit among the educators of the country, shared by the educational common school public in all sections, is the soul of the higher spirit of mutual appreciation and respect, especially of the habit of looking at the past history of the Republic with the all-round survey which alone can bring in a final just estimate of what has been and a rational expectation of what is to come in national affairs.

When we reflect that the people of these sixteen great American Southern Commonwealths in the first twenty-five years since the overthrow of the system of slave society, involved in the ruin, sorrow, and discouragement of an unsuccessful revolution, have shaken themselves clear of the old time environment and taken to heart the most radical institution of American life, the common school for the training of a common American citizenship, doing a greater work in the establishment of universal education than was ever achieved in any land under conditions in any way similar, we can realize the intense and tenacious hold of the American idea of self-help for a republican civilization among all classes and conditions of our people.

For there is this in the very genius of the American common school that a people which has once put its hand to this great national subsoil plow can never look backward for its Kingdom of Heaven. Hereafter its life must, in all ways, be molded by the training of all children together for the common weal. Such a Republic will grow, year by year, into a cosmopolitan and truly democratic civilization, and almost unconsciously to itself will, in God's time, become a model people—the normal school of the nations.

Our American public life, as represented in the national capital, is now dominated by the imperious, industrial, financial, and socialistic questions which concern the material development of the Republic as one of the most powerful and wealthy of the nations.

BUT IN THE INEVITABLE REACTION

from this fearful absorption in the concerns of the passing hour there will come, perhaps before we know it, a demand that the National Congress shall again concern itself with the higher interests of the people. The three coming questions to be faced, and in some decisive way settled by this Republic early in the second century of its existence are, first, the reorganization of labor under the conditions and demands of modern life; second, the obligation of the nation to aid, in all constitutional and practical ways, in the educational training of all American children for intelligent, moral, and effective American citizenship; third, the right and obligation of the American State and nation to legislate in the interest of public morality for the extirpation of social unrighteousness that is the eternal enemy of liberty.

And of all statesmen who have appeared as the immediate successors of the great men who carried us through the flood of war to the great salvation of the Union, no man has so thoroughly studied these three questions—especially the radical problem of the relations of universal education to the national welfare—as the author of the defeated bill that bears his name.

But here, in fact, there has been no permanent defeat. Already has the great principle incorporated in this bill and so amply vindicated by the debates of ten years in Congress; the obligation of the nation to stand by and in all constitutional ways aid the American common school in the training of American citizenship, with the corresponding duty and right of every Commonwealth to use the national bounty, not as a dependence, but as a stimulant to the greatest possible effort at the local support of free education for the whole people; both State and nation against the ecclesiastical demand for a division of the common school fund; been so wrought into the mind and heart of the educational public that much has been accomplished which the friends of this measure anticipated from its passage.

STANDING LIKE A ROCK

Happily for the people he represents, and for the whole country, this wise and farseeing public servant is still in the maturity of his powers and, whether in public or private station, can be relied on to be faithful unto death to the cause he so honored by the splendid advocacy of his earlier public career. Meanwhile, during the long months, perhaps years, in which the sober second thought of the American people is gathering itself for the inevitable Appomattox of the noisy popular rebellion against all the established facts and proofs of a sound industrial and financial policy, no service to the great educational interest of the nation would be more valuable than a thorough history of this movement for national aid to education, with the republication of the most important of the Congressional discussions connected therewith.

For "now is the accepted time" to fire the magazines with the ammunition of accurate statistics, historical records, and able and eloquent deliverance by tongue and pen against the day when the unpatriotic and unholy revolt against the American common school shall be overwhelmed in complete oblivion and the new education become the perpetual heritage of the children through generations to come.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (H. R. 6518) making appropriations for the construction and repair and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles, with amendments; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

A bill (H. R. 3033) granting a pension to Amanda J. Lane; and

A bill (H. R. 4326) to subject to State taxation national-bank notes and United States Treasury notes.

The message also announced that the Senate had disagreed to the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 971) to open, widen, and extend alleys in the District of Columbia; asked a conference with the House on the bill and amendment, and had appointed Mr. FAULKNER, Mr. MARTIN, and Mr. MCMILLAN as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills and joint resolutions of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

A bill (S. 1885) to extend the privileges of the transportation of dutiable merchandise without appraisement to the city of Ocala, in the State of Florida;

A bill (S. 966) to compensate Elihu Root for services rendered by direction of the Attorney-General;

A bill (S. 1956) granting an increase of pension to Mary Doubleday, widow of Bvt. Maj. Gen. Abner Doubleday;

A bill (S. 1375) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Jeremiah F. Brown;

A bill (S. 1935) granting a pension to Elizabeth Ellery;

A bill (S. 1584) granting a pension to John Eckland;

A bill (S. 1229) to correct the military record of George Whittaker, late a private of Company C, Twelfth New Jersey Volunteers;

A bill (S. 1189) for the relief of Capt. Henry C. Seaman;

A bill (S. 1675) to remove the charge of a dishonorable dismissal after the battle of Stone River standing against the name of L. S. Woodworth, to correct the record and issue him an honorable discharge;

A bill (S. 2056) granting a pension to Ada J. Schwatka, widow of the late Lieut. Frederick Schwatka;

A bill (S. 1692) granting a pension to William J. Murray;

A bill (S. 2275) granting a pension to Elizabeth New, widow of Jethrow New;

A bill (S. 429) for the relief of George H. Plant, of the District of Columbia;

Joint resolution (S. R. 68) for the relief of W. D. Mack, a clerk in the Record and Pension Division of the War Department.

Joint resolution (S. R. 19) authorizing the Secretary of War to correct the military record of Capt. Edward Wheeler, Forty-sixth New York Volunteers;

A bill (S. 646) for the relief of John O'Keane, of the State of Washington;

A bill (S. 857) to correct the military record of James McConnell;

A bill (S. 1233) for the relief of Henry Lane;

A bill (S. 837) for the relief of Albert Locke, alias Shipley;

A bill (S. 1857) granting an honorable discharge to William B. Barnes, late major of the Eleventh New York Heavy Artillery;

A bill (S. 473) to remove the charge of desertion from the record of Jeremiah L. Daly; and

A bill (S. 2280) to amend section 2 of the act approved February 15, 1893, entitled "An act granting additional quarantine powers and imposing additional duties upon the Marine Hospital Service.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. LYNCH. Mr. Speaker, as I understand the question pending, it consists of two propositions, first, to adopt the report of the conferees in so far as the conferees of both Houses have agreed, and next that the House instruct the conferees upon the disagreeing items which they have reported back. Now, if it is in order, and no further debate or opposition be made to the report of the conferees as filed, I would ask that the report be adopted by the House, and then I would offer a motion to further insist on disagreement to the amendment of the Senate, which would be in order and the question pending.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Let us take the first proposition—that the House agree to the amendments.

Mr. LYNCH. That the House agree to the report of the conferees on the agreements already reported. I would, therefore, ask that that question be taken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SWANSON.) The question is on agreeing to the report of the conference committee. After that motion is disposed of, a motion would be in order to recede from the disagreement and agree to the amendment of the Senate, or to insist on the disagreement and agree to a further conference. The vote will first be taken on the question of agreeing to the conference report.

Mr. LYNCH. That is the way I put it. That the Speaker first put to the House the motion to agree to the report of the conference committee as filed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That is the motion made by the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Let us understand this distinctly, because I do not wish to get complicated.

As I understand it, the motion of the gentleman from Indiana at the time he took his seat was, and the motion now made by the gentleman from Wisconsin is, that the House agree to the report of the conferees in so far as an agreement has been reached, and then, after that question has been put, if it is carried there will be a motion to disagree and ask for a further conference. Then I or some other gentleman, will make a motion to recede from the disagreement, and upon that we will ask for a vote of the House. That motion will be first in order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair understands that the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] moves that the report of the conference committee be adopted, and that is the pending question.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Now, Mr. Speaker, I make a motion——

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question on the motion of the gentleman from Indiana that the report of the committee of conference be adopted has not yet been submitted.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, I wish to occupy a minute or two to explain a matter to which I ask the attention of the House.

Mr. LYNCH. Why not dispose of the pending motion to agree to the conference report as made?

Mr. HOLMAN. There is no objection to that, but before it is done I wish to occupy a minute or two.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Now, Mr. Speaker, I move that we agree to the conference report as submitted.

Mr. LYNCH. I do not yield the floor, Mr. Speaker, for any gentleman to make a motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Wisconsin refuses to yield. If the motion of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] prevails it simply ratifies the agreement reached by the conferees. After that has been disposed of, it will be in order to move that the House insist upon its disagreement on the other points and ask for a further conference. Then it will be in order to make a motion to recede from the disagreement, and the vote will be first taken upon the motion to recede.

Mr. MADDOX. After those two questions are voted upon, will the other one be open for discussion?

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Mr. Speaker, my motion has precedence over the second motion, as stated by the Chair.

Mr. HOLMAN. The motions come in this order. First, the motion on the adoption of the report itself——

The SPEAKER pro tempore. As the Chair understands, no motion has been submitted to the House except a motion to agree to the report of the committee of conference.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, I overlooked a matter to which I wish to call the attention of the House, and I should feel very much mortified if, by an oversight on my part——

Mr. PICKLER. Who has the floor, Mr. Speaker?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LYNCH] has the floor.

Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin yields to me.

Mr. LYNCH. I yield the gentleman from Indiana five minutes to make some remarks on the part of the report already agreed to.

Mr. HOLMAN. The matter to which I wish to call attention is a matter of much moment——

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I understand that the chairman of the committee of conference is entitled to the floor.

Mr. LYNCH. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Indiana.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The motion of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LYNCH] will not be in order until after the motion of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] has been voted upon. After that, the gentleman from Wisconsin will be recognized.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, of course there can be no difficulty as to the order in which the votes shall be taken upon the several motions. First comes up for consideration the question of the adoption of the report of the committee of conference. After that two other motions are in order; one, that the House insist on its disagreement and ask for a further conference, and the other, that the House recede, and the latter question must be first put.

Now, the matter to which I wish to ask attention is this, and I especially ask the attention of the members of the Committee on Indian Affairs. It will be remembered that when the subject of these asphalt lands in Utah was under consideration a provision was inserted in the House bill fixing the minimum price at $50 per acre. The Senate adopted an amendment, which will be found on page 147 of the printed bill, which reads as follows:

SEC. 20. That the remainder of the lands on said reservation, except lands containing asphaltum, gilsonite, or other like substances, which are hereby reserved from sale.

The House proposition was to sell, and we fixed the minimum price at $50 per acre. It was supposed that these asphalt lands would be of very great value, and accordingly the House fixed that price. The Senate, on the other hand, determined to withhold the lands from sale, but finally they submitted a proposition to strike out the words "except lands containing asphaltum, gilsonite, or other like substances, which are hereby reserved from sale," which words they had themselves inserted, and then to provide for the disposal of the remaining lands under the homestead and mineral land laws of the United States. At the last meeting of the conferees the Senate abandoned that; but insisted upon these words:

That these lands shall be disposed of under the homestead and mineral laws of the United States.

The mineral laws being applicable to land containing asphalt and like substances. Now, the House conferees have receded from the disagreement on that point; so that the bill as it now stands authorizes the entry of those asphalt lands under the mineral land laws, it being, however, provided at the instance of the House conferees that no one person shall be permitted to make more than two entries of 10 acres each.

Mr. LYNCH. There is no controversy over that provision.

Mr. HOLMAN. The House therefore understands that in adopting this report it adopts the provision authorizing the entry of these mineral lands under the mineral land laws, with this qualification, that instead of allowing 40 acres to be entered no one person can make more than two entries of 10 acres each, or 20 acres in all. This is all I wish to say.

Mr. LYNCH. I now ask a vote on adopting the report of the conferees so far as they have agreed.

The question being taken, the report of the committee of conference was adopted.

Mr. HOLMAN and Mr. LYNCH claimed the floor.

Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LYNCH] of course yielded the floor when he made his motion.

Mr. LYNCH. I yielded five minutes of my time to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. HOLMAN. If the gentleman wishes to be heard I will, of course, yield to him.

Mr. LYNCH. I decline to yield further at this time.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. The gentleman from Wisconsin lost the floor when the motion which he made was submitted.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The motion indicated by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LYNCH] was that the House further insist on its disagreement on the remaining amendments and ask for a further conference with the Senate.

Mr. LYNCH. That is my motion.

The SPEAKER protempore. On that motion the gentleman from Wisconsin is recognized.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. The gentleman from Wisconsin made a motion which was put to the House and adopted. Under those circumstances did not the gentleman lose the floor?

Mr. LYNCH. I beg the gentleman's pardon.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Wait a moment. The Chair will decide this question.

Mr. LYNCH. I decline to yield further.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It was upon the motion of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] that the conference report was agreed to. Before that question was submitted, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LYNCH] rose to a parliamentary inquiry as to whether a motion to insist upon the disagreement to the remaining amendments and ask for a further conference would be in order. The Chair stated it would be, but that the report must be first disposed of. Having agreed to recognize the gentleman from Wisconsin to make that motion, he is now recognized for that purpose.

Mr. LYNCH. Mr. Speaker, during this session there have been submitted to both Houses of Congress seven or eight propositions to treat with the Indians. The Committee on Indian Affairs of the House has considered each of the treaties submitted to it and has agreed to three of those treaties. Having examined the provisions of each treaty separately, it has recommended the ratification of these three treaties with certain amendments proposed by the House committee. In each of these treaties we have changed the rate of interest from 5 per cent to 4 per cent, believing that at this time the Government ought not to be required to pay over 4 per cent interest.

We have applied the same rule to all those treaties, inserting this express provision in each, and providing that in each case the treaty be submitted to the Indians for a ratification of the changes made.

Mr. PICKLER. Right there, allow me to ask whether the proposition of the House committee does not remit all these treaties back to another agreement with the Indians?

Mr. LYNCH. It is provided that the treaties shall be submitted again to the Indians for the ratification only of the amendments made by Congress.

Mr. PICKLER. And three new commissioners are to be appointed.

Mr. LYNCH. Oh, no; that is stating the matter entirely wrong.

Mr. PICKLER. That will be the result.

Mr. LYNCH. Not at all. The treaties as passed here will be sent back to the agent in charge of the Indians to procure their consent to the change, if possible; if not, then the treaties will fail.

Mr. PICKLER. That is just the point. We do not want the treaties to fail.

Mr. LYNCH. The question is simply whether Congress shall deal directly with the Indians or follow implicitly the action of the commisssioners.

Mr. PICKLER. The question is whether Congress will in good faith carry out its agreements with the Indians or will go back on the contract of the Government.

Mr. LYNCH. Congress should not be subject to the whims or freaks of two or three commissioners.

Mr. PICKLER. Your Secretary of the Interior, one of the highest officers of the Government, sent out these commissioners to make these treaties.

Mr. LYNCH. It was his predecessor who sent them out, as I understand it. We have had instances in the past where commissioners went out and gave to the chiefs of tribes $300 or $500 or some other sum in the nature of a bribe. We have had that happen repeatedly. That is the way our commissioners have acted in certain cases. Now, I do not feel that we are bound at all by the action of the commissioners, but that what they do is subject to our ratification.

Mr. PICKLER. Does the gentleman say that any of these commissioners bribed any of the chiefs?

Mr. LYNCH. Let the gentleman remember the Yankton-Sioux treaty and what was done in connection with it—a twenty dollar gold piece given to each head of a family as an inducement, or a bribe, to sign the treaty,

Mr. PICKLER. But does the gentleman assert that there was anything improper in the conduct of the commissioners in these cases?

Mr. LYNCH, I do not assert any such thing. I have only asserted what has taken place in the past within the knowledge of many of the older members of the House.

I claim that this House ought not to be bound for one minute by such action on the part of commissioners.

Mr. PICKLER. Then why did you send them out there?

Mr. LYNCH. Well, they go and they are very anxious to do something, and they do many things that they have no right to do, and make agreements by which they try to bind the Government when they ought not to do it.

Mr. PICKLER. Certainly these commissioners have general instructions from the Secretary of the Interior to do what they do. He lays down the rules and regulations to guide them, and fixes the general scope of their duties. The commissioners are understood to be acting within the rules laid down by the Department.

Mr. LYNCH. But there is very much left to their discretion, and they always make out to secure some kind of a treaty.

Mr. PICKLER. Well then, it is 5 per cent you oppose, is it?

Mr. LYNCH. I will tell you after a while.

Mr. Speaker, there are three of these treaties—one with the Siletz Indians, of Oregon; the Yankton Indians, of South Dako a; and the Yuma Indians, in which treaties the amount involved is small.

Mr. HOLMAN. The Yanktons is over $600,000.

Mr. LYNCH. Well, the land is worth it. The committee went carefully over the bills, and particularly guarded everything connected with the treaties. Three of these treaties were put on the bill by the House, but when it went to the Senate that body put on another treaty with the Nez Perces Indians, in Idaho, and it is to that particular treaty that I wish to address myself a short time.

Mr. HOLMAN. We do not call it a "treaty;" it is simply an agreement or understanding.

Mr. LYNCH. Certainly it is a misnomer to call it a treaty; it is, in its present stage, only an agreement.

Mr. PICKLER. The same kind of a treaty we have always made.

Mr. LYNCH. The Nez Perces Indians, according to the last census, have a population of 1,838. They already have 1,900 allotments. You will notice, therefore, that there are more allotments of land than there are Indians. The total amount of land in the reservation was 756,968 acres. There has been divided or allotted 182,234 acres to the Indians of the reservation and 32,660 additional reserved, leaving a balance of about 542,074 acres to be sold under this treaty. The price agreed to be paid is $3 an acre for the whole 542,000 acres, amounting to $1,662,000 and some odd dollars.

Mr. HAUGEN. How is that land, good or bad; and what are the proportions of each kind?

Mr. LYNCH. I am coming to that in a moment.

This treaty was made——

Mr. HOLMAN. This agreement.

Mr. LYNCH (continuing). By two men. One is Mr. Fenn, who was born in the county and lived there all his life; and the other is Mr. Sleicher, who has resided near the reservation for many years and is familiar with the country and its resources. The report says he is a "conservative man, a man of good judgment, as we are informed." Now, let us see how these two men differ as to the quality of this land and its value. Mr. Sleicher says that there are 350,000 acres of agricultural land worth $3.75 an acre. That is the value put by himself upon it. He further says that there are 70,000 acres of timber and agricultural land worth also $3.75 an acre. The other commissioner values that timber and agricultural land at $5 an acre. Mr. Sleicher says, 70,000 acres of mineral land at $5 an acre, and the other fellow, only 30,000 acres at $5 an acre.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Well, that is the price of all mineral land.

Mr. LYNCH. Mr. Sleicher says that there is some mountainous land on it which is of very little value; and Mr. Fenn says that there is a hundred thousand acres of mountainous land of nominal value—50 cents an acre. And yet we are asked here to pay $3 an acre for every acre of that land! That is the injustice of the proposition. Three dollars an acre for the good and the bad land alike. And we are asked to sell the agricultural land for $3.75 an acre, and the mineral and timber lands at an estimate of $5 put on two qualities of land, leaving us, of course, all of the bad lands on our hands for all time, because we will never be able to get rid of them.

Mr. PICKLER. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. LYNCH. Certainly.

Mr. PICKLER. Does the gentleman suppose we will ever be able to buy these lands for less than $3 an acre? I can only tell the gentleman that when you go again you will find that you will have to pay $4 an acre for them.

Mr. CURTIS of Kansas. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. LYNCH. Certainly.

Mr. CURTIS of Kansas. If that reservation is sold, and the bad land is left entirely out, does it not still leave a surplus to the Government?

Mr. LYNCH. Why, if you could sell all of the other lands at the estimates it would perhaps even up. But who believes, when these two commissioners differ so much in their estimates, one estimating that there is but a small quantity of mountainous land, and the other a hundred thousand acres of land of this character, and when they are so wide in their estimate of the value of the land, who believes that we can rely upon such an estimate as that?

Mr. CURTIS of Kansas. Is it not a fact that one of the commissioners failed to estimate the hundred thousand acres, and that was put in by the committee at 50 cents an acre? The whole amount of land is accounted for by each, but differently classified and appraised.

Mr. LYNCH. He gives the whole of it here on the bottom of the first page.

Mountainous lands, not estimated, about 46,000 acres.

That is the way one of them puts it.

Mr. CURTIS of Kansas. The other failed to estimate 100,000 acres, and the committee put it in at 50 cents an acre.

Mr. LYNCH. One of them estimates it at 46,000 acres and the other at 100,000 acres. But the point I make is that these commissioners agreed to pay altogether too much for that land, and that the Government will eventually lose a million of dollars if it approves of this treaty in its present form. The idea of buying a chunk of land out there in Idaho, 542,000 acres, and paying $3 an acre for every acre of it, when the commissioners admit that from one-third to one-half is of little or no value!

Mr. PICKLER. There is no necessity to sell the lands until the Government can get that price for it, is there?

Mr. LYNCH. There is no guaranty that we will ever get that price or any other price for all the land.

Mr. PICKLER. Then we can hold the land?

Mr. LYNCH. Yes, and pay 4 or 5 per cent interest on it. That is not a very profitable transaction for the Government.

Mr. HAUGEN. If you remit this treaty back to the Indian agent, do you put a limit on the authority given to the agent as to price?

Mr. LYNCH. I certainly would.

Mr. HAUGEN. Do you do that now, in this proposed amendment?

Mr. LYNCH. No; there is no such proposed amendment; but if I did, I would sell every foot of that land to the highest bidder, and give the Indians every dollar there is in it, and not let the Government make a dollar. I would give the Indians the whole benefit of it.

Mr. HAUGEN. When this treaty is remitted back to the Indian agent to treat anew with the Indians, how is it proposed to limit his authority?

Mr. LYNCH. By proper instructions from the Interior Department.

Mr. LYNCH. No amendments have been prepared to obviate the objections I have made.

Mr. HAUGEN. Are you going to prepare any? What I wish to know is, what it is proposed to do here?

Mr. LYNCH. To reject the treaty, for the present, and by proper amendments protect the interest of the Indians and the Government.

Mr. PICKLER. And then when a new treaty is made there will be a proposition to reject that?

Mr. LYNCH. Not if it gives the Indians all that belongs to them and the Government a fair deal. I think a treaty ought to be made by which the surplus lands there would be thrown open to settlement; but I am opposed to the Government paying what seems to me a clean million of dollars more for this tract of land than it will ever get for it.

Mr. HERMANN. This treaty has been made on the part of the Indians and on the part of the commissioners. That is, the two parties, the Indians and the commissioners, have agreed together. Now, if this treaty should be repudiated by us and sent back to them the same proceeding must be had over again.

Mr. LYNCH. As to the amendments only.

Mr. HERMANN. Now, does the gentleman believe that these Indians will agree to dispose of this land for a less sum than they have already done?

Mr. LYNCH. I suppose they will, and if they do not I would do the other thing, and I think the Government will come to the other plan in a very short time. That is, to sell all of these surplus lands under the sealed bid process; and if these lands are worth more than the price mentioned here, give it to the Indians. I want them to get every cent there is in it. This is a wealthy, prosperous tribe of Indians. They are now cultivating over 30,000 acres of land. They have 75,000 acres under fence. There are 1,900 allotments already made, and they are pretty well able to take care of themselves.

Mr. LUCAS. What is the aggregate price that it is proposed, under this treaty, to pay the Indians for the lands purchased?

Mr. LYNCH. Three dollars an acre for the whole reservation.

Mr. LUCAS. To pay the Indians that?

Mr. LYNCH. Yes, and to pay them right off, whether the Government sells any of the land or not. We have got to pay them that amount of money, or put it out at interest at 5 per cent.

Mr. LUCAS. That is the Nez Perce Reservation?

Mr. LYNCH. That is the Nez Perce Reservation. Now, in regard to the quality of the land, I want gentlemen who disagree with me about this to pay special attention to what the commissioners say. They say:

> Much of the land, however, is fine agricultural land, worth perhaps eight or ten dollars an acre, while from one-third to one-half of it is of little value.

"Of little value" is the language they themselves use.

That is the judgment of the commission and in their report they say so—

> That while some of it is worth from $8 to $10, that one-third or one-half of it is of little value.

That is undoubtedly true; and that is the point I make—that we are paying too much when we pay $3 all around.

There is another thing. In the first place the Indians are allowed to take their allotments before anything is done. They have selected the very choicest pieces of land on that reservation. The commissioners practically say so. They have gone all over it and picked all the land that has water or that can be watered, and they have got the cream of the whole reservation. Now, they want to sell the balance of that great tract of land to the United States for $3 an acre and commence to draw their interest on it immediately whether the Government sells any of it or not.

Mr. PICKLER. Now, I want to ask the gentleman if that has not been the universal practice of the Government, and if we have not bought Indian lands during a period of time immemorial? Have we not also sold the lands to settlers? Is there anything new in that?

Mr. LYNCH. There is nothing particularly new about it; and it is all right where all the land is good.

Mr. PICKLER. The Government will have the land until it is paid for.

Mr. LYNCH. Yes; by paying interest on it. It is to a great extent not worth $3 an acre.

Mr. PICKLER. The Government ought to stand by its agreement.

Mr. LYNCH. The Government did not make any agreement.

Mr. PICKLER. You are asking the Government to repudiate its agreement.

Mr. LYNCH. There is no agreement to repudiate.

I want to say that there are 1,900 selections or allotments made already, every one of them a choice piece of land. You gentlemen who have traveled through the Western country, on the borders of these mountains, have some idea of how broken the land is; and you know, after they have taken so many good allotments out of an area of twenty-three townships, nearly one hundred choice allotments in a township, the general character of the land left, for which $3 an acre in cash is to be paid, can not be otherwise than a losing job to the Government. As to the quality of the land, the agent in his report in 1892, in speaking of the Indians as farmers and the quality of lands, says:

> Owing to the many years of successive failure in raising crops the Indians have become heartily discouraged, and the progress or advancement made by them in this industry has been very slow. Nothing more could be expected of them when from year to year they have been compelled to contend with the many failures in raising their crops. This year is included with the preceding years of failure.
>
> The hay yield this year would not average more than a half ton to the acre, and the yield of wheat and oats averaged not more than 7 or 8 bushels to the acre. This small amount of hay, wheat, and oats raised they were compelled to feed to their stock during the cold and severe months of last winter. They were compelled to buy the seed oats and wheat which they planted this spring.
>
> From a tract of land of about 10 acres, which I sowed to hay for the purposes of subsistence for the agency horses, I was able to cut the insignificant amount of about 1 ton. These successive years of failure in raising crops is due to the hot scorching winds with which this section of the country is invariably visited each summer.
>
> While the Indians have made no great showing in the way of advancement or progress in this great industry, nevertheless it can be noticed, in some instances, that many steps forward have been taken by them. Consideration must be given the fact that they do not till or farm any large tract of land, but confine themselves mostly to the valleys and low lands, where only small tracts can be found that are tillable. When they have each received their allotment, and have placed such improvements as will enable them to live upon and cultivate the same, then, and not till then, will rapid and progressive strides be made by them in this industry, their chief revenue of support.

This is the report of the agent himself; but one objection to this treaty, taking the judgment of the men who made it, is the commissioners did not classify the lands, by putting a fair value on the good lands and a lower value on poor lands. My short experience on the Committee on Indian Affairs has taught me that in every instance the Government has lost in its deal by buying these lands of the Indians.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Will the gentleman be kind enough to state a singe case?

Mr. LYNCH. Why, in all of them. The highest price we ever paid was a dollar until the treaty with the Yankton Sioux Reservation came up; and even on that we shall lose. I am satisfied that about all of it is good land and will sell so that the Government will get out of it whole. But when you go out to the State of Idaho and pay $3 an acre for that immense body of land of which the commissioners in their report say "one-third or half of it is of little or no value," I can not see how you are doing justice to the Government when you do it.

Mr. HARTMAN. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. LYNCH. Certainly.

Mr. HARTMAN. If one-half of it is worth nothing and the other one-half of it is worth $8 or $10 an acre, how can the Government, purchasing it at $3, lose anything by it?

Mr. LYNCH. Then let the Government confine itself——

Mr. HARTMAN. If one-half of it is worth nothing and the other half is worth $8 or $10, how can the Government lose anything by buying it at $3 an acre?

Mr. LYNCH. If the Government could sell the lands worth $8 to $10 per acre it would lose nothing; but that is not the provisions of the bill. The Government is paying $3 an acre for all of it and paying interest on the whole amount, with scarcely a hope of ever selling more than half.

Mr. HARTMAN. That is evading the question.

Mr. LYNCH. It is not evading the question. There is no proposition in the bill to sell the good lands for double what was paid for them. If there was, the question of the gentleman would be pertinent.

Mr. McRAE. The bill only fixes $3 as the price to be paid for the land, and only land which is worth that will be taken at all, and it will be taken at that price.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. The gentleman is mistaken. Three dollars and seventy-five cents is the price for agricultural lands.

Mr. McRAE. Very well. The other portion of the land will be left on the Government's hands, so that we shall lose the value of all those lands which will not bring $3.75 an acre.

Mr. LYNCH. That is, the Government will lose very nearly half the amount that it pays for these lands.

Mr. HARTMAN. I speak from the testimony that is printed and laid before the House.

Mr. LYNCH. I speak from that, too.

Mr. McRAE. If there was a provision, as the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LYNCH] suggests, authorizing these lands to be disposed of for their full value, I suppose the Government might realize out of the part of them which it could sell the cost of the whole, but you can not sell half these lands for $3.75 an acre and have the other half left on your hands without losing money.

Mr. HARTMAN. The statement is that about half of these lands is worth from eight to ten dollars an acre.

Mr. LYNCH. Oh, no; they do not say that. They say that much of the land is worth that.

Mr. HARTMAN. They say virtually that from one-third to one-half is worth that.

Mr. LYNCH. Not at all. You can not sell half those lands for $3.75 and have the Government come out whole.

Mr. HARTMAN. One thing is certain, that if you put up the lands at public auction you will not get much for them.

Mr. LYNCH. That again shows the injustice to the Government. That is all the more reason why the Government should not approve this treaty at all. It is to this unfair feature of the treaty that I am opposed.

I am willing that we should buy this land upon any reasonable basis which will bring the Government out whole. I submit that the Government is under no obligation to pay such a price for this tract of land that it can not come out whole. You can amend this bill—and I will raise no objection to that—so as to provide for selling these lands to the highest bidder under the sealed bid system recommended by the Interior Department.

Mr. HARTMAN. That is for the benefit of the speculators.

Mr. LYNCH. No; for the benefit of the Government.

Mr. HARTMAN. The settlers will not get any benefit out of it.

Mr. LYNCH. Well, the Government ought to protect itself first. Speculators usually take care of themselves.

Mr. COOMBS. Is not the Government in this case becoming a speculator with the certainty of loss?

Mr. LYNCH. With a dead certainty of loss. Mr. Speaker, this whole system of buying lands must soon come to an end. It is not the proper method. Some of the land in these reservations is valuable, and it ought to be sold to the highest bidder, and the Indians ought to get every dollar it brings, but much of this land is not worth a cent. It will lie there for centuries and nobody will pay the taxes on it.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. What is the date of the treaty in this case?

Mr. LYNCH. It has been made within the past year.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. Was it not made subject to ratification by Congress?

Mr. LYNCH. Certainly.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. Then if Congress does not ratify it, I do not see how that can be called breaking a treaty.

Mr. LYNCH. It is not breaking a treaty. This is simply a proposition submitted by the Indians for us to act upon. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. PICKLER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call the attention of the House very briefly to the provision in this bill in relation to the treaty for the Yankton Sioux Reservation; and what can be said of that treaty can, in general terms, be said of the others. The proposition that is before the House to-day is very simple. We are needing more lands for settlement. By an act of Congress we provided for sending out a commission to treat with the Yankton Sioux Indians for their reservation. That commission was organized by the Secretary of the Interior and was sent out with general instructions.

The commission called together the chief men of the tribe. They were about a year, as I now remember, getting up this treaty, and finally they agreed with the Indians to buy the lands upon certain terms, to pay them a certain amount for their lands, and they further agreed that on the deferred payments we were to allow them 5 per cent interest. That agreement comes here for ratification, and the proposition now is to abandon it and to go back to those Indians and say to them: "You got the best of us in that agreement, so we do not propose to stand by it; but we want to make a new treaty with you."

Mr. COOMBS. Were those commissioners authorized to bind the Government in any way?

Mr. PICKLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. COOMBS. Were they not merely authorized to see what could be done?

Mr. PICKLER. Now I hope the gentleman will not evade the matter in that way.

Mr. COOMBS. I do not evade anything.

Mr. PICKLER. If you are going to split hairs with these Indians when you treat with them, let me tell you it is not acting in good faith. The commissioners were sent out there under an act of Congress, and under instructions from the Secretary of the Interior. They called the Indians together and said to them, "We want to make an agreement with you." Of course it was understood that the agreement would come back to Congress for ratification, and the Indians were so told; but now we are complaining here that the Indians got the best of the bargain, and saying that we will not stand by it.

It seems to me Congress will occupy a humiliating position if it should say "We do not want to pay what we agreed to pay in dollars and cents."

Mr. COOMBS. But the commissioners had no right to make such an agreement.

Mr. PICKLER. They had the right; they were authorized by the Government.

Mr. COOMBS. They were authorized to go and treat——

Mr. PICKLER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. COOMBS], if he desires to do so, can join in voting these treaties down; he can join in breaking faith with the Indians. We have the power as a great Government to badger these Indians, to tell them that they must consent to whatever we say. That is the position which the question of the gentleman from New York would seem to indicate he desires to take. But there is no reason why these agreements should not be ratified. These commissioners went out in good faith; the Secretary of the Interior gave them their instructions; they kept within their instructions; they have made an agreement for these lands; and now Congress ought to live up to the agreement.

What will you tell these Indians when you send the matter back to them? What faith will they have in the Government under such circumstances? How will another agreement be arrived at? If the present agreement be sent back, then why may not a new agreement be sent back, and so continue to agree with the Indians and repudiate the agreements indefinitely?

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. If the action of these commissioners was final, if they had a perfect right to make an absolute bargain, why should it be necessary to bring these treaties back to Congress for ratification?

Mr. PICKLER. The commissioners had not the power to make an appropriation for the payments under these treaties; and therefore the matter must come back to Congress for final action.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. It comes back, then, not for ratification, but for appropriation.

Mr. PICKLER. I will ask the House to observe that if we agree to the Senate proposition, a reasonable proposition, to which five out of the six conferees have agreed, we simply procure these lands in the same way we have always procured lands from the Indians. We make no departure from our past policy; we are following in the same line.

Now, a word as concerns the economy of this transaction. Upon the reservation now in question there is a deferred payment of $500,000, upon which the gentleman from Indiana and the gentlemen supporting him think we ought to pay but 4 per cent interest instead of 5, as has been agreed upon. Now, there are about 1,750 of these Indians. They are poor. They have only this fund of $500,000, which, at 5 per cent, will yield them only $25,000 a year, which will not support them; and when their own means of support are exhausted the Government must support them. There is nothing, then, to be made by sending these treaties back. We will have to pay for their support in addition to this interest. Aside from the question of breaking faith with the Indians, aside from the humiliating position which we assume in declining to stand by the agreement of our own commissioners, there is no economy to the Government in any such line of conduct.

There is another very bad proposition in this bill as it passed the House, to which I am glad to see the Senate has declined to agree. Heretofore in all similar treaties within my knowledge, without any exception, the Government has always said, "We will pay the Indians so much money, and on the deferred payments we will pay a certain rate of interest;" and then the Government has taken the lands and disposed of them to the settlers. In other words, the Government has closed the contract with the Indians at the time of purchasing their lands.

But the gentleman from Indiana and others now propose, in the bill as passed by the House, to say to these Indians (they will never agree to it, however, I fear): "When we sell 100 acres or 1,000 acres, or 10,000 acres, we will pay you the money for that proportion of the land." In other words, it is proposed to open up a system of bookkeeping with the Indians; and if we do not sell the lands to settlers, then we are never to pay the Indians!

That is the position which the House took in the bill which it passed. But, gentlemen, that is not the correct way of doing business. You could not do business with white men in that way, much less can you do business in that way with the Indians. It has been the policy of the Government always in these treaties to close up the contract with the Indians and then to step in and dispose of the lands to settlers as it may deem proper.

So far as the Yankton treaty is concerned, there is no economy in such a policy as is now proposed. We shall in any event have to insure to these Indians a support, and the money derived from this treaty will not support them. There are about 1,750 of these Indians; and, as I have said, the interest at 5 cent on the $500,000 which they are to receive would be only $25,000 annually.

Mr. COOMBS. What becomes of the remainder of the money—that portion in addition to the $500,000?

Mr. HOLMAN. That is paid at once.

Mr. COOMBS. But what do they do with this money paid at once?

Mr. PICKLER. The Government is to pay them $100,000, to be divided among them. Let me remind the gentleman from New York what is the uniform policy of the Government in these matters. The Government does not want to speculate off of settlers; so it buys lands from the Indians as fairly and as cheaply as it can, and then disposes of the lands to the settlers at such prices as will reimburse it for the money paid to the Indians. The aim always is simply to get back from the settlers the amount we pay to the Indians.

That is the policy pursued in all these cases. And until very recently the Government purchased the lands of the Indians and disposed of them to the settlers free, but lately it is charging the settler what it paid the Indians.

And while I am not so much concerned about the Nez Perces agreement, I want to say that if the settlers do not take these lands at once the Government will have them on hand. They are valuable lands, and it will be only a very short time before they will be disposed of.

In regard to the Yankton lands which are situated along the Missouri River, in the southern part of my State, splendid lands, these will be taken up at once. They are as good farming lands as can be found anywhere. The Government will have the settlers' money coming into the Treasury at once from their sale.

Now, the proposition of the gentleman from Indiana—and I admire the gentleman as a financier, and as keeping down the appropriations of the Government—the gentleman from Indiana brings up the other proposition. He says that we must let this matter go back. He does not want to pay the Indians for the lands except as they are sold; and here is the whole point, and he will tell you so himself. He wants the bill to show no increase in appropriations.

That was the argument before the Indian Committee, when we were almost compelled to agree to it; so if you say in the bill that we will pay the Indians as we get pay from the settlers for the lands, then of course we make no appropriation in the bill, and it shows no increase. But the Senate has said in an honest and a businesslike way, as we have always said in our dealings with the Indians, and in our treaties heretofore, we will pay you so much for the land; we will close the contract and have done with you, and then deal with the settlers.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. PICKLER. Certainly.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Supposing, now, we ratify the treaty to-day, is that binding on the Indians?

Mr. MAHON. Of course.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Will that bind the Indian tribes?

Mr. PICKLER. Undoubtedly, if we ratify it.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Then, is it not equally binding on the Government?

Mr. HUNTER. Of course, if we ratify it.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. But suppose we do not ratify it.

Mr. PICKLER. The question of the gentleman from Washington is well put. We have gone out there with our machinery of the Government, and the Indians understood that they represented the Government. They were allowed to believe that such was the case.

It was the Indians who were hard to get into the agreement; and they understood that when they agreed with the Commissioners there would be no difficulty about the ratification of the matter by Congress. They were led to believe that such was the case. There has never been such an attempt heretofore to defeat an agreement of that character. It was a fair agreement, and these representations were made to the Indians as the basis of the agreement. If we were paying twice what we are paying the Indians in this bill, we could not afford to break faith with them and repudiate the contract and agreement as we are doing if we deny these contracts and refuse to ratify them now.

We could not afford to do it for three times the amount involved in the bill. We must act with them in good faith. The Indians understood that the commissioners were empowered to deal with them. Let us, then, stand by our agents and by the agreement our agents made. They made a good contract; and let me say to you, gentlemen, that if you defeat these treaties (and these are treaties, just as all other cessions of land have been), then you may appoint all the agents you want and send them out there, but they will never make an agreement again as fair to the United States as this one is.

You can not buy these lands cheaper than the commissioners have agreed with the Indians to pay for them, and the probability is that you will pay a great deal more if you do not take advantage of this opportunity. We have been dragging along for two years out in our country trying to settle the matter; the people want the land, and therefore let us end the trouble now by receding from the disagreement to the Senate amendments. Let us settle with the Indians at once and give the settlers all over this country who want homes an opportunity to secure them.

Let us agree with the Senate conferees. It is no difference in the end to the Government. The only question is whether we will settle up with the Indians now or keep books with them and pay them hereafter as the lands are sold, supposing they would so agree. You will never agree to such a proposition, I trust, as that which has been suggested by gentlemen who oppose these treaties.

I hope the House will recede from its disagreement.

Mr. MADDOX. Mr. Speaker, when I first went into the Indian Committee room and heard these agreements discussed I thought they were something binding on the Government, but I soon found to the contrary and that that impression was not true.

Now, as a matter of fact, as I understand the functions of these commissioners or agents sent out amongst the Indians, it is simply to find out a basis of agreement; in other words, negotiate a trade with the Indians and then the matter is referred to Congress, whether we will accept the terms proposed or not. We are not bound, as I understand the gentleman from South Dakota to maintain, by any obligation, legal or otherwise, to carry out such an agreement. It is simply a proposition made to us for legislative action.

Mr. HOLMAN. Undoubtedly. Why, what did we do in the Cherokee Outlet case?

Mr. MADDOX. And as the distinguished gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] tells me, there has been scarcely a treaty made with the Indians which has not been amended in some way by Congress before its ratification.

Mr. PICKLER. The gentleman, I think, is mistaken. The exceptions are largely the other way.

Mr. COCKRELL. Will the gentleman allow a question?

Mr. MADDOX. Certainly.

Mr. COCKRELL. Are the Indians bound by this treaty?

Mr. MAHON. That is the question. Are the Indians bound by it now?

Mr. MADDOX. They are bound by it if we do not change it and accept it.

Mr. COCKRELL. Suppose we do not ratify it—can they get away from it?

Mr. MAHON. I hope the gentleman will answer that question. Can the Indians get away from it whether we ratify it or not?

Mr. COCKRELL. That settles the question.

Mr. MADDOX. We are not bound to accept or ratify the treaty at all. We are not compelled to do it by any means. The gentleman from South Dakota maintains that the House itself is in honor bound to do it; that the Government itself is in honor bound. But if that be so why is it here? Why are we discussing it at all?

Mr. PICKLER. Does the gentleman say it is not in honor bound? Are we playing with these Indians? Were we playing with them when we sent the commissioners out there?

Mr. MADDOX. No; we are not playing with these Indians. We are simply trading with them; and if the trade does not suit us, we are not bound to accept it. That is the common English of it. Now, what are we asked to do? The House committee adopted a principle which we are insisting upon here.

We did not think this Government was in a condition to appropriate money to buy these public lands to be sold at mere haphazard. We did not think that was proper, and we provided that these lands should be sold, and that as fast as they were sold and the money received from the sales it should go to the credit of the Indians. That was the principle which governed the Committee on Indian Affairs of the House.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. And they to get interest in the mean time?

Mr. MADDOX. Oh, yes; at 4 per cent.

Mr. PICKLER. Does the gentleman think that would be a satisfactory way of doing? Suppose some of these lands were not sold for twenty-five years. We should have to keep an account with these Indians for twenty-five years.

Mr. MADDOX. Very likely, and we have accounts with them now, which have been running that long, and longer yet. But we have been told by gentlemen advocating the ratification of these treaties—and we are told in this House to-day—that these lands will be taken up at once.

I think the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LYNCH], my colleage on the committee, has demonstrated the fact to this House that they will not be taken, and that the Government will lose largely in this transaction. Now, the question that presents itself to the common sense of this House, and especially to this side of the House, is whether we can appropriate $2,500,000 to buy a lot of Indian lands that we have no present use for, when at the same time we are borrowing money and selling bonds in order to run this Government? That is the question that I want you to consider. That is the question that presents itself to our minds; whether you are ready to do that or not.

Now, we are not obliged to accept this contract. We are not obliged to open up this land. The truth of the matter is this: We have now got a bill before this House and before our committee asking the Government of the United States to pay taxes upon the Indian lands in those States and counties where they have been allotted—actually to bear the burden of local taxation, and yet you want to open more, adding an additional burden to the Government.

Mr. PICKLER. That is where lands are allotted to the Indians.

Mr. MADDOX. I understand that. And now you want the lands allotted here.

Mr. PICKLER. Oh, no.

Mr. MADDOX. You want these lands allotted.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. They are already allotted.

Mr. LUCAS. They have been allotted.

Mr. MADDOX. And as soon as they are opened up to settlement you will come in and ask to have the taxes paid, just exactly as you have done in other locations of the same character, where you are now absolutely asking the Government to pay the taxes on the Indian lands to help support the counties. That is the next thing to follow.

Now, Mr. Speaker, it is unnecessary for me to go into details in regard to our objections to this matter, because they have been so ably presented by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LYNCH] that I am satisfied that the members of this House understand this question and that they will not recede, but that they will insist that if these treaties are to be ratified at all, they shall be ratified in accordance with the terms laid down by the House committee, which is that as fast as these lands are sold and paid for the Indians shall be given credit for the moneys so paid. Or if that is not acceptable to them, why, they need not accept it. That is my position and my proposition. We are not obliged to accept this agreement. We are in no condition to accept it.

Mr. PICKLER. Oh, we have the brute force to go back on the Indians, of course, if we want to.

Mr. MADDOX. We are not going back on the Indians.

Mr. PICKLER. That is exactly what we are doing.

Mr. MADDOX. If we do not accept the contract, if we do not buy the land, the Indians will still have the land. They will still have title to it.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. It will not take anything away from them.

Mr. PICKLER What are we doing, then? Is this boy's play?

Mr. MADDOX. The lands will remain in the same condition in which they now are. The Indians never have done anything with them yet, and it will not disturb them at all; and from the argument made by the gentleman and those who agree with him, it is said that we have got to support them anyway. The question is whether we are willing to advance this money—to appropriate $2,500,000, when, as I have said, we are already borrowing money to run the Government? Ought we to make this appropriation for something that is unnecessary?

Mr. PICKLER. Will the gentleman allow me a question right there?

Mr. MADDOX. Yes.

Mr. PICKLER. Does not the gentleman know that it is only of very late years that the Government has taken money from the settlers at all for public lands? Does not the gentleman know that heretofore we have bought the lands of the Indians and given the lands to settlers? Now we are buying land from the Indians and selling it to the settlers, and in that way getting our money back. It is only within the last few years that we have done this, but now we are making ourselves whole by selling the lands to the settlers for all that we pay the Indians for it.

Mr. MADDOX. But I say we have come to that period in our history when we should change our policy again, and that is, that Congress ought not to buy any more of these lands from the Indians and sell to the settlers, but let the settlers deal directly with the Indians.

Mr. PICKLER. That is impossible.

Mr. MADDOX. I do not think so.

Mr. PICKLER. The settler can not deal with the Indians.

Mr. MADDOX. It will not be but a few years when we will have but little of the public domain left. There are three or four other treaties to follow; and under this precedent you are about to set it is not only a question of $2,500,000. It will not stop at $8,000,000 when we get to the other treaties to be ratified and the money to be paid under them. When you are talking about this question of interest you will remember that; and when you are talking about appropriations for advancing the money, you will remember that others are to follow.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. MADDOX. Certainly.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. In the last Congress a very important matter came up from your section of the country.

Mr. MADDOX. Mine?

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Yes, sir; to your whole section of country. I think every member upon this side of the question, with the exception of the gentleman from Mississippi, was in favor of the purchase of what is known as the Cherokee Outlet at an expense of $8,000,000. Now, your people were greatly interested in that.

Mr. MADDOX. My people!

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Your whole section.

Mr. MADDOX. I did not know that my people were interested in that.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Maybe not directly, but indirectly. It will be of great advantage to you in the future. You were interested in that the same as I am interested in this. You received about all the Western votes, because it was right and proper and just for the benefit of the settlers of your section; and we think to-day that your people should meet us half way in the development of our section of the country.

Mr. MADDOX. Now, as the gentleman has raised that question I will state that we had no interest in it. We have got none of it and did not have any interest in it so far as that is concerned. Now, there is about 6,000,000 more acres to be opened up, and this House will remember that we went forward and made a treaty with the Cheyennes and Arapahoes and paid them for their lands according to the treaty and acts of Congress. We paid $2,900,000 to the Choctaws and the Chickasaws for the same land. That is another proposition that I want to call your attention to. Two million nine hundred thousand dollars we paid to get a title to that property.

Mr. HUNTER. And have not got the title yet.

Mr. MADDOX. And we have not got the title yet. We have two treaties. We have the treaties with the Comanches, the Kiowas, and the Wichita and affiliated bands, which will probably cover about 4,000,000 acres of land; and they have the same interest in this land that they had to the Cheyennes and Arapahoes Reservation; and if we are asked to ratify these treaties, according to the gentleman from South Dakota and the gentleman from Washington, we are bound to do so when we have a precedent before us that the Government had paid twice for this land and will be called upon to do the same thing again unless the question of title be settled before we indorse the action of our commissioners.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. When was that treaty first made with the Arapahoes and Cheyennes?

Mr. MADDOX. I think it was four or six years ago.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. That was the first. When was the one made previous to that?

Mr. MADDOX. I do not remember; away back.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Away back.

Mr. HUNTER. In 1820.

Mr. MADDOX. The treaty was made with these Choctaws and Chickasaws in 1820, and the Cheyennes and Arapahoes claimed title under Executive order and by right of possession, and the Choctaws and Chickasaws claimed that they only ceded these lands in trust to the Government to locate friendly Indians on, and when open for settlement to the whites that the title reverted to them.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. I will not interrupt the gentleman further with questions at this point, as I see that it disturbs him; but I desire to reply to some things that he has said before the debate closes.

Mr. MADDOX. So you will see that there is another question which opens itself up for the consideration of this House; and behind that is the proposition that the Government is bound to accept this treaty or agreement. It is no longer a treaty, as the Supreme Court says it is not a treaty, but an agreement, and that the consent of this House and of the Senate is required in order to ratify that agreement and make it a contract. It is not a contract and binding upon this Government until we do consent, and the question is whether you will consent to ratify it or not. If you do not do it, it is not a contract with the Indians.

Now, even if that side of the House or this side of the House, as the case may be, does believe that this agreement ought to be ratified, I ask you gentlemen again, Is this the acceptable time to do it? Is this Government in a condition to do it? That is the question for you to consider. I claim that we are not in a condition to do it at this time.

Mr. HERMANN. Will my friend, who is, I believe, a member of the Committee on Indian Affairs, permit me to make a suggestion? Take the case of a reservation that has not been enlarged upon by any member on the floor to-day, one which lies within my own State, the reservation of the Siletz Indians. I wish to point out to the gentleman the injustice that will be done to those Indians if we do not recede from our disagreement to the Senate amendment.

Those Indians agreed to receive $142,000 for their surplus lands. The Government, through its agents, agreed to pay them that amount. The money was to be paid out of the Treasury of the United States, $100,000 of it to be deposited at 5 per cent interest for an indefinite length of time, and $42,000 to be paid to the Indians individually as they came of age, $75 per capita. Now, those Indians have had their lands allotted to them. They are there assuming that they have title to the lands which they have received by allotment. The House proposes that the Indians shall receive their pay out of the sale of those lands at the rate of $1.50 cents per acre.

The fact is that the Indians have selected the best lands in that reservation and the balance is compartively refuse land, so that very few people will pay anything for it at this time, for the reason that it consists largely of mountain ranges which at some time or other have been burned over, so that the land is not valuable either for timber or for agricultural purposes. It is utterly impossible, therefore, within any reasonable length of time to realize out of the sale of those lands even a small per cent of the amount of money that we have agreed to pay the Indians. Now, the gentleman will see that if this agreement is not ratified at the present time and is again submitted to the Indians for reconsideration, they never will agree to any better terms than they have agreed to already, because they will know that if the money is to come out of the sale of the lands it will not be realized within the present generation.

The bill was submitted to the House over a month ago. I have heard from the Indians, and I have taken some pains to ascertain public opinion as to the value of these lands. Many people have gone upon them for the purpose of taking appropriate locations to be homesteaded, but they have declined to take the lands and have given their opinion that they are worthless for homestead purposes.

Now, I submit that a refusal to recede from our disagreement to the Senate amendment will render it utterly impossible for us to treat with those Indians hereafter for those lands. And see the position that we shall leave them in. They have their allotments upon which they are living, believing themselves to be entitled to them, and the surplus lands are left upon their hands with this condition attaching to them.

Mr. COOMBS. Is not the gentleman's own statement an admission that by this treaty the United States is buying worthless lands from these Indians, after allowing them to take up the best part of the reservation by allotment? Upon what principle can the gentleman justify such legislation?

Mr. HERMANN. I desire to say that that is the consideration that is being paid to these Indians for the excess lands.

Mr. COOMBS. But, according to the gentleman's own statement, those lands are worth nothing. He has just told us that settlers have gone upon them and have declined to take them.

Mr. HERMANN. Ultimately those lands will be valuable; but I say that at the present time and for many years to come we can not realize the money that we are to pay Indians from selling the land at $1.50 an acre. Now, in the meanwhile, how are those Indians to be paid the consideration which has been promised to them? That is the question.

Mr. MADDOX. It seems to me that the question, or rather the speech of the gentleman from Oregon shows clearly that my position in this matter is correct. It appears that we have sent agents out there to negotiate for lands which, according to the gentleman's own admission, are absolutely worthless. As to the position of the Indians, if we refuse to ratify this agreement the Indians have got just what they had before; they have got their entire reservation; we have not hurt them in any way. According to the gentleman's own statement, these lands are worthless at the present time.

Mr. HERMANN. No. What I say is that at the present time, and in the present financial condition of the country, you can not sell such a large body of land as that and realize the amount that is to be paid to the Indians. Ultimately the lands will undoubtedly be disposed of at a good price.

Mr. COOMBS. But did you not say a while ago that settlers had gone upon those lands and had declined to take them as worthless?

Mr. HERMANN. I say that large bodies of people will not settle upon those lands at the present time. Ultimately I believe those lands will be disposed of, but it will take a considerable time, and meanwhile the Indians desire some assurance that they are to receive the money that has been promised them.

Mr. LYNCH. Does the gentleman think it is fair or proper that the Government should pay $3 per acre for such lands and pay 5 per cent interest on the deferred payments when, according to his own statement, the lands will not sell for $1.50 an acre?

Mr. HERMANN. The Government is not paying these people $7 an acre, but only 89 cents an acre; and the Secretary of the Interior certifies to Congress that the Government is making the difference between 89 cents and $1.29 an acre, amounting to something over $20,000. That is so much to the credit of the Government of the United States.

Mr. MADDOX. I think, from what the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. HERMANN] has said, that we have negotiated a very bad trade with the Indians; and the question is whether this House should ratify that trade. According to the admissions made here, a considerable portion of this land can not be disposed of at the present time. Now, we should take into consideration the financial condition of the Government. Is it in a condition to purchase land on credit and pay interest on the purchase money?

Mr. PICKLER. This will bring to the Government more money than it pays out.

Mr. HERMANN. Allow me to ask the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. MADDOX] whether there is any reservation in the United States where all the surplus land could be disposed of immediately at a good purchase price?

Mr. MADDOX. Is there any portion of this that may be disposed of at once?

Mr. HERMANN. There is.

Mr. MADDOX. After the allotment?

Mr. HERMANN. I am speaking entirely of the surplus after the allotments have been made. A considerable portion of these lands which have not been disturbed by fire contain timber, and can be readily disposed of. But I was speaking of the possibility or probability of realizing $142,000 at once to pay these Indians. I say it can not be done in the present condition of affairs.

Mr. COOMBS. Why should we want to do it?

Mr. HERMANN. In order to settle the title of these allottees who have taken land in good faith, and in order to settle titles generally.

Mr. PICKLER. Some things which have been said here would leave the impression that this transaction is actually going to take money out of the Treasury. I say it will bring more money in than it will take out.

Mr. HERMANN. Ultimately it will.

Mr. PICKLER. No, now. We pay only a small amount of money down, and give bonds for the balance. Then the applicants for these lands pay into the Treasury three times as much as we take out.

Mr. MADDOX. But I protest against the policy of issuing bonds to put money into the Treasury.

Now, I think it has been clearly demonstrated that this is a bad trade for the Government. The question is whether we shall ratify it or not. The agreement is not binding upon the Government until we do ratify it. In the present condition of the Treasury should we now go forward and ratify this trade, appropriating for the purpose $2,400,000? I think not.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Will the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. MADDOX] yield to me for five minutes?

Mr. MADDOX. Yes, sir. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Washington, and reserve the residue of my time.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I express my thanks to the gentleman from Georgia for kindly yielding to me at this time. I desire only to call attention to one or two things stated by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LYNCH] in the course of his argument.

Of course, Mr. Speaker, the ratification of these treaties is of the greatest importance to our section of the country. I have seen this reservation; I think I know something about this matter, and it is my judgment that the Government of the United States, notwithstanding the statement of the gentleman from Wisconsin, has made an exceedingly good bargain with reference to these lands. I know of my own knowledge that within thirty-six hours a company could be formed to pay $3 or $3.75 for every acre of this land if the Government would permit that arrangement to be carried out.

The gentleman talks about half of this land being of no value. That statement is not correct as a matter of fact. As shown by the report of the committee, the agricultural lands are estimated to embrace 350,000 acres, amounting, at $3.75 an acre, to considerably more than $1,000,000. The timber land, which has been stated to be worthless, is in my judgment the most valuable portion of this reservation, because in that section of the country timber is exceedingly scarce; and whenever you can secure a tract of timber land it sells promptly.

Such land would quickly bring the price estimated here. The mineral lands would sell, of course, under the mineral land law at $5 an acre. Here you have in this reservation 350,000 acres of valuable agricultural land, which the Commissioner has estimated to be worth from $8 to $10 an acre.

Consequently, it is my judgment that the Government, taking these lands and selling them as provided for in the treaty and in the bill, at $3.75 an acre, will recoup itself every dollar of all of the expenses attending the transaction. I believe that every acre of the agricultural land will be taken up within thirty days after the reservation is opened.

All over the State of Idaho—and the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LYNCH], speaking of the land as being in Idaho, would seem to be trying to establish the idea that the lands of Idaho were of no value—all over Idaho are valuable lands. Why, Mr. Speaker, in the Pan Handle district of Idaho, which is as large as the entire State of Maryland, there are over over 10,000,000 acres of valuable timber lands.

There are in the Pan Handle counties that produce more wheat to the acre than any land on the habitable globe. There are mines also which have produced wealth in the last five years enormous in amount. And this reservation is standing as a block in the way of the development and progress of the country. That is one reason why it is so important that action, and prompt action, should be taken upon this treaty.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. I hope the gentleman will yield to me a few moments longer.

Mr. MADDOX. I will yield five minutes more.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Now, I think, Mr. Speaker, that it is exceedingly unfair, it is exceedingly unjust to this people out there, that Representatives on this floor should come in here and state to people who do not know anything about the facts that these lands have no value, and that the Government will lose a million dollars or more by the transaction proposed.

Why, both of the commissioners who made this agreement with the Indians, taking the highest and the lowest estimate they have made, show that the Government will receive according to the highest estimate $2,025,000, and the lowest $1,860,776. Is it fair then, in view of these facts, to say that these lands are of no value? Is it fair to take the judgment of these men residing there who know the value of the lands, who know their quantity and who give us these figures as the result of the transaction? I think it is fair. I think we ought to take it. I think they were competent to make the estimates.

Will the Government lose anything when we get an estimate of $1,800,000 from the lowest estimate, and over $2,000,000 from the highest? Where is the ground for the assertion? The whole basis of the argument of the gentleman from Wisconsin; the whole argument of gentlemen who have discussed in opposition to the ratification of these treaties, is an argument which is designed for the purpose and the sole purpose of defeating their ratification. They say, or that is the inference to be gathered from their remarks, whether we will make anything or not, "we do not propose to ratify the treaty." Mr. Speaker, that is no way to deal with such a question.

I spoke awhile ago of the opening of the Cherokee Outlet. In the course of business in the last Congress it was my good fortune to be a conferee on the bill which provides for the ratification of that treaty and which was talked over fully in conference. It was talked over in the House, and it was contended that we were paying $8,000,000 on the ratification of that treaty, and so in order to obviate the adding of that amount to the bill we agreed that they might sell the land or the certificates, and that the Government would hereafter appropriate for it.

Yet to-day we have come here and ratified an agreement whereby the purchaser of that certificate might receive a bond from the Treasury of the United States in payment for it. That was all done simply "to beat the devil around the stump," that is all. But we opened the Outlet: and the opening of that section of the country I voted for. I am glad to vote for anything in Oklahoma or Texas or Alabama or Georgia that will advance the prosperity of that people.

I hope in return that they may be as generous to the people of the West, and help us to develop that empire, and throw open the reservations of the Government, giving the Indians their allotments, teaching them how to sow and reap and raise crops, and throwing open the lands to the settlement of the whites, letting them get homes, and in this manner shedding the blessings of civilization upon our Western country.

Why should you retard the growth of that section? There is not an Indian reservation in my State that I have not had to stand here and plead and plead for a bill to get the right of way for a railroad or canal or something across it. They stand in the path of progress. They stand right in the highway of the growth and development of the country. When we want to get a railroad over one of these reservations we have got to come to Congress, and the people have the inconvenience that comes from such a condition. I have already referred to a condition of affairs that exists there.

A great reservation is located at Tacoma. Fifty thousand people have built a great city there, but they can not get a railroad without the consent of Congress. The Indians are in the way. They can not use the land themselves and we can not get the restrictions removed—which, it is true, last but eight years longer—because when an effort of that kind is made we are met by the point of order. We are stopped all the time. We are completely at the mercy of the conditions that surround us, and we have no aid from Congress. Why should there be this opposition to the development of our Western country?

[Mr. ALLEN addressed the House. See Appendix.]

Mr. ALLEN. Now, Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede from its disagreement to the Senate amendment with reference to the treaties and agree to the same; and on that I move the previous question.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LYNCH] moves that the House insist upon its disagreement and ask for a further conference; the gentleman from Mississippi moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same; and upon that he demands the previous question. That motion takes precedence of the motion of the gentleman from Wisconsin.

The question was taken and the previous question was ordered.

Mr. ALLEN. My motion now is to recede from the disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is, Shall the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same?

The question was taken, and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. MADDOX. Division, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. REED. "All up." This is what we will have to do all along the line, and you may as well practice it.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 73; noes 40.

Mr. MADDOX. No quorum.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will appoint as tellers the gentleman from Georgia, Mr. MADDOX, and the gentleman from Mississippi, Mr. ALLEN.

Mr. MADDOX. I call for the yeas and nays. [After a pause.] I withdraw the demand for the yeas and nays, and insist upon the point of no quorum.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will appoint as tellers the gentleman from Georgia and the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. PICKLER. I rise to a point of order. After the yeas and nays are demanded and refused, what right has the gentleman to make the point of no quorum?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman made the point of no quorum.

Mr. PICKLER. But the yeas and nays were demanded and refused. [Cries of "Oh, no!"]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The yeas and nays were not refused. The Chair was taking the count when the demand was withdrawn.

Mr. PICKLER. I demand the yeas and nays, Mr. Speaker.

The question was taken; and the yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will appoint as tellers the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. MADDOX] and the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. ALLEN].

Mr. MADDOX. Pending that motion, I move that the House adjourn.

The motion was agreed to.

And accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 55 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

ADVERSE REPORTS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills were adversely reported and laid on the table, as follows:

By Mr. LOUD, from the Committee on Claims: A bill (H. R. 4703) for the relief of Capt. George A. Johnson. (Report No. 1372.)

By Mr. CURTIS of Kansas, from the Committee on Indian Affairs: A bill (H. R. 3552) to carry into effect the order of the Secretary of the Interior, etc. (Report No. 1373.)

By Mr. RICHARDS, from the Committee on Claims:

A bill (H. R. 1712) for the relief of D. G. Griffith. (Report No. 1374.)

A bill (H. R. 4207) for the relief of the heirs or assigns of Joshua Shaw. (Report No. 1375.)

PUBLIC BILLS AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills and a memorial of the following titles were introduced, and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. GEISSENHAINER: A bill (H. R. 7897) to amend as amended the various acts relative to immigration and the importation of aliens under contract or agreement to perform labor—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. RICHARDS: A bill (H. R. 7907) making it unlawful for committees and subcommittees of the Senate and House of Representatives to transact business in secret—to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. BOEN: A bill (H. R. 7908) to provide for internal improvements, an additional volume of currency, and for other purposes—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. BOATNER: Joint resolution of the General Assembly of Louisiana, asking an appropriation for improvement of Macon and Boeuf Rivers—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

PRIVATE BILLS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills of the following titles were presented and referred as follows:

By Mr. CURTIS of Kansas: A bill (H. R. 7898) granting increase of Pension to Dr. T. M. Coleman, of Newton, Kans.—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8899) granting an increase of pension to Joseph B. Williams, of Osage City, Kans.—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7900) granting a pension to Hannah B. Glaze, of Baxter Springs, Kans., and for other purposes—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DINSMORE: A bill (H. R. 7901) granting a pension to Isom Gibson, of Newton County, Ark.—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7902) granting a pension to Lavina Smith, widow of Pry Amos Smith—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. MEREDITH: A bill (H. R. 7903) for the relief of William J. Maddox, administrator of Laura E. Maddox—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. PAGE: A bill (H. R. 7904) granting an increased pension to Sally Rodman, widow of Gen. Isaac P. Rodman, of Rhode Island—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WASHINGTON: A bill (H. R. 7905) for the relief of A. W. Wills, administrator—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WISE: A bill (H. R. 7906) for the relief of Charles S. Mills—to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. BELL of Colorado: Resolutions of Plymouth Council, No. 4, Junior Order United American Mechanics, of Denver, Colo., favoring passage of House bill 5242, known as the Stone bill, which provides restriction of foreign immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. FLETCHER: Petition of citizens of Minnetonka, State of Minnesota, protesting against appropriations for sectarian schools in the education of Indians—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. HARTMAN: Petition of J. H. Calderhead, Benjamin W. Downey, and others, of Montana, asking the impeachment of the Attorney-General—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of Samuel M. Nye and 53 other citizens of Montana, concerning education of Indians at sectarian schools—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. IKIRT: Papers to accompany House bill 7891, claim of David Jones, Company C, One hundred and first Pennsylvania Volunteers—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. JOHNSON of Ohio: Memorial of the Central Labor Union of Cleveland, Ohio, to the House of Representatives of the United States, preferring charges against Augustus J. Rieks, judge of the district court of the United States for the northern district of Ohio, and asking that he be impeached—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. LACEY: Petition of Perry Engle and sundry other citizens of Newton, Iowa, representing that the Attorney-General of the United States for high crimes and misdemeanors—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, memorial of Perry Engle and sundry citizens of Newton, Iowa, representing that the Attorney-General of the United Staies has been guilty of high crimes and misdemeanors, and asking that appropriate action be taken—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SENATE.

TUESDAY, August 7, 1894.

Prayer by Rev. J. H. M'CARTY, D. D., of the city of Washington.

THE JOURNAL.

Mr. CHANDLER. I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the Journal of yesterday's proceedings be dispensed with.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. MANDERSON. I feel constrained to object to the request for the reason I shall state. The rule imperatively requires that the Journal shall be read. Of course the reading can be dispensed with by unanimous consent.

Frequently on the reading of the Journal before it is approved it has been found that corrections must be made. This ignoring of the reading of the Journal every morning is a new departure for the Senate which I do not think ought to be permitted. Besides, the reading of the Journal gives Senators who are belated an opportunity to get to their seats in time for the transaction of routine business. I therefore feel constrained to object.

Mr. CHANDLER. Of course the objection ends the matter; but if I may be allowed I take occasion to say that I do not agree as to the advisability of reading the Journal merely to allow belated Senators to make an excuse for their absence, as the Senator from Nebraska states.

Mr. MANDERSON. That is merely a collateral consideration.

Mr. CHANDLER. Moreover, it is not of frequent occurrence that the Journal is corrected after it has been read. It is one year ago to-day since we assembled in this Chamber to do the business of the country, and I hope that within a very few days we may depart. It was in order to expedite what business remains to be done that I ventured to incur the disapprobation of the Senator from Nebraska by asking unanimous consent that the reading of the Journal shall be dispensed with.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Journal will be read.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLES, its Chief Clerk, announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

A bill (H. R. 2896) for the relief of Henry James, residing in the original Hot Springs Reservation, in the State of Arkansas;

A bill (H. R. 6518) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes; and

A bill (H. R. 6937) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. HUNTON. I ask an indefinite leave of absence for my colleague [Mr. DANIEL], who is detained at home by family affliction of a serious character.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and leave of absence is granted.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. MCMILLAN presented a petition of the Michigan State Millers' Association, praying for the enactment of legislation to secure the decrease of the present excessive duties on American flour over American wheat imposed by France and Germany; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. POWER presented the memorial of Charles Watson and 12 other citizens of Anaconda, Mont., and the memorial of G. W. Kessler and 22 other citizens of Anaconda, Mont., remonstrating against the support of the Government in maintaining the present system of sectarian Indian education, etc.; which were referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. BRICE presented a petition of the Chamber of Commerce of Cincinnati, Ohio, praying for an early settlement of the pending tariff question; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented the petition of Mrs. R. S. Rust, of Cincinnati, Ohio, corresponding secretary of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in behalf of 65,000 members of that organization, praying for the enactment of legislation to secure the better preservation of the Sabbath in the United States; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented a petition of the Northwestern Ohio Medical Association, of Sandusky, Ohio, praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the creation of a department and secretary of public health; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented a memorial of 151 citizens of Cincinnati, Ohio, remonstrating against the support of the Government in maintaining the present system of sectarian Indian education, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. PALMER. I present the petition of Cissna, Wilder & Co. and 4,300 other citizens of Chicago, Ill., praying for the early settlement of the tariff question, alleging that the failure to dispose of this question will work incalculable loss and irreparable injury to the financial and industrial interests of the country. I move that the petition lie on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. GALLINGER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2920) to pension John Maholm, dependent father, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. PALMER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 1214) granting a pension to Hannah Welch; and

A bill (H. R. 7294) empowering fourth-class postmasters to administer oaths to pensioners.

Mr. HILL, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4954) relative to recognizances, stipulations, bonds, and undertakings, and to allow certain corporations to be accepted as surety thereon, reported it without amendment.

Mr. PEFFER. I am permitted by the Committee on Pensions to report the bill (S. 1173) to grant service pensions to soldiers and sailors of the war of the rebellion without recommendation, but with certain amendments.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed upon the Calendar.

Mr. PEFFER. In connection with that bill, I am also directed by the same committee to report unfavorably a bill of the same purport, being the bill (S. 1938) to grant pensions for service in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps of the United States. I ask that this bill may be indefinitely postponed, for the reason that its provisions are substantially incorporated in the bill which I have reported without recommendation.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be indefinitely postponed, in the absence of objection.

Mr. PEFFER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1175) to require payment of pension money to wives in cases where male pensioners desert or abandon their families or are habitual drunkards, or for any reason fail and neglect to support their families, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. VILAS, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1969) granting a pension to Harrison C. Hobart, late brevet brigadier-general of volunteers, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. PASCO, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4667) to provide for the opening of certain abandoned military reservations, and for other purposes, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1012) to correct the muster roll of J. Seymour Taylor, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was agreed to, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

STATE, COUNTY, AND MUNICIPAL CORPORATE TAXES.

Mr. COKE. I am directed by the Committee on the Judiciary to report with an amendment, in the nature of a substitute, the bill (H. R. 6284) to prevent interference in the collection of State, county, and municipal taxes assessed against corporations and corporate property, and for other purposes, and to ask for its present consideration.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. SHERMAN. Let the amendment be stated.

Mr. CHANDLER. May I ask whether the bill has been reported from any committee?

Mr. COKE. I have been directed to report the bill by the Committee on the Judiciary with a substitute for it as it came from the House. I was also requested by the committee to ask for its present consideration, and I ask unanimous consent that the Senate may now consider it.

Mr. HOAR. Let the substitute which was agreed to unanimously by the committee be read. I think Senators will find that there is no objection to it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The substitute will be read.

The SECRETARY. The committee report to strike out all after the enacting clause of the bill and insert:

Whenever there shall be due any State, county, or municipal tax, which tax shall constitute a lien or claim upon property in the hands of a receiver appointed by a court of the United States, or any part thereof, it shall be the duty of the court to take order that such tax shall be paid promptly from said property, and no consumption or disposition of such property shall be permitted by said court until said tax shall be paid, except for the purpose of raising money to pay the same, without the consent of the officer whose duty it shall be to collect such tax, or except for the purpose of paying taxes due the United States.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the Committee on the Judiciary, which has been read.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read "A bill to provide for the collection of State, county, and municipal taxes, assessed against corporations and corporate property in the hands of receivers, and for other purposes."

UNIFORM SYSTEM OF BANKRUPTCY.

Mr. GEORGE. The Committee on the Judiciary direct me to report sundry amendments to the bankruptcy bill, and to ask that the bill as proposed to be amended by the amendments be printed. I ask for that order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection it will be so ordered.

Mr. HOAR. The minority of the Judiciary Committee, consisting of the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT], the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL], and myself, and I have no doubt the absent Senator from Iowa [Mr. WILSON], from what I know of his opinion on the general subject, dissent from the report of the committee in favor of the bill, whether as originally reported or as proposed to be amended.

I am also authorized to propose an amendment to the bill, providing, in the case of express and actual fraud, a system of involuntary bankruptcy where the debtor has committed the acts which by this bill would prevent his discharge. I ask leave to have the amendments which are proposed printed with the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, that order will be made.

Mr. PLATT. What was the order which was asked for by the Senator from Mississippi, [Mr. GEORGE] in reporting the amendments? Did he desire them printed separately as amendments or as a part of the bill as proposed to be amended? I did not understand the request.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It is that the bill be printed with the amendments of the Committee on the Judiciary. In the absence of objection it is so ordered.

SUSAN E. CUNNINGHAM.

Mr. GALLINGER. I am directed by the Committee on Pensions to report favorably and without amendment the bill (S. 1018) granting a pension to Susan E. Cunningham. As this bill was mislaid and should have been reported months ago, and as it will take but a moment to consider it, I ask for its present consideration.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, after the word "roll," in line 4, to strike out the words "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws;" after the word "Cunningham," in line 6, where it occurs the first time, to insert "totally and permanently blind;" and at the end of the bill, after the word "Artillery," to insert "at the rate of $12 per month;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of Susan E. Cunningham, totally and permanently blind daughter of Thomas Cunningham, late private Company F, Fourth Regiment New York Heavy Artillery, at the rate of $12 per month.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR SURVEYING PUBLIC LANDS.

Mr. VILAS. I am instructed by the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2234) to further amend section 2399 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, to report it without amendment, and to ask for its immediate consideration. The bill simply provides for substituting in the Revised Statutes the recently prepared manual of instructions for surveying in place of that formerly used.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES A. SEXTON.

Mr. VILAS. I am instructed by the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2281) to authorize the Postmaster-General to credit account of James A. Sexton with amount of funds stolen, to report it without amendment, and to ask its present consideration.

I desire to say in reference to the bill that it simply proposes an allowance by Congress to the credit of a postmaster of an amount of loss sustained by him without his fault, through a robbery, and which would have been allowed by the Postmaster-General himself but for the fact that the general law vesting him with jurisdiction to consider such cases requires him to report sums above $2,000 in amount to Congress for its action.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It directs the Postmaster-General to credit the account of James A. Sexton, postmaster at Chicago, Ill., $3,757.05 for postal funds stolen from his office December 12, 1893.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMERICAN PRISONERS IN CUBA.

Mr. GRAY. I am instructed by the Committee on Foreign Relations, to whom was referred the resolution submitted by the Senator from Florida [Mr. CALL], to report it with an amendment. I ask for its present consideration.

The Senate, by unanimous consent, proceeded to consider the resolution (submitted by Mr. CALL July 23, 1894), as follows:

Resolved, That the President of the United States be, and is hereby, requested to institute negotiations for the release of citizens of the United States now held in confinement by the Government of Spain, in the Island of Cuba, upon charges of complicity with or aid to the rebellion in the Island of Cuba or resistance to the authorities in all cases where such persons are held upon suspicion merely; and in cases where there is evidence against them, that they be brought to a speedy trial, and also that the President be requested to instruct the consul-general of the United States to make arrangements for the defense of such citizens where they are unable to procure the means to employ counsel and procure witnesses.

The amendment of the Committee on Foreign Relations was, after the word "held," in line 7, to insert the words "without trial;" so as to read:

Where such persons are held without trial upon suspicion merely.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HOAR. I should like to inquire of the Senator reporting the resolution whether the holding of citizens of the United States without trial and upon suspicion only be not a violation of the laws of nations, in regard to which the term "negotiations" is rather a mild one, and whether instituting negotiations on such a subject does not imply abnegation of the rights of citizenship?

Mr. GRAY. I am not the author of the resolution. The Senator from Florida [Mr. CALL] offered the resolution. Perhaps the word "negotiations" is a word that might be supplanted by a better; but I think "negotiation" includes inquiry and investigation. Whether indeed there be any reason for making the demand, I do not know.

Mr. HOAR. I think the phrase ought to be, if the Senator will permit the suggestion, in regard to persons who are held n suspicion without trial, "to take measures to secure their release." That is an entirely courteous phrase.

Mr. GRAY. I should think the phraseology "to make inquiry as to the facts and take measures to secure their release," would be preferable. The matter ought to be inquired about, as it is an allegation without proof.

Mr. HOAR. Very well. If the Senator will modify the resolution to that extent that will be acceptable.

Mr. GRAY. I accept the modification suggested by the Senator from Massachusetts, and will move to insert the words "to make inquiry as to the facts and to take measures to secure their release."

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. BRICE introduced a bill (S. 2285) to provide for the securing of plans and for the erection of the public buildings of the United States; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. HIGGINS introduced a bill (S. 2286) granting jurisdiction and authority to the Court of Claims in the case of the steamer Pocahontas; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. PERKINS introduced a bill (S. 2287) in relation to trials by juries in United States courts; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. ALLEN introduced a bill (S. 2288) providing for the erection of public buildings at the cities of Norfolk and Hastings, Nebr.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. GALLINGER introduced a bill (S. 2289) for the relief of pensioners permanently disabled in the line of duty; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. QUAY introduced a bill (S. 2290) to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act granting the right of way to the Hutchison and Southern Railroad Company through the Indian Territory;'" which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

DETAIL OF PENSION OFFICE EMPLOYÉS.

Mr. GALLINGER submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to inform the Senate at the earliest practicable time of the number and grade of all employés borne upon the rolls of the Pension Bureau who are detailed for duty in other bureaus or offices of the Interior Department, not including those detailed for duty with boards of pension appeals in the office of the Secretary, the necessity for such detail, and the nature of the work upon which such employés are engaged outside of the Pension Bureau.

GOVERNMENT PRINTING AND BINDING.

Mr. GRAY. I submit a resolution, which I ask may be printed and lie over.

The resolution was read, and ordered to lie over and to be printed, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Printing be instructed to consider and report as to the advisability of having Government printing and binding done under the contract system by private concerns, and to inquire as to the difference in cost between private and public work of the same class.

HOLMES & LEATHERS.

Mr. BLANCHARD. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate take up at this time for consideration the bill (S. 1945) for the relief of Holmes & Leathers.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to pay Holmes & Leathers $13,361.64 for transporting the United States mail on route numbered 7402, Mississippi, and on route numbered 8165, Louisiana, for the months of April and May, 1861.

Mr. MANDERSON. I should like to have some explanation of the reason why this claim, which is now 33 years old, has not been acted upon heretofore, and why it should now be paid.

Mr. BLANCHARD. The bill has been reported favorably to the Senate by the Committee on Claims at the present session. It was reported favorably to the other House by its Committee on Claims at the present session, and it also received a favorable report in the Fifty-second Congress at the hands of the House Committee on Claims.

The bill proposes to pay Holmes & Leathers for transporting the United States mails for the months of April and May, 1861. In the report of the Senate Committee on Claims, which I hold in my hand, I find a letter from T. B. Coulter, Auditor, dated February 3, 1892, addressed to Hon. C. H. Mansur, House of Representatives, from which I read the following extract:

SIR: In reply to your letter of the 29th ultimo, inclosing H. R. 1238, Fifty-second Congress, first session, "for the relief of Holmes & Leathers," and requesting that your committee be informed whether or not the records in this office show the amounts now due them to May 31, 1861, I have the honor to inform you that the records of this office show that T. C. Holmes and T. P. Leathers were contractors in Mississippi, route No. 7402, and in Louisiana, route No. 8165, and that a balance for service to May 31, 1861, the date when service was discontinued, stands to their credit, amounting to $12,910.35.

I also find in the report a letter from D. McConville, Auditor, dated June 6, 1888, addressed to Hon. I. H. Maynard, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, from which I read the following extract:

In reply to your reference of the petition of T. P. Leathers, of New Orleans, La., herewith returned, relative to his claim as surviving partner of the firm of Holmes & Leathers, mail contractors in the States of Mississippi and Louisiana in 1861, routes Nos. 7402 and 8165, I have the honor to inform you that the records of this office show that service on the two routes named was certified to May 31, 1861, and that payment on the former route was made in full to December 31, 1860, and on the latter route to March 31, 1861.

There stands to the credit of Holmes & Leathers for service from January 1 to May 31, 1861, on route No. 7402, the sum of $6,207.05, and for service from April 1 to May 31, 1861, on route No. 8165, the sum of $6,703.30, a total of $12,910.35.

The report goes on to state:

Numerous claims similar to this have been reported favorably to the House, and always upon the statement in writing of the Auditor of the Treasury for the Post-Office Department that the amount so reported stands upon the books of the Department to the credit of the claimant.

The Auditor of the Post-Office Department, in a letter addressed to the Hon. I. H. Maynard, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, of date June 6, 1888, reported as due Holmes & Leathers for the months claimed in the bill, April and May, 1861, $12,910.35.

In the letter first referred to, addressed to Mr. Mansur, on February 3, 1892, the Auditor proffers the opinion that all, or nearly all, of the mail service performed in the Southern States prior to June 1, 1861, has been paid for, and suggests that it would be unsafe to make any further payments.

In this case Mr. T. P. Leathers, a citizen of almost national reputation and standing, the surviving partner of the firm of Holmes & Leathers, to whom the money is due, makes affidavit that this claim or no part of it has ever been paid, and that he performed this service, carrying the mail under the United States flag upon his own boat at great peril both to himself and to his property, the said boat.

As Capt. Leathers has been kept out of the payment of this money for over thirty years, during all of which time the sum has stood to his credit upon the books of the Government, and makes affidavit that he has never been paid, to meet the objection suggested or proffered by the Auditor, your committee have no hesitancy in reporting this bill to the House for its favorable action and recommend that the same do pass.

I now call the attention of the Senator from Nebraska to the following affidavit, which is also found in the report:

STATE OF LOUISIANA, parish of Orleans, city of New Orleans:

Personally appeared before me, the undersigned notary public in and for the parish of Orleans, duly commissioned and qualified, Thomas P. Leathers, who, being first duly sworn, deposes and says that he is the partner surviving the late firm of Holmes & Leathers; that he is the Leathers referred to in claim No. 1238, House of Representatives of the United States; that his said partner is now deceased; that said firm were the contractors for carrying the United States mails on routes No. 7402, Mississippi, and No. 8165, Louisiana, and that there is due said firm for transporting said United States mails over said routes and under said contracts, for the months of April and May, 1861, the sum of $13,361.61, which said amount is still unpaid and due to the present time.

That said T. P. Leathers further avers that he was the commander and master of said steamboat which carried said mail, and that neither he nor his partner has ever received any pay or remuneration from the so-called Confederate States, and that said mail was carried under the United States flag and no other on said boat until service was discontinued by order of the honorable Postmaster-General of the United States on May 31, 1861, at great peril both to himself and his property.

T. P. LEATHERS.

R. PRUYNE.
F. D. OGDEN.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 23d day of January, A. D. 1892, at the city of New Orleans, State of Louisiana.

[SEAL.] H. B. HOWARD,
Notary Public for the Parish of Orleans.

It will be recollected that in one of the letters to which I have referred a statement is made by the Auditor of the Treasury for the Post-Office Department that perhaps the claim may have been paid by the Confederate government. In order to dissipate any doubt upon that point, I will read a letter from the present Auditor of the Treasury for the Post-Office Department, dated the 7th day of May of the present year. He says:

Your letter of the 30th ultimo, addressed to the honorable Postmaster-General, relative to the claim of Messrs. Holmes and Leathers, for carrying the mails in Mississippi and Louisiana in 1861, has been forwarded to this office. In reply, I have the honor to inform you that the records of this office show that T. C. Holmes and T. P. Leathers, under the firm name of "Holmes & Leathers," were contractors on route No. 7402, Mississippi, and No. 8165, Louisiana; that payment on the former route was made in full to December 31, 1860, and on the latter route to March 31, 1861, and that there is standing to their credit for service from January 1 to May 31, 1861, on route No. 7402, the sum of $6,207.05, and for service from April 1 to May 31, 1861, on route No. 8165, the sum of $6,703.30, a total of $12,910.35.

That much of the letter refers to what the books of the Treasury show in reference to the pending claim.

The succeeding portion of the letter refers to payments made by the Confederate government for mail service during the late war. On that point the present Auditor of the Treasury for the Post-Office Department says:

Within the past year this office has been put in possession of a register of payments made to mail contractors, under contracts with the United States and others, by the Confederate States government, a careful examination of which fails to disclose any payments to Holmes & Leathers on account of their contracts with the United States.

In addition to that there is the affidavit of Capt. Leathers to the effect that neither he nor his partner at any time received a cent on account of these contracts, either from the United States Government or from the Confederate States government.

Mr. President, I repeat that the bill has the favorable report of the Senate Committee on Claims, and has been twice reported favorably to the House of Representatives by the House Committee on Claims. It would thus seem to be a meritorious claim.

Mr. MANDERSON. I see by the letter of the Auditor of the Treasury dated June 6, 1888, that in 1882 the claim of these parties went to the Court of Claims, and that there was found due them for services on both the routes named, for the months of April and May, 1861, only (pay for the quarter ended March 31, 1861, having been omitted) the sum of $9,191. Does the Senator from Louisiana know why the entire claim was not sued in the Court of Claims, or what was the action in the court at that time?

Mr. BLANCHARD. It seems that the claims of these parties for the transportation of the mails on route No. 7402, in the State of Mississippi, amounting to six thousand two hundred and seven dollars and some cents, was referred to the Court of Claims. The other claim, the one based upon the transportation of the mails on the Louisiana route, No. 8165, was not referred to the Court of Claims, but was reported in one of the estimates of the Treasury Department in 1882 for an appropriation to pay it. Since that time we have the letters of three Auditors of the Treasury for the Post-Office Department, including the present Auditor, all of which letters state that the claim has never been paid in any part and that this sum of money is standing on the books of the Treasury Department to the credit of the contractors.

Mr. MANDERSON. I observe that all of the service rendered was after the ordinance of secession was passed by the State of Louisiana. The committee, of course, fully investigated the fact as to whether there was any pay from the Confederate government for any part of the contract.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. The letter of the Auditor shows that there was not.

Mr. BLANCHARD. I have just read, and I will read again for the information of the Senator from Nebraska, a portion of the letter written by the Auditor of the Treasury for the Post-Office Department relative to that very matter.

Mr. MANDERSON. The letter is not in the report?

Mr. BLANCHARD. No, sir; it is of later date. The Auditor says:

Within the past year this office has been put in possession of a register of payments made to mail contractors under contract with the United States and others by the Confederate States government, a careful examination of which fails to disclose any payments to Holmes & Leathers on account of their contracts with the United States.

And, in addition to that, I will state to the Senator from Nebraska, in the report of the committee which he holds in his hand, on the last page of the report, he will find an affidavit of Capt. Leathers, personally known to me and many gentleman on this floor to be a reputable citizen, stating that he never did receive a cent on account of the transportation of mails on either of these routes either from the Confederate States government or the United States Government, and that when he carried the mails during the time for which this claim is made his boat floated the flag of the United States.

Mr. MANDERSON. I am fully aware that the Committee on Claims usually examines claims of this character with very great scrutiny. The only matter which has prompted me to this inquiry was that all the facts might appear of record. The claim is of ancient date, going back to 1861, and it seems strange that Congress in all this time has not taken some action, especially in view of a judgment for a part of the claim had in the Court of Claims.

I will ask only one further question. Does the Senator from Louisiana know whether either of these claimants was in the Confederate army.

Mr. BLANCHARD. No, sir; I do not know whether either of them was in the Confederate States army. I know that this service was rendered before actual war raged in that section of country. The mail was carried under the flag of the United States, and it was carried until an order of discontinuance was made by the Post-Office Department here.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. In addition to what has been said by the Senator from Louisiana, I wish to state to the Senator from Nebraska that some years ago there were a number of claims of this character before the Committee on Claims, and some of them before the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads. It cropped out that a portion of them had been paid by the Confederate government, and a halt was then called at once in reference to all the claims as far as the Senate Committee on Claims is concerned.

Finally Congress made an appropriation, I think of $10,000, or $12,000 perhaps, for the purchase of certain Confederate archives supposed to show all that took place in regard to these payments, and the papers were purchased for the use of the Post-Office Department. Those archives showed that some of the claims which had been presented here had been paid; but, as shown by the letter from the Auditor, they failed to show that any payment had been made on this particular claim. In view of all the facts, as this service was rendered by Capt. Leathers and his partner by boats carrying the United States flag, although perhaps for a short time after the ordinance of secession had been adopted in that State, as the service was recognized by the Government, judgment rendered, and all that, we thought it was no more than right that the claim should be paid.

Mr. ALLISON. May I ask the Senator from Oregon whether this claim does not stand relatively in the same position which the large number of claims for similar service in the Southern States occupy, and, if paid, whether it will not form a precedent for the payment of all such claims; at least those that were not paid by the Confederate government, so-called, as shown by the archives to which the Senator refers? Why should this claim be segregated from the others and paid now?

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I do not know how many such claims there are. I do not think there is a very large amount of claims of this character, and even if there were, if the service was rendered before the war for the Government of the United States, and accepted by the Government, I do not see any reason why the Government should not pay them. In this case a judgment was rendered, I believe, in the Court of Claims, showing a recognition of the claim by the court representing the Government.

Mr. HIGGINS. Mr. President, I ask the Senator from Louisiana what is the reason for the amount of the claim named in the bill being $13,361.64? House Report No. 1701, of the Fifty-second Congress, first session, which is made the basis of the present Senate report, suggests the following amendment:

Strike out, in lines 6 and 7, "$13,361.64" and insert in lieu thereof "$12,910.35, being the amount reported by the Auditor as standing to the credit of Holmes & Leathers upon the books of the United States."

Mr. BLANCHARD. I will state to the Senator from Delaware that he is entirely correct in that respect, and I had intended before the bill was put upon its passage to amend it in that particular. When the bill was reported recently from the Senate Committee on Claims an error was made in not amending it so as to reduce the amount to $12,910.35, but I intended to offer the amendment before the bill was placed on its passage.

Mr. HIGGINS. I will further ask the Senator what possibly he said in answer to the Senator from Nebraska a few moments ago, but I did not quite understand him, how it is that there can be justly a claim made for a larger sum than that awarded by the Court of Claims?

The Court of Claims allowed on these two routes as due the contractors the sum of $9,191.60, and I should suppose that the judgment of the Court of Claims would be decisive of the amount to be paid unless it was sent back to the Court of Claims for correction.

Mr. BLANCHARD. I will state to the Senator from Delaware that one of these claims was never sent to the Court of Claims, so I understand at least. The claim based upon the Louisiana route was reported in the estimates in 1882 for appropriations by Congress to pay it. I have the estimate here.

Mr. HIGGINS. I believe there are only two routes involved in the claim. I ask the Senator from Louisiana whether there are more than two routes?

Mr. BLANCHARD. There are only two routes.

Mr. HIGGINS. In the letter of Mr. McConville, the Auditor, dated June 6, 1888, he says:

An examination of the letter books in this office discloses the fact that this claim was taken before the Court of Claims in 1882, and that the balance then reported as due the contractors, namely, $9,191.60, was for service on both the routes named for the months of April and May, 1861, only, the pay for the quarter ended March 31, 1861, on route No. 7402, amounting to $3,718.75, having been omitted.

Mr. BLANCHARD. The $3,718.75 added to $9,191.60 makes this sum of $12,910.35.

Mr. HIGGINS. But the court gave judgment for the smaller sum. It presumably had all the facts before it. I can not see any reason given in this report why Congress should pay a larger amount than the judgment thus ascertained. Of course if the claim is just it ought all to be paid, but that is apparently the way it is left here on the face of the report.

Mr. MANDERSON. I think it fair to say that it is evident the part which went to the Court of Claims, while it included both routes, was not for all the time. That is to say, the claimants brought their action on both the routes for the service during the months of April and May, 1861, but they omitted to bring an action on route 7402 for the quarter ending March 31, 1861.

Mr. BLANCHARD. That is correct.

Mr. MANDERSON. That seems to have been the fact.

Mr. HIGGINS. Now, I should like to have some explanation as to why, if the case went before the Court of Claims, the whole of it did not go there, and why there should be thus a judgment as to a part, when properly the whole seems to be a single entity.

Mr. BLANCHARD. The explanation pointed out by the Senator from Nebraska from this report seems to cover the point made by the Senator from Delaware. It appears that part of the claim was not passed upon by the Court of Claims.

Mr. MANDERSON. That is correct.

Mr. BLANCHARD. It will be seen from the report that the court did pass upon a portion of the claim arising from the transportation of the mails upon both these routes. I was then in error in stating that no part of the claim based upon one of the routes, to wit, the Louisiana route, had ever gone to the Court of Claims for adjudication.

It seems from the statement which the Senator from Delaware read that the two claims did go before the Court of Claims, but that the court did not pass upon that part for the quarter ending March 31, 1861, on route 7402 in the State of Mississippi, amounting to $3,718.85. Now, that sum added to the other will make the $12,910.35 due.

On this point I further call the attention of the Senator from Delaware to the more recent letter from the Auditor of the Treasury for the Post-Office Department, which I have in my hand. The Auditor states that in 1882 a part of this claim—not all of it but a part of this claim—was taken before the Court of Claims, and in 1886 a part was reported to Congress for an appropriation.

It therefore appears that the Court of Claims has never sat in judgment upon all of this claim. It sat in judgment upon part only, and awarded a judgment of $9,191.60. The reports from the Committee on Claims of the Senate and the Committee on Claims of the House show that in addition to the amount found due by the Court of Claims, $3,718.85 for the quarter ending March 31, 1861, is also due. This part of the claim does not appear to have been before the court.

Mr. HIGGINS. Now, I should like to ask the Senator if he knows—I do not—under what act, general or special, this claim originally went before the Court of Claims by which that court took jurisdiction?

Mr. BLANCHARD. I have not the information.

Mr. HIGGINS. The reason why I ask the question is because, if it is a subject-matter which under the laws of the United States was required to go before that court, and as we are called on to pass upon a judgment of that court as to one of the parts, and the larger part of the claim, it seems fair that the remainder of it should pass before that court also, unless there be some good reason shown to the contrary.

I do not wish to be considered as antagonizing this claim, but upon the face of the case it appears to be a proper subject of inquiry—possibly some member of the committee may explain it—that here is a judgment for a part, showing that the court had jurisdiction of the question, and yet the court did not pass on the other part.

Mr. BLANCHARD. It seems to me an answer to that difficulty is this: Admitting that the Court of Claims did pass upon a portion of this claim, then the claim is strengthened to that extent, because sanctioned by a judgment for $9,191.60 rendered by that tribunal. Then, for the remaining $3,718.85 necessary to make up the $12,910.35, we have the judgment of three Committees of Claims of Congress, two during the present Congress and one during the last Congress, which state that, besides the $9,191.60 found to be due by the Court of Claims, there is also due the further sum of $3,718.85, making in the aggregate the $12,910.35.

Mr. PASCO. Mr. President, this claim has been very carefully considered by the Committee on Claims, as already stated by the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL], who for years was the able chairman of that committee. It is not a new matter at all; and the case has undergone careful examination again during the present session of Congress. The amount actually due is fully established by the report from the Auditor's office dated June 6, 1888. That report states that—

There stands to the credit of Homes & Leathers, for service from January 1 to May 31, 1861, on route No. 7402, the sum of $6,207.05, and for service from April 1 to May 31, 1861, on route No. 8165, the sum of $6,703.30, a total of $12,910.35.

And the committee have recommended that that amount be placed in the bill instead of the amount which was in the bill when it was originally introduced.

The question was asked, why was not this money paid years ago? The history of the claims for services rendered the Post-Office Department just prior to the war is well known, and most of those claims, it seems, have been paid at one time and another.

The letter from Mr. Coulter, which is also in the report of the committee, says:

I am clearly of the opinion that nearly if not all of the mail service performed in the Southern States prior to June 1, 1861, has been paid for once, and some of it twice, and that in the absence of a complete record of payments made for said service by the Confederate States government it would be unsafe to make further payments.

The payments were arrested for this reason. The Confederate records were obtained; they were searched, and they have been the guide of Congress in allowing claims of this kind since that time. The Confederate records have been searched in vain for any proof that this amount was paid to Capt. Leathers and his partner, and it must be manifest that in the absence of any proof upon the record, with the positive evidence of Capt. Leathers and other evidence before the committee showing that this amount has never been paid and it is a just claim due him, it should be paid, unless the policy of the Government is opposed to it. The Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] this morning asked whether it was proper that this class of payments should be made.

I understand that the policy was settled many years ago when there was a gross amount appropriated for the payment of all these claims. I tried to find the statute, but not expecting this discussion to come up, I have not had time to find it; but I am told by those who are acquainted with legislation that there was a general gross appropriation made in 1879 to pay this very class of cases.

Mr. HIGGINS. I should like to ask my friend from Florida if that is the explanation of the fact that this claim and other like claims have been before the Court of Claims? Was it taken there in order to get the benefit of that general appropriation? I do not know whether that is the case, and I ask for information.

Mr. PASCO. I do not think so. I think it has been the result of some individual efforts on the part of some of the claimants to get their cases through under the the Bowman act, and very probably they have gone there from the House of Representatives. Cases are very frequently sent from the House of Representatives simply to get information when they find that no final action can be taken. The Senator from Delaware has had large experience upon the Committee on Claims of the Senate. He knows that a different policy has been pursued here, and that no cases have been sent to the Court of Claims when the information was already in the possession of the Senate or could be obtained from some of the Departments.

All this information being in the Department, certified to by the Auditor, there can be no possible reason why this claim should be dependent upon any partial hearing of the case before the Court of Claims. The record information of the Department is worth more than any finding that might come from a partial investigation of the case in the Court of Claims made by referring one of these claims (if there are two of them aggregated in this amount) or a part of the whole claim to the Court of Claims.

Mr. HIGGINS. Will the Senator from Florida allow me a moment?

Mr. PASCO. Certainly.

Mr. HIGGINS. I will say to the Senator that I entirely approve of the policy of paying these claims. I think that it is simply the payment of an honest debt. I say so because I had occasion to look into one of them that was of a similar character, though concerning other parties entirely, which was before the Senate heretofore, growing out of the post-office work done by the Mississippi Central Railroad Company. But I simply wanted the explanation made as to how there was jurisdiction taken by the Court of Claims and that they gave judgment for only a part of the claim. If that was the case, it seemed to me to give some reason to require that the whole claim should be scrutinized by them. I only ask for information.

Mr. PASCO. I have understood from our previous association upon the Committee on Claims that the Senator from Delaware feels as I do, that this class of claims ought to be paid. I am glad to observe the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] is in his seat again. I was speaking a while ago in reference to the policy of the Government as to paying this class of claims. The Committee on Claims understands that was settled in 1879, or about that time, when a gross sum was appropriated by Congress to meet such claims. The measure as proposed by Congress at that time was not fully carried out. It is not worth while to go into all the circumstances here, and I do not suppose I could give them as accurately as the Senator from Iowa himself, but that act established the policy of the Government in reference to this class of claims, a policy the Senator from Delaware says he agrees in.

From time to time the larger part of these claims have been paid, and probably very few of them are now left. I can not speak with any degree of certainty as to that point; but the policy being settled, and the amount being settled by the books of the Government as by the letter from Mr. McConville, dated June 6, 1888, that this amount of $12,910.35 stands there to the credit of this party, that must be better than any finding of the Court of Claims. Whether the Court of Claims had the whole or a part of the matter before it I do not know; but the committee felt perfectly safe in recommending the payment of that amount, which is the amount we propose to put in the bill when the amendment suggested by the committee is offered, as already stated by the Senator from Louisiana.

The claim has been well and maturely considered by the committee. It has been carefully examined by the senior Senator from Louisiana. It was passed upon by the full committee unanimously; and it being the policy of the Government to pay these claims, there can be no doubt that the bill should give this amount, and that it should be passed when it is amended so as to include the amount in it.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, when this claim was called up for the consideration of the Senate I did not at first recall the fact that this class of claims was once very fully and very carefully considered by the Treasury Department, when I also participated in that examination as the Secretary of the Treasury. Congress in 1877, as near as I can remember, passed an appropriation mainly upon the recommendation and statement of the Senator from Texas, Mr. Reagan, who was then, I think, a member of the other House, and not of the Senate, that these claims made by postmasters had not been paid by the Confederate government.

A large appropriation, I think, amounting to $800,000, was made directing the Secretary of the Treasury to examine and ascertain whether they had been paid, or whether they are just claims against the Government of the United States, and a very thorough examination was made. The claims amounted, as I said, to nearly a million dollars. The reports of the Treasury Department were to the effect that in almost every case the existing contracts for the carrying of the mail were assumed by the Confederate government, and that that government paid back sums due the contractors, and also the amount of the current earnings under those contracts. That report was made to Congress and that was the end of it. It seems to me that the claims were dropped, and considered as having been practically disposed of.

As to this particular claim I can not speak, but unless there is some showing to distinguish it from the other claims that were made in such a large amount, I do not think it would be just or right for the Government of the United States now to pay any of the claims. The Confederate government had control of the country covered by these routes. This was a route to New Orleans, and in the early part of the war the whole of the country embraced by the route was unquestionably in the hands of the Confederate government, a government hostile to the Government of the United States. There can be no existing contract that could fairly compel the Government of the United States to pay for the postal service in a country that was under the control of a hostile and foreign government.

That was the ground taken by the Treasury Department and the ground which I believe was afterwards sustained by Congress. If these contractors had earned anything before the establishment of the Confederate government there might be some claim for it, but it was shown in those cases that the contractors came forward and practically surrendered their contracts with the United States and the Confederate government assumed the contracts and agreed to pay not only the future, but the past earnings under the contracts. If that be the case, whether the Confederate government performed its part of the contract or not, it would be very improper to call upon the Government of the United States to pay these claims.

I sent for the document I referred to. I have received one, but it is not the document I desired, though covering the same subject-matter. It is in regard to another class of claims. I have not yet been able to procure the document that will give proper and full information upon this subject, and which will probably state whether this is one of the claims that was covered by that appropriation. If so, it ought not to be paid. Therefore I hope the Senator from Louisiana will be willing to let the bill go over. I do not want to interfere with a just claim against the Government of the United States, and if the Senator will allow the bill to go over until to-morrow, I will look into the matter a little further. I think the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. RANSOM] had something to do with this matter.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Will the Senator from Ohio allow me?

Mr. SHERMAN. Certainly.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Perhaps the Senator from Ohio was not present when a letter was read from the present Auditor of the Treasury for the Post-Office Department?

Mr. SHERMAN. I have it here.

Mr. BLANCHARD. No; it is not in the report you hold. It is a later letter, in which the Auditor states that the Post-Office Department has acquired and now holds the register of payments made by the Confederate government for the transportation of mails, and that no mention of the pending claim is to be found upon it. In other words, it shows that this claim was neither paid nor assumed by the Confederate government.

Mr. SHERMAN. At any rate it is very certain that upon a statement made by Mr. Reagan that these claims had not been paid by the Confederate government that appropriation was made, and it turned out that he was mistaken, for the records of the Confederate government, then in the hands of our Government, actually showed that money had been paid to the extent of $500,000, and there the claims were dropped. I think, therefore, it would not be right to press this claim until that matter can be known, and it ought to be ascertained from the report made by the Treasury Department to which I refer.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Of course, if the Senator from Ohio desires the bill to go over until to-morrow, I shall make no objection to it; but if he will allow me a moment, on page 2 of the report he holds in his hand is a communication from the former Auditor of the Treasury, T. B. Coulter, in which he says:

> There is a register of individual payments made to contractors and others by the Confederate States government for service performed prior to June 1, 1861, in the hands of private parties, and in the Post-Office appropriation bill for 1892, approved March 3, 1891, the Postmaster-General was authorized to expend a sum not to exceed $10,000 for its purchase.
>
> When the United States is placed in possession of this register it will aid greatly in determining what claims have been or have not been paid.

Since that letter was written the Postmaster-General has purchased the register referred to, and they have it now at the Post-Office Department, and in a letter of May 7, of the present year, the present Auditor for the Post-Office Department states that an examination of the register, now the property of the Post-Office Department, shows no payment or assumption of this debt by the Confederate government.

Mr. SHERMAN. I would not rely at all upon a private paper in the hands of private parties to show whether money had been paid or not; but if I remember correctly, at the time the examination was made in the Treasury Department we had the official records of the Confederate government itself. I will read the first part of the letter of the Auditor of the Treasury from which the Senator from Louisana has read.

The Auditor says:

> SIR: In reply to your letter of the 29th ultimo, inclosing H. R. 1238, Fifty-second Congress, first session, "for the relief of Holmes & Leathers," and requesting that your committee be informed whether or not the records in this office show the amounts now due them to May 31, 1861, I have the honor to inform you that the records of this office show that T. C. Holmes and T. P. Leathers were contractors in Mississippi, route No. 7402, and in Louisiana, route No. 8165, and that a balance for service to May 31, 1861, the date when service was discontinued, stands to their credit, amounting to $12,910.35.

There is no doubt about that. You have, therefore, the basis for the claim that at that time there might have been that amount due, although in May, 1861, the Confederate government was in full force in the Southern section of the country. Then the letter says:

> The inclosed copy of a letter from this office, addressed to Hon. I. H. Maynard, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, June 6, 1888, relative to this claim, is furnished for your information.
>
> I am clearly of the opinion that nearly if not all of the mail service performed in the Southern States prior to June 1, 1861, has been paid for once, and some of it twice, and that in the absence of a complete record of payments made for said service by the Confederate States government it would be unsafe to make further payments.

Mr. BLANCHARD. If the Senator from Ohio will allow me, the Auditor goes on to state that the register of these payments by the Confederate government was in the hands of private individuals, but so important was it deemed that the United States Government should get possession of it, that in an act approved March 3, 1891, the sum of $10,000 was appropriated for the purpose of purchasing the register. It was purchased, and is now the property of the United States, in possession of the Post-Office Department, and an examination of it discloses that this claim was not one of those paid by the Confederate government.

In addition to that, here is the affidavit of Capt. Leathers, well known as a reputable citizen and business man, to be found on the last page of the report of the committee, in which he says he never received a cent from the Confederate government or the Federal Government.

Mr. SHERMAN. Still, it is unsafe to pay money under these circumstances. It is clear to every Senator, without regard to the issues of the war, that after the 1st day of April, 1861, the United States Government had been practically superseded by a de facto government, and a government of great power and force. That government assumed all the contracts then existing with the Government of the United States for carrying the mails all over that section of the country.

Among the first acts of the Confederate government—I do not remember the date—they assumed, as is shown by the public records, not only to pay for the future but for the past, not, however, going back beyond the 1st of July, 1860. When this matter was examined it was found that such claims had been paid. True, the payments may not have resulted to the advantage of these claimants; but still there was no reason why the Government of the United States, when its power over that territory had been suspended, should pay for carrying the mails through that country. That would be unreasonable. That such claims were assumed and paid by the Confederate government is a historical fact, which I think will be shown by the records to which I refer, when I can obtain them.

Mr. PASCO. Mr. President, I think it is very proper, after what the Senator from Ohio has said, that this bill should go over, so that the further examination which the Senator suggests may be made; but before the bill goes over, I should like to add a little to what I have already said.

The Senator suggests that the territory where at that time this service was rendered was under the control of the Confederate government, but the facts show differently. In the report it will be seen that service on these routes was certified, and the Government of the United States paid to May 31, 1861, which shows that the Government of the United States had full control of this postal route up to the time named, and recognized the service as being rendered to the United States Government.

Mr. SHERMAN. What was the date of the Confederate order assuming the control of the mails?

Mr. PASCO. I can not give that, but it is well known that the power of the Confederacy did not extend all over that territory.

Mr. SHERMAN. This, I understand, was some Southern route, to New Orleans, I think.

Mr. PASCO. That was a Louisiana route.

Mr. BLANCHARD. It was down the Mississippi River.

Mr. SHERMAN. From what point?

Mr. BLANCHARD. The mail was carried on steamboats. Capt. Leathers was a prominent steamboat man for a period of fifty years, and these mails were carried upon his steamboats. There were two routes, one in Louisiana, and one in Mississippi. The route on the Mississippi River was from New Orleans to Vicksburg. The other was on the Yazoo River.

Mr. PASCO. But the service was accepted by the United States Government as rendered in its own territory and certified, and everything indicates that the whole matter was within the control of the United States Government up to the time when this certification took place. We have these payments. The committee, before passing upon the claim, understood that the Confederate records themselves had been examined to ascertain whether Capt. Leathers had ever been paid.

The result of that examination, according to these letters and statements, was that he never had been paid; but if the Senator from Ohio has access to other records, it certainly is most desirable that they shall be searched, and if there is anything that was not before the committee, it is most desirable that they should have it, and the chairman of the committee will regard it as a favor if the Senator from Ohio will let him know of the existence of this document and obtain a copy of it if possible.

Mr. SHERMAN. I have sent for it, and I ought to be able to obtain it.

I will ask the Senator from Louisiana another question. Was this postal service continued by this contractor after the 31st of May, 1861?

Mr. BLANCHARD. I can not tell about that; but I call the Senator's attention to this clause in Capt. Leathers's affidavit.

Mr. SHERMAN. I am inclined to think they will probably be found to have surrendered their contract and made a new one.

Mr. BLANCHARD. As to whether or not Leathers & Holmes continued to carry the mails after May 31, 1861, I do not know; but I call the Senator's attention to the paragraph in Capt. Leathers's affidavit in this case, in which he says:

> That said T. P. Leathers further avers that he was the commander and master of said steamboat which carried said mail, and that neither he nor his partner has ever received any pay or remuneration from the so-called Confederate States, and that said mail was carried under the United States flag and no other on said boat until service was discontinued by order of the honorable Postmaster-General of the United States on May 31, 1861, at great peril both to himself and his property.

It would seem from this that Capt. Leathers continued to carry the mail under the flag of the Union until he received an order from the Postmaster-General at Washington to discontinue it, and that was on the 31st day of May, 1861.

Mr. SHERMAN. Then the other question comes up, whether he did not continue the contract beyond that, and receive pay from the Confederate government.

Mr. BLANCHARD. If he did, that was under another contract with which we are not dealing. As to whether he did or not, I do not know; but he did carry the mail under the United States contract until he was ordered by the Postmaster-General to discontinue the service, which was on the 31st day of May, 1861; whereupon the Treasury Department at once entered upon its books a statement of his account, showing this amount of twelve thousand nine hundred and ten dollars and some cents to be due.

Mr. MANDERSON. Mr. President, some years ago I was a member of the Committee on Claims, and there was something about the name of Capt. Leathers which seemed familiar to me. Did he have any other claim against the Government? Was there not a claim for a steamboat taken for the use of the United States forces? Is the Senator from Louisiana aware of any such claim?

Mr. BLANCHARD. I have no knowledge of such a claim.

Mr. MANDERSON. I am not sure that this is the name.

Mr. BLANCHARD. It seems to me that I heard of something about a steamboat—I do not know that it was Capt. Leathers, but perhaps it was—when I was a member of the House of Representatives. I do not think it was Leathers. It was some other steamboat captain, and perhaps Capt. Leathers may have been interested in it. I only know this, I will say to the Senator from Nebraska, that I have an indistinct recollection of some claim about steamboats, and in that connection some recollection of Capt. Leathers's name. What it is I do not know.

Mr. MANDERSON. That is indistinctly in my own mind. While this debate has been going on I have been trying to ransack my memory to ascertain what I did know about Capt. Leathers. I know that years ago the name was familiar to me in connection with some claim. It may be that this very claim was before the Committee on Claims at the time I was a member of of that committee.

Mr. PASCO. I do not remember that any such claim has been passed upon by the committee during the years I have been connected with it, though there may have been other bills in behalf of Capt. Leathers. I do not recollect that any such claim has come up for action.

Mr. MANDERSON. This was eight or ten years ago, and, of of course, my memory is very indistinct in regard to it.

Mr. PASCO. I came on the Committee on Claims shortly after the Senator from Nebraska retired, and I do not recollect any other claim of Capt. Leathers, though there may have been others referred to the committee which have not yet been considered.

Mr. MANDERSON. This was certainly ten years ago, for I think it is that length of time since I was a member of the Committee on Claims.

This claim was of such ancient date that I felt that some explanation was due the Senate and due to those who are championing the passage of this bill. I have looked with a great deal of care over the report and have listened very attentively to the letters of the officers of the Treasury; and to my mind there is but one question remaining, and that is, whether the records which have been purchased from the Confederate government, or whoever was the custodian of those archives, will show that there was a payment or an assumption of payment of this debt by the Confederate government.

Mr. President, of course we all understand that it is not entirely condemnatory of a bill that it is based upon a claim which is old, because it is notorious that the United States—and to the shame of the Government be it said—is not only a very slow debtor in the payment of its claims, but is frequently delinquent, not to say dishonest, in its treatment of creditors. We all know of cases where men have grown gray and died and left claims against the Government which were legitimate and honest, and should have been paid, yet year after year goes by without action of the two Houses of Congress for their payment.

So far as the payment of this claim is concerned, my exploration has satisfied me that as against the Government the best possible proof is the statement by the accounting officers of the Treasury that the amount of $12,910.35 is to the credit of these contractors upon the books. That, it seems to me, ought to estop the Government, and the only matter upon which light should be thrown is the question corroborative of the statement of Capt. Leathers, whether or not this debt was paid or assumed in whole or in part by the Confederate government. That can very easily be ascertained by a reference to the register to which the Senator from Louisiana has referred, and to the document referred to by the Senator from Ohio. I think if the bill can go over until to-morrow morning and that examination can be made, there will be no question about its passage.

Mr. BLANCHARD. The Senator from Ohio and the Senator from Nebraska desire this claim, which has been before the Senate for the last hour and a half, to go over until to-morrow, and I ask that an order be made by the Senate that the further consideration of the bill be resumed immediately after the morning hour to-morrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BLACKBURN in the chair). Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Louisiana? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLES, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the following bills:

A bill (H. R. 86) for the protection of persons furnishing materials and labor for the construction of public works;

A bill (H. R. 4326) to subject to State taxation national-bank notes and United States Treasury notes;

A bill (H. R. 7683) to remove the charge of desertion against James Fay;

A bill (H. R. 7803) to amend sections 2401 and 2403 of the Revised Statutes; and

A bill (H. R. 7827) to authorize a bridge across the Perdido River, between the States of Florida and Alabama.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills:

A bill (S. 901) for the relief of the owners of the schooner Henry R. Tilton and of personal effects thereon;

A bill (S. 1949) for the relief of James E. North; and

A bill (S. 2280) to amend section 2 of the act approved February 15, 1893, entitled "An act granting additional quarantine powers and imposing additional duties upon the Marine Hospital Service."

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the concurrent resolution of the Senate requesting the Secretary of the Interior to suspend the opening of the lands in the Arredondo grant, Columbia County, Fla.

The message also announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 7874) to enable the Secretary of the Interior to pay John T. Heard for professional services rendered the "Old Settlers" or Western Cherokee Indians out of the funds of said Indians, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

WASHINGTON AND GREAT FALLS ELECTRIC RAILWAY.

Mr. McMILLAN submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6777) entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to incorporate the Washington and Great Falls Electric Railway'" having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 3, 4, 5, and 7, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 2, and agree to the same; amended so as to read as follows:

At the end of section 1 add: Every car shall be brought to a full stop before crossing the Foxhall road. It shall be the duty of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to inspect, or to cause to be inspected, from time to time, the cars operated on said road, and to require of the said company that all cars and stations shall be of the first class, and shall be maintained in good condition, and that cars shall be run according to schedules which shall accomodate the public; the said Commissioners shall also have the power to make such regulations as to the rate of speed, the use of tracks, the removal of ice and snow from off the tracks, as the public interests may require; failure to comply with any such requirement or regulation, or failure to stop cars before crossing the Foxhall road, shall subject the company to a fine of $50 for each such failure, which fine may be recovered in any court of competent jurisdiction; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 6, and agree to the same, amended to read as follows:

That the act to amend the charter of the Eckington and Soldiers' Home Railway Company, approved July 5, 1892, is hereby amended by striking out in section 1 beginning in line 6, with the word "beginning at the intersection of," to and including the words "point of beginning," in line 29, and inserting in place thereof the following:

Beginning at the intersection of Fifth and G streets northwest, esta along G street to New Jersey avenue and First street; thence south along First street northwest to C street northwest; thence east along C street around the south side of Stanton Square, by single track to Fifteenth street northeast; thence north on Fifteenth street to D street northeast; thence west on D street to Fourth street northeast; thence south on Fourth street to C street northeast; thence west on C street to New Jersey avenue; thence north on New Jersey avenue to D street northwest; thence west on D street to First street, and to the point of beginning; also, beginning at the intersection of G street northwest and New Jersey avenue; thence across New Jersey avenue to and along G street to North Capitol street; thence north on North Capitol street to New York avenue, connecting with the main line and the North Capitol street branch; also beginning at the intersection of G and Fifth streets northwest; thence south on Fifth street to Louisiana avenue; thence along Louisiana avenue to Sixth street west; thence south along Sixth street to B street northwest; thence west on B street (over its own tracks, for such a distance as the Commissioners of the District of Columbia shall determine) to a point to be located by the said District Commissioners near the east curb line of Seventh street northwest, and returning by the same route to Fifth street northwest.

Also by inserting in section 2, after the word "hundred," the words "and fifty."

Also by inserting in section 3 as amended, after the words "two years," the words "and three months;" and that the Senate agree to the same.

JAMES McMILLAN,
ISHAM G. HARRIS,
CHARLES J. FAULKNER,
Managers on the part of the Senate.
JNO. T. HEARD,
JAMES D. RICHARDSON,
P. S. POST.
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was concurred in.

A. W. WILLS.

Mr. BATE. I ask for the present consideration of the bill (S. 528) for the relief of A. W. Wills, administrator. There is no controversy about it, and its consideration will take but a moment.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to refer to the Court of Claims the claim of A. W. Wills, administrator of the late Alvan C. Gillem, who served as captain, assistant quartermaster United States Army, and brigadier-general of volunteers in the United States Army in the late war of the rebellion, for a balance of wages earned by him in the suppression of the rebellion, and during his entire time of service in the Army as a volunteer or regular, and not paid to him or to anyone for him.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LIGHTS ON FISHING VESSELS.

Mr. WHITE. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of House bill 7383. It is a bill relating to lights on fishing vessels, which was suggested by the Treasury Department, and has had the unanimous concurrence of the Committee on Commerce. All parties interested are desirous that it should pass. It is a general measure, and very short.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 7383) relating to lights on fishing vessels.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PAYMENT OF ACCRUED PENSIONS.

Mr. PEFFER. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 1876) to provide for the payment of accrued pensions in certain cases.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the bill be read for information.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be read for information, subject to objection.

The Secretary read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That from and after the 28th day of September, 1892, the accrued pension to the date of the death of any pensioner, or of any person entitled to a pension having an application therefore pending, and whether a certificate therefore shall issue prior or subsequent to the death of such person, shall, in the case of a person pensioned, or applying for pension, on account of his disabilities or service, be paid, first, to his widow; second, if there is no widow, to his child or children under the age of 16 years at his death; third, in case of a widow, to her minor children under the age of 16 years at her death. Such accrued pension shall not be considered a part of the assets of the estate of such deceased person, nor be liable for the payment of the debts of said estate in any case whatsoever, but shall inure to the sole and exclusive benefit of the widow or children. And if no widow or child survive such pensioner, and in the case of his last surviving child who was such minor at his death, and in case of dependent mother, father, sister, or brother, no payment whatsoever of their accrued pension shall be made or allowed except so much as may be necessary to reimburse the person who bore the expense of their last sickness and burial, if they did not leave sufficient assets to meet such expense. And the mailing of a pension check, drawn by a pension agent in payment of a pension due, to the address of a pensioner, shall constitute payment in the event of the death of a pensioner subsequent to the execution of the voucher therefor. And all prior laws relating to the payment of accrued pension are hereby repealed.

Mr. COCKRELL. I reserve the right to object until I can hear some explanation of what changes the bill proposes to make in existing law.

Mr. PEFFER. I will state for the information of the Senator from Missouri and others that there has been some conflict of decisions in the Pension Office in cases of pensions which have accrued; but which the pensioner had not received at the time of his death as to how they ought to be disposed of. On account of these differences, the Pension Bureau have recommended the passage of this bill. I am informed that there are a number of cases now awaiting the action of Congress upon this bill, so that those cases may be determined in accordance with the provisions of the bill. The object of the bill is to settle ambiguities.

Mr. COCKRELL. Why is the date fixed "from and after the 28th of September, 1892," instead of the date of the passage of the act?

Mr. PEFFER. It is some time since I have examined the bill. I drew the report and copied one or two letters from the Commissioner of Pensions and also one from the Secretary of the Interior, if I remember correctly, in reference to the bill. The report shows that; and I will say to the Senator all that I can state with much clearness now is that the Pension Bureau and the Interior Department both favor the bill.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the report be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read.

The Secretary proceeded to read the report submitted by Mr. PEFFER from the Committee on Pensions, April 10, 1894.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask that merely the letter of the Secretary of the Interior be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, March 29, 1894.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith a draft of a bill which has been prepared as a substitute for the laws now in force disposing of accrued pensions, and to commend the same to the consideration of Congress for enactment into law.

The laws at present on the statute books relating to the disposition of unpaid pension that accrued prior to the death of a pensioner, or that might accrue upon the grant of a pension to a person who had a claim therefor pending in the Pension Office at the date of his death, are found in section 4718 Revised Statutes United States, the act of March 1, 1889, and the third and fourth provisos of the pension appropriation act of June 30, 1890.

The provisions of the laws referred to are more or less ambiguous and uncertain in terms, and admit of several constructions which have given rise to a contrariety of decisions as to their meaning and application and to great difficulty and confusion in their execution, the practice of the Pension Office in the adjudication of such claims having been radically changed more than once.

In the draft of the bill herewith submitted I have endeavored to avoid the difficulties and incongruities which practical experience in their execution has shown to exist in the present laws on the subject of accrued pensions, and also to eliminate such provisions as have resulted in unecessary hardship and injustice.

Very respectfully,

HOKE SMITH, Secretary.

Hon. JOHN M. PALMER,
Chairman Committee on Pensions, United States Senate.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HEIRS OF H. E. SIZER.

Mr. McLAURIN. I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the resolution reported from the Committee on Claims in relation to the heirs of H. E. Sizer. It will call forth no discussion.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution reported from the Committee on Claims by Mr. McLAURIN on the 3d instant, which was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the claim of Eliza H. Gerger and Mary Virginia Roulins, daughters and only heirs at law of H. E. Sizer, deceased, late of Jackson, State of Mississippi, represented by Senate bill No. 1406, with all the papers relating thereto, be, and the same is hereby, referred to the Court of Claims to find the facts, proceeding under existing laws, whether, barring all statutes of limitation, the said claim mentioned in the said Senate bill, or any part thereof, and if so, what part, is, under the laws of the United States, a valid and subsisting claim against the United States.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 2 o'clock and 5 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Wednesday, August 8, 1894, at 12 o'clock m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TUESDAY, August 7, 1894.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by Rev. W. E. PARSON, D. D.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. PICKLER. Mr. Speaker, I desire also to enter a motion to reconsider the vote by which the yeas and nays were ordered on the question before the House at the adjournment last evening, and to have it remain pending until the Indian appropriation bill comes up to-day. I further desire to enter a motion to reconsider the vote by which the House, on the motion of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LYNCH], agreed to the conference report.

The SPEAKER. What is the number of the bill?

Mr. PICKLER. It is the Indian appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER. The motions will be entered and regarded as pending when the bill is reached.

Mr. MADDOX. Mr. Speaker, I did not hear what the gentleman from South Dakota said.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from South Dakota entered a motion to reconsider the vote ordering the yeas and nays, and also a motion to reconsider the vote by which the conference report on the Indian appropriation bill was agreed to.

Mr. PICKLER. Mr. Speaker, perhaps we might dispose of one matter now. I ask unanimous consent that the order by which the yeas and nays were ordered be vacated.

Mr. MADDOX. I suggest that the gentleman withhold that request until the chairman of the committee is present.

TAXATION ON NATIONAL-BANK NOTES, ETC.

The SPEAKER laid before the House an act (H. R. 4326) "to subject to State taxation national-bank notes and United States Treasury notes," with amendments of the Senate thereto.

Mr. COOPER of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, the Senate amendments are all formal; none of them go to the substance of the bill; and I move that the House concur.

The SPEAKER. The amendments will be read.

The amendments of the Senate were read.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the bill be read as amended by the Senate.

The Clerk read the bill as amended.

Mr. COOPER of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the amendments of the Senate, and upon that I demand the previous question.

The previous question was ordered. The motion to concur was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. COOPER of Indiana, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Senate amendments were concurred in was laid on the table.

SECTIONS 2401 AND 2403, REVISED STATUTES.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House an act (H. R. 7803) to amend sections 2401 and 2403 of the Revised Statutes with an amendment by the Senate thereto.

The amendment of the Senate was read, as follows:

Page 2, section 2, line 12, after "United States," insert "in the States where the surveys were made."

Mr. McRAE. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. McRAE, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was concurred in was laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE PERDIDO.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House an act (H. R. 7827) to authorize a bridge across the Perdido River between the States of Florida and Alabama with an amendment of the Senate thereto.

Mr. MALLORY. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the Senate amendment be read.

The amendment was read, as follows:

At the end of the bill insert:
"SEC. 3. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved."

Mr. MALLORY. I move that the House concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. MALLORY, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Senate amendment was concurred in was laid on the table.

AMANDA J. LANE.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House an act (H. R. 3033) granting a pension to Amanda J. Lane with an amendment of the Senate thereto.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. Can that bill be allowed to lie on the table and have the right of way to be called up in the future?

The SPEAKER. Only by unanimous consent.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. I ask unanimous consent that the bill lie on the table for the present with the right to be called up hereafter.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, that order will be made.

JAMES FAY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House an act (H. R. 7683) to remove the charge of desertion against James Fay with an amendment of the Senate thereto.

Mr. COOMBS. I move that the Senate amendment, which is merely an amendment of the title, be concurred in.

The Senate amendment changing the title to "An act to correct the naval record of James Fay and grant him an honorable discharge," was concurred in.

MATERIALS AND LABOR FOR PUBLIC WORKS.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (H. R. 86) for the protection of persons furnishing materials and labor for the construction of public works.

The SPEAKER. This bill has been returned from the Senate with amendments, which will be read.

The amendments were read.

Mr. HEARD. Mr. Speaker, I have examined these amendments; and in my judgment they tend to perfect the bill. They have also been examined by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CULBERSON], the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, by which committee the bill was reported, and they have his approval. I therefore move that the amendments be concurred in.

The amendments were concurred in.

LANDS IN ARREDONDO GRANT, COLUMBIA COUNTY, FLA.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following concurrent resolution of the Senate:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, requested to suspend the opening of the lands in the Arredondo grant of 20,000 acres in Columbia County, Fla., to entry under the land laws of the United States until the close of the present Congress, unless there is further legislation with reference thereto before that time.

Mr. COOPER of Florida. I ask unanimous consent that this resolution be considered and passed.

Mr. COOMBS. I should like to hear some explanation of the resolution.

Mr. COOPER of Florida. This resolution simply proposes to suspend any disposition of the lands referred to until Congress can consider the question. This section of our State has been settled by a farming community, and is covered with their homes. It was settled long before I was born. There has been a recent decision of the Interior Department affecting the titles of these lands; and we simply wish to withhold the lands from entry under the public land laws until Congress can consider what may be proper legislation to be adopted with reference to the subject.

Mr. McRAE. I hope the resolution will be considered and adopted.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to consider the resolution; and it was concurred in.

On motion of Mr. COOPER of Florida, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED.

Senate bills of the following titles were laid before the House, read twice, and referred as stated:

A bill (S. 966) to compensate Elihu Root for services rendered by direction of the Attorney-General—to the Committee on Claims.

A bill (S. 1956) granting an increase of pension to Mary Doubleday, widow of Bvt. Maj. Gen. Abner Doubleday—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (S. 1375) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Jeremiah F. Brown—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

A bill (S. 1935) granting a pension to Elizabeth Ellery—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (S. 1584) granting a pension to John Eckland—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (S. 1229) to correct the military record of George Whittaker, late a private of Company C, Twelfth New Jersey Volunteers—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

A bill (S. 1189) for the relief of Capt. Henry C. Seaman—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

A bill (S. 1675) to remove the charge of a dishonorable dismissal after the battle of Stone River standing against the name of L. S. Woodworth, to correct the record and issue him an honorable discharge—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

A bill (S. 2056) granting a pension to Ada J. Schwatka, widow of the late Lieut. Frederick Schwatka—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (S. 1692) granting a pension to William J. Murray—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (S. 2275) granting a pension to Elizabeth New, widow of Jethrow New—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (S. 429) for the relief of George H. Plant, of the District of Columbia—to the Committee on Claims.

Joint resolution (S. R. 68) for the relief of W. D. Mack, a clerk in the Record and Pension Division of the War Department—to the Committee on Claims.

Joint resolution (S. R. 19) authorizing the Secretary of War to correct the military record of Capt. Edward Wheeler, Forty-sixth New York Volunteers—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

A bill (S. 646) for the relief of John O'Keane, of the State of Washington—to the Committee on Claims.

A bill (S. 857) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of James McConnell, late private in Company B, Fifth Regiment Connecticut Infantry—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

A bill (S. 1233) for the relief of Henry Lane—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

A bill (S. 837) for the relief of Albert Locke, alias Shipley—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

A bill (S. 1857) granting an honorable discharge to William B. Barnes, late major of the Eleventh New York Heavy Artillery—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

A bill (S. 473) to remove the charge of desertion from the record of Jeremiah L. Daly—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

A bill (S. 2173) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a United States court in the Indian Territory, and for other purposes," approved March 1, 1889, and an act entitled "An act to provide a temporary government for the Territory of Oklahoma, to enlarge the jurisdiction of the United States court in the Indian Territory, and for other purposes," approved May 2, 1890; to provide for the redistricting of the Indian Territory for judicial purposes, for an additional judge and more United States commissioners, and to prescribe the jurisdiction, duties, and authority of such judges and commissioners, and for other purposes—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

A bill (S. 1885) to extend the privileges of the transportation of dutiable merchandise without appraisement to the city of Ocala, in the State of Florida—to the Committee on Commerce.

MARY DOUBLEDAY.

When the bill (S. 1956) granting an increase of pension to Mary Doubleday, widow of Bvt. Maj. Gen. Abner Doubleday, was laid before the House—

Mr. RYAN. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of this bill.

Mr. KILGORE called for the regular order; and the bill was referred as above stated.

MARINE HOSPITAL SERVICE.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 2280) to amend section 2 of the act approved February 15, 1893, entitled "An act granting additional quarantine powers and imposing additional duties on the Marine Hospital Service."

Mr. DANIELS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read, after which the Chair will ask if there be objection to the request.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 2 of the act approved February 15, 1893, entitled "An act granting additional quarantine powers and imposing additional duties upon the Marine Hospital Service," is hereby amended by adding to the end of said section the following:

"The provisions of this act shall not apply to vessels plying between foreign ports on or near the frontiers of the United States and ports of the United States adjacent thereto; but the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized, when, in his discretion, it is expedient for the preservation of the public health, to establish regulations governing such vessels."

Mr. DANIELS. May I explain the object of the bill?

The SPEAKER. Without objection the gentleman from New York will be permitted to make a brief explanation.

Mr. DANIELS. The object of this bill, Mr. Speaker, is simply to relieve the ferryboats and excursion boats on the northern frontier from the force and effect of the quarantine law which was passed in 1893, as it now stands, and to leave them hereafter subject to the control of the Secretary of the Treasury under any rules and regulations he may make for the purpose of securing the observance of the health laws of the United States.

Along this northern frontier there are upwards of a thousand miles of coast where ferryboats are plying every day from one side of the rivers to the other, and excursion boats are coming and going from the large cities for 10 or 15 miles along the shores of the lakes and returning the same day with passengers and excursionists; and it is the purpose of this act to relieve them from the observance of the requirements of the act of 1893, by which a consular certificate of health is required to be obtained every time they leave the foreign country for our shores, and subject them hereafter to the control of the Secretary of the Treasury, under such regulations as he may regard as necessary to preserve the health laws of the United States.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I do not think there is any objection to the bill.

Mr. COOMBS. None whatever.

Mr. DANIELS. The Secretary of the Treasury recommends its passage as shown by the report.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection the bill was considered, was ordered to a third reading, and being read the third time, was passed.

On motion of Mr. DANIELS, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

REFERENCE OF SENATE BILL.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 2269) providing for the reconveyance by the District Commissioners of certain lands to Andrew J. Curtis and Mary E. Curtis; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

AMANDA J. LANE.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3033) granting a pension to Amanda J. Lane.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the House concur in the Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER. The amendment will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

In lines 4 and 5 strike out the words "subject to the provisions and limitation of the pension laws," and insert "at the rate of $10 per month."

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois moves to concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

VETO MESSAGE, EUGENE WELLS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read, and, with the accompanying bill, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs:

The House of Representatives:

I herewith return without approval House bill No. 2637, entitled "An act for the relief of Eugene Wells, late captain Twelfth Infantry and second lieutenant First Artillery, United States Army."

This bill authorizes the President to nominate and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint the beneficiary therein named a second lieutenant of artillery in the Army of the United States; and it directs that when so appointed he shall be placed upon the retired list, on account of disability, thus dispensing with the usual examination and finding by a retiring board and all other ordinary prerequisites of retirement.

Appointments to the Army under the authority of special legislation which names the proposed appointee, and the purpose of which is the immediate retirement of the appointee, are open to serious objections, though I confess I have been persuaded through sympathy and sentiment, on a number of occasions, to approve such legislation. When, however, it is proposed to make the retirement compulsory and without reference to age or previous examination a most objectionable feature is introduced.

The cases covered by the special enactments referred to are usually such as should, if worthy of any consideration, be provided for under general or private pension laws, leaving the retired list of the Army to serve the legitimate purpose for which it was established.

A recent discussion in the House of Representatives upon a bill similar to the one now before me drew from a member of the House Committee on Military Affairs the declaration that hundreds of such bills were before that committee, and that there were fifty precedents for the passage of the particular one then under discussion.

It seems to me that this condition suggests such an encroachment upon the retired list of the Army as should lead to the virtual abandonment of the legislation referred to.

In addition to the objections to such legislation, based upon sound policy and good administration, there are facts connected with the case covered by the bill now before me which in my judgment forbids its favorable consideration.

The beneficiary named in this bill entered the military service as first lieutenant in 1861. In September or October, 1870, then being a captain, a charge of conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman was preferred against him with a view to his trial on said charge before a court-martial.

The Articles of War provide that any officer convicted of this offense shall be dismissed the service.

The first specification under this charge alleged that Capt. Wells did violently and without just cause or provocation assault First Lieut. P. H. Breslin, "by furiously striking and hitting him (Lieut. Breslin) upon the head with a hickory stick, the butt end of a billiard cue, and did continue the assault (upon Lieut. Breslin) until forced to desist therefrom by First Lieut. Carl Veltenhimer, Fourth United States Infantry, thereby endangering the life of Lieut Breslin and disgracing himself (Capt. Wells) as an officer of the United States Army."

The second specification alleged that Capt. Wells "did become so much under the influence of intoxicating liquor as to behave himself in a scandalous manner by violently attacking the person of First Lieut. P. H. Breslin, Fourth United States Infantry."

These offenses were charged to have been committed on the 3d day of September, 1870, at Fort Fetterman, in Wyoming Territory.

On the 15th day of July, 1870, a law was passed, among other things, to bring about a reduction of the Army, which law provided that the President should, before the 1st day of July, 1871, reduce the number of enlisted men in the Army to 30,000, and authorized him in his discretion to honorably discharge from the service of the United States officers of the Army who might apply therefor, on or before January 1, 1871.

Before the trial by court-martial upon the charge then pending against him, Capt. Wells applied for his discharge under the provision of the law above recited, whereupon the charge against him was withdrawn and canceled, and on the 27th day of October, 1870, his application for a discharge was granted.

On the 6th day of July, 1885, he was again appointed to the Army as second lieutenant in the artillery, against which a remonstrance was made by certain officers in the Army.

In August, 1877, Second Lieut. Wells was charged with being "drunk on duty, in violation of the thirty-eighth article of war."

He was also charged with "conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline."

The first specification under the latter charge alleged that the accused did "engage in an affray with First Lieut. E. Van A. Andruss, First Artillery." The second specification under said charge alleged that the accused addressed his superior officer in a defiant and disrespectful manner, and neglected and hesitated to promptly obey the order of said superior officers.

All these offences were alleged to have been committed at Reading, Pa., on the 2d day of August, 1877.

Soon after these charges were preferred, a court-martial was convened for the trial of the accused thereon. He pleaded not guilty to the charges and specifications, but was convicted of them all, and sentenced "to be dismissed the service of the United States."

On the 6th day of October the proceedings, findings, and sentence of the court-martial were approved by the President, who ordered the sentence to be executed; and on the 13th day of October, 1877, in pursuance thereof, Lieut. Eugene Wells was dismissed from the service.

Since that time repeated efforts have been made to vacate this judgment and restore the dismissed officer to the service. While a number of committees in Congress have made reports favorable to such action, at least two committees have recommended a denial of legislative relief. Both of these reports were made on behalf of House Committees on Military Affairs, by distinguished soldiers who, after patient examination and with an inclination to be not only just but generous to a fellow-soldier, were constrained to recommend a refusal of the application for restoration. One of these reports was made to the Forty-seventh and the other to the Forty-ninth Congress.

I am impressed with the belief that legislation of the kind proposed is of extremely doubtful expediency in any save very exceptional cases; and I am thoroughly convinced by the facts now before me that the discipline and efficiency of our Army, as well as justice to its meritorious members, does not permit my approval, on any ground, of the bill herewith returned.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, August 7, 1894.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. CURTIS of New York, indefinitely, on account of sickness.

To Mr. COFFEEN, indefinitely, on account of sickness.

TITLE TO CERTAIN INDIAN LANDS.

Mr. MADDOX. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill H. R. 7810.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read, after which the Chair will ask if there be objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Whereas certain commissioners appointed and authorized on the part of the United States, have entered into an agreement with the Wichita and affiliated bands of Indians whereby said Indians agree to cede a certain part of their reservation in what is known as the leased district; and

Whereas the commissioners duly appointed and authorized on the part of the United States, have entered into an agreement with the Comanche, Kiowa, and Apache tribes of Indians, whereby said tribes of Indians agree to cede a certain part of their reservation in what is known as the leased district; and

Whereas the said lands agreed to be ceded by the aforesaid tribes of Indians are located between the ninety-eighth and one hundredth degree of west longitude, in Oklahoma Territory, and are located within the territory leased from the Choctaw and Chickasaw tribes in the year 1855 and ceded in 1866; and

Whereas it is claimed by the said Choctaw and Chickasaw tribes that they only ceded said land in trust for the purpose of locating friendly Indians thereon, and that when said land is opened for settlement to other than friendly Indians that the title in said land reverts to them, and that they are entitled to pay for the same; and

Whereas it is claimed by the tribes, that is to say, the Wichita and affiliated bands of Indians, the Comanche, Kiowa, and Apache tribes, that they are the absolute owners of said lands, and deny that the Choctaw and Chickasaw tribes have any right, title, or interest, either legal or equitable, in the same, but, on the contrary, claim that said Choctaw and Chickasaw tribes ceded all their right, title, and interest in the said leased districts to the United States, and that the United States thereby became the absolute owner thereof, and that they, the Wichitas, and affiliated bands, and the Comanche, Kiowa, and Apache tribes, are now the owners of said land; and

Whereas Congress is called upon to ratify said agreement, with a view of opening said lands for settlement; and

Whereas it appears from the claims and contentions of said Indians that the title to the aforesaid lands is unsettled and undetermined, to the end that the Congress of the United States may know the interest, either legal or equitable, of the different parties claiming title thereto, and that the same may be adjudicated and finally settled: Therefore

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Attorney-General of the United States be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to at once bring suit in the supreme court of claims of the District of Columbia, for the purpose of determining the right, title, and interest, either legal or equitable, of the aforesaid tribes of Indians in the lands above mentioned, and that he be authorized and directed to make all of said tribes, or any others that may have any claim or interest therein to said lands, parties defendant to said suit.

SEC. 2. That the Attorney-General cause to be served upon said tribes, through their proper agents or representatives, copies of the original proceedings in the suit so brought sixty days before the hearing thereof, according to the usual method of procedure in said court, and that said tribe or tribes shall be allowed to file their pleas and answer to said suit, and to defend the same in as full and as complete a manner and according to the same rules and methods as now allowed parties litigant in said court.

SEC. 3. That it shall be the duty of the court to hear and determine all the issues arising in said suit, and that the court shall decide fully the right, title, and interest, either legal or equitable, that the aforesaid tribes have in said lands, if any, according to the interpretation of Indian treaties by the Supreme Court of the United States, and shall specify the character and the amount of said interest, if any.

SEC. 4. That any of the parties at interest in said suit shall have the right to appeal direct to the supreme court of appeals of the District of Columbia, and that said courts shall give precedence to this case, and shall hear and determine all the points at issue as early as practicable.

SEC. 5. That the courts shall have full power to assess the costs in this case against the United States.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. McRAE. Mr. Speaker, I move to amend the bill.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Arkansas.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 5, section 1, page 3 of the bill, strike out the words "Supreme court of the District of Columbia" and insert in lieu thereof the words "the Court of Claims." Also in lines 2 and 3, of section 4, page 4, strike out the words "court of appeals of the District of Columbia," and insert in lieu thereof "the Supreme Court of the United States."

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. What is this all about? I wish you would please tell us.

Mr. MADDOX. The objection to the amendment is simply this: This bill was offered by the direction of the Committee on Indian Affairs, and the Supreme Court of the United States can not entertain jurisdiction because it has been so determined in a decision of the court in the case of Gordon vs. United States, decided by Chief Justice Taney himself, the decision being to the effect that the court will not entertain jurisdiction of any case where it had to depend upon an act of Congress to enforce its judgment. When this case is determined that court can not enforce judgment without the aid of Congress, and that being true, the Supreme Court, under its own decision, can not entertain jurisdiction. We tried to get it there; it was our purpose to get it there, and was advised by the Assistant Attorney-General, but we found that this could not be done.

Mr. McRAE. Mr. Speaker, I am not familiar with the case to which the gentleman refers. It seems to me, however, that, as this is a bill to confer jurisdiction, we can select the court we want. It is very questionable to my mind whether there ought to be any reference of this matter to the courts at all; but if we can pass a bill conferring jurisdiction on the supreme court of the District of Columbia, we can upon the Court of Claims. If there is any necessity for litigation, let us have such litigation as the country will respect, and as the Indians will be bound by. Let us submit it to the Court of Claims with the right of appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, if we are to have it done at all. Congress can confer the jurisdiction, I think, and if it can, I hope it will be done, as my amendment provides.

Mr. MADDOX. In face of the decision of the Assistant Attorney-General and Supreme Court that can not be done. We wanted the bill that way, and were perfectly willing that the bill should be so drawn. We tried to get it to the Supreme Court of the United States, but could not.

Mr. Speaker, so far as the necessity for the suit is concerned, if I can get the attention of the House, I think I can show that in a very few minutes. It will be remembered by the older members of this House, at least those who served two years ago, that the Government entered into a treaty with the Cheyennes and Arapahoes in what is now known as Oklahoma Territory, by which we agreed to pay them a certain sum for their reservation and to locate them, or in other words let them take allotments in that land, and when that was done the Choctaws and Chickasaws came before this body and made a claim for $2,900,000, which was advocated by the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. Peel] at that time; and they not only advocated, but succeeded in passing a bill through this body authorizing this Government to pay it, and we did pay for it; and now they claim a reversionary interest in this land.

Now, we have two treaties—one between the Comanches and Kiowas, and the Wichita and affiliated bands, and these Chickasaws and Choctaws have the very same claim to this land that they had to the Cheyenne and Arapaho Reservations. Now, before we ratify these treaties it was the opinion of the Committee on Indian Affairs that we ought to have a decision of some competent court of this country to determine the fact as to whether these people had title or not.

It will be remembered that President Harrison decided they had no title to this property and he refused to sign a bill on that ground, because they did not have that title. He was supported in that decision by Secretary Noble, and he is now supported in the same decision by the present Secretary of the Interior.

The Choctaws and Chickasaws claim that they have a remainder interest in this land, and on that they have a precedent in the action of this House, by a large majority, saying that they have got it. So it was the opinion of the Committee on Indian Affairs that this question should be submitted to the courts of this country and let that questson be determined, and if they have a remainder interest, as they claim to have, let us treat with them before we go so far that we can not well retract. That is the purpose of the legislation. It was the purpose of our committee to have that case decided in the Supreme Court, if possible; but we found that we could not do that, as there were two decisions of the court which precluded our doing so.

Mr. HOLMAN. And if we could do that there would be a great deal of delay.

Mr. MADDOX. Yes; and there would be a great deal of delay if we could; but notwithstanding that, we wanted to do it that way. It was our purpose to have it go there, and we found that we could not do it on account of two decisions that had been rendered.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. Will the gentleman yield to me for five minutes?

Mr. MADDOX. Yes, sir; I will.

I want to say, further, that the Committee on Indian Affairs have no desire to evade the Supreme Court of the United States, because it was our purpose to go there; but we found we could not do that, as there were two different decisions of the Supreme Court to that effect. We had the decision of the Assistant Attorney-General of the Interior Department himself, who gave that opinion, which I have here.

Mr. HOLMAN. And he framed this bill.

Mr. MADDOX. We amended it according to his decision, and brought it in according to his recommendation. The bill as originally framed by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CURTIS] and myself set out with the determination to bring the case exactly as the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. McRAE] wants it to be brought now, but we found that we could not do it, and we had to take this direction under the law. That is the reason why we propose to bring it in the district court now, with the right to appeal to the court of appeals of the District.

Mr. FLYNN. In the event that you ratify the treaty pending before you, to which this legislation refers, and open up those lands to settlement, the claims of these people, if they have any, will not be interfered with a particle, will they?

Mr. MADDOX. Not at all.

Mr. FLYNN. Then there has been nothing to hinder the ratification of those treaties and a favorable report from your committee except the view of the committee that they wanted this kind of legislation.

Mr. MADDOX. We simply wanted to have the question of title settled before we went into this business. We did not want to have to pay for this land twice.

Mr. FLYNN. I have no desire to see the land paid for twice. All I desire is the land. The committee decided that this was the only bill they would report, and as it seems to me the nearest way to accomplish the purpose, I think the bill ought to pass. But I do not want it to go to any court where it will hang fire for eight or ten years.

Mr. MADDOX. I think you are right about that. Mr. Speaker, I retain the balance of my time, yielding five minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON].

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I ask the attention of the House for a few moments. I am in harmony with this bill, and I ask this side of the House to give it support for the following reasons: In the Fifty-first Congress a bill was passed, in connection with the Indian appropriation bills, under the leadership of the gentleman from Arkansas, who is not now in Congress [Mr. Peel], giving, as I recollect, over $2,000,000 to these Indians——

Mr. HOLMAN. Two million nine hundred thousand dollars.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. The gentleman from Indiana suggests $2,900,000. A bill was passed giving that amount to the Choctaws and Chickasaws for an alleged claim that they had in certain lands, the Government having by treaty compensated them for those lands and having paid the Arapahoes for them also. I recollect that fight very well. It was on a Senate amendment to the Indian appropriation bill, the second session Fifty-first Congress, in the last hours of the session, and could not be vetoed by the President without vetoing the whole appropriation bill; this being one of the items of the appropriation bill, was approved by the President, he stating that he would not pay the money without further action of Congress, which action was had by the Fifty-second Congress. And this action was had in the teeth of the statement of both the Secretary of the Interior and the President that these Indians had no interest in the land. I well recollect the vote by which the bill was carried here, the House almost evenly divided, with substantially a solid Democratic vote for the bill with a sprinkling of Republicans——

Mr. HOLMAN. Oh, no.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. Oh, yes; the gentleman from Indiana, however, voted against it.

Now, then, with a House strongly Democratic, you gentlemen come here and confess your error; and this side of the House, not following the example of the Democrats on that occasion, will, I hope, cooperate with you to pass this bill, and let the rights of these Indians in these lands, if they have any, be settled. That is the only proper and, in my judgment, the only honest thing to do. Therefore I shall vote for the bill.

Mr. McRAE. Mr. Speaker, I have stated that I do not know whether there is any necessity for this bill or not. I have very serious doubt as to whether it ought to pass, but I have not seen fit to object to its consideration. I believe the treaty with these Indians ought to be ratified and the lands opened to settlement, and I regret very much that the Committee on Indian Affairs have struck this legal difficulty, which will of course delay the matter. But as it appears to be the deliberate judgment of the committee and of the Interior Department that the legal question should be submitted to the courts, I have not objected, and stand ready to aid in bringing about a speedy decision. I am, therefore, in favor of the bill, but I want it so amended that Congress and the people of the country will have respect for the decision of the court which passes upon it, and so that we can afford to legislate upon it. The bill as it stands confers upon the supreme court of the District of Columbia jurisdiction to pass upon the questions involved in Indian treaties and Indian contracts, and to settle questions arising between two tribes of Indians.

That is a matter entirely foreign to the purposes for which these courts were organized, and is unusual and unprecedented. We have never undertaken to confer such jurisdiction upon them before. All matters of this kind have heretofore gone to the Court of Claims, with the right of appeal from the Court of Claims to the Supreme Court of the United States. The questions involved in the French spoliation claims and like matters have taken that course, and I believe that this matter ought to take that course, unless it is perfectly clear that we can not give them jurisdiction. I do not understand why we have not the same power over the Court of Claims as over the District courts.

Mr. MADDOX. Mr. Speaker, I hope the amendment will not be adopted, because the effect of it would be simply to kill the bill, if I understand the decision of the Supreme Court, and if the Assistant Attorney-General understands it. We would have no objection to this matter taking the course suggested by the gentleman from Arkansas if the Court of Claims had jurisdiction, or if there could be an appeal from that tribunal to the Supreme Court, but that court itself has held that it can not and will not take jurisdiction of such questions. This is not in any sense a claim, and it is not within the jurisdiction of that court. I repeat, therefore, that I hope the amendment will not be adopted. I now demand the previous question on the amendment and on the bill to its passage.

The previous question was ordered.

The amendment of Mr. McRAE was again read.

Mr. FLYNN. Does that retain the provision that the court shall give the matter immediate consideration?

The SPEAKER. The previous question having been ordered, debate is not in order.

Mr. FLYNN. I was merely asking a question for information as to what the bill contained.

The SPEAKER. That is in the nature of debate.

The amendment of Mr. McRAE was rejected.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. MADDOX, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT.

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by Mr. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, who also informed the House that the President had approved and signed bills and joint resolutions of the following titles:

On August 3, 1894:

An act (H. R. 650) to remove the charge of desertion standing against Oliver O'Brien;

An act (H. R. 6754) to amend section 15 of an act approving, with amendments, the funding act of Arizona, approved June 25, 1890;

An act (H. R. 7753) to exempt the articles of foreign exhibitors at the interstate fair at Tacoma, Wash., from the payment of duties; and

An act (H. R. 2795) to amend section 5 of the act approved June 18, 1878, entitled "An act to organize the Life-Saving Service."

On August 4, 1894:

An act (H. R. 4561) granting a pension to Harriet T. Vosburgh;

An act (H. R. 3487) granting an increase of pension to Eliza K. Starr;

An act (H. R. 1196) to pension Mary E. Trickey;

An act (H. R. 5351) granting a pension to Celestia P. Hartt;

An act (H. R. 5020) granting a pension to Washington Hislop;

An act (H. R. 1686) granting a pension to Margaret English;

An act (H. R. 4567) establishing a fog signal at Kewaunee, Wis.;

An act (H. R. 366) providing for the sale of the old custom-house and lot connected therewith in the city of Louisville, Ky.;

An act (H. R. 5312) authorizing the construction of a light-ship, with fog signal, to be established to the eastward of Boston light, Massachusetts, and for the establishment of range-lights in Boston Harbor, Massachusetts;

An act (H. R. 7518) to amend an act to authorize the construction of a steel bridge over the St. Louis River, between the States of Minnesota and Wisconsin;

An act (H. R. 6969) for the relief of Benjamin F. Poteet;

An act (H. R. 6719) to provide for the validation of affidavits made before the United States commissioners in all land entries;

An act (H. R. 4448) for the relief of persons who have filed declarations of intention to enter desert lands;

An act (H. R. 7335) to grant to the Arkansas, Texas and Mexican Central Railway Company a right of way through the Indian Territory, and for other purposes;

Joint resolution (H. Res. 207) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to approve a certain lease made in Polk County, Minn.;

An act (H. R. 1461) to remove the charge of desertion from the record of Andrew L. Grugett as a former member of Company E, Sixth Tennessee Cavalry, in the war of the rebellion, and to grant him an honorable discharge therefrom;

An act (H. R. 4346) extending the benefits of the marine hospitals to the keepers and crews of life-saving stations;

An act (H. R. 4903) to authorize a compromise and settlement with the State of Arkansas.

On August 6, 1894:

An act (H. R. 6373) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895, and for other purposes;

An act (H. R. 4606) to amend sections 5365 and 5366 of the Revised Statutes relating to barratry on the high seas;

An act (H. R. 7071) to exempt the property of the Young Men's Christian Association of the District of Columbia from taxation;

An act (H. R. 213) to pay for alley condemned in square No. 493, in the city of Washington, D. C.; and Joint resolution (H. Res. 121) authorizing proper officers of the Treasury Department to examine and certify claims in favor of certain counties in Arizona.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed with amendments the bill (H. R. 5246) providing for the inspection of immigrants by United States consuls, asked a conference with the House on the bill and amendments, and had appointed Mr. HILL, Mr. FAULKNER, and Mr. CHANDLER as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments the bill (H. R. 6415) to provide an immediate revision and equalization of real-estate values in the District of Columbia; also to provide an assessment of real estate in said District in the year 1896, and every third year thereafter, asked a conference with the House on the bill and amendments, and had appointed Mr. HUNTON, Mr. FAULKNER, and Mr. PROCTOR as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. PEARSON, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills and joint resolutions of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (H. R. 2896) for the relief of Henry James, residing in the original Hot Springs Reservation, in the State of Arkansas;

A bill (H. R. 6518) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 6937) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895;

A bill (H. R. 522) for the relief of Benjamin Alford;

A bill (H. R. 855) to amend an act granting a pension to Elizabeth Voss;

A bill (H. R. 856) granting an increase of pension to John Stockwell;

A bill (H. R. 953) to increase the pension of Mary P. Broughton;

A bill (H. R. 1313) to increase the pension of John Scott;

A bill (H. R. 1463) granting a pension to Mrs. Lucinda C. Wheeler, widow of John H. Wheeler;

A bill H. R. 1717) granting a pension to Eliza Holmes;

A bill (H. H. 2108) to perfect the military record of Warren Alonzo Alden;

A bill (H. R. 2133) to correct the military record of Capt. E. M. Ives;

A bill (H. R. 3076) granting a pension to George L. Frymire;

A bill (H. R. 3032) to remove the charge of desertion from the record of John A. Jack;

A bill (H. R. 3065) to increase the pension of James Lane;

A bill (H. R. 3309) to pension Ambrose Giseburt;

A bill (H. R. 3840) to pension Joel A. Walters;

A bill (H. R. 3992) to increase the pension of Julia Bews;

A bill (H. R. 4780) to pension Thankful Robbins;

A bill (H. R. 4811) to pension Mary Trimble;

A bill (H. R. 5374) granting a pension to Sarah Oddy;

A bill (H. R. 5816) granting a pension to Mary Ann Donoghue;

A bill (H. R. 6206) granting a pension to A. F. Neely;

A bill (H. R. 6213) to pension Harriet R. Tate;

A bill (H. R. 6384) for the relief of Walter S. McLeod;

A bill (H. R. 6405) to remove the charge of desertion standing against Patrick Kelleher, late private Company C, Thirty-eighth Illinois Volunteers;

A bill (H. R. 6542) to change the lines between the eastern and western judicial districts of North Carolina, and fixing time for holding courts in said eastern district; and

A bill (H. R. 7187) to make the city of Oakland, county of Alameda, State of California, a subport of entry.

A bill (S. 876) granting a pension to Rebecca H. Chambers;

A bill (S. 470) for the relief of George H. Jewett, of Arlington, Washington County, Nebr.;

A bill (S. 1640) granting a pension to Otis Smith;

A bill (S. 2217) to provide for the closing of a part of an alley in square 185, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia; and

A bill (S. 16) granting a pension to Nettie N. Seaver.

JAMES E. NORTH.

Mr. HAINER of Nebraska. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 1949) for the relief of James E. North.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to pay to James E. North, of the State of Nebraska, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $489.11, due him from the United States for services as collector of internal revenue for the district of Nebraska, from the 4th day of November to the 13th day of December, 1893, inclusive.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Let us hear some explanation of this.

Mr. HAINER of Nebraska. In the report there is a letter from Hon. Joseph S. Miller, Commissioner of Internal Revenue. I ask that the letter be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 19, 1894.

SIR: In reply to your letter of the 6th instant asking information in regard to the course of procedure necessary to be taken in the matter of recovering the $489.11, personal salary, disallowed for the period from November 4 to December 13, 1893, you are advised that as you failed to renew the oath of office November 4 (the day after the adjournment of the extra session of Congress), as directed in the telegram from this office of that date, until December 13, the only course that now appears to be left is for you to apply to Congress for relief, as is the practice in similar cases.

Your accounts for the period from October 1 to November 3 and from November 4 to December 31, 1893, were rendered strictly in accordance with the instructions in the letter from this office of December 6, 1893, and had the oath been taken (see section 1769, Revised Statutes, as to the termination of temporary appointments) the difference would have been obviated, but it is thought that no difficulty is in the way of getting the required relief; application for which should be made without unnecessary delay.

Respectfully,

JOS. S. MILLER, Commissioner.

J. E. NORTH, Esq.,
Collector Internal Revenue, Omaha, Nebr.

Mr. HAINER of Nebraska. This bill has been considered by the Committee on Claims of this House, and a unanimous report in favor of its passage has been made by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. COX], to whom I will gladly yield for further explanation if any be needed.

Mr. COX. As the gentleman asks me to make a statement in regard to this matter, I will say that this bill has been favorably considered by the Committee on Claims. The circumstances are these: The claimant was appointed a revenue collector under the law, but before he was confirmed the extra session of the Senate adjourned. He was notified to take an additional oath, but he failed to do this in pursuance of the telegram sent to him. He, however, entered upon the duties of the office and discharged them continuously.

Afterward he was duly confirmed. This bill proposes to pay him compensation for services actually performed by him before confirmation, and when he had not taken the oath required. He had already taken one oath; and he thought that obviated the necessity for taking an additional oath. The amount is $489, and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue recognizes the claim as absolutely just.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill; which was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. HAINER of Nebraska, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

OWNERS OF SCHOONER HENRY R. TILTON, ETC.

Mr. FIELDER. I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3275) for the relief of the owners of the schooner Henry R. Tilton and of personal effects thereon.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to ascertain, as soon as practicable, what was the reasonable value of the schooner Henry R. Tilton and the proportion thereof belonging to each of her several owners at the time she was sunk by a deflected projectile from a gun on the United States proving grounds at Sandy Hook, on or about the 9th day of July, 1892; and he shall, in like manner, ascertain what was the reasonable value of the personal effects of each of the several officers and sailors on the said schooner at the time of her sinking as aforesaid; and he shall report to the Secretary of the Treasury the several amounts so ascertained; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to pay, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the owners of the said schooner the value thereof so ascertained and reported as herein prescribed: Provided, That the aggregate amount so reported as the value of said schooner does not exceed $10,000, less the amount of the net proceeds of the sale of the schooner; and he shall pay to the officers and crew of said schooner the several sums so ascertained to have been the value of their personal effects lost: Provided, That the aggregate of said several sums shall not exceed $1,000: Provided further, That all and each of said several amounts shall be received by the persons herein described in full satisfaction of all their claims against the United States on account of the loss of the said schooner Henry R. Tilton.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. KILGORE. It seems to me this is a bill of too much importance to be called up for consideration by unanimous consent. I demand the regular order.

Mr. LOUD. I hope the gentleman will withdraw that demand for a moment. This is one of the clearest and plainest cases that ever came before Congress.

Mr. DOCKERY. I think there is merit in this claim, but it seems to me the bill ought to be amended. As now drawn, it gives the Secretary of the Treasury authority to pay these claims without further action of Congress. It seems to me he should simply be authorized to ascertain the amounts which appear to be due and report the matter to Congress for its action.

Mr. LOUD. It seems to me we can trust the Secretary of the Treasury to ascertain what ought to be paid these parties, and to settle with them.

Mr. KILGORE. That is not, however, the common practice. It is usually left to Congress to take final action with regard to payments.

Mr. LOUD. I hope the gentleman from Texas [Mr. KILGORE] will allow me two or three moments to explain this case. I have some interest in it because I objected to it when an effort was made heretofore to call it up. I objected then on the ground that the bill had not come from the Committee on Claims.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the gentleman from California [Mr. LOUD] will be permitted to make a brief explanation.

There was no objection.

Mr. LOUD. This schooner was sunk about two years ago by a shell from the proving grounds at Sandy Hook. Probably most of the members of the House recollect the circumstance. The officer who was in charge of the practice going on at the time stated in his evidence that before firing he scanned the horizon and that there was not a vessel within a mile. They were then firing into the sand on the beach. This shell, in its course of 5 miles, deflected a mile out of the direct line, struck this schooner on the side next the port about six or eight feet above the water line, and went through the vessel, coming out on the other side below the water line, thus sinking her.

Mr. KILGORE. Now, I understand that the court reported that this shell, in order to have struck the vessel, must have deviated from any ordinary line known to physics or philosophy in order to get there.

Mr. LOUD. The report of the officer shows that this vessel was sunk by a shot fired from a Government gun during target practice.

Mr. COOMBS. There is no doubt about that.

Mr. LOUD. It is a fact that this man was sailing his vessel in the harbor of New York attending to his own business, and a shell from the United States gun sunk his ship.

Mr. KILGORE. Is it conclusive that the vessel was sunk by a shot fired under such circumstances?

Mr. LOUD. There is no question about it.

Mr. GORMAN. No doubt whatever.

Mr. LOUD. And a letter from the engineer officer is on file which substantiates all the facts.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. In addition to that, let me suggest that the value of this vessel has been investigated in the United States court on the question of salvage.

Mr. GORMAN. By four suits I think.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. And it has been already determined as accurately as anything can possibly be determined, or as this could be by any further investigation, as to what the value of the vessel is. The discretion lodged in the Secretary of War is that he shall investigate as to the rights, and determine the question of ownership of the vessel, so that nothing more is paid than the party is entitled to receive. It is as just a bill as was ever before this or any other Congress.

Mr. BUNN. And the amount is not to exceed that mentioned in the bill.

Mr. KILGORE. Is it a rule that the Government shall be held responsible for the negligence of Government officials, or the agents of the Government?

Mr. LOUD. I think it should be held liable in a case of this character.

Mr. FIELDER. Undoubtedly it ought to be.

Mr. KILGORE. The rule is the other way. If you establish that rule here, by such action as this bill proposes, there is no knowing where it is going to end.

Mr. BUNN. This officer was in the line of duty, and following the direction given him by his superior officers to pursue a system of target practice, when this vessel was sunk.

Mr. KILGORE. Then it was an accident?

Mr. BUNN. Certainly.

Mr. KILGORE. The Government ought not to be held liable for an accident merely.

Mr. COOMBS. It certainly should be in such a case as this.

Mr. KILGORE. Very well, I will not insist upon the demand for the regular order if gentlemen want to consider the bill.

Mr. FIELDER. The Senate committee have reported favorably, and the bill passed the Senate.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill? Does the Chair understand the gentleman from Texas to withdraw the demand for the regular order?

Mr. KILGORE. I withdraw it.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to be engrossed, and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time.

Mr. LOUD. There is a Senate bill, Mr. Speaker, which has been reported from the committee.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New Jersey did not send up the Senate bill

Mr. LOUD. It is on the Calendar.

Mr. FIELDER. I move to substitute the Senate bill for the House bill.

The SPEAKER. Is it identical with the House bill?

Mr. FIELDER. Yes, sir.

Mr. LOUD. Identical in all respects.

The SPEAKER. Then the action of the House will be reconsidered, if there be no objection, on this bill, and the question will be on the third reading of the Senate bill, the title of which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 201) for the relief of the owners of the schooner Henry R. Tilton and of personal effects thereon.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, and being read the third time, was passed.

On motion of Mr. FIELDER, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. The House bill will be laid on the table.

MACK SACKRIDER.

Mr. WEADOCK. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask consent for the present consideration of the resolution I send to the desk.

The SPEAKER. The resolution will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House of Representatives be directed to pay out of the contingent fund of the House to the mother of Mack Sackrider, deceased, late a page in the House of Representatives, a sum equal to his salary for six months; and that the Clerk be directed to pay out of the contingent fund of the House the expenses of the late illness and funeral of the said Mack Sackrider; said expenses not to exceed $250.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

There being no objection, the resolution was considered and agreed to.

On motion of Mr. WEADOCK, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. KILGORE. I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The previous question was ordered on a conference report which comes over, and is the regular order.

The Clerk will report the title of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 6913) making appropriations for current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. The yeas and nays were ordered upon a motion of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. ALLEN] to concur in the Senate amendments. The gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. PICKLER] entered a motion this morning to reconsider the vote by which the yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. PICKLER. I ask consent to withdraw that motion.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman withdraws that motion. The gentleman also entered a motion to reconsider the vote by which the partial report of the committee of conference was agreed to.

Mr. PICKLER. Would not that come up after the other motion was disposed of?

The SPEAKER. No; the House can not pass upon the question of concurrence or otherwise until that matter has been disposed of.

Mr. PICKLER. I withdraw that.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman withdraws that. So that the question, then, would recur upon the motion of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. ALLEN] that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate and agree to the same.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to make the privileged motion to reconsider the vote by which the report of the committee of conference was agreed to, and also to move that that motion lie on the table.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, that order willbe made.

Mr. PICKLER. I object to that.

The SPEAKER. Then the question will be on the motion to lay on the table.

Mr. PICKLER. I will withdraw my objection.

The SPEAKER. The question now is, then, on the motion of the gentleman from Mississippi that the House recede from its disagreement to the Senate amendments and agree to the same. Perhaps the Clerk had better report the amendments. [After a pause.] If gentlemen do not desire it the amendments will not be reported.

Mr. TRACEY. Let them be reported.

Mr. PICKLER. They are lengthy treaties.

The SPEAKER. Unless demanded the amendments will not be reported.

There was no further demand.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia, Mr. MADDOX, and the gentleman from Mississippi, Mr. ALLEN, will please act as tellers, and on this question the yeas and nays have been ordered.

Mr. MADDOX. I ask that the gentleman from Wisconsin, Mr. LYNCH, act as teller in my place.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

Mr. PICKLER. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. PICKLER. To vote "yea" recedes from the disagreement and agrees to the Senate amendments, as I understand it.

The SPEAKER. That is right.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope the motions will be again stated. One is that the House insist on, and the other is that the House recede from, its disagreement on the Senate amendments.

The SPEAKER. There is but one motion.

Mr. HOLMAN. Well, practically there are really two.

The SPEAKER. The motion of the gentleman from Mississippi is that the House recede from its disagreement. The vote can only be taken on one motion. If the House agrees to the motion of the gentleman from Mississippi, that passes the bill. If the House disagrees to it, then that is a further insistence on the part of the House. A negative vote on the motion to recede amounts to an affirmative vote on the motion to nonconcur.

Mr. PICKLER. Regular order.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 133, nays 103; not voting 115; as follows:

YEAS—133.

Adams, Pa.	Dalzell,	Hermann,	Post,
Aitken,	Daniels,	Hitt,	Powers,
Alderson,	Davey,	Hopkins, Pa.	Price,
Aldrich,	Davis,	Houk,	Quigg,
Allen,	Dolliver,	Hulick,	Randall,
Apsley,	Doolittle,	Hull,	Ray,
Avery,	Draper,	Izlar,	Reed,
Babcock,	Dunn,	Johnson, Ind.	Reyburn,
Baker, Kans.	Durborow,	Johnson, N. Dak.	Ritchie,
Baker, N. H.	Ellis, Oregon	Kem,	Robinson, Pa.
Barthoidt,	English, Cal.	Kiefer,	Russell, Conn.
Bartlett,	Everett,	Kyle,	Ryan,
Beltzhoover,	Fielder,	Layton,	Scranton,
Bingham,	Fletcher,	Lefever,	Settle,
Blair,	Funk,	Loud,	Smith,
Boen,	Fyan,	Loudenslager,	Springer,
Boutelle,	Geary,	Lucas,	Stephenson,
Bowers, Cal.	Geissenhainer,	Mallory,	Stone, C. W.
Broderick,	Gillet, N. Y.	Marsh,	Straus,
Brosius,	Griffin,	Marvin, N. Y.	Strong,
Bryan,	Grout,	McCall,	Tawney,
Bundy,	Grow,	McCleary, Minn.	Van Voorhis, N.Y.
Burrows,	Hager,	McKeighan,	Wanger,
Cannon, Cal.	Hainer,	Mercer,	Warner,
Cannon, Ill.	Hall, Minn.	Meyer,	Waugh,
Caruth	Hall, Mo.	Money,	Wheeler, Ill.
Catchings,	Harmer,	Murray,	Williams, Miss.
Childs,	Harris,	Mutchler,	Wilson, Wash.
Clancy,	Hartman,	Northway,	Woomer,
Cockrell,	Haugen,	Payne,	Wright, Mass.
Cogswell,	Heard,	Pence,	Wright, Pa.
Cooper, Wis.	Heiner,	Perkins,
Culberson,	Henderson, Iowa	Phillips,
Curtis, Kans.	Hepburn,	Pickler,

NAYS—103.

Alexander,	Bynum,	Dockery,	Hatch,
Arnold,	Cabaniss,	Donovan,	Henderson, N. C.
Baldwin,	Cadmus,	Ellis, Ky.	Holman,
Barnes,	Caminetti,	Enloe,	Hudson,
Barwig,	Capehart,	Epes,	Hunter,
Bell, Tex.	Clark, Mo.	Fithian,	Hutcheson,
Berry,	Coombs,	Forman,	Johnson, Ohio
Black, Ga.	Cooper, Ind.	Goldzier,	Jones,
Branch,	Cox,	Gorman,	Kilgore,
Bretz,	Crawford,	Grady,	Lane,
Brickner,	Cummings,	Haines,	Lawson,
Brookshire,	De Armond,	Hammond,	Lester,
Brown,	De Forest,	Hare,	Livingston,
Lynch,	Moore,	Richardson, Tenn.	Terry,
Maddox,	Morgan,	Robbins,	Tracey,
Maguire,	Neill,	Robertson, La.	Tucker,
Martin, Ind.	O'Neill, Mass.	Sayers,	Turner, Va.
McCreary, Ky.	Outhwaite,	Shell,	Tyler,
McCulloch,	Page,	Snodgrass,	Washington,
McDannold,	Paschal,	Sperry,	Weadock,
McDearmon,	Patterson,	Strait,	Wells,
McEttrick,	Paynter,	Swanson,	Williams, Ill.
McKaig,	Pearson,	Talbert, S. C.	Wise,
McLaurin,	Pendleton, Tex.	Talbott, Md.	Wolverton,
McNagny,	Pigott,	Tarsney,	Woodard.
McRae,	Richards, Ohio	Teat,

NOT VOTING—115.

Abbott,	Curtis, N. Y.	Linton,	Sibley,
Adams, Ky.	Denson,	Lockwood,	Sickles,
Bailey,	Dingley,	Magner,	Simpson,
Bankhead,	Dinsmore,	Mahon,	Sipe,
Belden,	Dunphy,	Marshall,	Somers,
Bell, Colo.	Edmunds,	McAleer,	Sorg,
Black, Ill.	English, N. J.	McDowell,	Stallings,
Bland,	Erdman,	McGann,	Stevens,
Boatner,	Gardner,	McMillin	Stockdale,
Bower, N. C.	Gear,	Meiklejohn,	Stone, W. A.
Breckinridge, Ark.	Gillett, Mass.	Meredith,	Stone, Ky.
Breckinridge, Ky.	Goodnight,	Milliken,	Storer,
Bunn,	Graham,	Montgomery,	Sweet,
Burnes,	Gresham,	Moon,	Taylor, Ind.
Campbell,	Grosvenor,	Morse,	Taylor, Tenn.
Causey,	Harter,	Moses,	Thomas,
Chickering,	Hayes,	Newlands,	Turner, Ga.
Clarke, Ala.	Henderson, Ill.	Oates,	Turpin,
Cobb Ala.	Hendrix,	Ogden,	Updegraff,
Cobb, Mo.	Hicks,	O'Neill, Mo.	Van Voorhis, Ohio
Cockran,	Hines,	Pendleton, W. Va.	Wadsworth,
Coffeen,	Hooker, Miss.	Rayner,	Walker,
Conn,	Hooker, N. Y.	Reilly,	Wever,
Cooper, Fla.	Hopkins, Ill.	Richardson, Mich.	Wheeler, Ala.
Cooper, Tex.	Ikirt,	Rusk,	White,
Cornish,	Kribbs,	Russell, Ga.	Whiting,
Cousins,	Lacey,	Schermerhorn,	Wilson, Ohio.
Covert,	Lapham,	Shaw,	Wilson, W. Va.
Crain,	Latimer,	Sherman,

The following pairs were announced:

Until further notice:

Mr. OATES with Mr. STORER.

Mr. WILSON of West Virginia with Mr. DINGLEY.

Mr. RUSSELL of Georgia with Mr. MOON.

Mr. CRAIN with Mr. SHERMAN.

Mr. MCALEER with Mr. WANGER.

Mr. SORG with Mr. HICKS.

Mr. MONTGOMERY with Mr. MORSE.

Mr. BLACK of Illinois with Mr. CURTIS of New York.

Mr. BLACK of Georgia with Mr. HOOKER of New York.

Mr. TAYLOR of Indiana with Mr. BELDEN.

Mr. COBB of Alabama with Mr. SHAW.

Mr. DENSON with Mr. THOMAS.

Mr. SCHERMERHORN with Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee.

Mr. MCMILLIN with Mr. HOUK.

Mr. GRESHAM with Mr. MAHON.

Mr. WHEELER of Alabama with Mr. WRIGHT of Pennsylvania.

Mr. MOSES with Mr. WADSWORTH.

Mr. WHITING with Mr. WHITE.

Mr. STONE of Kentucky with Mr. GEAR.

Mr. GOODNIGHT with Mr. WALKER.

Mr. CLARKE of Alabama with Mr. HENDERSON of Illinois.

Mr. STOCKDALE with Mr. BRODERICK.

Mr. STALLINGS with Mr. SCRANTON.

Mr. TURPIN with Mr. GILLETT of Massachusetts.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE of Arkansas with Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois.

Mr. LOCKWOOD with Mr. WEVER.

Mr. COFFIN with Mr. LACEY.

For this day:

Mr. TURNER of Georgia with Mr. CHICKERING.

Mr. CAMPBELL with Mr. MEIKLEJOHN.

Mr. CONN with Mr. MCDOWELL.

Mr. BLAND with Mr. APSLEY.

Mr. COVERT with Mr. SMITH of Illinois.

Mr. CORNISH with Mr. GROSVENOR.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

On motion of Mr. ALLEN, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the House receded from the disagreement to the Senate amendments and agreed to the same was laid on the table. [Applause.]

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. RUSSELL of Georgia, indefinitely.

To Mr. STEVENS, indefinitely.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will call the committees for reports.

INDIAN DEPREDATION CLAIMS.

Mr. TERRY, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported back with a favorable recommendation a bill (H. R. 7690) to amend sections 4 and 5 of an act entitled "An act to provide for the adjudication and payment of claims arising from Indian depredations, approved March 3, 1891;" which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

NATURALIZATION OF JAPANESE.

Mr. LANE, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported back adversely a bill (H. R. 7630) to enable persons of Japanese descent to become citizens of the United States; which was laid on the table, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

SETTLERS IN SEQUOIA AND YOSEMITE PARKS.

On motion of Mr. McRAE, the Committee on the Public Lands was discharged from further consideration of the bill (H. R. 5747) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to ascertain damages resulting to any person who made entry upon lands within the present limits of the Sequoia and Yosemite National Parks, in the State of California, prior to October 1, 1890, and the bill was referred to the Committee on Claims.

ADVERSE REPORTS.

Mr. McRAE, from the Committee on the Public Lands, reported back adversely bills of the following titles; which were severally laid on the table, and the accompanying reports ordered to be printed:

A bill (H. R. 5187) granting to the Fort Jesup Masonic College, Louisiana, for school purposes, the lands remaining unsold in the abandoned military reservation at Fort Jesup, Sabine Parish, La.

A bill (H. R. 6414) to amend section 1 of the act of May 14, 1890, so as to harmonize the town-site acts and settle the question of jurisdiction.

A bill (H. R. 5652) setting aside section 13, township 27 north, range 2 east, of Indian meridian, for university purposes.

A bill (H. R. 6106) to extend the mineral-land laws of the United States to lands embraced within reservations created by Presidential proclamations, and for other purposes.

A bill (H. R. 6379) authorizing settlers on the Cherokee Outlet to commute their homestead entries, and for other purposes.

WILLAMETTE VALLEY AND CASCADE MOUNTAIN W. R. COMPANY.

Mr. McRAE, also from the same committee, reported back adversely an act S. 1649; which was indefinitely postponed.

FORT LYON MILITARY RESERVATION.

Mr. HARE, from the Committee on the Public Lands, reported back with amendments a bill (H. R. 6168) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to grant a part of the Fort Lyon military reservation to the State of Colorado for a soldiers' home and other purposes; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ADVERSE REPORTS.

Mr. HARE, also from the same committee, reported back adversely a bill (H. R. 5066) to encourage and establish better facilities for travel to, from, into, and through, the Yellowstone National Park, and for other purposes; which was laid on the table, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

Mr. LACEY, from the Committee on the Public Lands, reported back adversely a bill (H. R. 59) to authorize the construction and operation of an electric railroad in the Yellowstone National Park; which was laid on the table, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

PREEMPTION OF PUBLIC LANDS.

Mr. NEILL, from the Committee on the Public Lands, reported back adversely a bill (H. R. 1964) to restore the right of preemption of public lands; which was laid on the table, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING, STOCKTON, CAL.

Mr. ABBOTT, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported back with a favorable recommendation a bill (H. R. 6989) to increase the appropriation for the erection of a public building at Stockton, Cal.; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING, ST. PAUL, MINN.

Mr. BERRY, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported back with a favorable recommendation a bill (H. R. 220) to increase the appropriation for the erection of a public building at St. Paul, Minn.

Mr. BRETZ. Mr. Speaker, I desire to object to that report, and, in doing so, I wish to make a parliamentary inquiry. That bill is pending now before the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds on a motion to reconsider the vote by which the report was ordered, and my inquiry is whether the bill can be reported under such circumstances?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BERRY] will please give his attention. The gentleman from Indiana states that this report is not authorized, because there is pending in the committee a motion to reconsider the vote by which the report was ordered.

Mr. BERRY. I understand that the gentleman from Indiana so claims, but there was action of the committee in his absence directing me to report the bill.

Mr. BRETZ. Mr. Speaker, at the meeting of the committee this morning I entered a motion to reconsider, and that motion was in time under the rules, and it is now pending.

Mr. BERRY. But the committee had directed the other day that the bill be reported.

Mr. BRETZ. Yes, sir; that is true, but the minutes of the committee meeting this morning show that the motion to reconsider is pending.

Mr. KIEFER. There was no quorum there.

Mr. BRETZ. How do you know?

Mr. KIEFER. I am so informed.

Mr. BRETZ. Mr. Speaker, I object to this report being made under the circumstances.

The SPEAKER. If the point is good at all it can go along with the bill. The Chair will not interrupt the call.

Mr. BRETZ. In order to save all necessary points, I desire also to state that, if the Chair holds that it is proper to report this bill under the existing circumstances I desire to file a minority report, to accompany the report of the committee.

Mr. WRIGHT of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman have the privilege of filing a minority report.

Mr. BRETZ. Unanimous consent is not necessary. I will take my right as a member of the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman having made his objection, he waives nothing. The Clerk will proceed with the call.

The Clerk resumed and completed the call of committees for reports.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER. The second morning hour begins at five minutes of 2 o'clock. The Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads has a measure pending.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that that matter be passed over without prejudice, retaining its existing status.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

PORT ANGELES, WASH.

Mr. McRAE (when the Committee on Public Lands was called). Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (H. R. 7499) to grant to the city of Port Angeles, State of Washington, certain lands within the town site of Port Angeles, Wash., for cemetery purposes.

The SPEAKER. That bill is on the Union Calendar.

Mr. McRAE. I ask unanimous consent that it be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

Objection was made.

Mr. McRAE. Then, Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the purpose of considering this bill.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole, Mr. BRETZ in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole for the consideration of a bill which the Clerk will read.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That suburban blocks numbered 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, and 94, within the limits of the Government town-site reserve of Port Angeles, in the State of Washington, shall be, and are each hereby, granted and confirmed to the town or city of Port Angeles, Wash., for use as a burial ground or cemetery; and upon application therefor by the proper municipal authorities of said town or city to the Secretary of the Interior, patent shall be issued for said blocks, respectively, to said authorities and for the purpose herein expressed.

Mr. McRAE. I ask that the report be read. I think that will give the committee all the information required with reference to this bill.

The report (by Mr. McRAE) was read, as follows:

The Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7499) to grant to the city of Port Angeles, State of Washington, certain lands within the town site of Port Angeles, Wash., for cemetery purposes, have had the same under consideration, and report the same back with the recommendation that it pass.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, Washington, July 24, 1894.

SIR: I transmit herewith a report from the Commissioner of the General Land Office on House bill No. 7499, "To grant to the city of Port Angeles, State of Washington, certain lands within the town site of Port Angeles, Wash., for cemetery purposes."

I concur in the recommendation of the Commissioner that the bill should become a law.

Very respectfully,

HOKE SMITH, Secretary.

Hon. THOMAS C. MCRAE,
Chairman Committee on the Public Lands, House of Representatives.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., July 16, 1894.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt, by reference of the honorable Assistant Secretary of the Interior for report thereon in duplicate, of House bill No. 7499, present session, entitled "A bill to grant to the city of Port Angeles, State of Washington, certain lands within the town site of Port Angeles, Wash., for cemetery purposes," which bill was transmitted to you by the honorable the chairman of the Committee on the Public Lands, House of Representatives, with a request for a report thereon by you.

The legislation proposed by the said bill (H. R. 7499) is approved of by me.

By the general deficiency act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat., 879), authority was given the Department for a public sale of lots in the Port Angeles town-site reserve, and by act of Congress, August 5, 1892 (27 Stat., 369), certain privileges were granted those who had established residence upon and improved lots in said town site, etc.

Under date of July 17, 1893, by letter G of this office, instructions and orders were given the register and receiver at Seattle, Wash., for the sale of lots in Port Angeles under the acts aforesaid. It being properly represented to this office that as to certain described lots in said town site, those named in the bill before me, it was desired by the inhabitants that the said land might be secured to them as a burial ground, and on which many of their dead are now buried, the sale of said squares was suspended temporarily pending any application to Congress for relief in the premises by the people of Port Angeles.

In the case of the city of Kingfisher, Okla., Congress, by special act (27 Stat., 612-631), permitted said city to purchase sufficient land in section 16, reserved for school purposes, for a cemetery, and on which section the people of the city, by necessity, had already buried their dead.

The bill should, in my opinion, become law, and the papers transmitted are herewith returned.

Very respectfully,

S. W. LAMOREUX, Commissioner.

The SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, D. C.

Mr. MCRAE. I move that the committee rise and report the bill to the House with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. BRETZ reported that the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 7499) to grant to the city of Port Angeles, State of Washington, certain lands within the town site of Port Angeles, Wash., for cemetery purposes, and had directed him to report the same back with a recommendation that it pass.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. MCRAE, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

RIGHT OF WAY FOR TRAMROADS, CANALS, ETC.

Mr. MCRAE. I now call up the bill (H. R. 7828) to permit the use of the right of way through the public lands for tramroads, canals, and reservoirs, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. This bill is on the Union Calendar.

Mr. MCRAE. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House.

Mr. REED. I object.

Mr. MCRAE. I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of the bill.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union (Mr. COOMBS in the chair) and proceeded to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7828) to permit the use of the right of way through the public lands for tramroads, canals, reservoirs, and for other purposes.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and hereby is, authorized and empowered, under general regulations to be fixed by him, to permit the use of the right of way through the public lands of the United States, not within the limits of any park, forest, military, or Indian reservation, for tramroads, canals or reservoirs to the extent of the ground occupied by the water of the canals and reservoirs and 50 feet on each side of the marginal limits therof; or 50 feet on each side of the center line of the tramroad, by any citizen or any association of citizens of the United States engaged in the business of cutting timber and manufacturing lumber.

Mr. HERMANN. I wish to ask the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. MCRAE] in what respect this bill differs from the existing law? As I understand, there is now a law providing for right of way for just such purposes as this bill contemplates.

Mr. MCRAE. The gentleman is mistaken in assuming that there is existing law on this subject. There is a law granting the right of way to railroads; and there is also another statute authorizing the granting of right of way for canals for irrigation purposes. But there is no law permitting the right of way over the public lands for the purposes named in this bill. Instead of making the railroad right of way act applicable to this class of cases and allowing the use of timber, this bill simply permits the Secretary of the Interior to issue permits, with no privileges in respect to timber or stone; and it vests no rights that can not be revoked by the Department. It simply permits the use of the right of way through the public lands for these temporary purposes. There is quite a demand for some such a measure in certain sections of the country, and we have a number of petitions asking for it.

Mr. PICKLER. To what companies or organizations will this privilege be granted, and for what purposes?

Mr. MCRAE. For tramroads, canals, and reservoirs connected with the manufacture of lumber. The object is to allow the construction of tramroads and canals over the public lands when necessary.

Mr. PICKLER. How wide is this right of way to be?

Mr. MCRAE. It is 50 feet on each side of the marginal limits of canals or reservoirs, and 50 feet on each side of the center line of any tramroad.

Mr. PICKLER. Is there any specification as to how much lumber parties must manufacture before they can be entitled to this grant of right of way?

Mr. MCRAE. Oh, no.

Mr. HERMANN. Does this provision apply to the transportation of lumber alone?

Mr. MCRAE. Of course, on these tramroads the owners could transport anything they wanted.

Mr. HERMANN. How as to the canal right? Is that for the general purposes of traffic and transportation?

Mr. MCRAE. For the purpose of logging and in the transportation of lumber by those engaged in the business of cutting timber and manufacturing lumber.

Mr. HERMANN. Entirely for that purpose?

Mr. MCRAE. Yes, sir.

Mr. HERMANN. The purpose of the bill, as I understand, is to authorize these tramways and canals, not for general transportation purposes, but in the interest of lumbering?

Mr. MCRAE. Yes, sir. The granting of right of way for other purposes is, as I understand, already provided for. The law already allows right of way to railroads and for irrigation purposes.

Mr. HERMANN. It was for that reason that I asked the gentleman in what respect this bill differs from the general law now existing.

Mr. LOUD. These tramways when constructed can be used for any purpose.

Mr. MCRAE. Certainly.

Mr. LOUD. Under this bill the right of way can be granted for any purpose whatever.

Mr. MCRAE. Oh, no; it is to be granted only to people engaged in cutting timber and manufacturing lumber.

Mr. LOUD. I think the bill is not strictly enough drawn to confine it to that purpose. Under this bill, it seems to me, a company might obtain authority to extend a street railroad over Government land.

Mr. HERMANN. The language seems to be rather general than specific.

Mr. MCRAE. Why, I do not see how the gentleman can say that. It says explicitly:

And 50 feet on each side of the marginal limits thereof; or 50 feet on each side of the center line of the tramroad, by any citizen or any association of citizens of the United States engaged in the business of cutting and manufacturing lumber.

Mr. LOUD. But what is the effect of the other portions of the bill?

Mr. MCRAE. Nothing to alter that. There is but one section of the bill. It is all to be done under the regulations of the Department. It simply empowers the Secretary of the Interior, under general regulations to be fixed by him, to permit the use of the right of way through public lands for such purposes. At present, parties engaged in such business are unable to secure the right of way across the public lands to get logs to and lumber from their mills.

Mr. HENDERSON of Illinois. The grant, when made by the Secretary of the Interior under the regulations the bill authorizes, can be used only for the purposes indicated by the bill?

Mr. MCRAE. Certainly; that is all.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. Will it empower the Secretary to grant rights of way across national parks?

Mr. MCRAE. No; that is expressly prohibited in the bill.

Mr. PICKLER. As I understand it, it would permit a man owning a small sawmill and manufacturing only a few thousand feet of lumber each year to have a right of way 50 feet wide on each side of his tramway for any distance through the public lands, even 10 miles or more.

Mr. MCRAE. A concern carrying on a business of manufacturing only a few thousand feet would hardly go to the expense of building a tramway for 10 miles. It would hardly pay to do that.

Mr. PICKLER. But he might want it for the very purpose of cutting out the lumber of some other man who was engaged in the same business.

Mr. McRAE. Well, Mr. Chairman, I do not care to discuss a supposition of that kind. If a lumber manufacturer has a tramway 10 miles long it is a pretty good evidence of the fact that he is carrying on a very considerable business and ought not to be hindered in these efforts to extend.

Mr. PICKLER. But suppose he can get somebody else out of the way and thereby reach valuable timber?

Mr. McRAE. But there is no timber granted by this bill.

Mr. PICKLER. How is he to manufacture lumber without timber?

Mr. McRAE. If he owns the land on which the timber is situated, or the timber, and it is necessary for him to go through the public lands in order to get at his timber, then he can get the right under the operation of this bill, and build his tramway across the public lands.

Mr. PICKLER. But does not he get the timber on the 50 feet on each side of the tramway?

Mr. McRAE. Well, he would probably have to cut some of the timber on the right of way for his tramroad. But the Department can regulate how much, and what shall be done with it. This bill grants no timber whatever.

Mr. PICKLER. He will demand the timber on the line, of course. Now, it seems to me, these manufacturers who claim such a right of way ought to manufacture a reasonable amount of lumber before this privilege should be extended. It might be a very serious injustice to a great many who are engaged in this business.

Mr. McRAE. Why, any man who wants it, and can show that fact to the Department, could get the permit under the operation of this bill, and I think should have it.

Mr. PICKLER. But the right of way across the public land may involve in many cases a great deal of very valuable timber.

Mr. McRAE. Mr. Chairman, people do not build tramways through the country for the mere purpose of getting the privilege of cutting off the right of way. They do not build them unless they have something to haul over them. Congress has granted to the railroads a hundred feet on each side of the road, and has given them the right to take timber and stone from all the adjacent lands. No such privilege is granted here. The railroad grants also give, every 10 miles, 20 acres for stations; the most unreasonable grants have been made to them. But these manufacturing concerns, if they have to cross the public lands, are absolutely unable now to get the right of way by purchase or condemnation. This is unfair and unjust. They can not under the present law purchase the land for the right of way, for the Government does not want to sell it. Shall we stand in the way of great enterprises by refusing so simple a privilege?

The objection seems to me to be drawing the line rather fine, in view of the fact that all through the section of country from which these gentlemen come they have legislative grants with all the protection of the law, and can go on and build their railroads and secure the rights of way for irrigation. Why, we do not seek to make a grant for a right of way a perpetual grant, but only a permit that is temporary and can be rescinded at any time by the Department.

Mr. HERMANN. As to that point, is there a limitation as to the time when this privilege shall be ended?

Mr. McRAE. Certainly.

Mr. HERMANN. Then it is to be used only temporarily for the purpose indicated?

Mr. McRAE. Certainly; and the permission does not carry the title to the land.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. It can be reclaimed at any time.

Mr. McRAE. Of course. If the necessity for a tramroad across a piece of land has disappeared, then you do not want the right of way any longer. It is only to be used so long as necessary to get the timber to the mill and from it, and for no other purpose.

Mr. HERMANN. I think it can serve a useful purpose.

Mr. BLACK of Illinois. How many acres of land would this give in running a mile?

Mr. McRAE. It gives only 100 feet; that is to say, 50 feet on each side.

Mr. BLACK of Illinois. But how many acres would that be?

Mr. DOOLITTLE. Only about 5 or 6 acres in a mile.

Mr. BLACK of Illinois. Then what is the grant? Does the Government reserve the timber?

Mr. McRAE. It only grants the right of way to parties who are engaged in the milling business to build tramroads or canals, if necessary, across the public land.

Mr. BLACK of Illinois. And the Government retains the timber upon the lands?

Mr. McRAE. This bill has nothing to do with the timber, and does not grant it or authorize its use.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. The effect of the bill would be that the Government would retain the timber.

Mr. PICKLER. Mr. Chairman, of course I suppose the gentleman thinks the bill well guarded, and it may be; but suppose a man should have a mill and have his timber 5 miles from it and Government land intervened, he will control this 100 feet and the timber on it.

Mr. McRAE. He can not without the consent of the Department.

Mr. PICKLER. How will he put his tramway there?

Mr. McRAE. The Department can stipulate how he shall build his tramway. If the Secretary of the Interior thinks the timber is worth anything let him sell it or make the concern pay for it. There is nothing in the bill here to give the timber to the manufacturer who gets the right of way on it.

Mr. PICKLER. If he should take a circuitous route he might find a great deal of valuable timber on that route.

Mr. McRAE. The gentleman certainly does not think that any concern would build a tramway in a circle in order to get timber on the right of way?

Mr. PICKLER. What will the tramway cost?

Mr. McRAE. Did you ever build one?

Mr. PICKLER. No; but I could build one very cheaply if you gave me the opportunity.

Mr. BARTLETT. Do I understand the gentleman that this is a proposition to grant this franchise and license without any compensation?

Mr. McRAE. Certainly; but it is hardly a franchise. It simply authorizes the Secretary of the Interior to permit the use of this right of way.

Mr. BARTLETT. Is not a right of way a franchise?

Mr. McRAE. I will not discuss that question with the gentleman. This is a permit for a right of way to go over the public land for certain purposes.

Mr. BARTLETT. It is with the right of condemnation.

Mr. McRAE. It is an authority, a permit, the use of the right of way over the public lands, and you may call it what you please.

Mr. BARTLETT. For a tramroad.

Mr. McRAE. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLACK of Illinois. On the statement that you make, that the timber is not granted, and that the right of way is granted with this reservation to the Government, and with the Secretary of the Interior to control that matter, I shall favor the bill.

Mr. McRAE. There is no question but that we have undertaken to guard and intended to prevent the use of the timber upon that land or upon adjacent lands. All we want to do is to enable the Secretary of the Interior, upon a showing by any manufacturer, to allow tramroads and canals to go over the public lands. There is no grant of the timber or stone, and as it is not granted it is reserved of course. I move that the committee rise and report the bill favorably to the House.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee having assumed the chair as Speaker pro tempore, Mr. COOMBS, Chairman of Committee of the Whole, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 7828, and had directed him to report the same to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. McRAE, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

PURCHASERS AND OWNERS OF CERTAIN LAND IN CALIFORNIA.

Mr. McRAE. Mr. Speaker, I now call up the bill (H. R. 7834) for the relief of the bona fide purchasers of land in section 36, township 1 north, range 9 west (San Bernardino meridian), in the State of California.

The title of the bill was read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. This bill is on the Union Calendar.

Mr. McRAE. I yield to my colleague [Mr. NEILL], who reported the bill.

Mr. NEILL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the purpose of considering this bill.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole, Mr. COOMBS in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole for the purpose of considering the bill which the Clerk will report.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That all the right, title, and interest of the Government of the United States had, or may have had, in and to section 36, in township 1 north and range 9 west (San Bernardino meridian), in the State of California, prior to or after the 1st day of March, A. D. 1877, be, and the same is hereby, released, relinquished, and forever quitclaimed to the bona fide purchasers of the same holding under Richard Eads or John J. Bodkin, who purchased the same from the State of California as school lands, and to the heirs and assigns of such purchasers, and that upon payment to the United States of the sum of $1.25 per acre by each of them for the lands so owned by them, respectively, such purchasers and holders shall be entitled to receive patents therefor.

Mr. NEILL. Mr. Chairman, there is a report accompanying this bill, and I ask that it be read.

The report (by Mr. NEILL) was read, as follows:

The Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6136) for the relief of the bona fide purchasers and owners of the land in section 36, in T. 1 N., R. 9 W., S. B. M., have had the same under consideration, and report the accompanying substitute therefor, and recommend its passage. The facts are as follows:

By act of Congress all sections numbered 16 and 36 of the public lands in California were granted to that State for school purposes.

The act approved July 23, 1866, authorized the State to make selections of other public lands in lieu of such sections 16 and 36 (or portions thereof) as were found to be included in any private Mexican or Spanish grant, upon final survey of such grants.

The plat of survey of the southern part of T. 1 N., R. 9 W., S. B. M., was approved by the surveyor-general of California July 22, 1865, and section 36 was shown to be public land in place. By the approval of that survey the title to said section vested in the State of California at that date, provided there had been no settlement upon it prior to said survey.

At that date the claimed limits of the Rancho San Jose addition under the survey made by Deputy Surveyor Hancock in 1858, and approved by the surveyor-general in January, 1860, did not include said section.

Application was made by the San Jose grant claimant for a resurvey of this claim, which was refused, and the surveyor-general, on May 6, 1868, was directed to make publication of the Hancock survey, as required by the act of July 1, 1864. Instead of proceeding under the Hancock survey, a new survey was made by Deputy Surveyor Thompson, under orders of the surveyor-general, in August, 1868, and forwarded to the Commissioner of the General Land Office for his action. On May 6, 1869, the Commissioner rejected the Thompson survey. Finally a new survey of the grant was made by order of the Secretary of the Interior by his decision of September 20, 1872. Under this decision the final survey of the grant was made and approved by the surveyor-general May 22, 1874, which survey also excluded the thirty-sixth section in question, and under this survey patent issued to the San Jose grant claimant for its land.

The disapproved survey by Deputy Surveyor Thompson having included within its limits the aforesaid section 36, the State of California made indemnity school selections of the E. ½ of sec. 21 and W. ½ of sec. 23, T. 2 N., R. 4 W., S. B. M., in lieu of the E. ½, the SW. ¼, the S. ½ of NW. ¼, and NE. ¼ of NW. ¼, sec. 36, T. 1 N., R. 9 W., S. B. M. (the land in question), alleging that said section 36 was within the limits of a Mexican grant, and said selections were approved by the Secretary July 1, 1870.

By reference to the act of Congress approved July 23, 1866, entitled "An act to quiet land titles in California," it will be seen that the selection by the State and the subsequent approval by the Secretary were clearly unauthorized by that portion of the act which authorized selections to be made in lieu of sections 16 and 36 covered by Mexican grants. Section 6 of said act gives the State of California the right to select for school purposes other lands in lieu of such sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections as were covered by grants made under Spanish or Mexican authority, or where such sections would be so covered if the lines of the public surveys were extended over such lands, which shall be determined in case of Spanish or Mexican grants when the final survey of such grants shall have been made.

It will be observed that at the time the State made the foregoing indemnity selections the final survey had not been made; the selections were, therefore, clearly illegal in their inception, and the act of the secretary in approving them was also contrary to law, and his approval consequently void. The further fact that when the final survey of the San Jose grant was made said section 36 was not covered by it, made the selections illegal beyond controversy.

After the final survey of the Rancho San Jose addition had been made, a plat of survey of T. 1 N., R. 9 W., S. B. M., was filed in the United States land office at Los Angeles, Cal., viz, on September 23, 1875, and no claim having been presented by anyone claiming to be a settler before survey on said section 36, within three months after the filing of said township plat, the title to said section 36 was shown to be vested in the State of California, and such fact was duly certified to the State surveyor-general by the register of the United States land office at Los Angeles, Cal. (See Exhibits A and D.)

This section, 36, was then sold by the State of California as school land.

On October 5, 1875, Richard Eads made application to the State of California to purchase the east half of said section 36. His application was approved by the surveyor-general on January 5, 1876, and the payment required by law having been made by him, certificate of purchase No. 6878 was issued to him on March 20, 1876, and, upon final payment, patent was issued to him January 27, 1883. (See Exhibits A, B, and C.)

On December 26, 1876, John J. Bodkin made application to purchase the west half of said section 36; his application was approved by the surveyor-general, March 10, 1877, certificate of purchase No. 7219 was issued to him April 16, 1877, and patent on July 25, 1878. (See Exhibits D, E, and F.)

Since the sale of said section 36 by the State, the section has been subdivided by various sales into small holdings of from 5 to 100 acres in extent to various owners, who have improved the land, established homes thereon, and planted orange groves, orchards, and vineyards, and no one suspected any flaw in the title until about four years ago when several parties made application to enter said land as public lands of the United States.

There are at present a large number of owners and settlers upon this section who have acquired title to the lands they occupy, in good faith, through these grantees of the State. The improvements made by them are very valuable, and many of them have their all invested in their homes, and would be reduced to poverty if they lost them.

The State having made many similar illegal selections, the purchasers from the State of these illegal selections applied to Congress for relief.

On March 1, 1877, Congress passed an act to confirm the invalid and defective selections, made prior to the passage of said act.

In 1889, Michael J. Nolan, and other speculators residing in the city of Los Angeles, through their attorney, J. H. Call, made application to enter this section, 36, on the ground that by virtue of said act of March 1, 1877, the title to the indemnity selections, made in lieu of said section 36, had been confirmed to the State, and that the title to the said section 36 had been reinvested in the United States, and consequently that it was public land of the United States subject to entry under the homestead and other land laws.

The controversy was carried up to the Secretary of the Interior, who, by his decision dated November 19, 1892, held that it was his duty to dispose of this section as public land of the United States.

His decision can be found in the case of Nolan vs. State of California, volume 16, page 477, decisions of the Department of the Interior, published by the Interior Department.

The Secretary in his said decision November 19, 1892, says:

"The acceptance by the State of the provisions and benefits of the act completely divested it of the title to the school section and reinvested the title in the United States."

The State of California, though nominal defendant, was not a party in interest in the case, and the Secretary of the Interior was probably misled by overlooking that fact. The Legislature of the State of California has never passed any act accepting the provisions of said act of March 1, 1877, providing for the reinvesting of the title to such sections in the United States, and even if such an act had been passed, it would not be possible for the State to reconvey to the United States lands which it had sold or contracted to sell prior to March 1, 1877, and which sales and contracts had subsequently ripened into patents issued by the State.

While we are strongly of the opinion that Eads and Bodkin, the purchasers from the State, each of whom inaugurated proceedings for purchase by filing his application to purchase and performing other conditions required by law prior to March 1, 1877, acquired legal or equitable rights that were good and might be enforced in a court of equity, still we think the circumstances are such as to not only give Congress jurisdiction, but also to make it an urgent duty for that body to hasten to exercise its full power to protect these innocent owners in their titles and possessions.

Your committee think it the duty of Congress as far as possible to aid honest settlers in perfecting their land titles against the claims of mere speculators, whose rights are founded wholly upon technical grounds, and to that end think Congress should pass a bill for the relief of these settlers.

The committee submit the accompanying substitute and recommend its speedy passage.

Mr. NEILL. There is no necessity for reading all the exhibits. If there be no objection, I move that the committee rise and report this bill favorably to the House.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. COOMBS, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 7834, and had directed him to report the same to the House with a favorable recommendation.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. NEILL, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

TIMBER LANDS IN CALIFORNIA, OREGON, NEVADA, AND WASHINGTON.

Mr. McRAE. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (H. R. 5714) to amend an act entitled "An act for the sale of timber lands in the States of California, Oregon, Nevada, and Washington." This bill has already been considered, and the previous question considered as ordered.

Mr. HERMANN. What is the status of that bill, Mr. Speaker?

The SPEAKER. The previous question has been ordered on the bill by unanimous consent, as the Chair understands.

Mr. COOMBS. When?

The SPEAKER. On July 24. The previous question to be considered as ordered, and thirty minutes to be allowed for debate when the bill is called up. That is the order which was made, as the Chair supposes, by unanimous consent.

Mr. HERMANN. I desire to inquire further, whether amendments to the bill are precluded?

The SPEAKER. Of course, the previous question being ordered, no amendments can be in order.

Mr. HERMANN. I understood the original motion to be that the previous question should be ordered on the bill and the pending amendments.

The SPEAKER. If any amendments were pending when the previous question was ordered, of course it would apply to them.

Mr. HERMANN. I understand that there was only one, an amendment that was recommended by the committee. If that is so, and amendments are precluded, very great injustice will be done to this House, because there are many amendments which we desire to offer in order to cure what we believe to be very great defects in the bill.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is informed that no amendments are pending; that the amendments that were offered were agreed to.

Mr. BURROWS. Mr. Speaker, is this the forestry bill that was under consideration here a few days ago? The title seems to be a little misleading.

Mr. McRAE. This bill was considered by the House in July.

Mr. BURROWS. Can the question of consideration be raised against it, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. McRAE. This is not the forest reservation bill, if that is what the gentleman refers to.

Mr. HERMANN. That is what we want to know.

Mr. McRAE. Oh, no. This is the Minnesota bill, introduced by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. BALDWIN]. An amendment was offered by the gentleman from Washington [Mr. WILSON] and agreed to; the previous question was considered as ordered, and the bill went over.

Mr. HAUGEN. The gentleman says this is "the Minnesota bill." Does this bill relate at all to any lands in Minnesota?

Mr. McRAE. I think not; though it may.

Mr. HAUGEN. I do not think it touches Minnesota at all.

Mr. McRAE. I called it the Minnesota bill because it was introduced by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. BALDWIN].

Mr. HAUGEN. I understand that the gentleman from Minnesota introduced it by request, and that he disclaims all responsibility for it.

Mr. McRAE. Mr. Speaker, this is a bill that ought to pass, and I think there is no objection to it.

Mr. HERMANN. Mr. Speaker, let the bill be reported with the amendments, so that we may understand just what it is.

The bill as amended was read.

Mr. BARNES. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and the House accordingly (at 2 o'clock and 45 minutes p. m.) adjourned.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions were severally reported from committtees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as follows:

By Mr. PENDLETON of West Virginia, from the Committee on Military Affairs: A bill (H. R. 6244) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Jacob Eckert. (Report No. 1376.)

By Mr. MEYER, from the Committee on Naval Affairs: A bill (H. R. 3784) to promote Commodore Louis C. Sartori, now on the retired list of the Navy, to be a rear-admiral on said list, in accordance with his original position on the Navy Register. (Report No. 1377.)

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills and a resolution of the following titles were introduced, and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. OUTHWAITE: A bill (H. R. 7909) to facilitate and expedite legal proceedings by the United States and other creditors against Government-aided railroad companies, their officers, stockholders, and the trustees of their mortgages—to the Committee on Pacific Railroads.

By Mr. HATCH: A bill (H. R. 7910) to amend "An act to provide for the inspection of live cattle, hogs, and the carcasses and products thereof, which are the subjects of interstate commerce, and for other purposes"—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. CUMMINGS: Joint resolution (H. Res. 215) defining the intent and meaning of the act of June 30, 1886, and the act amendatory thereto of August 1, 1888, entitled "An act to extend the leave of absence of employés in the Government Printing Office to thirty days per annum"—to the Committee on Appropriations.

PRIVATE BILLS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills of the following titles were presented and referred as follows:

By Mr. HOUK: A bill (H. R. 7911) for the relief of John F. Frank, of Memphis, Tenn.—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. HUDSON: A bill (H. R. 7912) granting a pension to Lida L. Overly—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland: A bill (H. R. 7913) granting jurisdiction and authority to the Court of Claims in the case of the steamer Pocahontas—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. WAUGH: A bill (H. R. 7914) granting a pension to Malvina Linsday—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7915) granting a pension to Andrew J. Helmick—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. BUNDY: The petition of Lyman Abbott, D. D., and 106 doctors of divinity and doctors of law, and 46 citizens of the United States, praying that the Government of the United States make the antilottery laws effective—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. CHILDS: Memorial in opposition to the proposed amendment of section 4887, Revised Statutes—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. COBB of Missouri: Petition of 70 merchants and manufacturers of St. Louis, Mo., requesting prompt action on tariff bill—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. MARTIN of Indiana: Petition of Encampment No. 1 Union Veteran Legion, Pittsburg; of Encampment No. 4, Union Veteran Legion, Beaver Falls, Pa.; of Encampment No. 12, Union Veteran Legion, of Oil City, Pa.; of Encampment No. 18, Union Veteran Legion, of Allentown, Pa.; Encampment No. 19, Union Veteran Legion, of Pottsville, Pa.; Encampment No. 27, Union Veteran Legion, of Hazelton, Pa., for passage of House bill 7025, a per diem service pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petitions of Encampment No. 28, Athens, Pa.; Encampment No. 32, Bloomburg, Pa.; Encampment No. 36, Union Veteran Legion, for the passage of House bill 7025, a per diem service pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Encampment No. 42, Union Veteran Legion, of Warren, Pa.; Encampment No. 43, Union Veteran Legion, of Reading, Pa.; Encampment No. 45, Union Veteran Legion, of Butler, Pa.; Encampment No. 49, Union Veteran Legion, of Norristown, Pa.; Encampment No. 58, Union Veteran Legion, of Sharon, Pa.; Encampment No. 59, Union Veteran Legion, of Bellefonte, Pa.; Encampment No. 68, Union Veteran Legion, of York, Pa., for passage of House bill 7025, a per diem service pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Encampment No. 67, Union Veteran Legion, of Harrisburg, Pa.; Encampment No. 71, Union Veteran Legion, of Lock Haven, Pa., for the passage of House bill 7025, a per diem service pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Encampment No. 92, Union Veteran Legion, of Huntington, Pa.; Encampment No. 104, Union Veteran Legion, of Philipsburg, Center County, Pa.; Encampment No. 120, Union Veteran Legion, of Punxsutawney, Pa., for the passage of House bill 7025—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Encampment No. 10, Union Veteran Legion, of New Bedford, Mass.; Encampment No. 83, Union Veteran Legion, of Worcester, Mass., for the passage of a per diem service pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Encampment No. 16, Union Veteran Legion, of Steubenville, Ohio; Encampment No. 35, Union Veteran Legion, of Mount Vernon, Ohio; Encampment No. 41, Union Veteran Legion, of Cincinnati, Ohio; Encampment No. 64, Union Veteran Legion, New Lisbon, Ohio; Encampment No. 66, Union Veteran Legion, Bucyrus, Ohio; Encampment No. 82, Union Veteran Legion, Dayton, Ohio; Encampment No. 112, Union Veteran Legion, Lancaster, Ohio; Encampment No. 118, Union Veteran Legion, Zanesville, Ohio, and Encampment No. 123, Union Veteran Legion, Cincinnati, Ohio, for passage of a per diem service pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Encampment No. 100, Union Veteran Legion, Newark, N. J., for passage of per diem service pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Encampment No. 113, Union Veteran Legion, Bridgeton, N. J., for passage of per diem service pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Encampment No. 80, Union Veteran Legion, Indianapolis, Ind., for passage of per diem service pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Encampment No. 15, Union Veteran Legion, St. Louis, Mo., for passage of per diem service pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Encampment No. 75, Union Veteran Legion, Louisville, Ky., for passage of per diem service pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Encampment No. 24, Union Veteran Legion, Salina, Kans., for passage of per diem service pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Encampment No. 106, Union Veteran Legion, Lewiston, Me., for the passage of per diem service pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Encampment No. 38, Union Veteran Legion, New York City, for passage of per diem pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Encampment No. 91, National Soldiers' Home, Virginia, for passage of per diem service pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Encampment No. 116, Union Veteran Legion, Galena, Ill., for passage of per diem service pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

SENATE.

WEDNESDAY, August 8, 1894.

Prayer by Rev. J. H. M'CARTY, D. D., of the city of Washington.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. CHANDLER. In behalf of the senior Senator from Kansas [Mr. PEFFER] I ask that he be granted leave of absence until Friday.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and leave of absence is granted.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. CULLOM presented resolutions adopted by the Chicago Freight Bureau, favoring certain proposed amendments to the interstate-commerce law; which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented sundry memorials of citizens of Chicago, Roseland, and Oconee, in the State of Illinois, remonstrating against the support of the Government in maintaining the present system of sectarian Indian education, etc.; which were referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. GALLINGER. A few days ago I introduced a bill (S. 2258) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Patrick Larkin. I now present the sworn statement of the soldier, with a medical certificate. As this case has been before Congress for a good while, I move that the statement and medical certificate be printed as a document, and that they be referred to the Committee on Pensions.

The motion was agreed to.

MINERAL LANDS IN MONTANA AND IDAHO.

Mr. POWER. On the 6th of this month I offered, by direction of the Committee on Public Lands, some correspondence pertaining to the classification of mineral lands in the States of Montana and Idaho to be printed. I wish to add to those papers some additional correspondence with the Interior Department since that date. I ask that they be printed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It will be so ordered.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. PLATT. On the 6th of August the bill (H. R. 7680) to authorize purchasers of the property and franchises of the Choctaw Coal and Railway Company to organize a corporation and to confer upon the same all the powers, privileges, and franchises vested in that company, was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs. A similar bill has been under consideration by the Judiciary Committee, and the Judiciary Committee have been practically ready to report upon the House bill and would be ready to report now upon it. I report the bill back from the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ask that that committee be discharged from its further consideration, and that it be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The report was agreed to.

Mr. GIBSON, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7095) to provide for the erection of a national home for aged and infirm colored persons and for the maintenance of the inmates thereof, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. PALMER, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1314) for the relief of Mathew S. Priest, asked to be discharged from its further consideration, and that it be referred to the Committee on Claims; which was agreed to.

Mr. LINDSAY, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1589) for the relief of Louis Pelham, reported it without amendment.

E. H. NEBEKER.

Mr. SHERMAN. I am directed by the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5901) to reimburse E. H. Nebeker, late Treasurer of the United States, to report it favorably without amendment, and at the request of the chairman of the committee [Mr. VOORHEES], who is sick in bed, I ask the indulgence of the Senate to put the bill upon its passage.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let it be read for information.

The Secretary read the bill; and, by unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration. It proposes to pay to E. H. Nebeker, late Treasurer of the United States, $1,000, to reimburse him for the payment of that sum to the chief of the redemption division of the Treasury, May 26, 1893, to make good a shortage of that amount in the cash of the redemption division of the Treasurer's office, caused by the loss of one one-thousand-dollar Treasury note belonging to a remittance of $87,000 from the assistant treasurer of the United States at New York, which was counted, assorted, and reported correct by Mrs. C. V. Millar, counter, on the 28th of March, 1893, but found to be short as aforesaid when recounted in the offices of the Secretary and Register.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. ALLEN introduced a bill (S. 2291) to prevent professional lobbying, and for other purposes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. BLACKBURN introduced a bill (S. 2292) for the relief of William J. Landram; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. BERRY introduced a bill (S. 2293) to provide for the improvement of the building and grounds of the United States court and post-office at Little Rock, Ark.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

DISTRICT HOSPITALS AND CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS.

Mr. HOAR submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Committee on the District of Columbia be, and are hereby, instructed to investigate and report to the Senate information with regard to the several hospitals and charitable institutions of this city that are supported in whole or in part by appropriations made by Congress, with a view of ascertaining—

First. Whether the grounds and buildings of such institutions belong to the local or General Government.

Second. Whether these institutions are managed or controlled by the Commissioners of the District or by boards of incorporators.

Third. Whether there is a uniform rule or law governing the management of such institutions, or whether any of them have been discriminated against by recent legislation to the embarrassment and injury of said institution or institutions.

Fourth. They will make such recommendations as in their judgment are necessary to placing all the eleemosynary institutions of the District of Columbia receiving Government aid upon the same basis, subject to the same rules and regulations.

GETTYSBURG BATTLEFIELD COMMISSION.

Mr. RANSOM. Mr. President, I will thank the Senate to indulge me a few moments while I make a statement on a subject which is of some interest to me.

I was absent from the Senate on last Wednesday when the distinguished Senator from Virginia [Mr. HUNTON] offered to the sundry civil appropriation bill an amendment, to which I wish to call the attention of the Senate and of that Senator. I ask the Secretary to read the amendment, as stated in the copy of the RECORD which I send to the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

And the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to employ, at such compensation as he shall deem reasonable, from among those veterans who served in the battle of Gettysburg, a person who is recognized as well informed in its history, as a representative of the Army of Northern Virginia, to assist in such way as the Secretary of War may direct in preparing the historical tablets of that army for the Gettysburg battlefield.

Mr. RANSOM. Mr. President, knowing as I do how just and thoughtful a man, if I may be permitted in his presence to say so, the Senator from Virginia is, I can not believe, and do not believe, that he intended the inference which I think is naturally drawn from that amendment. Any stranger in reading it would conclude at once that upon the commission appointed by the Secretary of War to fix the lines and establish the historic tablets at Gettysburg there was no veteran of the Army of Northern Virginia; that there was no recognized representative of Southern soldiers upon it.

I beg leave to remind the Senator from Virginia that the late Gen. William H. Forney, of Alabama, major-general in the Confederate army, and for nearly twenty years a Representative of his State in the other House of Congress, was, until his death, the Southern representative upon that distinguished commission. In this presence I need not say who Gen. Forney was. He is known over the country for his high character, great ability, and usefulness, and for his eminent services in civil and in military life.

After Gen. Forney's death the Secretary of War, with extreme care and after the fullest consideration, appointed upon that commission a gentleman from the South, and I can say no more of him than that he is the peer of Gen. Forney. I refer to Maj. William M. Robbins, of North Carolina, major of the famous Fourth Alabama Regiment, and at one time professor of history and literature and at another time professor of mathematics in the University of Alabama.

Maj. Robbins, though a native of North Carolina, entered the Southern army with one of the first companies from Alabama, and served throughout the war in the Army of Northern Virginia in the regiment which I have named. He entered the army as a private and rose to the rank of major, and was frequently in command of his regiment. Maj. Robbins has often represented his county in both houses of the North Carolina Legislature. He was a member of the other House of Congress for six years, and a very distinguished member.

He is—and I speak with all deliberation when I say so—a scholar; he is a student; he is a soldier. He pursues the truth as but few men in this or any other country pursue it. He is an able lawyer, with distinguished attainments in his profession. He is a man of very large acquirements in the field of science and of literature. He is a man of general knowledge. He is a man of uncommonly fair disposition and temper.

He is a fair, just, conscientious man, with a mind and a judgment and a disposition as superior to prejudice as any man I ever met. He has been a constant student of politics, of history, and of scientific matters all his life, and is to-day one. There can not be found in the United States a man who will perform the duty of laying off the lines and establishing the historic tablets at Gettysburg with more intelligence and more fidelity than Maj. Robbins.

I had the pleasure some weeks since of reading an address which he made on the Fourth of July to the people of Gettysburg, and if I were called upon to designate a speech in which the just sentiments of the Southern people towards the Union have been more correctly and properly and gracefully represented, I would say that it is the speech of Maj. Robbins at Gettysburg—a speech just to Southern history and memory, but faithful to the Union, full of candor, full of spirit, but full of absolute reconciliation and restoration in every sense.

Mr. President, permit me to say that I can well understand the deep interest and the high sensibility which the Senator from Virginia feels, and justly feels, in all which concerns Gettysburg. I did not have a part in the honors or perils of that grand battle; but I know that he led one of the bravest of brigades in that fearful charge up the bloody heights of Cemetery Hill, and helped to make the immortalities of Gettysburg; and I can think, sir, with what thrilling emotions he remembers the sublime action of the soldiers of his State upon that bloody and glorious field.

I would not take one leaf from the laurels upon Virginia's brow; if I could possibly find a place, I would put another jewel in her great crown, but I say nothing to the disparagement of the Senator himself, nothing to the injustice of Virginia, the great mother of statesmen and soldiers, when I declare that no State, not one of her Southern sisters, has a better right or a higher claim to recognition in all which concerns the distinction and the excellence of conduct at Gettysburg than the State of North Carolina, modest and unpretentious as that State has always been.

All the world knows—I shall attempt no eulogy upon my State—that North Carolina sustained the heaviest loss of any of her Southern sisters upon that field. It is history, sir, that she left 764 dead soldiers scattered over those shotted hills, and many of them lying right under the guns and upon the very works of the Union Army. She left 3,264 wounded and bleeding soldiers on the field and 666 missing, and many of them now known to have been killed. The largest regimental loss in that battle was sustained by the Twenty-sixth North Carolina Regiment, commanded by gallant Harry Burgwyn. That regiment went into the engagement on the 1st day of July with over 800 men, according to the report of its officers, and on the 4th day of July it mustered but 80 for duty.

This is part of her record. North Carolina offered upon the altars of Gettsburg the flower of her soldiers, and the god of battle in those days of fire reaped his richest and his proudest harvest from her ranks.

I shall not pursue this subject further. I simply wish to repeat that Maj. Robbins was a soldier, a veteran soldier in that great battle, dutiful, faithful, devoted; an actual observer, an intelligent actor, and a real part of its greatest scenes. He was in almost every engagement of the Army of Northern Virginia with the Army of the Potomac for four years, and with one brother, the Hon. Frank C. Robbins, of Lexington, N. C., laid down his arms with his flag together with my friend from Virginia and Lee's army at Appomattox.

Sir, those two brothers were the survivors of six sons of their father, four of whom were left dead upon the battlefield, and one of them now represented in the other House of Congress by his son, Mr. GASTON ROBBINS, a distinguished Representative from Alabama.

North Carolina, sir, as does Virginia, loves and cherishes the character and the lives and services of these men; and Maj. Robbins will be faithful to the truth; he will be faithful to history; he will be faithful to Virginia; he will be faithful to North Carolina; he will be faithful to the North and to every true soldier in that great struggle.

Mr. President, I have given this brief touch of his life. There is his record; there are his four brothers left upon the battlefield, but two survivors of six sons who fought in that great struggle. This is the record, and these are the hostages which he presents to the country for a faithful performance of the sacred duty of laying out the lines, establishing the historic tablets, and preserving the truth of history about the great battle of Gettysburg.

I thank the Senate for having indulged me in this statement.

Mr. HUNTON. Mr. President, I can not understand how my distinguished friend, the Senator from North Carolina, could imagine that the amendment which I offered, and which was finally engrafted into the sundry civil appropriation bill, could be tortured into a disrespect or a reflection upon Col. William M. Robbins, of North Carolina. I call the attention of the Senate to the amendment, which reads:

And the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to employ at such compensation as he shall deem reasonable, from among those veterans who served in the battle of Gettysburg, a person who is recognized as well informed in its history, as a representative of the Army of Northern Virginia, to assist in such way as the Secretary of War may direct in preparing the historical tablets of that army for the Gettysburg battlefield.

I knew when I offered the amendment that Col. William M. Robbins, of North Carolina, was the commissioner. The object of the amendment was to make an assistant to Col. Robbins, and the thought was far from my mind of reflecting upon that good and gallant man, Col. Robbins, of North Carolina. I served with him in the army; I served with him in the House of Representatives; and he left both positions in the army and in the councils of the Government with my entire respect and regard; and it could not be that I could in an amendment which I offered to the sundry civil bill be guilty of casting a reflection upon Col. Robbins.

It is due to candor to say that Col. Robbins did put the construction upon the amendment which my friend from North Carolina says might be placed upon it, and wrote me a letter to that effect. I replied to him, as I have remarked now, sir, that it was farthest from my mind to reflect upon him, and I received a letter from him in reply, in which he stated that he was entirely satisfied, and that he was sure that no disrespect or reflection was intended by my amendment.

The object of the amendment was to put two men to work where only one was at work before; and as Col. Robbins is the commissioner, the new appointee will be the assistant, and I so stated in my remarks when I offered the amendment.

I acknowledge the gallantry of Col. Robbins, as I do the gallantry of the North Carolina soldiers headed by my distinguished friend who sits behind me [Mr. RANSOM], and I take great pleasure in saying in return for the high compliment he has paid to me, that the Army of Virginia had few, if any, nobler, better, and more gallant soldiers than that distinguished soldier from North Carolina. There is nothing between him and me, and I beg to disclaim upon the floor of the Senate, what I have disclaimed already in a letter to Col. Robbins, which should be perfectly satisfactory to him, any design or intention, however remote, of reflecting upon Col. Robbins, but my object was merely to give him an assistant in the arduous duties he is about to perform.

Mr. RANSOM. I thank the Senator from Virginia. I knew this would be his course; I knew that he could take no other course; I knew he would do what was right in the matter.

Mr. DAVIS. I should like to ask the Senator from Virginia if it is perfectly clear that both these gentlemen will be employed?

Mr. HUNTON. I can not say; I suppose so. The amendment gives authority to the Secretary of War to appoint an assistant commissioner, and I understood when I offered the amendment that an assistant commissioner was necessary.

NORTHERN MISSISSIPPI RAILROAD COMPANY.

Mr. WASHBURN. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 2107) granting to the Northern Mississippi Railroad Company right of way through certain Indian reservations in Minnesota.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs with amendments.

The first amendment of the Committee on Indian Affairs was, in section 1, line 3, after the word "Mississippi," to strike out "Railroad" and insert "Railway;" in line 13, after the word "adjacent," to strike out "for" and insert "to;" in line 15, after the word "amount," to strike out "three" and insert "two;" in line 17, before the word "miles," to strike out "six" and insert "ten;" and in line 18, after the word "reservations," to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That no part of such lands herein granted shall be used except in such manner and for such purposes only as are necessary for the construction and convenient operation of said railroad line, and when any portion thereof shall cease to be used such portion shall revert to the nation or tribe of Indians from which the same shall be taken.

So as to make the section read:

That there is hereby granted to the Northern Mississipi Railway Company, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Minnesota, and its assigns, the right of way for the extension of its railroad through the Leech Lake Indian, Chippewa Indian, and Winnebagoshish Indian Reservations, in the State of Minnesota; such right of way to be 50 feet in width on each side of the center line of said railroad: and said company shall also have the right to take from the land adjacent to the line of said road materials, stone, and earth necessary for the construction of said railroad; also ground adjacent to such right of way for station buildings, depots, machine shops, side tracks, turn-outs, and water stations, not to exceed in amount 200 feet in width and 3,000 feet in length for each station, to the extent of one station for every 10 miles of road constructed within the limits of said reservations: Provided, That no part of such lands herein granted shall be used except in such manner and for such purposes only as are necessary for the construction and convenient operation of said railroad line, and when any portion thereof shall cease to be used such portion shall revert to the nation or tribe of Indians from which the same shall be taken.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, line 2, before the word "compensation," to strike out "and" and insert "of;" so as to read:

That it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Interior to fix the amount of compensation to be paid to the Indians for such right of way and provide the time and manner for the payments thereof.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 3, before the word "years," to strike out "ten" and insert "three;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 3. That the rights herein granted shall be forfeited by said company unless the road is constructed through said reservation within three years.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting to the Northern Mississippi Railway Company right of way through certain Indian reservations in Minnesota."

CHOCTAW COAL AND RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. PLATT. From the Committee on the Judiciary I report back favorably with certain amendments the bill (H. R. 7680) to authorize purchasers of the property and franchises of the Choctaw Coal and Railway Company to organize a corporation and to confer upon the same all the powers, privileges, and franchises vested in that company. As it is necessary that the bill, if passed at all, should be passed at the present session, I am instructed to ask for its immediate consideration.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendments of the Committee on the Judiciary will be stated in their order.

The first amendment of the Committee on the Judiciary was, in section 2, line 15, after the word "Congress," to strike out "or of the State of Minnesota;" in line 16, after the words "laws of," to strike out "said State" and insert "Minnesota;" so as to read:

That the purchasers of the rights of way, railroads, mines, coal leasehold estates, and other property, and the franchises of the said Choctaw Coal and Railway Company at any sale made under or by virtue of any process or decree of any court having jurisdiction thereof, shall be, and are hereby, constituted a corporation and shall be vested with all the right, title, interest, property, possession, claim, and demand in law and equity, of, in, and to such rights of way, railroads, mines, coal leasehold estates, and property of the said Choctaw Coal and Railway Company, and with all the rights, powers, immunities, privileges, and franchises which have been heretofore granted to or conferred upon said company by any act or acts of Congress, or which it possesses by virtue of its charter under the laws of Minnesota.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out the last clause of section 1, beginning with line 17, in the following words:

Said State, with the same force and effect as if the provisions of said acts were herein fully reënacted and made applicable to such new corporation.

And to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That such new corporation shall not have the right to acquire and hold any houses or buildings in South McAlester situate off the right of way and depot grounds of said Choctaw Coal and Railway Company.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, line 11, after the word "on" to strike out "this" and insert "whose;" so as to read:

And shall adopt a corporate name and common seal, determine the amount of capital stock and bonds to be issued to the persons for or on whose account said property may have been purchased, and shall have power and authority to make and issue certificates for the said capital stock in shares of $50 each and bonds.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 3, line 21, after the word "corporation," to insert the word "to," and in line 22, after the word "thereafter," to strike out "acquired" and insert "acquire;" so as to read:

And this act shall be construed and treated as an assent upon the part of the United States to the acquisition and holding by such new corporation of the estates and premises thereby conveyed, subject to the right of said corporation to thereafter acquire and hold such additional property as it may lawfully do by virtue hereof.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to add at the end of section 4 the following proviso:

Provided, That the right to construct branches conferred by this section shall exist and be exercised in the Indian Territory only for the purpose of developing and working the leases mentioned in the act of Congress of October 1, 1890.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. PLATT. I move that the Senate request a conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. PUGH, Mr. VILAS, and Mr. PLATT were appointed.

JOHN T. HEARD.

Mr. ROACH. I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate a bill from the House of Representatives which is on the table.

The bill (H. R. 7874) to enable the Secretary of the Interior to pay JOHN T. HEARD for professional services rendered the "Old Settler" or Western Cherokee Indians out of the funds of said Indians was read twice by its title.

Mr. ROACH. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

The Secretary read the bill, and, by unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. ROACH. I move to indefinitely postpone the bill (S. 2270) to enable the Secretary of the Interior to pay JOHN T. HEARD for professional services rendered the Old Settlers or Western Cherokee Indians out of the funds of said Indians.

The motion was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLES, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the second report of the committee of conference, on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6913) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department, and fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895, and for other purposes; receded from its disagreement to the residue amendments of the Senate to the said bill upon which the committee were unable to agree, and agreed to the same.

The message also announced that the House insisted upon its amendment to the bill (S. 971) to open, widen, and extend alleys in the District of Columbia; agreed to the conference asked for by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee, Mr. RUSK, and Mr. HARMER managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message further announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5246) providing for the inspection of immigrants by United States consuls; agreed to the conference asked for by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. BOATNER, Mr. TERRY, and Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE, managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6415) to provide an immediate revision and equalization of real-estate values in the District of Columbia; also to provide an assessment of real estate in said District in the year 1896 and every third year thereafter, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House had passed a concurrent resolution granting permission to the Citizens' Committee, Knights of Pythias encampment, to illuminate the Dome of the Capitol on the nights of August 27, 28, 29, and 30, 1894, under the control and direction of the Architect of the Capitol; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 4490) granting a pension to Henry C. Field;

A bill (H. R. 4686) to correct the military record of Alexander P. Magaan, of Battery H, Fourth United States Artillery;

A bill (H. R. 4724) for the relief of Edward Chastain;

A bill (H. R. 5703) for the relief of Johanna Gleason;

A bill (H. R. 5994) granting a pension to Rosanna Cobb, widow of Edmond Cobb, deceased, late of Sac and Fox war;

A bill (H. R. 6122) authorizing the Kansas City, Oklahoma and Pacific Railway Company to construct and operate a railway through the Indian Territory, and for other purposes; and

A bill (H. R. 6923) for the relief of Matthew T. Lewis.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following bills; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

A bill (S. 16) granting a pension to Nettie N. Seaver;

A bill (S. 470) for the relief of George H. Jewett, of Arlington, Washington County, Nebr.;

A bill (S. 876) granting a pension to Rebecca H. Chambers;

A bill (S. 1640) granting a pension to Otis Smith;

A bill (S. 2217) to provide for the closing of a part of an alley in square 185, in the city of Washington, D. C.;

A bill (H. R. 522) for the relief of Benjamin Alford;

A bill (H. R. 855) to amend an act granting a pension to Elizabeth Voss;

A bill (H. R. 856) granting an increase of pension to John Stockwell;

A bill (H. R. 953) to increase the pension of Mary P. Broughton;

A bill (H. R. 1313) to increase the pension of John Scott.

A bill (H. R. 1463) granting a pension to Mrs. Lucinda C. Wheeler, widow of John H. Wheeler;

A bill (H. R. 1717) granting a pension to Eliza Holmes;

A bill (H. R. 2108) to perfect the military record of Warren Alonzo Alden;

A bill (H. R. 2133) to correct the military record of Capt. E. M. Ives;

A bill (H. R. 3032) to remove the charge of desertion from the record of John A. Jack;

A bill (H. R. 3065) to increase the pension of James Lane;

A bill (H. R. 3076) granting a pension to George L. Frymire;

A bill (H. R. 3309) to pension Ambrose Gisebert;

A bill (H. R. 3840) to pension Joel A. Walters;

A bill (H. R. 3992) to increase the pension of Julia Bews;

A bill (H. R. 4780) to pension Thankful Robbins;

A bill (H. R. 4811) to pension Mary Trimble;

A bill (H. R. 5374) granting a pension to Sarah Oddy;

A bill (H. R. 5816) granting a pension to Mary Ann Donoghue;

A bill (H. R. 6206) granting a pension to A. F. Neely;

A bill (H. R. 6213) to pension Harriet R. Tate;

A bill (H. R. 6384) for the relief of Walter S. McLeod;

A bill (H. R. 6405) to remove the charge of desertion standing against Patrick Kelleher, late private Company C, Thirty-eighth Illinois Volunteers;

A bill (H. R. 6542) to change the lines between the eastern and western judicial districts of North Carolina and fixing time for holding courts in said eastern district;

A bill (H. R. 7187) to make the city of Oakland, county of Alameda, State of California, a subport of entry; and

A bill (H. R. 7803) to amend sections 2401 and 2403 of the Revised Statutes.

COLUMBIA RIVER BRIDGE.

Mr. DOLPH. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 1772) extending the time for the completion of a railroad bridge over the Columbia River at or near Vancouver, in the State of Washington.

The preamble is long, and the Committee on Commerce have reported to strike it out. I think the preamble need not be read.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments.

The first amendment was, in line 3, after the word "the," to strike out "said;" and in line 5, after the word "the," to strike out "said;" so as to read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the time for the completion of the bridge across the Columbia River at or near Vancouver, in the State of Washington, under the act of Congress approved August 29, 1890, entitled "An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Columbia River by the Oregon Railway Extensions Company," be, and the same is hereby, extended until the ——day of ——, 18—.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, to fill the blanks in line 9 by inserting "fifteenth" and "April," and in line 10 by inserting "ninety-seven;" so as to read:

The same is hereby extended until the 15th day of April, 1897.

Mr. DOLPH. I have the consent of the committee to move as an amendment to the amendment to make the date "1898," extending the time a year longer.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The committee report to strike out the preamble.

The amendment striking out the preamble was agreed to.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. CALL submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6913) making appropriations for current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 63.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 47 and 116, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 21, and agree to the same with amendments as follows: Strike out the matter inserted by said amendment, and strike out, on page 34 of the bill, all after the word "dollars," in line 13, down to and including the word "buildings," in line 19, and on page 47 of the bill, after the word "dollars," in line 3, insert the following: "Provided, That whenever it shall be made to appear to the Secretary of the Interior that by reason of age, disability, or inability, any allottee of Indian lands under this or former acts of Congress can not personally and with benefit to himself occupy or improve his allotment, or any part thereof, the same may be leased upon such terms, regulations, and conditions as shall be prescribed by the Secretary for a term not exceeding five years for farming and grazing purposes, or ten years for mining or business purposes: Provided further, That the surplus lands of any tribe may be leased for farming purposes by the council of such tribes under the same rules and regulations and for the same term of years as is now allowed in the case of leases for grazing purposes;" and that the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 62, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert: "One hundred and five thousand dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 119, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Add at the end of said amendment the following: "Of March 3, 1893; and this provision shall not be construed to extend the time nor to increase the amount of the liability of the Government as provided in section 10 of the said act of March 3, 1893;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 120, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lines 31 and 32 of said amendment strike out the words "except lands containing asphaltum, gilsonite, or other like substances, which are hereby reserved from sale," and after the word "States," in line 35 of said amendment, insert the following:

"Provided, That no person shall be entitled to locate more than two claims, neither to exceed 10 acres, on any land containing asphaltum, gilsonite, or like substances."

And the Senate agree to the same.

The committee of conference have been unable to agree on the amendments of the Senate numbered 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, and 115

WILKINSON CALL,
F. M. COCKRELL,
H. M. TELLER,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

W. S. HOLMAN,
JOHN M. ALLEN,
JNO. L. WILSON,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was concurred in.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs:

A bill (H. R. 4686) to correct the military record of Alexander P. Magaan, of Battery H, Fourth United States Artillery;

A bill (H. R. 4724) for the relief of Edward Chastani; and

A bill (H. R. 6923) for the relief of Matthew T. Lewis.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (H. R. 4490) granting a pension to Henry C. Field;

A bill (H. R. 5703) for the relief of Johanna Gleason; and

A bill (H. R. 5994) granting a pension to Rosanna Cobb, widow of Edward Cobb, deceased, late of Sac and Fox war.

The bill (H. R. 6122) authorizing the Kansas City, Oklahoma and Pacific Railway Company to construct and operate a railway through the Indian Territory, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

CHATTAHOOCHEE RIVER BRIDGE.

Mr. PUGH. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 6577) to authorize the construction of a wagon and foot bridge across the Chattahoochee River at or near the town of Columbia, Ala.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HOLMES & LEATHERS.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Yesterday the Senate made an order that after the morning hour to-day the consideration of the bill (S. 1945) for the relief of Holmes & Leathers should be resumed. I ask unanimous consent that the consideration of the bill may be postponed until 1 o'clock to-morrow.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it will be so ordered.

GUARANTEE COMPANIES.

Mr. HILL. I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 4954) relative to recognizances, stipulations, bonds, and undertakings, and to allow certain corporations to be accepted as surety thereon.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be read for information.

The Secretary read the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill called up by the Senator from New York?

Mr. PALMER. Mr. President, the bill is a most remarkable one. I think it deserves greater consideration than it can receive in the morning hour. I have no disposition to object to its present consideration, but it will certainly cause debate, because debate is necessary before the bill can be passed.

Mr. HILL. This bill has passed the House of Representatives, and there can be no objection to its consideration.

By unanimous consent the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. HILL. Pending the discussion of the bill the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] would like to have a private bill passed, and I consent.

ENOCH DAVIS.

Mr. ALLISON. The Senator from New York yields to me for a moment, as I desire to have the bill (S. 1688) for the relief of Enoch Davis put on its passage at this time. I assure the Senator from New York it will lead to no debate.

By unanimous consent, the bill (S. 1688) for the relief of Enoch Davis was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the proper accounting officers of the Government to liquidate and settle the claim of Enoch Davis, late a member of Company G of the Sixth Regiment of Iowa Volunteer Infantry, for pay and bounty; and appropriates $300 for the payment of the amount that may be awarded to him on account of the claim.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MOUNT VERNON ELECTRIC RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. FAULKNER. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 7006) to authorize the Washington, Alexandria and Mount Vernon Electric Railway Company to extend its line of road into and within the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. FAULKNER. I ask that the amendments reported by the Committee on the District of Columbia be considered as they are reached in the reading of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The Secretary proceeded to read the bill. The first amendment reported by the Committee on the District of Columbia was to strike out section 1, as follows:

That the Washington, Alexandria and Mount Vernon Electric Railway Company, a body incorporated under the laws of the State of Virginia, be, and it is hereby, authorized to construct and lay down a street railway with the necessary switches, turn-outs, and other mechanical devices, in the District of Columbia, through and along the following routes:

A main line commencing on B street between Sixth and Seventh streets northwest, at a point to be designated by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, thence westward along B street to Seventeenth street, thence northward on Seventeenth street to E street, and thence westward on E street to the Potomac River, thence across the Potomac River by a suitable steam ferry or transfer barge to Analostan Island, thence across said island to that part of the arm of the Potomac River known as Little River, and thence across said Little River by a suitable trestle or bridge to the dividing line between the District of Columbia and the State of Virginia.

Also a branch from the intersection of B and Fifteenth streets northwest along Fifteenth street to its intersection with Pennsylvania avenue.

Also a branch from the intersection of B street and Fourteenth street northwest along Fourteenth street to the Long bridge.

And the said company is hereby authorized and empowered to construct and maintain at the foot of E street and New Hampshire avenue, and on Analostan Island, the necessary landings and slips for the operation of a ferryboat or transfer steamer, said landings and slips to be constructed on plans approved by the Secretary of War. The necessary land at the foot of New Hampshire avenue and E street for ferry slip and landing may be leased to said company by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia at such rental and on such terms as said Commissioners may agree upon with said company. The said company is also authorized and empowered to construct, maintain, and operate, subject to the approval of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, a double-end steamboat or transfer barge for the transfer of its cars. These routes may be modified or extended at the will of Congress, and the said railway company shall comply with such modifications or extensions.

And in lieu thereof to insert:

That the Washington, Alexandria and Mount Vernon Electric Railway Company, a body incorporated under the laws of the State of Virginia, be, and is hereby, authorized to construct and lay down a double track street railway, except as hereinafter provided, with the necessary switches, turn-outs, and other mechanical devices, the number and location of which shall be approved by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, said street railway to be constructed and laid down through and along the following routes:

Commencing on B street, between Sixth and Seventh streets northwest, at a point to be designated by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, thence westward along B street to Thirteen-and-a-half street, thence northward on Thirteen-and-a-half street to E street by single track, thence westward on E street to Fourteenth street, on a single track, thence southward on Fourteenth street, using the tracks of the Belt Line Street Railway, to the Potomac River, thence across the Potomac River by a suitable ferry or transfer barge to the Virginia shore, with the privilege of a double track on B street from Thirteen-and-a-half street, connecting with the Belt Line Street Railway tracks at Fourteenth street.

And said company is authorized to construct its road across the tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad at or near the Long Bridge, under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

And the said Washington, Alexandria and Mount Vernon Electric Railway Company is hereby authorized and empowered to construct and maintain, after acquiring title to the same, at the foot of Fourteenth street, a necessary landing and slip for the operation of a ferryboat or transfer steamer, said landing and slip to be constructed on plans approved by the Secretary of War, and to use an overhead wire for a distance of not exceeding 400 feet, commencing at the extreme southern end of the slip.

And said company is also authorized and empowered to construct, maintain, and operate, subject to the approval of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, a double-end steamboat or transfer barge for the transfer of its cars, with all the modern improvements for the safety and protection of its passengers: Provided, That the said company be authorized to condemn for its use for said landing and slip, as provided for in this act, a space not exceeding 150 by 200 feet.

Mr. MCMILLAN. I have one or two slight amendments to offer to the bill, and I desire to inquire whether I shall offer them as the reading proceeds or wait until the reading is concluded?

Mr. FAULKNER. I think the Senator had better propose his amendments as the reading proceeds, while we are acting upon the amendments reported by the committee.

Mr. MCMILLAN. On page 3, in line 12, section 1, where the amendment reads "commencing on B street, between Sixth and Seventh streets northwest," I move to amend by striking out "Sixth and Seventh," and inserting "Seventh and Eighth." Seventh street is very narrow at that point, and it will answer the purpose if the railway company brings the railroad to that point. I move to amend the amendment of the committee in that way.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to amend the amendment reported by the committee, in section 1, line 12, page 3, after the word "between," by striking out "Sixth and Seventh," and inserting "Seventh and Eighth."

Mr. FAULKNER. That is right.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MCMILLAN. In line 38 of the same amendment, I move to strike out the word "approval" and insert "supervision."

Mr. FAULKNER. There is no objection to that.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In line 38 of the amendment, after the words "subject to the," it is proposed to strike out "approval" and insert "supervision;" so as to read:

And said company is also authorized and empowered to construct, maintain, and operate, subject to the supervision of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, etc.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. I ask that that part of the bill which has just been read touching overhead wires be again read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. PASCO in the chair). The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

Said landing and slip to be constructed on plans approved by the Secretary of War, and to use an overhead wire for a distance of not exceeding 400 feet, commencing at the extreme southern end of the slip.

Mr. HALE. On which side of the river will this be?

Mr. FAULKNER. On the Washington side, at the southern end of the street, the extreme limit of the slip extending out into the river, which does not bring the overhead wires at all into the city's streets, but on private property.

Mr. HALE. What is the necessity of this intrusion of overhead wires when we can do without them?

Mr. FAULKNER. The reason for it is that this line of railway runs by overhead wires on the Virginia shore and by an underground cable on the Washington side, but in order to get the cars off the ferryboat overhead wires have to be used to a certain limited extent on private property, which the company will have to purchase to bring the cars from the boat to connect with the underground cable.

Mr. HALE. Do the overhead wires cross any street?

Mr. FAULKNER. Oh, no. The wires are merely from the end of the slip, so as to connect with the underground line.

Mr. HALE. They cross no street?

Mr. FAULKNER. No.

Mr. HOAR. Would it not be safe, I suggest to the Senator from Maine, as there is objection to overhead wires on the public streets, to provide that they shall only be placed on private property?

Mr. HALE. I think that is a good suggestion.

Mr. FAULKNER. I think with the limitation of 400 feet the provision as it stands is perfectly safe, certainly with reference to any of the public interests. I do not know what amount of land in width the company could acquire there, and whether it might not be necessary, in order to connect with the underground system, to go somewhat on the public road, but certainly at that point in the city it could do no harm under any circumstances. This point is right at the banks of the river, where, as I understand, it is only a distance of 400 feet from the extreme southern end of the slip, which is the end running into the river.

The Senator from Michigan [Mr. MCMILLAN] and I were very careful in drawing this bill, and we tried to guard it in every way. I am satisfied that no public interest and no policy of the Senate will be affected by any of its provisions.

Mr. HALE. The committee ought to jealously scrutinize every proposition to place overhead wires in this city.

Mr. FAULKNER. I fully concur with the Senator in that, and I agree with him in that policy. I think the Senator will find that we have examined this subject with great care and inserted every limitation he would himself suggest if he had examined it.

Mr. HALE. I would insert the words "for the purpose of connection," so as to show that the overhead wires are to be used only for that purpose.

Mr. FAULKNER. I have no objection to that.

Mr. HALE. After the word "and," in line 34, I move to insert "for the purpose of connection;" so as to read:

And for the purpose of connection to use an overhead wire for a distance of not exceeding 400 feet.

Mr. FAULKNER. I think that is exactly the meaning of the language as it stands.

Mr. HALE. I desire to have it clearly defined and stated that it is to be for that one purpose. Let the amendment be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In line 34 of the amendment to section 1, after the word "and," it is proposed to insert "for the purpose of connection."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment as amended.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on the District of Columbia was, in section 4, line 4, after the word "pattern," to insert "and subject to the approval of the District Commissioners;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 4. That the said railway shall be constructed in a substantial and durable manner; and all rails, electrical and mechanical appliances, conduits, stations, etc., shall be of approved pattern, and subject to the approval of the District Commissioners.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 5, line 15, after the word "be," to insert "used or;" in the same line, after the word "constructed," to strike out "or," and insert "nor steam power;" and in line 16, after the word "Washington," to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That the tracks of said road shall not be used for the transportation of any cars other than those used for the transportation of passengers on street railways.

So as to make the section read:

SEC. 5. That the said corporation shall at all times keep the space between its tracks and rails, and 2 feet exterior thereto, in such condition as the Commissioners of the District of Columbia or their successors may direct, and whenever any street occupied by said railway is paved or repaired, or otherwise improved, the said corporation shall bear all the expense of improving the spaces above described. Should the said corporation fail to comply with the orders of the Commissioners, the work shall be done by the proper officials of the District of Columbia, and the amounts due from said corporation shall be collected as provided by section 5 of the act entitled "An act providing a permanent form of government for the District of Columbia, approved June 11, 1878." But no overhead wires shall be used or constructed, nor steam power used within the limits of the city of Washington: Provided, That the tracks of said road shall not be used for the transportation of any cars other than those used for the transportation of passengers on street railways.

Mr. MCMILLAN. In line 15, section 5, after the word "constructed," I move to insert "except as hereinbefore provided."

Mr. FAULKNER. I was just going to offer that amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 5, line 15, after the word "constructed," it is proposed to insert "except as hereinbefore provided;" so as to read:

But no overhead wires shall be used or constructed except as hereinbefore provided.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MCMILLAN. In connection with the amendment just adopted, after the word "nor," in line 15, I move to insert the word "shall," and in line 16, before the word "used," to insert the word "be;" so as to read:

Nor shall steam power be used within the limits of the city of Washington.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. Now I ask that the entire provision be read as it stands, beginning in line 14, after the date "1878."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

But no overhead wires shall be used or constructed, except as hereinbefore provided, nor shall steam power be used within the limits of the city of Washington: Provided, That the tracks of said road shall not be used for the transportation of any cars other than those used for the transportation of passengers on street railways.

Mr. HALE. That is right.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment reported by the Committee on the District of Columbia was, in section 9, line 8, after the words "operation of a," to strike out "cable motor, electric, pneumatic, or other railroad," and insert "street railway;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 9. That it shall also be lawful for said corporation, its successors or assigns, to erect and maintain, upon private grounds, at such convenient and suitable points along its lines as may seem most desirable to the board of directors of the said corporation and subject to the approval of the said Commissioners, an engine house or houses, boiler house, and all other buildings necessary for the successful operation of a street railway.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 10, line 1, before the word "said," to strike out "main line of the," and in line 3, after the word "act," to strike out "and the branches of the same shall be completed within two years from the passage of this act;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 10. That the said railway company shall be commenced within one year and completed within two years from the passage of this act.

Mr. HUNTON. I call the attention of the Senator from West Virginia to line 1, of section 10, which reads:

That the said railway company shall be commenced within one year.

It ought to be "the said railroad."

Mr. FAULKNER. Yes. I move, after the word "said," in section 10, line 1, to strike out the words "railway company," and insert the word "railroad;" so as to read:

That the said railroad shall be commenced within one year and completed within two years from the passage of this act.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on the District of Columbia was, in section 11, line 1, after the word "run," to strike out "public carriages" and insert "street railway cars;" in line 2, before the word "cable," to insert "underground;" after the word "cable," in the same line, to insert "or;" in line 3, after the word "electric," to strike out "or other mechanical;" in the same line, after the word "power," to strike out "but nothing in this act shall allow the use of steam power in locomotives;" and in line 5, after the word "Provided," to strike out "further;" so as to read:

SEC. 11. That the said company may run street railway cars propelled by underground cable or electric power: Provided, That for the purpose of making a continuous connection over the route hereinbefore described and designated the said company shall have the right to cross all streets, avenues, and highways that may be along the designated route.

Mr. MCMILLAN. In section 11, line 1, after the word "company," I move to strike out the word "may" and insert the word "shall."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 11, line 1, after the word "company," it is proposed to strike out "may" and insert "shall;" so as to read:

That the said company shall run street railway cars, etc.

Mr. FAULKNER. There is no objection to that.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. I ask the Secretary to read the provision in section 11 as it will read if amended as proposed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

That the said company shall run street railway cars propelled by underground cable or electric power.

Mr. HALE. I think it should read "underground cable or underground electric power." I move to insert the word "underground" after the word "or," in line 3, and before the word "electric."

Mr. FAULKNER. There is no objection to that, though I think it is covered by the language which is used.

Mr. HALE. As it is left, it very clearly will be a debatable question whether the electric power shall be overhead or underground.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Maine will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to amend the amendment of the committee in line 3, after the word "or," by inserting "underground;" so as to read:

That the said company shall run street railway cars propelled by underground cable or underground electric power.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on the District of Columbia was, in section 12, line 10, after the word "dollars," to insert "for each day said failure occurs;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 12. That the said company shall furnish and maintain passenger houses as required by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia and shall place first-class cars on said railway with all the modern improvements for the convenience, comfort, and safety of passengers, and shall run cars as often as the public convenience may require in accordance with a time table approved by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia. Every failure to comply with the conditions of this section shall render the said corporation liable to a fine of $50 for each day said failure occurs, to be recovered in any court of competent jurisdiction at the suit of the Commissioners of said District.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. In section 12, line 2, after the word "houses," I move to insert the words "and transfer stations."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 12, line 3, after the word "houses," it is proposed to insert "and transfer stations;" so as to read:

That the said company shall furnish and maintain passenger houses and transfer stations as required by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. In line 3, after the words "District of Columbia," I move to insert the words "but no such passenger house or transfer station shall be built upon the public streets or sidewalks or upon public property." I want to save the public reservations. If the railroad company erect houses or stations they should put them on private property and pay for it.

Mr. FAULKNER. There is no objection to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 12, line 3, after the word "Columbia," it is proposed to insert "but no such passenger house or transfer station shall be built upon the public streets or sidewalks or upon public property."

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on the District of Columbia was, in section 15, line 6, after the word "expenditures," to insert "within the District of Columbia;" and in line 12, after the word "made," to strike out "at the specified time or;" so as to read:

SEC. 15. That said company shall, on or before the 15th of February of each year, make a report to Congress, through the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, of the names of all the stockholders therein and the amount of stock held by each, together with a detailed statement of the receipts and expenditures within the District of Columbia, from whatever source and on whatever account, for the preceding year ending December 31, and such other facts as may be required by any general law of the District of Columbia, which report shall be verified by the affidavit of the president and secretary of said comdany, and, if said report is not made within ten days thereafter, such failure shall of itself operate as a forfeiture of the privileges and rights hereby granted to said company, and it shall be the duty of the Commissioners to cause to be instituted proper judicial proceedings therefor, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 16, line 2, after the word "passenger," to insert "including transportation to the Virginia shore;" so as to make the section read;

SEC. 16. That said company shall receive a rate of fare not exceeding 5 cents per passenger, including transportation to the Virginia shore; and the said company may make arrangements with all existing railway companies in the District of Columbia for the interchange of tickets in payment of fare on its road: Provided, That within the limits of the District of Columbia six tickets shall be sold for 25 cents.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 17, line 12, after the word "dollars," to strike out "to said company;" so as to read:

The person or persons so offending shall forfeit and pay for each such offense not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the Chair announces that the morning hour is closed, and the Calendar of General Orders under Rule IX is in order.

Mr. FAULKNER. I ask that the Senate proceed with the consideration of the pending bill. The reading is almost through. There are but two pages remaining.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none. The reading of the bill will be proceeded with.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on the District of Columbia was, in section 18, line 4, after the word "construct" to insert "at its own cost;" and in line 5, after the word "railways," to insert "under the supervision and control of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia"; so as to make the section read:

SEC. 18. That the said company shall have the right of way across such other railways as are now in operation within the limits of the lines granted by this act, and is hereby authorized to construct, at its own cost, its said road across such other railways, under the supervision and control of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia: Provided That it shall not interrupt the travel of such other railways in such construction.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 20, line 6, after the word "exceeding," to strike out "one hundred and;" and in line 7, after the word "instituted," to strike out "in the usual way in the supreme court of the District of Columbia, under such rules and regulations as said court may prescribe for such purposes," and insert "under the provisions of chapter 11, Revised Statutes, relating to the District of Columbia;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 20. That in the event the company should not be able to come to an agreement with the owner or owners of any land through which the said road may be located or pass, proceedings for the condemnation for the use of the company of so much of said land as may be required, not exceeding 50 feet in width, may be instituted under the provisions of chapter 11, Revised Statutes, relating to the District of Columbia: Provided, That any property owner shall have the right of trial by jury in any such issue.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FAULKNER. I will state that section 21 was inadvertently left in, I suppose by the printer. It applies to a route which was stricken out by the committee and is not in the bill. I therefore move that section 21 be stricken out.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from West Virginia to strike out section 21.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FAULKNER. Section 22 should be changed so as to be section 21.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerks will make the necessary changes in the numbering of the sections.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on the District of Columbia was to strike out section 23, in the following words:

SEC. 23. That said company shall have the right to carry parcels, farm and dairy products on its lines in the city, and nothing in this act shall be considered as prohibiting the transportation of other freights between points in the State of Virginia and its landing at the foot of E street and New Hampshire avenue.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading the bill was continued to the end of section [23] 22.

Mr. HALE. How does this provision, in what is now section 22, accord with the proviso put on as in Committee of the Whole, at the end of section 5, on page 6:

Provided, That the tracks of said road shall not be used for the transportation of any cars other than those used for the transportation of passengers on street railways.

Mr. FAULKNER. It accords with it exactly. The Falls Church Railroad is a street railway. It comes in just to the south of the Arlington grounds, and strikes this road just about at the point where it will have a branch up to Arlington. We wish for the convenience of the people there to bring in that street railway over this same track, with all the limitations and conditions, as the Senator will see, which we impose upon this road.

Mr. HALE. The reading of the bill, to anyone not informed, would convey the idea that the Falls Church and Potomac Railway Company is a general railway company.

Mr. FAULKNER. Oh, no; it is not.

Mr. HALE. It is a street railway?

Mr. FAULKNER. A street railway.

Mr. HALE. But it is not so entitled.

Mr. FAULKNER. It is not so entitled. This is its corporate name.

Mr. HALE. If the Senator from West Virginia is certain about that, I shall make no point on it.

Mr. FAULKNER. I am certain about it.

Mr. HALE. The provision, then, grants nothing but a desirable connection with another street railway company?

Mr. FAULKNER. The Senator from Maine will see that the latter clause of this section applies to that road all of the limitations, conditions, and restrictions, after it gets to the District of Columbia, that we put upon this road.

Mr. HALE. I perceive that that is done by the proviso in the latter part of the section.

Mr. MCMILLAN. I will state to the Senator from Maine that the object of the committee has been to bring in all of these suburban lines over one track where it can be done, and to avoid a multiplication of the number of tracks on the streets.

Mr. HALE. I think that is right.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on the District of Columbia was, at the end of section [23] 22 to insert as a new section:

SEC. 23. That should the Washington, Alexandria and Mount Vernon Electric Railway Company fail or refuse to construct a double-track street railway on the Virginia side of the Potomac River to the Arlington Reservation and provide accommodations for the necessary travel from the city of Washington to Arlington within one year from the approval of this act, then all the rights, powers, privileges, and franchises conferred upon said company by this act within the jurisdiction of the District of Columbia shall be, and the same are hereby, forfeited.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was concluded.

Mr. HALE. I ask the Senator from West Virginia to go back with me to section 1, line 12, whether the route that the road is to follow in the city is given.

Commencing on B street, between Sixth and Seventh streets northwest.

Mr. FAULKNER. Between Seventh and Eighth streets northwest. We changed that.

Mr. HALE. Between Seventh and Eighth streets northwest. Where is that with relation to the present station of the Pennsylvania Railroad?

Mr. FAULKNER. The station is on Sixth street, and this is the very wide cobblestone street just back of the market. The object and purpose of this line is to get to the market.

Mr. HALE. Then it does not go so far easterly as the Pennsylvania Railroad station?

Mr. FAULKNER. It commences a block from the Pennsylvania station, just back of the market.

Mr. HALE. —

Thence westward along B street—

That is the cobblestone street.

Mr. FAULKNER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HALE. —

to Thirteen-and-a-half street.

Mr. FAULKNER. That is a very inferior street, if the Senator knows it. It is one we could not hurt by putting anything on it.

Mr. HALE. It is a street between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets.

Mr. FAULKNER. Between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets.

Mr. MCMILLAN. It is Thirteen-and-a-half street.

Mr. FAULKNER. Yes. The road is to come up that street with a single track.

Mr. HALE. It is between the two streets, Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets.

Thence northward on Thirteen-and-a-half street to E street, by a single track.

How near to Pennsylvania avenue is the point where Thirteen-and-a-half street reaches E street?

Mr. FAULKNER. It can not be said that it is a block, because, as the Senator will remember, the reservation commences on the east side of Fourteenth street right at the avenue. Just that reservation separates it from the avenue. We contemplate, in the ultimate arrangement of these street railways, as I dare say the Senator from Maine has heard, that the route of the Fourteenth street cable road shall be changed, so that it will run up Fourteenth street from Pennsylvania avenue. There we propose to have the transfer station, so as to relieve the congested condition of Fifteenth street. The proposed road will then run along E street, which is south of the little reservation, to Fourteenth street, where the Belt line runs, after having come across Pennsylvania avenue from E street, north of the avenue.

Mr. HALE. But it is all below Pennsylvania avenue.

Mr. FAULKNER. It is all below Pennsylvania avenue. Then it uses the tracks of the Belt line down to the Potomac.

Mr. HALE. I should think, from my recollection of the location, that coming up E street anywhere westerly of Thirteenth would bring the road pretty near the avenue.

Mr. FAULKNER. That little reservation merely separates it.

Mr. HALE. That is all?

Mr. FAULKNER. Yes, sir.

Mr. MCMILLAN. I will state to the Senator from Maine that the power house of the Washington and Georgetown Railroad Company is right at the corner of Thirteen-and-a-half and E streets. Thirteen-and-a-half is an old-fashioned little street, and is not used much except for the trucks of the Washington and Georgetown Railway. In fact, it is hardly used at all. It does not come to the avenue. There is a very wide space there.

Mr. HALE. All below the avenue?

Mr. FAULKNER. All below the avenue.

Mr. MCMILLAN. The company wanted to come up Thirteenth street and touch the avenue, and we declined to grant permission to do that.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. FAULKNER. I move that the Senate request a conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Presiding Officer was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. FAULKNER, Mr. HARRIS, and Mr. MCMILLAN were appointed.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had, on the 3d instant, approved and signed the act (S. 2150) to provide an American register for the steamer Oceano, of New York, N. Y.

The message also announced that the President of the United States had, on the 6th instant, approved and signed the act (S. 1468) for the relief of James L. Townsend.

UNIFORM SYSTEM OF BANKRUPTCY.

Mr. GEORGE. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate take up the bill (H. R. 4609) to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. PLATT. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made.

Mr. GEORGE. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill, notwithstanding the objection.

Mr. PLATT. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut suggests the absence of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allison,	Faulkner,	Jones, Ark.	Patton,
Bate,	Frye,	Kyle,	Perkins,
Berry,	Gallinger,	Lindsay,	Platt,
Blackburn,	George,	Lodge,	Power,
Brice,	Gordon,	McLaurin,	Proctor,
Camden,	Hale,	McMillan,	Roach,
Chandler,	Harris,	Manderson,	Sherman,
Cockrell,	Hawley,	Martin,	Shoup,
Coke,	Higgins,	Mills,	Teller,
Cullom,	Hill,	Mitchell, Wis.	Vest,
Davis,	Hoar,	Murphy,	Walsh,
Dixon,	Hunton,	Palmer,	Washburn,
Dubois,	Jarvis,	Pasco,	White.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-two Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. The question recurs on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Mississippi that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bankruptcy bill. (Putting the question.) The ayes appear to have it.

Mr. HOAR and Mr. HIGGINS called for the yeas and nays, and they were ordered.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GEORGE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH]. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Mr. GORDON (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Iowa [Mr. WILSON].

Mr. MITCHELL of Wisconsin (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY]. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Mr. PALMER (when his name was called). The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH], with whom I am paired, is absent from the city. I therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. PATTON (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Maryland [Mr. GIBSON].

Mr. VILAS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL]. If he were in the Chamber I should vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I inquire if the senior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON] has voted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. He has not voted.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I do not know how the senior Senator from Nebraska would vote, and therefore withhold my vote. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Mr. MCMILLAN (after having voted in the affirmative). I inquire if the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. BLANCHARD] has voted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. He has not voted.

Mr. McMILLAN. Then I withdraw my vote, being paired with that Senator.

The Secretary recapitulated the vote.

Mr. MANDERSON. I desire to know whether the senior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN] has voted upon this question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. He has not voted.

Mr. MANDERSON. I am paired with the senior Senator from Kentucky.

The result was announced—yeas 27, nays 14; as follows:

YEAS—27.

Bate,	Gray,	McLaurin,	Sherman,
Call,	Harris,	Martin,	Shoup.
Coke,	Hill,	Murphy,	Teller,
Cullom,	Hunton,	Pasco,	Walsh.
Davis.	Jarvis,	Pugh,	Washburn,
Dubois,	Kyle,	Ransom,	White.
Faulkner,	Lindsay,	Roach,

NAYS—14.

Dixon,	Hawley,	Perkins,	Turpie,
Frye,	Higgins,	Platt,	Vest.
Gallinger,	Hoar,	Power,
Hale.	Mills,	Proctor,

NOT VOTING—44.

Aldrich,	Carey,	Jones, Ark.	Patton,
Allen,	Chandler,	Jones, Nev.	Peffer,
Allison,	Cockrell,	Lodge,	Pettigrew,
Berry,	Daniel,	McMillan,	Quay,
Blackburn,	Dolph,	McPherson,	Smith.
Blanchard,	George,	Manderson,	Squire.
Brice,	Gibson,	Mitchell, Oregon	Stewart,
Butler,	Gordon,	Mitchell, Wis.	Vilas,
Caffery,	Gorman,	Morgan,	Voorhees,
Camden,	Hansbrough,	Morrill,	Wilson,
Cameron,	Irby,	Palmer.	Wolcott.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No quorum having voted, the Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allen,	Gallinger,	Lindsay,	Roach,
Bate,	George,	McLaurin,	Sherman,
Berry,	Gordon,	Manderson,	Shoup,
Blackburn,	Harris,	Martin,	Smith,
Caffery,	Hawley,	Mitchell, Wis.	Teller,
Call,	Higgins,	Murphy,	Turpie,
Coke,	Hill,	Palmer,	Vilas,
Cullom,	Hoar,	Pasco,	Walsh,
Davis,	Hunton,	Patton,	Washburn,
Dixon,	Jarvis,	Perkins,	White.
Faulkner,	Jones, Ark.	Proctor,
Frye,	Kyle,	Ransom,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Forty-six Senators have answered to their names. There is a quorum present. The Secretary will again call the roll on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Mississippi to proceed to the consideration of House bill 4609.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GEORGE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH], but I have a right to vote to make a quorum. I vote "yea."

Mr. McMILLAN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. BLANCHARD].

Mr. MITCHELL of Wisconsin (when his name was called). I wish to announce for the day my pair with the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY].

Mr. VILAS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL]. I announce the pair for the day.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. CAFFERY. I am paired with the Senator from Montana [Mr. POWER]. I am not aware how he would vote on this question, and I therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. PALMER. When my name was called I failed to announce my pair with the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH]. I withhold my vote.

Mr. CULLOM. I am paired with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY].

The result was announced—yeas 27, nays 11; as follows:

YEAS—27.

Allen,	Davis,	Jones, Ark.	Roach,
Allison,	Faulkner,	Kyle,	Sherman,
Bate,	George,	Lindsay,	Shoup,
Blackburn,	Gray,	McLaurin,	Teller,
Call,	Hill,	Manderson,	Walsh,
Cockrell,	Hunton,	Martin,	Washburn.
Coke,	Jarvis,	Pasco,

NAYS—11.

Berry,	Gallinger,	Perkins,	Turpie,
Dixon,	Hawley,	Platt,	White.
Frye,	Hoar,	Proctor,

NOT VOTING—47.

Aldrich,	Dubois,	McPherson,	Pugh,
Blanchard,	Gibson,	Mills,	Quay,
Brice,	Gordon,	Mitchell, Oregon	Ransom,
Butler,	Gorman,	Mitchell, Wis.	Smith,
Caffery,	Hale,	Morgan,	Squire,
Camden,	Hansbrough,	Morrill,	Stewart,
Cameron,	Harris,	Murphy,	Vest,
Carey,	Higgins,	Palmer,	Vilas,
Chandler,	Irby,	Patton,	Voorhees,
Cullom,	Jones, Nev.	Peffer,	Wilson,
Daniel,	Lodge,	Pettigrew,	Wolcott.
Dolph,	McMillan,	Power,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is no quorum voting. The roll will be called.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aldrich,	Dixon.	Jones, Ark.	Proctor,
Allen,	Faulkner,	Kyle,	Pugh,
Allison,	Frye,	Lindsay,	Ransom,
Bate,	Gallinger,	Lodge,	Roach,
Berry,	George,	McLaurin,	Sherman,
Blackburn,	Gordon,	McMillan,	Smith,
Brice,	Gray,	Manderson,	Teller,
Call,	Hawley,	Martin,	Turpie,
Carey,	Higgins,	Mitchell, Wis.	Vilas,
Cockrell,	Hill,	Murphy,	Walsh,
Coke,	Hoar,	Pasco,	Washburn,
Cullom,	Hunton,	Patton,	White.
Davis,	Jarvis,	Perkins,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-one Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. GEORGE. I see there is no voting quorum present. The Senate may be able to transact some business for which the presence of a voting quorum will not be required. I therefore ask leave to withdraw my motion to proceed to the consideration of the bankruptcy bill, with the understanding that I will renew it to-morrow morning.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the motion is withdrawn.

GUARANTEE COMPANIES.

Mr. HILL. Now, I should like to have the Senate proceed with House bill 4954, which was displaced by another measure.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 4954) relative to recognizances, stipulations, bonds, and undertakings, and to allow certain corporations to be accepted as surety thereon.

Mr. HILL. The bill has already been read through. The Senator from Illinois [Mr. PALMER] wanted to state some objections to the bill. I have sent for him to have him come to the front.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole and open to amendment. If there are no amendments as in Committee of the Whole the bill will be reported to the Senate.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, I have discharged my duty. I think I will let the bill go through. If the Senator from Illinois wants to reconsider it afterwards he can make the motion.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HARRISON C. HOBART.

Mr. VILAS. I ask unanimous consent to call up the bill (S. 1969) granting a pension to Harrison C. Hobart, brevet brigadier-general of volunteers.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to place upon the pension rolls the name of Harrison C. Hobart, late brevet brigadier-general of volunteers, and to pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ABANDONED MILITARY RESERVATIONS.

Mr. CAREY. I ask unanimous consent to call up the bill (H. R. 4667) to provide for the opening of certain abandoned military reservations, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Public Lands with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 1, line 4, after "heretofore," to strike out "or hereafter;" in line 7, after "1884," to insert "the disposal of which has not been provided for by a subsequent act of Congress;" in line 11, after the word "now," to insert "or may be;" in line 14, after the word "of," to strike out "ninety days" and insert "six months;" in line 18, after the word "of," to strike out "ninety days" and insert "six months;" in line 22, after the word "the," to strike out "appraised;" in the same line, after the word "value," to insert "heretofore or hereafter determined by appraisement;" in line 24, after the word "entry," to insert "and such payment may, at the option of the purchaser, be made;" in line 25, after the word "times," to insert "and at rates of interest;" and in line 27, after the word "Interior," to strike out "in general regulations to be fixed by him;" so as to make the section read:

That all lands not already disposed of included within the limits of any abandoned military reservation heretofore placed under the control of the Secretary of the Interior for disposition under the act approved July 5, 1884, the disposal of which has not been provided for by a subsequent act of Congress, where the area exceeds 5,000 acres, except such legal subdivisions as have Government improvements thereon, and except also such other parts as are now or may be reserved for some public use, or hereby opened to settlement under the public-land laws of the United States, and a preference right of entry for a period of six months from the date of this act shall be given all bona fide settlers who are qualified to enter under the homestead law and have made improvements and are now residing upon any agricultural lands in said reservations, and for a period of six months from the date of settlement when that shall occur after the date of this act: Provided, That persons who enter under the homestead law shall pay for such lands not less than the value heretofore or hereafter determined by appraisement nor less than the price of the land at the time of the entry, and such payment may, at the option of the purchaser, be made in five equal installments, at times and at rates of interest to be fixed by the Secretary of the Interior.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, line 4, after the word "lands," to strike out "not entered under the public-land laws prior to the day of sale" and insert "included in abandoned military reservations hereafter placed under the control of the Secretary of the Interior for disposal;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 2. That nothing contained in this act shall be construed to suspend or to interfere with the operation of the said act approved July 5, 1884, as to all lands included in abandoned military reservations hereafter placed under the control of the Secretary of the Interior for disposal, and all appraisements required by the first section of this act shall be in accordance with the provisions of said act of July 5, 1884.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. CAREY. I move that the Senate request a conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Presiding Officer was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. PASCO, Mr. MCLAURIN, and Mr. CAREY were appointed.

STEAMERS CLARIBEL AND ATHOS.

Mr. WHITE. I desire to call up the bill (S. 1706) to provide registers for the steamers Claribel and Athos. The bill was unanimously reported from the Committee on Commerce, and is very brief.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill; which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Commissioner of Navigation is hereby authorized and directed to cause the foreign-built steamers Claribel and Athos, purchased and owned by a corporation created under the laws of New Jersey, and repaired in American ports, to be registered as vessels of the United States.

SEC. 2. That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to cause the inspection of said vessels, steam boilers, steam pipes, and their appurtenances, and cause to be granted the usual certificate issued to steam vessels of the merchant marine, without reference to the fact that said steam boilers, steam pipes, and appurtenances were not constructed pursuant to the laws of the United States and were not constructed of iron stamped pursuant to said laws; and the tests in the inspection of said boilers, steam pipes, and appurtenances shall be the same in all respects as to strength and safety as are required in the inspection of boilers constructed in the United States for marine purposes.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CONSTRUCTION OF REVENUE CUTTER.

Mr. PERKINS. I ask unanimous consent to call up the bill (H. R. 2669) making an appropriation and providing for the construction of a United States revenue cutter for service in the harbor of San Francisco, State of California.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to appropriate $50,000 to have constructed a revenue cutter for service in the harbor of San Francisco, State of California.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ENCAMPMENT.

Mr. GALLINGER. There is a concurrent resolution of the House of Representatives on the table which I ask to have laid before the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair lays before the Senate a concurrent resolution from the House of Representatives which will be read.

The concurrent resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the United States (the Senate concurring), That permission be, and is hereby, given to the citizens committee, Knights of Pythias encampment, of which Chapin Brown is chairman, to illuminate the Dome of the Capitol on the nights of August 27, 28, 29, and 30, 1894, under the control and direction of the Architect of the Capitol.

Mr. GALLINGER. I ask the Senate to concur in the resolution.

The concurrent resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

WORLD'S EXPOSITION AT ATLANTA, GA.

Mr. WALSH. I ask unanimous consent to call up the bill (S. 2261) to further encourage the holding of a world's exposition at Atlanta, Ga., in the year 1895.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That all articles which shall be imported from foreign countries for the sole purpose of exhibition at said exposition, upon which there shall be a tariff or customs duty, shall be admitted free of payment of duty, customs fees, or charges, under such regulation as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe; but it shall be lawful at any time during the exhibition to sell, for delivery at the close of the exposition, any goods or property imported for and actually on exhibition in the exposition buildings or on its grounds, subject to such regulation for the security of the revenue and for the collection of import duties as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe: Provided, That all such articles, when sold or withdrawn for consumption in the United States, shall be subject to the duty, if any, imposed upon such article by the revenue laws in force at the date of importation, and all penalties prescribed by law shall be applied and enforced against such articles and against the persons who may be guilty of any illegal sale or withdrawal.

SEC. 2. That medals with appropriate devices, emblems, and inscriptions commemorative of said Cotton States and International Exposition, and of the awards to be made to exhibitors thereat, be prepared at some mint of the United States for the board of directors thereof, subject to the provisions of the fifty-second section of the coinage act of 1873, upon the payment of a sum not less than the cost thereof; and all the provisions, whether penal or otherwise, of said coinage act against the counterfeiting or imitating of coins of the United States shall apply to the medals struck and issued under this act.

SEC. 3. That the United States shall not in any manner nor under any circumstances be liable for any of the acts, doings, proceedings, or representations of the said corporation organized under the laws of the State of Georgia, its officers, agents, servants, or employés, or any of them, or for the service, salaries, labor, or wages of said officers, agents, servants, or employés, or any of them, or for any subscriptions to the capital stock, or for any certificates of stock, bonds, mortgages, or obligation of any kind issued by said corporation, or for any debts, liabilities, or expenses incidental to the exposition.

SEC. 4. That the President is hereby authorized and requested to detail not exceeding one company of troops or marines, to report to the chairman of the board of management of the Government exhibit, for the purpose of guarding Government property on exhibition.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to, as follows:

Whereas the Cotton States and International Exposition Company, a corporation under the laws of the State of Georgia, has undertaken to hold an exposition at Atlanta, Ga., to open in the month of September, in the year 1895, and to close on the 31st day of December of said year, for the display of arts, industries, manufactures, and the products of the soil, mine, and sea; and

Whereas the Congress of the United States has given aid and encouragement to said exposition by providing, first, that the General Government shall become an exhibitor of articles and materials illustrative of its functions; and, second, by providing space in its own building for an exhibit of the arts, industries, manufactures, and products of the colored race of the United States, illustrative of their progress and development during the thirty years of their freedom and citizenship; and

Whereas said exposition is to be national and international in its character, in which the governments and people of Mexico, the Central and South American States, and the other nations of the world are invited to participate with a view to the establishment of more intimate trade relations.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. COKE. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After twenty minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 3 o'clock and 25 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Thursday, August 9, 1894, at 12 o'clock m.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate August 8, 1894.

SECRETARY OF EMBASSY.

Larz Anderson, of Ohio, to be secretary of embassay of the United States at Rome, Italy, vice H. Remsen Whitehouse, resigned.

APPRAISER OF MERCHANDISE.

Louis D. Voltz, of New York, to be appraiser of merchandise in the district of Buffalo Creek, in the State of New York, to succeed George Bingham, resigned.

SUPERVISING INSPECTORS OF STEAM VESSELS.

John H. Galwey, of Michigan, to be supervising inspector of steam vessels for the eighth district, to succeed Charles H. Westcott, removed.

Michael J. Galvin, of New York, to be supervising inspector of steam vessels for the ninth district, to succeed Alexander McMaster, removed.

George Winans, of Wisconsin, to be supervising inspector of steam vessels for the fifth district, to succeed John D. Sloane, removed.

RECEIVER OF PUBLIC MONEYS.

Dixon Buchanan, of Sterling, Colo., to be receiver of public moneys at Sterling, Colo., vice Norman H. Meldrum, term expired.

POSTMASTER.

John H. Harrison, to be postmaster at Waco, in the county of McLennan and State of Texas, in the place of Helen A. Conger, whose commission will expire September 27, 1894.

PROMOTION IN ARMY.

Quartermaster's Department.

Capt. Charles A. H. McCauley, assistant quartermaster, to be quartermaster with the rank of major, August 8, 1894, vice Kirk, retired from active service.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY.

Lieut. Commander John C. Rich, to be a commander in the Navy, from July 31, 1894, vice Commander Frank Wildes, promoted (subject to the examinations required by law).

Lieut. George W. Tyler, to be a lieutenant-commander in the Navy, from July 31, 1894, vice Lieut. Commander John C. Rich, promoted (subject to the examinations required by law).

Lieut. (junior grade) Harry Kimmell, to be a lieutenant in the Navy, from July 31, 1894, vice Lieut. George W. Tyler, promoted.

Ensign John J. Blandin, to be a lieutenant (junior grade) in the Navy, from July 31, 1894, vice Lieut. (junior grade) Harry Kimmell, promoted (subject to the examinations required by law).

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate August 8, 1894.

SECRETARY OF EMBASSY.

Larz Anderson, to be secretary of embassy at Rome, Italy.

SECRETARY OF LEGATION AND CONSUL-GENERAL.

Ellis Mills, of Virginia, now consul-general at Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands, to be secretary of legation and consul-general of the United States at that place.

TERRITORIAL PROBATE JUDGES.

John C. De La Mare, of Utah Territory, to be judge of probate in the county of Tooele, in the Territory of Utah.

J. M. Grant, of Utah Territory, to be judge of probate in the county of Rich, in the Territory of Utah.

James L. Bunting, of Utah Territory, to be judge of probate in the county of Kane, in the Territory of Utah.

Thomas J. Brandon, of Utah Territory, to be judge of probate in the county of Davis, in the Territory of Utah.

William S. Willes, of Utah Territory, to be judge of probate in the county of Wasatch, in the Territory of Utah.

Noble Warrum, jr., of Utah Territory, to be judge of probate in the county of Cache, in the Territory of Utah.

Achilles Perrin, of Utah Territory, to be judge of probate in the county of Weber, in the Territory of Utah.

REGISTER OF THE LAND OFFICE.

Peregrine J. Dempster, of Holyoke, Colo., to be register of the land office at Sterling, Colo.

UNITED STATES ATTORNEY.

Gibson Clark, of Wyoming, to be attorney of the United States for the district of Wyoming.

MARSHALS.

Richard C. Morris, of Connecticut, to be marshal of the United States for the district of Connecticut.

John A. McDermott, of Wyoming, to be marshal of the United States for the district of Wyoming.

James I. Crutcher, of Idaho, to be marshal of the United States for the district of Idaho.

POSTMASTERS.

John Huxtable, to be postmaster at Wareham, in the county of Plymouth and State of Massachusetts.

John M. Griffin, to be postmaster at Madera, in the county of Madera and State of California.

Robert B. Evans, to be postmaster at Blairsville, in the county of Indiana and State of Pennsylvania.

George A. Sweeney, to be postmaster at Attleboro, in the county of Bristol and State of Massachusetts.

John Stallman, to be postmaster at Lee, in the county of Berkshire and State of Massachusetts.

Leonard J. Presson, to be postmaster at Gloucester, in the county of Essex and State of Massachusetts.

William E. Smith, to be postmaster at Millbrook, in the county of Dutchess and State of New York.

Charles A. Hall, to be postmaster at Binghamton, in the county of Broome and State of New York.

Josiah Woodbury, to be postmaster at Beverly, in the county of Essex and State of Massachusetts.

Lewis W. Terwilliger, to be postmaster at Hancock, in the county of Delaware and State of New York.

Hudson Ausley, to be postmaster at Salamanca, in the county of Cattaraugus and State of New York.

Patrick Mahan, to be postmaster at Natick, in the county of Middlesex and State of Massachusetts.

William H. Stickle, to be postmaster at Weedsport, in the county of Cayuga and State of New York.

James P. O'Brien, to be postmaster at Holley, in the county of Orleans and State of New York.

Charles H. Kavanaugh, to be postmaster at Waterford, in the county of Saratoga and State of New York.

John H. Harrison, to be postmaster at Waco, in the county of McLennan and State of Texas.

REJECTIONS.

Executive nominations rejected by the Senate August 8, 1894.

POSTMASTERS.

George F. Van Dam, to be postmaster at Tompkinsville, in the county of Richmond and State of New York.

Jonas Shays, to be postmaster at Owego, in the county of Tioga and State of New York.

Treadwell B. Kellum, to be postmaster at Babylon, in the county of Suffolk and State of New York.

Thomas H. Manion, to be postmaster at Herkimer, in the county of Herkimer and State of New York.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WEDNESDAY, August 8, 1894.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by Rev. G. N. LUCCOCK, of Washington.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

ALLEYS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a bill (S. 971) to open and extend alleys in the District of Columbia.

The SPEAKER. This is a Senate bill with a House amendment. The Senate nonconcur in the amendment and ask for a conference.

Mr. HEARD. I move that the House agree to the conference asked for by the Senate.

The motion was agreed to.

The Speaker appointed as conferees on the part of the House Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee, Mr. RUSK, and Mr. HARMER.

ASSESSMENT OF REAL ESTATE IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a bill (H. R. 6415) to provide an immediate revision and equalization of real estate values in the District of Columbia; also to provide an assessment of real estate in said District in the year 1896 and every third year thereafter, and for other purposes.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, this is the House bill providing for an assessment of real estate in the District of Columbia, which was passed a few days ago. The Senate has made some amendments which are not important, being mainly changes of verbiage. The District Commissioners have examined the amendments and recommend concurrence. I therefore move that the House concur in the amendments of the Senate.

The Senate amendments were read.

Mr. BURROWS. Mr. Speaker, the mere reading of those amendments disconnected from the body of the bill conveys no idea as to the scope of the changes proposed, and I should like to have some explanation of the amendments.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I will have read a letter the assessor transmitted through the District Commissioners, who have examined these amendments.

Mr. BURROWS. I notice that in one place there is an amendment striking out $500. I think there are also other material amendments, and I would like to know the significance of them.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask the Clerk to read the letter received from the Commissioners.

The letter was read, as follows:

OFFICE OF THE ASSESSOR, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA,
Washington, August 6, 1894.

DEAR SIR: Referring to our conversation of a few days ago, I beg to invite your attention to the urgent importance of speedy attention to the bill (H. R. 6415) providing for the assessment of real estate in this District.

The bill passed the House of Representatives under date of July 9 and the Senate to-day with a few amendments.

The amendment fixing the annual salaries of the assistant assessors at $3,000 each is in conformity with the action of the House, and is simply the correction of a typographical error. The other amendments are substantially in line with the bill as reported and advocated by your committee, and are in full accord with the views of the Commissioners and of this office.

Having had reasonable hope of the passage of this bill, the commencement of the preparation of the tax ledgers for the current fiscal year has been delayed beyond the usual time, and hence the failure of its passage at this session might seriously embarrass the semiannual collection of taxes in November next, as provided for under existing law.

I therefore suggest that you ask, at the earliest opportunity, a concurrence on the part of the House with the Senate amendments.

This letter receives the approval of the Commissioners.

Very respectfully,

MATTHEW TRIMBLE,
Assessor District of Columbia.

Hon. JOHN T. HEARD,
Chairman Committee on District of Columbia,
House of Representatives.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. The five hundred dollar amendment about which the gentleman from Michigan inquires is an amendment to correct a typographical error. The bill as it passed fixed the salaries of the assistant assessors at $3,000, but as engrossed and sent to the Senate it provided for $3,500, and the amendment simply strikes out the "five hundred," which was improperly inserted.

Mr. BURROWS. Do the Senate amendments make any change in salaries, or any increase in the amount carried by the bill?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Not at all.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Speaker, I understand that the Senate has put on a proposition authorizing the Treasury Department to advance money to the District of Columbia to pay current expenses. That, I think, is rather an important provision, which ought to be fully understood by the House.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. The bill simply authorizes the Secretary to advance to the Commissioners, upon their requisition, such sums as may be necessary to meet the expenses of the District where money has been appropriated for that purpose by Congress.

Mr. KILGORE. This is an advance of money belonging to the District of Columbia?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Yes; money that has been appropriated by Congress for that purpose. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized, upon requisition of the Commissioners, to draw that portion of the money which the District is authorized to expend.

Mr. KILGORE. One other inquiry. The bill as passed by the House provided for a board of assessment to be appointed by the Commissioners. Has the Senate made any change in that regard?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. No, sir.

Mr. KILGORE. Then this board will be appointed by the Commissioners?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. They will be appointed just as provided in the House bill.

Mr. KILGORE. I think that ought not to be.

Mr. DOCKERY. I hope the gentleman from Tennessee will explain the necessity for authorizing this advance to be made to the Commissioners. I do not understand the purpose.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. The necessity, as I understand, grows out of the provision in section 2 of the bill:

That the collection of taxes on real property and improvements thereon which will become due and payable in the month of November, 1894, be, and the same is hereby, suspended until the month of May in the year 1895, at which time said taxes shall be due and payable, and the collection thereof shall be enforced in all respects as provided under existing law for the collection of taxes on real property and improvements thereon for the second half of the tax year ending June 30, 1895.

Members will understand that under this bill the payment of the semiannual tax which would be due next November is extended until May; and this bill authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury, upon request of the Commissioners, to advance money to cover the deficiency thus temporarily created in the District resources.

Mr. DOCKERY. Then this is a loan of money to the District, rendered necessary by a change of the time of the collection of taxes?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. That is the way I understand it.

Mr. KILGORE. Why is that necessary?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. For this reason: As the gentleman will remember, this bill postpones until May next the payment of taxes which would otherwise be paid next November. Taxes are paid here in two semiannual payments—in May and November. Under this bill the payment which would be made in November is postponed until next May.

Mr. KILGORE. And the object of the provision referred to is that the money which the District would receive from such payments may be anticipated by a payment from the Treasury?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. That is all; the bill makes no change at all except in the respect I have named. I move to concur in the amendments of the Senate.

The amendments were concurred in.

On motion of Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

INSPECTION OF IMMIGRANTS.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (H. R. 5246) providing for the inspection of immigrants by United States consuls.

The SPEAKER. This bill has been returned from the Senate with amendments and with a request for a conference.

Mr. CULBERSON. I move that the House nonconcur in the amendments of the Senate and agree to the conference.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER announced the appointment of Mr. BOATNER, Mr. TERRY, and Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE as conferees on the part of the House.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. MCKEIGHAN, by unanimous consent, obtained leave of absence for to-day, on account of sickness.

B. D. GREENE.

Mr. LESTER. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 859) for the relief of B. D. Greene.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to B. D. Greene, bondsman of George E. Ward, who shall file the proper vouchers for money advanced or labor and materials furnished in and about the work of improvement on the Rappahannock River during the year 1889, the sum of $1,916.97, being the amount due George E. Ward by the Government, which said sum shall be paid to the said B. D. Greene.

Mr. DOCKERY. Let us have the report read.

The report (by Mr. COX) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred House bill 859, having carefully considered the same beg leave to submit the following report:

The evidence in this case conclusively shows that upon the failure of Ward to complete his contract with the Government his bondsman, Greene, undertook and did complete the contract in accordance with the specifications. The bill is to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to Greene the amount that would be coming to the original contractor.

Your committee therefore recommend that the bill do pass.

Mr. DOCKERY. I hope the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. LESTER] will make some explanation of this matter.

Mr. LESTER. It appears that George E. Ward contracted with the Government to do some work on the Rappahannock River, Virginia, in 1889. B. D. Greene, the person named in the bill, was surety on the bond of Ward for the performance of this contract. Greene also made advances to Ward of money for labor and materials for the prosecution of the work. Subsequently Ward absconded, leaving the work unfinished, very little having been done. Mr. Greene, the bondsman, undertook to finish the work and did complete it.

The amounts, however, were credited up to Ward, as the contract was in his name. Greene subsequently did the work, and advanced much more money than is specified as the balance left in the Treasury to the credit of Ward. Besides he has gone on and finished the work.

Now, the amount in the Treasury credited up to Ward on this account is nineteen hundred and some odd dollars. It does not begin to cover the amount expended by Greene on account of Ward. That sum of money, however, remained on the books of the Treasury to the credit of Ward; and Greene having performed the work the Committee on Claims thought that in justice and in equity it ought to be paid to Greene. Ward absconded about five years ago and can not be found. Greene paid the debts and performed the work in the meantime.

Mr. DOCKERY. I understand from the gentleman's statement that this does not involve any direct appropriation of money from the Treasury?

Mr. LESTER. None whatever.

Mr. DOCKERY. But simply takes the balance that was due on this work and transfers it from Ward to his surety?

Mr. LESTER. That is it exactly, the surety having performed the work and paid the expenses of it.

Mr. COX. If the gentleman will allow me, in addition to that I would state that when Ward absconded, and failed to comply with the contract, Greene assumed the obligation and did the work by consent of the Government.

Mr. LESTER. He had to finish it or make the bond good.

Mr. DOCKERY. And the money is on the books of the Treasury to the credit of Ward?

Mr. LESTER. Yes, sir.

Mr. DINGLEY. I would like to ask the gentleman from Georgia if there is any communication from the Chief of Engineers of the War Department showing that this amount is due to the original claimant?

Mr. LESTER. Yes, sir. I hold in my hand the documents which establish that fact.

Mr. DINGLEY. They have not been read. Perhaps they had better be read.

Mr. LESTER. Here is a statement from the United States Engineer's Office giving the items, and a statement from the Chief Engineer's Office with the indorsement of the Secretary of War, which specify clearly the condition of the account.

Mr. DOCKERY. Let both of them be read.

Mr. LESTER. I will quote some extracts from these which show exactly the condition of the account.

UNITED STATES ENGINEER'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., March 21, 1890.

GENERAL: In obedience to your order of March 20, 1890, I have the honor to report that the sum earned by George E. Ward, under his contract for dikes and mats in Rappahannock River, Virginia, and remaining unpaid, is $2,215.78.

The following items of expense were incurred and paid by the United States because of the failure of Ward to complete his contract on the 3d of September, 1889.

Then follows a list of items embracing the "services of an inspector" at various times, "traveling expenses," and various other expenses, making a total of $298.81, and leaving a balance of $1,916.97 remaining due to Ward on the books of the engineer's office.

Mr. DOCKERY. Who sends that communication?

Mr. LESTER. This is signed "S. T. Abert, United States agent."

Mr. DOCKERY. Does he recommend the payment of this amount?

Mr. LESTER. He does not say anything about the payment. He simply states the facts in connection with the account, and shows the balance due.

On the 11th day of May, 1894, a communication was addressed to the Secretary of War by the chairman of the Committee on Claims of the House, with a request that he furnish all the papers, statements, and accounts showing the amount due George E. Ward for work done on the Rappahannock River, and also the contract and bond under which the work was done, and a statement as to the completion of the work, on which is the following indorsement:

WAR DEPARTMENT, May 19, 1894.

Respectfully returned to the chairman of the Committee on Claims of the House of Representatives, inviting attention to the preceding indorsement of the Acting Chief of Engineers and the papers therein referred to.

This indorsement of the Chief of Engineers is as follows:

There is also, with the previous indorsement, a copy of the succeeding contract with B. D. Greene, for the uncompleted portion of the work, by which it will be seen that the prices are the same as in the orignal contract with Ward. There is herewith a report dated March 21, 1890, from Mr. S. T. Abert, United States agent, in charge of the work, by which it will be seen that the amount earned by Ward and remaining unpaid is $2,215.78. Deducting the expenses incurred by the United States because of the failure of Ward to complete the contract in the time designated in the contract ($298.81), there will remain the sum of $1,916.97, the same as the amount named in House bill No. 859.

H. M. ADAMS,
Acting Chief of Engineers.

Mr. DOCKERY. Is this a unanimous report from the Committee on Claims?

Mr. LESTER. It is.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. LESTER, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

NEWBERRY COLLEGE.

Mr. LATIMER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 2714) for the relief of the Newberry College.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read subject to objection.

The bill was read at length.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Speaker, inasmuch as this bill involves a considerable amount, about $15,000, I hope the gentleman will let it go over.

Mr. BURROWS. I was about to ask the amount of the bill.

Mr. LATIMER. Fifteen thousand dollars.

Mr. DOCKERY. Let it go over.

Mr. BURROWS. I think this is a matter that ought to be considered when these questions can come regularly before the House on Friday.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

WILLIAM R. STEINMETZ.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill (S. 812) for the relief of William R. Steinmetz.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President of the United States be, and is hereby, authorized to nominate and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint Capt. William R. Steinmetz, United States Army, retired, a major on the retired list of the Army, with the rank and pay of that grade from February 26, 1891, under the provisions of sections 3 of "An act to provide for the examination of certain officers of the Army, and to regulate promotions therein," approved October 1, 1890.

Mr. DOCKERY. I hope the gentleman will consent to let this go over. It is open to the objection that it is a bill to increase the retired list.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. This is not a bill to increase the retired list, but to make a correction.

Mr. GORMAN. This officer is now on the retired list.

Mr. DOCKERY. If I have misapprehended the bill, I would be glad to have the report read.

Mr. GORMAN. The report is quite lengthy; but I could make a short explanation.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the gentleman can make a brief explanation.

Mr. GORMAN. I will say, Mr. Speaker, that Capt. Steinmetz entered the volunteer service as a private early in 1861. He served continuously, excepting the time he was on sick leave, until 1891. There were three captains, Capt. De Hanne, Capt. Elbery, and Capt. Steinmetz, on sick leave. Capt. Elbery, as the report says, "by some curiously involved procedure, as well as ingenious, was put on the retired list over Capt. De Hanne," who, I understand, is now deceased, "as major." Capt. Steinmetz was then entitled to be retired under the law of 1891, and to be examined by volunteer officers. He asked for it. Instead of that they retired him on a law of 1862, which was repealed by the act of 1891, which says:

And no act now in force shall be so construed as to limit or restrict the retirement of officers as herein provided for.

He was retired under an examination that "was curiously involved as well as ingenious," and the Department has not been able to explain the reason for its action in this matter.

Mr. HOLMAN. Will the gentleman read that portion of the act again?

Mr. GORMAN. It is:

And no act in force shall be so construed as to limit or restrict the retirement of officers as herein provided for.

Mr. HOLMAN. How provided?

Mr. GORMAN. Here is how they are provided:

That should the officer fail in his physical examination, and be found incapacitated for service by reason of physical disability contracted in line of duty, he shall be retired with the rank to which his seniority entitles him to be promoted.

His seniority entitled him to be retired as a major. He took the examination, but he should have been examined by officers from the volunteer service. Instead of that, he was examined by an examining board, that made a report in 1875, every one of whom was in the regular service. I say that the old German doctor has been grossly abused.

Mr. COOMBS. When was he retired?

Mr. GORMAN. After the act of 1891.

Mr. DOCKERY. What is the effect of the bill?

Mr. GORMAN. It is simply to give him his legal right, and retire him as a major.

Mr. DOCKERY. What is the additional charge involved?

Mr. GORMAN. The difference between the pay of a captain on the retired list and a major.

Mr. DOCKERY. How much is that?

Mr. HUNTER. About $18 or $20 a month.

Mr. BARTLETT. I ask the gentleman to let it go over or I shall have to object.

Mr. GORMAN. I hope the gentleman will not do that, as the matter has been up twice before, and is too meritorious, I think, to be put off in that way.

Mr. BARTLETT. We had evidence yesterday of the danger of these bills.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. This is not to put a man on the retired list, but simply to give him the status on the retired list that he is entitled to under the law.

Mr. GORMAN. There can be no question about that.

Mr. GROSVENOR. This is an assumption that the War Department has violated the law of the land and done a gross injustice to a member of the Army.

Mr. GORMAN. That is the Senate report, which Senator DAVIS makes.

Mr. GROSVENOR. This is an indirect way of pensioning a retired officer. That is all.

Mr. GORMAN. Oh, no. The law is as plain as it can be, and by right this man was entitled to be retired by a retiring board composed of volunteer officers.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Then the War Department has entire power to do justice.

Mr. GORMAN. Not at all; because his vacancy has been filled and it can not reinstate him; nor can the President reinstate him.

Mr. BARTLETT. I shall insist on my objection that it go over until to-morrow. I desire to have an opportunity to examine it.

Mr. GORMAN. I hope the gentleman will not do that.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. BARTLETT. I object.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. CATCHINGS. Mr. Speaker, I present a report from the Committee on Rules.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That this calendar day, after the second morning hour, be assigned to the consideration of bills reported from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, in the order indicated by said committee.

That Thursday, the 9th instant, after the second morning hour, be assigned to the consideration of bills reported from the Committee on Claims, in the order indicated by said committee.

Mr. CATCHINGS. I demand the previous question.

The previous question was ordered; and under the operation thereof the resolution was agreed to.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

On motion of Mr. OUTHWAITE, by unanimous consent, the Committee on Pacific Railroads was discharged from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 7909) to facilitate and expedite legal proceedings by the United States and other creditors against Government-aided railroad companies, etc., and it was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

JUDGE RICKS.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I present a privileged report from the Committee on the Judiciary.

The report was read, as follows:

Your Committee on the Judiciary, having had under consideration a memorial of the Central Labor Union of Cleveland, Ohio, preferring charges of official misconduct and dishonesty against Hon. Augustus J. Ricks, judge of the United States court for the northern district of Ohio, beg leave to report the following resolutions, and recommend their adoption:

Resolved, That the Committee on the Judiciary be, and it is hereby, instructed to investigate the said charges against the Hon. Augustus J. Ricks, judge of the United States court for the northern district of Ohio, and report to this House what action, if any, ought to be taken in reference to such charges.

Resolved further, That, for the purpose of this investigation, the said Committee on the Judiciary is hereby authorized and empowered to sit at such time and place as it may determine, to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, to take testimony, to employ a stenographer, and to appoint a subcommittee, which subcommittee, if appointed, shall have the same powers as the full committee.

Resolved further, That the Sergeant-at-Arms is hereby directed to attend the sessions of the committee or subcommittee in person or by deputy, to serve such process as may be issued, and to execute its orders; and the sum of $500, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated out of the contingent fund of the House to defray the expenses of this investigation.

And the Clerk of the House is directed to pay said sum to the chairman of the committee or of any subcommittee of the Committee on the Judiciary that may be appointed to conduct said investigation, on voucher or vouchers to be approved by the Committee on Accounts.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I suppose there will be no objection to these resolutions, and if not, I will ask for the previous question. I observe, however, that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR] is on his feet, and if he desires to debate the matter I will withhold the demand for the present.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, I think this matter has been hurried with indecent haste. I compliment the Judiciary Committee upon the fact that occasionally it is capable of producing a result with such spontaneous combustion as is manifested in this case. Here is a judge of the district court of the United States who, as the House knows, has had no notice whatever of the pendency of this matter, and now this resolution is launched upon him for an investigation to proceed without any notice whatever to him, a sort of star-chamber, ex parte performance.

Now, I want to put myself exactly right upon this question. If the Judiciary Committee have any evidence whatever which justifies them in supposing that this investigation ought to be made, I have not the slightest objection to it; but I submit that a judge of one of the great courts of this country ought to be treated with at least as much respect as a defendant on a charge of "drunk and disorderly" in a police court. He at least ought to have a copy of the charges furnished to him and an opportunity to come here from the distant point where he now is, and be heard by counsel or in some way before this committee.

To launch this matter upon him on twenty-four hours' notice and provide in this way for a junketing expedition out into Ohio is, in my judgment, rather premature, and, to say the least of it, is a very hurried performance. I have no knowledge about this question. I know nothing about the truth of these charges; but I submit again, that decent respect ought to be shown to the dignity of the office held by this gentleman, in providing for an examination of so high a character as one which involves the possible impeachment of a judge of one of the courts of the United States.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, the only possible excuse for the intemperate language of the gentleman from Ohio is that he confesses that he knows absolutely nothing about the matters involved in this resolution. I say to him now that if he is a friend to Judge Ricks he should want these charges investigated immediately, because an honest man would not want to sleep a single night under the imputations which are contained in the sworn charges which are presented in this memorial.

Since the gentleman has seen fit to characterize this proceeding as one of indecent haste, I will say to him that an agent of the Judiciary Department was at one time instructed to proceed to Ohio to investigate these charges, but Judge Ricks is now off upon his summer vacation, and the investigation was therefore postponed. It does seem to me that a man who rests under charges of this kind would rather go home and face his accusers than be taking his ease at the seashore.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Can the gentleman state that Judge Ricks has any knowledge whatever that this memorial has been presented in this House?

Mr. BAILEY. I have no knowledge as to whether he has or not; but I say to the gentleman from Ohio that this is merely an effort to put the committee in a position to give Judge Ricks an opportunity to refute the charges. This implies no censure upon him. It only implies that charges have been made of such a grave character as to justify an investigation. I understood the gentleman from Ohio himself to say the other day, when this memorial was presented by his colleague, Mr. JOHNSON, that he would be glad to have an investigation. I say to him now, without disclosing the secrets of the committee room, that there was not a Republican on the Judiciary Committee who asked for delay or suggested that delay was proper. They all spoke like men and lawyers, and said that the judiciary ought to be above reproach. If there is a taint of suspicion upon a judge, it ought to be removed from him or else he ought to be removed from the bench.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Does the gentleman propose to inaugurate a drumhead court-martial of a United States judge at this stage of the session, and carry it over to the Senate and try it in twenty-four hours, and make a vacancy? Is that the purpose?

Mr. BAILEY. This gentleman can not answer that question. That is a question to be determined by the Judiciary Committee after action by the House on this resolution.

Mr. GROSVENOR. They seem to have determined almost everything already. They have proceeded to inaugurate a court, to fix the terms of the trial, and to appropriate money for the expenses of it, without giving any notice to the accused that he is accused.

Mr. BAILEY. But he will have ample notice before the committee proceeds to the investigation.

Mr. GROSVENOR. The gentleman speaks of Judge Ricks as being my friend. I do not know him by sight; I never spoke to him in my life, except upon one occasion, when I was introduced to him. The only object I have in the world with reference to this matter is simply to have the ordinary proceedings of a respectable tribunal carried on in this case. I have no confidence in the fairness and justice of the Judiciary Committee in this matter.

Mr. BAILEY. The committee feels complimented to know that it does not enjoy the confidence of the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Very well.

Mr. BAILEY. I demand the previous question.

The previous question was ordered; and under the operation thereof the resolution was adopted.

On motion of Mr. BAILEY, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted was laid on the table.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ENCAMPMENT.

Mr. WARNER. I ask consent for the immediate consideration of the resolution which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the United States of America (the Senate concurring), That permission be, and is hereby, given to the citizens' committee, Knights of Pythias Encampment, of which Chapin Brown is chairman, to illuminate the Dome of the Capitol on the nights of August 27, 28, 29, and 30, 1894, under the control and direction of the Architect of the Capitol.

A MEMBER. What is this?

Mr. WARNER. It is a resolution which involves no expense to the Government. It simply provides that on four evenings designated the Dome of the Capitol may be illuminated, under the control and supervision of the Architect of the Capitol, at the expense of the citizens' committee of the Knights of Pythias.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. Is there any provision that these people shall "keep off the grass" in the Capitol grounds, or is there anything to prevent them from speaking from the Capitol steps? [Laughter.]

Mr. WARNER. There is no provision of that kind. This organization has already been granted the use of the "White Lot," so that no provision of the sort referred to is necessary.

There being no objection, the resolution was considered and adopted.

JOSIAH B. ORBISON.

Mr. PHILLIPS. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 1279) for the relief of Josiah B. Orbison.

The bill was read.

Mr. DOCKERY. If I remember aright this bill has already been objected to once. I think it had better go over.

Mr. PHILLIPS. I ask that the report be read.

Mr. DOCKERY. Let it be read subject to objection.

The report was read.

Mr. PHILLIPS. By request of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DOCKERY] I ask that the bill go over until to-morrow.

The SPEAKER. The bill is not before the House. The gentleman can withdraw his request, and he will be recognized to-morrow to renew it, if he will remind the Chair of the matter.

WILLIAM R. STEINMETZ.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from New York has withdrawn his objection to the bill (S. 812) for the relief of William R. Steinmetz, on the condition that an amendment be inserted, providing for the usual examination and finding by a retiring board.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. GORMAN] states that the objection made to the consideration of the bill (S. 812) for the relief of William R. Steinmetz has been withdrawn. Is there further objection?

Mr. DINGLEY. Let the bill be read again.

The bill was read.

Mr. GORMAN. I ask that the amendments which I propose to offer to the bill be also read.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the word "army," in line 7, insert "subject to examination and finding by a retiring board."

The SPEAKER. Is there further objection to the consideration of this bill?

Mr. BYNUM. Perhaps I did not catch fully the purport of the bill; but I believe it is a bill to place some one on the retired list. I think I must object.

JUDICIAL DISTRICT IN GEORGIA.

Mr. WOLVERTON. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 7461) to amend an act entitled "An act to create a new division of the northern judicial district of Georgia," approved March 3, 1891.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the terms of the circuit and district courts for the western division of the northern judicial district of Georgia, held at Columbus, shall convene on the first Monday in May and the first Monday in December, instead of the first Monday in June and the first Monday in January, as now provided by law. And each of said terms shall continue as long as the presiding judge may deem necessary.

SEC. 2. That all laws and parts of laws conflicting with this act are hereby repealed.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill; which was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. WOLVERTON, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. BRODERICK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 6531) to pension Nancy Gabrilla Anderson.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read, after which the Chair will ask if there be objection.

The bill was read at length.

Mr. JONES. I would like to inquire whether this bill has been considered by the Committee of the Whole?

Mr. BRODERICK. It has not been. It has been reported favorably from the Committee on Pensions, is on the Calendar, and there is no minority report against it.

Mr. JONES. I object to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. I call for the regular order.

Mr. BRYAN. I ask the gentleman to withdraw that a moment until I can present a petition.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. I think we had better have the regular order.

Mr. LOUD. Petitions can go through the box anyway.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the call of committees for reports.

The committees were called for reports.

OCALA, FLA., PORT OF DELIVERY.

Mr. MALLORY, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (S. 1885) extending the privileges of transportation of dutiable merchandise for appraisement to the city of Ocala, in the State of Florida; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER. The morning hour begins at three minutes past 1 o'clock. The Committee on the Public Lands had a bill before the House which the Chair is informed the committee do not desire to consider in this hour.

Mr. McRAE. No; the bill has reached the stage where it is privileged, and I do not care to use the morning hour for that purpose.

The SPEAKER. Then the Chair will direct the call of the other committees.

MINERAL LANDS.

Mr. WEADOCK (when the Committee on Mines and Mining was called). Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Mines and Mining, I call up for consideration the bill (H. R. 7840) to amend section 2335 of the Revised Statutes.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section twenty-three hundred and thirty-five of the Revised Statutes be amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 2335. All affidavits required to be made under this chapter may be verified before any officer authorized to administer oaths in any State or Territory of the United States or in the District of Columbia having an official seal, and all testimony and proofs may be taken before any such officer, and when duly certified by the officer taking the same, attested by his seal of office, shall have the same force and effect as if taken before the register and receiver of the land office. In cases of contest as to the mineral or agricultural character of land the testimony and proofs may be taken, under such regulations and notice as the Commissioner of the General Land Office may prescribe: Provided, That the presence of rock in place, or of deposits, bearing gold, silver, cinnabar, or other valuable mineral, shall be regarded as prima facie evidence that the land containing the same is mineral in character: Provided further, That in investigating the character of land, with a view to ascertaining whether it is more valuable for mineral than agricultural purposes, evidence may be taken of the mineral discovered or developed adjacent to such land, proof of which shall be corroborative evidence that the land in question is mineral in character: And provided further, That, except in Utah, wherever land is proven to be within a well-defined mineral belt, it shall be deemed prima facie evidence of the mineral character of said land."

Mr. DINGLEY. I desire to make an inquiry as to whether there is anything in this bill which would require its consideration in Committee of the Whole. It seems to be a bill which covers a good deal of ground.

Mr. WEADOCK. There is nothing in the bill that would require its consideration in committee.

Mr. DINGLEY. Does it indirectly grant any public property?

Mr. WEADOCK. No, sir.

The SPEAKER. On what Calendar is it?

Mr. WEADOCK. On the House Calendar.

The SPEAKER. It is on the House Calendar.

Mr. WEADOCK. Mr. Speaker, this bill proposes to amend the statute named (section 2335, Revised Statutes), relating to mineral lands, in three particulars: The first is, that whereas affidavits are now required to be sworn to before any officer authorized to administer oaths within the land district, they may be sworn to under the proposed amendment to the law before any officer authorized to administer oaths in any State or Territory of the United States, or the District of Columbia, having an official seal.

This change will save both time and expense to those who have located land, and of course costs the Government nothing. Whenever legal proceedings can be made cheaper with safety to the public, the change in that direction should be made.

A bill (S. 1515) has already passed the Senate, and has been favorably considered by the House Committee on Mines and Mining, which amends various sections of the statutes relating to mining, among others section 2335, the one we now propose to amend. This section in the Senate bill is as follows:

SEC. 2335. All affidavits required to be made under this chapter may be verified before any officer authorized to administer oaths in any State or Territory of the United States or in the District of Columbia having an official seal, and all testimony and proofs may be taken before any such officer, and when duly certified by the officer taking the same, attested by his seal of office, shall have the same force and effect as if taken before the register and receiver of the land office. In cases of contest as to the mineral or agricultural character of land the testimony and proofs may be taken, under such regulations and notice as the Commissioner of the General Land Office may prescribe: Provided, That the presence of rock in place bearing gold, silver, cinnabar, petroleum, or other valuable mineral shall be regarded as prima facie evidence that the land containing the same is mineral in character: And provided further, That in investigating the character of land with a view to ascertain whether it is more valuable for mineral than agriculture, evidence may be taken of the mineral discovered or developed adjacent to such land.

The second change the bill makes over the old law is one in practice in the land offices. At present testimony is to be taken on personal notice of at least ten days, and if the person can not be found, then by notice published once a week for thirty days in a newspaper to be designated by the receiver, etc., in cases of contest. The bill before the House proposes to leave that matter within the discretion of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and the testimony shall be taken under such rules and regulations as that officer may prescribe.

The third change is putting, perhaps, into the statute what is now a rule of evidence. That is, that in cases of contest as to the agricultural or mineral character of the land between agricultural claimants, who can take up 160 acres of land, and mineral claimants, who can take up only a small portion of the public lands, when a question arises before the officers of the Land Office, as the case may be, and the testimony shows that the land is within a certain well-defined mineral belt, where we find rock in place carrying ore in the immediate vicinity, that fact shall be regarded as prima facie evidence that the land itself is mineral in character. That is, in other words, if a piece of land that is claimed to be mineral land, and also claimed to be agricultural land, is surrounded by other portions of land, all of which are mineral in character, the evidence of that fact shall be regarded as prima facie evidence that the land in question is mineral and not agricultural.

The prospective State of Utah is excepted from the bill on account of the peculiar geological formation of mineral lands there, being very different from other mining localities.

I desire now to yield five minutes, or such further time as he wishes, to the gentleman from California, who is the author of the bill.

Mr. CAMINETTI. I think it is not necessary to occupy the time of the committee after the statement the gentleman has made.

Mr. WEADOCK. Mr. Speaker, if no other gentleman desires to be heard on the bill, or to ask a question in regard to it, I shall ask the previous question on the bill.

Mr. HERMANN. Before that, not having had the pleasure of hearing the gentleman's statement, I would like to ask if this bill is merely to define the character of mineral land?

Mr. WEADOCK. That is one of the objects sought; but the purpose of the bill is rather to define the rule of evidence which shall be applied in contests relating to the mineral or agricultural nature of the land in question.

Mr. HERMANN. In mineral contests.

Mr. WEADOCK. In contests as to whether land is mineral or agricultural; that is, when the contest is between persons claiming the land for agricultural or mineral purposes, I have just stated that when the surrounding land is shown to be mineral land, that fact shall be regarded as prima facie evidence that the land which is in controversy is mineral in character. This fixes a rule of evidence that has been followed in the General Land Office. The Commissioner of the General Land Office and the Secretary of the Interior both approve of the measure which has been incorporated in the bill for the purpose stated.

I will here refer briefly to the statements of these officers: The Commissioner of the General Land Office, in a letter to the Secretary of the Interior bearing date July 9, 1894, says of the first proposition in the bill:

> I am aware of no objection to the amendment, but on the other hand am strongly of the opinion that it would result in much greater convenience to mineral claimants.

The Secretary of the Interior, in a communication to the chairman of this committee, dated July 16, 1894, suggests a substitute for the second proposition contained in the original bill in the following language:

> I concur generally in the views of the Commissioner, with the modifications and amendments recommended in his report, but I would suggest that the proviso in the nineteenth line, on page 5, be amended so as to read as follows:
> Provided, That the presence of rock in place, bearing gold, silver, cinnabar, or other valuable deposit of minerals, shall be regarded as prima facie evidence that the land containing the same is and always has been mineral in character: Provided further, That in investigating the character of land, with a view to ascertaining whether it is more valuable for mineral than agricultural purposes, evidence may be taken of the mineral discovered or developed adjacent to such land, proof of which shall be corroborative evidence that the land in question is mineral in character: And provided further, That wherever land is proven to be within a well-defined mineral belt it shall be prima facie evidence of the mineral character of such land until the contrary is proved.

Mr. HERMANN. As the gentlemans knows, under the rules for adjustment of mineral land titles, if the major portion of the last legal subdivision shall be adjudged as mineral, that determines its quality as distinguished between agricultural and mineral lands. If it be mineral it carries the character of mineral as to the remainder.

Mr. HOLMAN. How is that?

Mr. HERMANN. If the major portion of the last legal subdivision is mineral in character, that makes the entire legal subdivision mineral. That is the rule.

Mr. PICKLER. I desire to ask the gentleman one question.

Mr. WEADOCK. I yield to the gentleman from South Dakota for a question.

Mr. PICKLER. I understand that this changes the rule of evidence to some extent?

Mr. WEADOCK. It does not change the rule of evidence, but makes the rule of evidence which ought to prevail, the law upon the subject.

Mr. PICKLER. It ought not to interfere with contests that already exist.

Mr. WEADOCK. It can not do that.

Mr. PICKLER. They may construe it over in the Interior Department differently from what the gentleman supposes. We have had a great deal of trouble over a law which passed in 1891. The contest should be determined on what the law was heretofore.

Mr. WEADOCK. That would seem to be so. The law is not intended to be retroactive.

Mr. PICKLER. I hope the gentleman will express in terms in his bill that it shall not be retroactive.

Mr. WEADOCK. It is not necessary; as we can not make a law retroactive, except it be done in express terms in the law when it is passed.

Mr. PICKLER. I know that it is what all you lawyers claim; but all we who have had experience on the Committee on Public Lands know we have had a great deal of trouble over the law which was passed in 1891, and they construed that as being retroactive in regard to contests. I ask the gentleman to accept an amendment that it shall not change the rule of evidence as to pending contests.

Mr. WEADOCK. I have no objection to that. I should say it was that way now.

Mr. PICKLER. I move to amend the bill by inserting:

> Provided, That nothing herein contained shall change the rule of evidence as to pending contests.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendment of the gentleman from South Dakota.

The Clerk read as follows:

> Provided, That nothing herein contained shall change the rule of evidence as to pending contests.

Mr. WEADOCK. I accept that amendment. I demand the previous question on the bill and amendment.

The previous question was ordered, and under the operation thereof the amendment was agreed to, the bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. WEADOCK, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

EFFECT OF MACHINERY ON LABOR.

Mr. McGANN (when the Committee on Labor was called): Mr. Speaker, I call up the House joint resolution (H. Res. 95) providing for an investigation relating to the effect of machinery on labor.

The joint resolution was read, as follows:

> Resolved, etc., That the Commissioner of Labor be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to investigate and report upon the effect of the use of machinery upon labor and the cost of production, the relative productive power of hand and machine labor, the cost of manual and machine power as they are used in productive industries, the effect upon wages of the use of machinery operated by women and children, and whether changes in the creative cost of products are due to a lack or to a surplus of labor or to the introduction of power machinery. To enable the Commissioner of Labor to carry out the provisions of this resolution the sum of $10,000 is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, but should not this sum be sufficient to complete the investigation called for herein, the Commissioner of Labor is hereby authorized to complete it under the regular appropriations for the Department of Labor.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. This bill is on the Union Calendar.

Mr. McGANN. I ask unanimous consent to consider this bill in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to consider this bill in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. BARTLETT. I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is made.

Mr. McGANN. I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whol, to consider this bill.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, Mr. COOMBS in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole for the consideration of the bill which the Clerk will now report.

The resolution was again read.

Mr. McGANN. I move that the committee rise and report the joint resolution to the House with a favorable recommendation.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. I would like to ask a single question before that motion is put. It seems to me to be a wise resolution; but I would be glad to ask if this resolution has been placed in form after consultation with the Commissioner of Labor?

Mr. McGANN. Yes, sir.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. And it meets with his approval?

Mr. McGANN. It meets his approval; and the statement is made by him that he can not furnish the information which is asked of his Bureau in that regard. It is information which is desirable not only to the members of the House of Representatives, but to students of political economy and business men throughout the country; and he says that this is a most opportune time to get that information.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. And he thinks it is practical to make the investigation? Is the sum, $10,000, large enough?

Mr. McGANN. The sum was suggested by himself.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. It seems to me that it is a well-timed resolution.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and Mr. DOCKERY having resumed the chair as Speaker pro tempore, Mr. COOMBS, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole, reported that that committee had had under consideration the joint resolution H. Res. 95 and had directed him to report the same to the House with a favorable recommendation.

Mr. McGANN. I demand the previous question on the adoption of the resolution.

The previous question was ordered, and under the operation thereof the joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. McGANN, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was passed was laid on the table.

EFFICIENCY OF THE MILITIA.

Mr. MEYER (when the Committee on the Militia was called). Mr. Speaker, I call up for consideration the bill H. R. 7819. I would state that the bill which I present——

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk has not the Calendar print, and the Chair is advised that this bill has never been reported.

Mr. MEYER. The bill has been slightly amended and a reprint of the original bill and amendment ordered by the committee and approved by the committee; and therefore I ask unanimous consent that the bill H. R. 7819, which I send to the desk, be substituted for the bill H. R. 5039, and the report which has been made to accompany it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Has the committee reported any bill?

Mr. MEYER. Yes, sir. The committee has reported the bill H. R. 5039, for which it is proposed to substitute this bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman calls up the bill H. R. 5039.

Mr. FITHIAN. That bill has not been reported.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The bill H. R. 5039?

Mr. FITHIAN. I think not.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That has been reported, the Chair is advised.

Mr. MEYER. I have the report in my hand, Mr. Speaker.

The title of the bill was read, as follows:

A bill (H. R. 5039) to promote the efficiency of the militia.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Louisiana, the Chair understands, asks unanimous consent to substitute the bill H. R. 7819, as amended by the committee, for bill H. R. 5039.

Mr. HOLMAN. The bill had better be read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The bill H. R. 5039 will be read.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the militia shall consist of every able-bodied male citizen who is of the age of 18 and under the age of 45 years, and shall be divided into two classes, the organized to be known as the National Guard, the unorganized to be known as the reserve militia. That the National Guard shall consist of such regularly enlisted troops as are or may be organized in the several States and Territories and the District of Columbia in pursuance of their respective laws, not in conflict with the provisions of this act, and the organization shall conform as closely as possible to that prescribed for the Army.

SEC. 2. That the reserve militia shall not be subject or liable to any military duty to the United States, except when called into service by act of Congress passed for that purpose; that the National Guard shall not be subject or liable to any military duty to the United States, except when called into service by act of Congress passed for that purpose or by the President of the United States, as hereinafter provided; and every officer and enlisted man of the National Guard called into service of the United States who shall refuse to obey such call shall be punished as a court-martial may direct.

SEC. 3. That the Vice-President of the United States; the officers, judicial and executive, of the Government of the United States; the members of both Houses of Congress, and their respective officers; all custom-house officers, with their clerks; all postmasters and persons employed in the transportation of the mail; all ferrymen employed at any ferry on post-roads; all inspectors of exports; all artificers and workmen employed in the armories and arsenals of the United States; all pilots; all mariners actually employed in the sea service of any citizen or merchant within the United States; all persons in the Army and Navy of the United States, and all persons who now are exempted by the laws of the respective States, shall be exempted from militia duty, notwithstanding their being above the age of 18 and under the age of 45 years.

SEC. 4. That the adjutant-general of each State and Territory shall, under the direction of the governor thereof, make returns and reports to the Secretary of War at such times and in such form as he shall from time to time prescribe.

SEC. 5. That the Secretary of War shall, in his annual report each year, transmit to Congress an abstract of the returns and reports of the adjutants-general of the States and Territories, with such observations thereon as he may deem necessary for the information of Congress.

SEC. 6. That the national guard shall be instructed in the same system of drill and tactics that may from time to time be prescribed for the Army.

SEC. 7. That whenever the United States are invaded or are in imminent danger of invasion from any foreign nation or Indian tribe, or of rebellion against the authority of the Government of the United States, it shall be lawful for the President to call forth such number of the national guard of the State or States most convenient to the place of danger or scene of action as he may deem necessary to repel such invasion or to suppress such rebellion, and to issue his orders for that purpose to the governor or governors thereof for such number of the national guard as he may think proper; and he may, in time of peace, accept from the governor of each State and Territory, respectively, as he may think proper, each number of the national guard as may be offered for the purpose of united instruction and discipline, when the state of the appropriation will permit.

SEC. 8. That when the national guard of more than one State is called into the actual service of the United States by the President he may, in his discretion, apportion them among such States according to representative population.

SEC. 9. That the national guard and militia, when called into the actual service of the United States for the suppression of the rebellion against and resistance to the laws of the United States, shall be subject to the same rules and articles of war as the regular troops of the United States.

SEC. 10. That whenever the President calls forth the national guard of the States, to be employed in the service of the United States, he may specify in his call the period for which such service will be required, not exceeding nine months, and the national guard so called shall be mustered in and continue to serve during the terms so specified, unless sooner discharged by command of the President.

SEC. 11. That the reserve militia and national guard, when called into the actual service of the United States, or accepted by the President, shall, during their time of service, be entitled to the same pay and allowances as may be provided by law for the Army of the United States.

SEC. 12. That whenever the militia or national guard is called into the actual service of the United States their pay shall be deemed to commence from the day of their appearing at the place of rendezvous of the forces called out.

SEC. 13. That the expenses incurred by marching the militia or national guard of any State or Territory to their place of rendezvous, in pursuance of a requisition of the President or of a call made by the authority of any State or Territory and approved by him, shall be adjusted and paid in like manner as the expenses incurred after their arrival at such places of rendezvous, on the requisition of the President; but this provision does not authorize any species of expenditure previous to arriving at the place of rendezvous which is not provided by existing laws to be paid for after their arrival at such place of rendezvous.

SEC. 14. That courts-martial for the trial of the militia or national guard shall be composed of militia or national-guard officers only.

SEC. 15. That the sum of $600,000 is hereby annually appropriated, to be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the purpose of providing arms, ordnance stores, signal stores, engineer stores, subsistence stores, medical stores, quartermaster stores, and camp equipage for issue to the national guard.

SEC. 16. That said appropriation shall be apportioned among the several States and Territories, under the direction of the Secretary of War, according to the number of Senators and Representatives to which each State, respectively, is entitled in the Congress of the United States and to the Territories and District of Columbia, in such proportion and under such regulations as the President may prescribe: Provided, however, That no State shall be entitled to the benefits of the appropriation apportioned to it unless the number of its regularly enlisted, organized, and uniformed active national guard shall be at least one hundred men for each Senator and Representative to which such State is entitled in the Congress of the United States. And the amount of said appropriation which is thus determined not to be available shall be covered back into the Treasury.

SEC. 17. That the purchase or manufacture of arms, ordnance stores, signal stores, engineer stores, subsistence stores, medical stores, quartermaster's stores, and camp equipage for the national guard, under the provisions of this act, shall be made under the direction of the Secretary of War, as such arms, ordnance, signal, engineer, subsistence, medical, and quartermaster's stores and camp equipage are now manufactured or otherwise provided for the use of the regular Army, and they shall be receipted for and shall remain the property of the United States and be annually accounted for, for which purpose the Secretary of War shall prescribe and supply the necessary blanks and make such regulations as he may deem necessary to protect the interests of the United States.

SEC. 18. That all arms, equipments, ordnance, or other military stores, or tents which may become unserviceable or unsuitable, shall be examined by a board of officers of the national guard, and its report shall be forwarded by the governor of the State or Territory direct to the Secretary of War, who shall cause such stores to be inspected by an inspector-general or such other officer or officers of the Army as he may appoint for that purpose, and shall then direct what disposition, by sale or otherwise, shall be made of them, and if sold, the proceeds of such sale shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States.

SEC. 19. That any State or Territory may, in addition to the stores and supplies issued under the provisions of this act, purchase for use of its national guard or militia, at regulation prices for cash at place of sale, such stores and supplies from any department of the Army as in the opinion of the Secretary of War can be spared, and funds received from such sales shall not be covered into the Treasury, but shall be used for the purchase of supplies by the department making the sale.

SEC. 20. That when any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia turns into the War Department arms, equipments, or other military supplies obsolete or unserviceable, under instructions from the Secretary of War, which have been issued by said Department under the law for arming and equipping the national guard or militia, the Secretary of War will cause such old and unserviceable or obsolete material to be sold, and will report the amount received therefor from time to time to the Secretary of the Treasury, who is directed to then credit to the appropriation for arming and equipping the national guard the amounts so reported to him by the Secretary of War. The Secretary of War, on receiving notification from the Secretary of the Treasury that the amounts have been carried to the appropriation aforesaid, will credit the respective States, Territories, or District of Columbia, as the case may be, with the amounts to which each shall be entitled.

SEC. 21. That each State and Territory furnished with stores and supplies under the provisions of this act shall require every organization in its national guard, not excused by the governor of such State or Territory, to go into camp of instruction or to be quartered at a United States fort for instruction in heavy artillery at least seven consecutive days in each year, and to assemble for drill and instruction not less than twelve times in each year, and shall also require an annual inspection of each organization in its national guard, and that the Secretary of War shall, in his annual report each year, transmit to Congress an abstract of the returns and reports of these inspections, with such observations thereon as he may deem necessary for the information of Congress.

SEC. 22. That upon the application of the governor of any State or Territory furnished with stores or supplies under the provisions of this act, the Secretary of War may, in his discretion, detail one or more officers of the Army to attend any encampment of the national guard of such State or Territory, and may direct that such officer or officers as he may appoint for that purpose shall visit such camps and make reports to the Secretary of War, who shall cause the reports to be consolidated and prepared for publication in the office of the Adjutant-General, and copies thereof to be furnished to the governors of the States and Territories.

SEC. 23. That upon the application of the governor of any State or Territory furnished with stores and supplies under the provisions of this act the Secretary of War may, in his discretion, detail one or more officers of the Army to report to the governor of such State or Territory for duty in connection with the national guard. The governor may, in his discretion, commission such officer in the national guard during said detail with such rank as he may deem proper, and the acceptance of such an appointment by an officer so detailed shall not be considered a violation of section 1222 of the Revised Statutes of the United States. An officer so assigned shall receive no pay or emoluments from the United States, except those of his rank in the Army. All such assignments shall be revoked at the request of the governor of the State or Territory or at the pleasure of the Secretary of War.

SEC. 24. That this act is to take effect at the beginning of the fiscal year after its passage.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will call the attention of the gentleman from Louisiana to the fact that this is on the Union Calendar.

Mr. HOLMAN. Let it be considered in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. MEYER. I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the purpose of considering this bill.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. MEYER. Division.

Pending the count, Mr. MEYER rose.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. MEYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be withdrawn till to-morrow, without losing its privilege.

Mr. FITHIAN. I have no objection to the gentleman withdrawing the bill, but I do object to his committee having the hour to-morrow.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair understands the gentleman to withdraw the bill; which he has a right to do.

Mr. MEYER. I desire to withdraw the bill, reserving whatever privilege we may have for its consideration in the morning hour to-morrow.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It can have no privilege to-morrow except by unanimous consent.

Mr. FITHIAN. I object to the Committee on the Militia having the morning hour to-morrow.

Mr. MEYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the vote be announced.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Louisiana, then, withdraws his request, and the Chair will announce the vote on the motion to go into Committee of the Whole to consider the bill. Upon this question the ayes are 36 and the noes are 28. The ayes have it, and the motion is agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole, Mr. OUTHWAITE in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in the Committee of the Whole for the consideration of a bill (H. R. 5039) to promote the efficiency of the militia.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the militia shall consist of every able-bodied male citizen who is of the age of 18 and under the age of 45 years, and shall be divided into two classes, the organized to be known as the national guard, the unorganized to be known as the reserve militia. That the national guard shall consist of such regularly enlisted troops as are or may be organized in the several States and Territories and the District of Columbia in pursuance of their respective laws, not in conflict with the provisions of this act, and the organization shall conform as closely as possible to that prescribed for the Army.

SEC. 2. That the reserve militia shall not be subject or liable to any military duty to the United States, except when called into service by act of Congress passed for that purpose; that the national guard shall not be subject or liable to any military duty to the United States, except when called into service by act of Congress passed for that purpose or by the President of the United States, as is hereinafter provided; and every officer and enlisted man of the national guard called into service of the United States who shall refuse to obey such call shall be punished as a court-martial may direct.

SEC. 3. That the Vice-President of the United States; the officers, judicial and executive, of the Government of the United States; the members of both Houses of Congress, and their respective officers; all custom-house officers, with their clerks; all postmasters and persons employed in the transportation of the mail; all ferrymen employed at any ferry on post-roads; all inspectors of exports; all artificers and workmen employed in the armories and arsenals of the United States; all pilots; all mariners actually employed in the sea service of any citizen or merchant within the United States; all persons in the Army and Navy of the United States, and all persons who now are exempted by the laws of the respective States, shall be exempted from militia duty, notwithstanding their being above the age of 18 and under the age of 45 years.

SEC. 4. That the adjutant-general of each State and Territory shall, under the direction of the governor thereof, make returns and reports to the Secretary of War at such times and in such form as he shall from time to time prescribe.

SEC. 5. That the Secretary of War shall, in his annual report each year, transmit to Congress an abstract of the returns and reports of the adjutants-general of the States and Territories, with such observations thereon as he may deem necessary for the information of Congress.

SEC. 6. That the national guard shall be instructed in the same system of drill and tactics that may from time to time be prescribed for the Army.

SEC. 7. That whenever the United States are invaded or are in imminent danger of invasion from any foreign nation or Indian tribe, or of rebellion against the authority of the Government of the United States, it shall be lawful for the President to call forth such number of the national guard of the State or States most convenient to the place of danger or scene of action as he may deem necessary to repel such invasion or to suppress such rebellion, and to issue his orders for that purpose to the governor or governors thereof for such number of the national guard as he may think proper; and he may, in time of peace, accept from the governor of each State and Territory respectively, as he may think proper, such number of the national guard as may be offered for the purpose of united instruction and discipline, when the state of the appropriation will permit.

SEC. 8. That when the national guard of more than one State is called into the actual service of the United States by the President he may, in his discretion, apportion them among such States according to representative population.

SEC. 9. That the national guard and militia, when called into the actual service of the United States for the suppression of the rebellion against and resistance to the laws of the United States, shall be subject to the same rules and articles of war as the regular troops of the United States.

SEC. 10. That whenever the President calls forth the national guard of the States to be employed in the service of the United States he may specify in his call the period for which such service will be required, not exceeding nine months, and the national guard so called shall be mustered in and continue to serve during the terms so specified, unless sooner discharged by command of the President.

SEC. 11. That the reserve militia and national guard when called into the actual service of the United States, or accepted by the President, shall during their time of service be entitled to the same pay and allowances as may be provided by law for the Army of the United States.

SEC. 12. That whenever the militia or national guard is called into the actual service of the United States their pay shall be deemed to commence from the day of their appearing at the place of rendezvous of the forces called out.

SEC. 13. That the expenses incurred by marching the militia or national guard of any State or Territory to their place of rendezvous, in pursuance of a requisition of the President or of a call made by the authority of any State or Territory and approved by him, shall be adjusted and paid in like manner as the expenses incurred after their arrival at such places of rendezvous, on the requisition of the President; but this provision does not authorize any species of expenditure previous to arriving at the place of rendezvous which is not provided by existing laws to be paid for after their arrival at such place of rendezvous.

SEC. 14. That courts-martial for the trial of the militia or national guard shall be composed of militia or national guard officers only.

SEC. 15. That the sum of $600,000 is hereby annually appropriated, to be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the purpose of providing arms, ordnance stores, signal stores, engineer stores, subsistence stores, medical stores, quartermaster stores, and camp equipage for issue to the national guard.

SEC. 16. That said appropriation shall be apportioned among the several States and Territories, under the direction of the Secretary of War, according to the number of Senators and Representatives to which each State, respectively, is entitled in the Congress of the United States, and to the Territories and District of Columbia in such proportion and under such regulations as the President may prescribe: Provided, however, That no State shall be entitled to the benefits of the appropriation apportioned to it unless the number of its regularly enlisted, organized, and uniformed active national guard shall be at least one hundred men for each Senator and Representative to which such State is entitled in the Congress of the United States. And the amount of said appropriation which is thus determined not to be available shall be covered back into the Treasury.

SEC. 17. That the purchase or manufacture of arms, ordnance stores, signal stores, engineer stores, subsistence stores, medical stores, quartermaster's stores, and camp equipage for the national guard, under the provisions of this act, shall be made under the direction of the Secretary of War, as such arms, ordnance, signal, engineer, subsistence, medical, and quartermaster's stores and camp equipage are now manufactured or otherwise provided for the use of the regular Army, and they shall be receipted for and shall remain the property of the United States and be annually accounted for, for which purpose the Secretary of War shall prescribe and supply the necessary blanks and make such regulations as he may deem necessary to protect the interests of the United States.

SEC. 18. That all arms, equipments, ordnance, or other military stores, or tents which may become unserviceable or unsuitable, shall be examined by a board of officers of the national guard, and its report shall be forwarded by the governor of the State or Territory direct to the Secretary of War, who shall cause such stores to be inspected by an inspector-general or such other officer or officers of the Army as he may appoint for that purpose, and shall then direct what disposition, by sale or otherwise, shall be made of them, and if sold, the proceeds of such sale shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States.

SEC. 19. That any State or Territory may, in addition to the stores and supplies issued under the provisions of this act, purchase for use of its national guard or militia, at regulation prices for cash at place of sale, such stores and supplies from any department of the Army as in the opinion of the Secretary of War can be spared; and funds received from such sales shall not be covered into the Treasury, but shall be used for the purchase of supplies by the department making the sale.

SEC. 20. That when any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia turns into the War Department arms, equipments, or other military supplies obsolete or unserviceable, under instructions from the Secretary of War, which have been issued by said Department under the law for arming and equipping the national guard or militia, the Secretary of War will cause such old and unserviceable or obsolete material to be sold, and will report the amount received therefor from time to time to the Secretary of the Treasury, who is directed to then credit to the appropriation for arming and equipping the national guard the amounts so reported to him by the Secretary of War. The Secretary of War, on receiving notification from the Secretary of the Treasury that the amounts have been carried to the appropriation aforesaid, will credit the respective States, Territories, or District of Columbia, as the case may be, with the amounts to which each shall be entitled.

SEC. 21. That each State and Territory furnished with stores and supplies under the provisions of this act shall require every organization in its national guard, not excused by the governor of such State or Territory, to go into camp of instruction or to be quartered at a United States fort for instruction in heavy artillery at least seven consecutive days in each year, and to assemble for drill and instruction not less than twelve times in each year, and shall also require an annual inspection of each organization in its national guard, and that the Secretary of War shall, in his annual report each year, transmit to Congress an abstract of the returns and reports of these inspections, with such observations thereon as he may deem necessary for the information of Congress.

SEC. 22. That upon the application of the governor of any State or Territory furnished with stores or supplies under the provisions of this act, the Secretary of War may, in his discretion, detail one or more officers of the Army to attend any encampment of the national guard of such State or Territory, and may direct that such officer or officers as he may appoint for that purpose shall visit such camps and make reports to the Secretary of War, who shall cause the reports to be consolidated and prepared for publication in the office of the Adjutant-General, and copies thereof to be furnished to the governors of the States and Territories.

SEC. 23. That upon the application of the governor of any State or Territory furnished with stores and supplies under the provisions of this act the Secretary of War may, in his discretion, detail one or more officers of the Army to report to the governor of such State or Territory for duty in connection with the national guard. The governor may, in his discretion, commission such officer in the national guard during said detail with such rank as he may deem proper, and the acceptance of such an appointment by an officer so detailed shall not be considered a violation of section 1222 of the Revised Statutes of the United States. An officer so assigned shall receive no pay or emoluments from the United States, except those of his rank in the Army. All such assignments shall be revoked at the request of the governor of the State or Territory or at the pleasure of the Secretary of War.

SEC. 24. That this act is to take effect at the beginning of the fiscal year after its passage.

Mr. HOLMAN. That is the original bill, I believe. I hope the amendments will be read.

Mr. DOCKERY. Amendments are not in order until after general debate.

The CHAIRMAN. General debate is now in order. If there is no objection, general debate will be considered as closed.

Mr. DUNN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to speak on this subject.

Mr. HOLMAN. There is no substitute pending, I believe?

The CHAIRMAN. No substitute has been offered. It would not be in order at this time. The gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. MEYER], in charge of the bill, is recognized for general debate.

Mr. MEYER. Mr. Chairman, in considering this bill "to promote the efficiency of the militia," it is proper to review our constitutional powers, our past policy, and our present exigencies. The bill is in accordance with our undoubted powers, and involves no change in the general policy of the Government; but it does provide some slight modifications of existing laws on the subject of the militia, which are calculated to make the system more adequate to our present needs and requirements.

The Constitution, in Article I, section 8, declares that—

Congress shall have power to raise and support armies, but no appropriation of money to that use shall be for a longer term than two years.

To make rules for the government and regulation of the land and naval forces.

To provide for calling forth the militia to execute the laws of the Union, suppress insurrections, and repel invasions.

To provide for organizing, arming, and disciplining the militia, and for governing such part of them as may be employed in the service of the United States, reserving to the States respectively the appointment of the officers and the authority of training the militia according to the discipline prescribed by Congress.

In Article IV, section 4, it is further provided:

The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a republican form of government, and shall protect each of them against invasion; and on application of the Legislature, or of the executive (when the Legislature can not be convened), against domestic violence.

Again in Article II, section 2, it says:

The President shall be Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States, and of the militia of the several States, when called into the actual service of the United States.

Article II of the amendments declares that—

A well-regulated militia, being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed.

The slightest consideration of these elaborate provisions will disclose the great importance attached by the framers of the Constitution to this feature of our policy. The powers given to Congress and to the President in regard to the militia are great indeed. They were conferred at a time when the spirit of personal freedom and regard for State rights were universal and stronger even than now, but these very sentiments only served to quicken the purpose to provide for the national defense. Only a few years before this country had established its independence, after a long and painful struggle with England, in which it was assisted by the generous and powerful hand of France. The experience of history, the dangers to free institutions from large standing armies, warned our ancestors against the creation of a large regular army in our midst. The young Republic wisely adopted the policy of maintaining only a small regular army, and though we suffered some from this lack of a standing force during the war of 1812, the gallantry of our people made partial amends for the deficiency of regular troops and finally gave us the signal victory of New Orleans.

But with the adoption of this scheme of having only a small standing army, well equipped and officered as a nucleus for defense, Congress felt the increased necessity of promptly invoking its ample powers under the Constitution for organizing and arming the militia of the Union. The report which accompanies this bill gives a recital of the laws passed so repeatedly by Congress for this purpose. They are republished in that report. The existing law on this subject for the organization, equipment, and governing of the militia is found in sections of the Revised Statutes 1625 to 1662, inclusive, and section 1667, and chapter 172 of the laws of 1882, which provides for supplying heavy guns and mortars to the militia for practice at seacoast ports. Chapter 129 of the laws of 1887 provides for the annual appropriation of $400,000 for the militia, and chapter 372 of the laws of 1889 relates to the purchasing of arms for the militia.

The first law directing the organization of the militia was passed by Congress May 8, 1792. It was a very thorough and comprehensive statute. This act was reënacted by that of 28th February, 1795, and was amended by the act of 18th April, 1814.

In these several statutes, sir, you find an interpretation by the men who made the Constitution, and by their contemporaries, of the powers of Congress over the subject of organizing and disciplining the militia. The necessities of that period may have been greater or less than now, but the measure of power then exercised can fairly be claimed now, if our present or future exigencies, in the discretion of Congress, shall require us to exercise them.

In addition, sir, I may say that these statutes of May, 1892, February, 1795, and April 18, 1814, have each and all been the subject of the most careful judicial review by the Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of Houston vs. Moore, 5 Wheaton. This case grew out of a Pennsylvania State law, passed March 28, 1814, providing that officers and privates of the militia of that State neglecting or refusing to serve when called into actual service, in pursuance of any order or requisition of the President of the United States, shall be liable to the penalties defined in the act of Congress, approved February 28, 1795, and also to such as Congress might subsequently impose.

After reviewing these three Federal statutes the court says that "the whole ground of Congressional legislation is covered by the laws referred to;" the manner in which the militia is to be organized, armed, and governed, and provision made for calling out the quota, and that these laws amount to a full execution of the powers conferred upon Congress by the Constitution.

The court says that the President's orders calling out the militia may be "given to the chief executive magistrate of the State, or any militia officer he may think proper."

In every word of this full, careful, and elaborate opinion the constitutionality and validity of these laws are upheld. In the dissent of Mr. Justice Story, who denied the validity of the Pennsylvania statute, he said:

No doubt has been breathed of the constitutionality of the provisions of the act of 1795, and they are believed to be in all respects within the legitimate authority of Congress.

In the case of Martin vs. Mott, reported in 12 Wheaton, 19, the court again expressly says that the act of 1795 is within the constitutional authority of Congress over the militia. The court further says that "the distinction between a requisition and an order is untenable."

Such is the reasoning and the decision of the United States Supreme Court in respect to these statutes. They stand on our statute book as respects power and validity wholly unassailed, and the only point of difficulty is that in some provision for armament and for organization the progress of the military art requires changes and modifications.

Mr. FITHIAN. What is to be the annual amount of appropriation under this bill?

Mr. MEYER. This bill fixes the annual amount of appropriation the same as under existing law, namely, $400,000 a year.

Mr. FITHIAN. Under this bill there may be organized, as I observe, 100 militiamen for each Representative and Senator in Congress, making about 45,000 soldiers. The bill also in another section provides that the President may authorize the organization in the different Territories and in the District of Columbia of as many companies of militia as he may see fit. There is absolutely no limit fixed in the bill to the number of men that may be thus organized in the District of Columbia and in the different Territories.

Mr. MEYER. I will say to the gentleman that although this bill, under the construction which he places upon it, authorizes a force of 45,000, we have now over 100,000 organized militia called the National Guard of the respective States; and as I shall proceed further with my remarks the gentleman will find, I trust, a satisfactory explanation with regard to that matter.

Mr. FITHIAN. The different organizations of State militia are not, however, a charge upon the General Government.

Mr. MEYER. Nor is it proposed that the organizations under this bill shall be, as I shall presently explain.

Mr. FITHIAN. Oh, yes; these militia must be paid.

Mr. MEYER. But the money goes to the respective States.

Mr. FITHIAN. Let me call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that this appropriation is only for arms, ordnance, signal stores, engineer stores, subsistence, etc. I read from the bill:

That the sum of $400,000 is hereby annually appropriated, to be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the purpose of providing arms, ordnance stores, signal stores, engineer stores, subsistence stores, medical stores, quartermaster stores, and camp equipage for issue to the National Guard.

Now, none of that money would be appropriated for the payment of these militiamen; and whenever the Government nationalizes them, then the expense of keeping them up becomes a charge upon the General Government.

Mr. MEYER. But the only condition under which the Government can nationalize these troops—the only condition under which the President is authorized by the provisions of existing law, or by the provisions of this bill, to call out the troops, is in case of such emergency as is contemplated and provided for by law that has stood on our statute books for over one hundred years, and under which Presidents have in every emergency exercised their powers.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. How much does this bill increase the appropriation over the present law?

Mr. MEYER. Not one dollar.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. I would like to ask whether the appropriation asked for in this bill is covered in the general appropriation bill that has been passed?

Mr. MEYER. Yes, sir.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. Then this does not make any new appropriation?

Mr. FITHIAN. It will be found that there are expenses for inspectors and a great many other expenses covered in this bill which are to be charged against the General Government.

Mr. MEYER. If the gentleman will allow me, I will continue my remarks, in the course of which he will perhaps find some of his suggestions answered. Not a dollar is authorized to be expended for inspectors or any purpose under the provisions of this bill, except for arms, stores, etc., as specified in the section quoted by the gentleman from Illinois.

No greater powers are desired or necessary than these laws contain. I ask that the pending bill may be compared with these early statutes of Congress, and it will be seen that they merely codify these laws, retrenching surplusage, repealing the obsolete, and making slight additions to existing arrangements for organization. The powers and rights of the States are left as they were placed and defined by the provisions of the Federal Constitution and by the early statutes of Congress. I proceed, sir, to examine and explain this bill before us now as briefly as may be.

Section 1 follows the act of 1892 in declaring that the militia shall consist of every able-bodied male citizen who is of the age of 18 and under 45 years. It goes on to divide this force into the organized and the unorganized, the latter to be known as the reserve militia. The first, or organized, are to consist of such regularly enlisted troops as are or may be organized in the States and Territories or the District of Columbia. There can be no objection, I conceive, to this distinction. The title of "National Guard" applied to the organized militia may be objected to by some, but is one of form and not of substance; hence authority is given that these may be known as the National Guard of the State, or such other designation as the respective States may prescribe. It might be changed so as to read the "active militia," but the matter is one of mere unimportant detail.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. I wish to call the gentleman's attention to the fact that when we mobilize the militia of the several States and put them under the control of the Federal authorities we thereby destroy their present efficiency as State troops.

Mr. MEYER. Not in any degree when they are called forth for objects especially authorized by the law.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. If this bill does not affect the present law in that respect, what is its object?

Mr. MEYER. In the present law there are many things which have become obsolete, useless, and inappropriate, in view of the progress of military science and the use of improved fire arms and ordnance. The object of this bill is to codify all the existing laws and to make such changes as will render those laws intelligible and reasonable, capable of being understood by anyone who may look into them, and without rendering it necessary to search throughout the entire field of legislation for one hundred years past.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. Does not this bill give the President the right to call out the militia, and transfer them from one State to another when he chooses?

Mr. MEYER. He is already invested with such authority in case of war or insurrection. That power was given to the President under the act of 1792, and has never been changed.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. As the President has always been recognized as the commander-in-chief of the militia when called into actual service of the United States, what is the necessity of inserting such a provision in this bill?

Mr. MEYER. It is desirable to embody in precise form all the laws relating to the militia, with such changes as the modern system of warfare and tactics may make necessary.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. I am only calling the gentleman's attention to these points; I have not had time to examine the bill.

Mr. MEYER. Section 2 declares that the reserve militia shall not be subject to military duties to the United States unless called out by Congress. The organized militia may be called out by Congress or by the President in certain contingencies defined in section 7. That section is simply a reaffirmation of the Constitution and of the act of February 28, 1795, judicially declared to be valid. Section 3 repeats the exemptions from militia duty provided for by existing laws: All persons actually needed to maintain and manage the postal and military service of the United States, and all persons who now are or may hereafter be exempted by the laws of the respective States, and all locomotive engineers on post roads, and other persons employed in the management of roads used for the postal or military service of the United States, shall be exempted, etc. All persons now exempted by the laws of their respective States are exempted by this law.

Section 4 follows the law of March 2, 1843, in requiring returns and reports from the adjutant-general of each State and Territory. Without such reports the President can not frame an intelligent call for service.

Section 5 directs the Secretary of War to make report and abstracts to Congress of these returns with such observations as he may deem necessary. Congress is clearly entitled to this information.

Section 6 says that the organized militia shall be instructed in the same system of drill and tactics that may be prescribed from time to time for the Army. This follows the act of May 12, 1823, and the terms of the Constitution, giving power to discipline the militia.

Section 7 has already been cited. It follows the Constitution and existing law on the subject.

Section 8 declares that when the militia of more than one State is called into actual service of the United States by the President he may in his discretion apportion them among the States according to representative population. This merely repeats the law of July 27, 1862, now in force.

Section 9 declares that when the militia shall be called into actual service of the United States to suppress rebellion against the laws of the United States, they shall be subject to the same rules and articles of war as the regular troops. This repeats the laws of 1795, and July 29, 1861. Possibly this provision should be extended to all occasions when actual service by the militia to the United States is required.

Section 10 follows the existing law of July 7, 1862, in declaring that whenever the President calls forth the militia of the States to be employed in the service of the United States, he may specify in his call the period for which such service will be required, not exceeding nine months, and the militia so called forth shall serve during the term specified, unless sooner discharged.

Section 11 follows the laws of March 19, 1836, and July 29, 1861, in giving the militia when in actual service the same pay and allowances as may be provided by law for the Army of the United States.

Section 12 declares that the pay of the militia shall be deemed to begin from the day of their appearing at the place of rendezvous. This follows the law of January, 1795, now in force.

Section 13 reënacts the laws of 1795 and April 20, 1818, relative to reimbursing expenses of marching the militia to their places of rendezvous.

Section 14 declares that courts-martial for the trial of the militia shall be composed of militia officers only. This follows the law of 1798 now in force.

Section 15 appropriates the sum of $400,000 for providing arms, ordnance stores, and other stores and military supplies for issue to the militia. This follows the existing law of February 12, 1887, and is certainly not a large appropriation or excessive in comparison with the important objects desired to be obtained.

Section 16 declares that this appropriation shall be apportioned according to the number of Senators and Representatives to which each State is entitled, but each State before receiving its quota must have an active enlisted force of at least 100 men for each Senator and Representative it is entitled to in Congress. This last provision is clearly just, in order to prevent any State from receiving the benefit of the appropriation without having a fair body of organized troops, and in general the section follows the line of existing laws.

Mr. FITHIAN. Then the bill requires each State to have an organized force of not less than 100 for each Representative and Senator, before it can be entitled to any part of this appropriation?

Mr. MEYER. Yes, sir.

Mr. FITHIAN. That means that it shall have its full quota.

Mr. BARTLETT. Under the existing law is not the money divided upon a different method?

Mr. MEYER. The method is somewhat different. Each State receives its quota in proportion to the available force of militia, whether organized or not. Certainly, for common safety, every State should be encouraged, even required, to maintain some organization, that it may contribute to the national defense when occasion requires.

Sections 17 to 20, inclusive, of the reported bill relate to the purchase and distribution of arms, stores, and supplies for the militia, their care and the method of accounting for the same, the disposition of those that may become unserviceable and obsolete, and other matters of detail, to which no objection can be made, and adds a provision "that the Secretary of War may, at the request of any State or Territory, exchange any arms for such later or improved patterns as may be on hand in any United States arsenal, and the apportionment shall be made in the same ratio as provided in section 16 of this act."

Section 21 of the bill enacts that each State and Territory receiving stores and supplies under this act shall require every organization in its active forces, not excused by the governor of such State or Territory, to go into camp of instruction or be quartered at a United States fort for instruction on heavy artillery at least seven consecutive days in each year, and to assemble for drill and instruction not less than twelve times in each year, also to be annually inspected. The object of this provision is that the militia shall learn how to use the arms they receive at the hands of the Federal Government and be able when called into actual service to perform proper and efficient military duty. There can be no hardship in the State requiring this much of the organizations whose armament is supplied in whole or in part by the National Government; and even here the organizations may be excused by the governor of the State or Territory in his discretion. The control of this provision for discipline remains entirely with the States.

Section 22 allows the Secretary of War, upon the request of the governor of the State or Territory furnished with stores and supplies, to detail one or more officers to attend the encampment of the organized militia of such State and make report to the Secretary of War.

Section 23 goes farther and allows the Secretary of War upon application of the governor of the State or Territory receiving stores and supplies, to detail one or more officers of the Army to report to the governor of such State or Territory for duty in connection with the militia. The governor may commission such officer with such rank as he may deem proper, but the officer is to receive no additional pay or emoluments from the United States. These assignments may be revoked at the request of the governor or at the pleasure of the Secretary of War.

I need not point out the value to the State and the service whose efficiency we desire to improve of having the advantage of the presence and instruction of trained officers of the regular Army. For the time being they are in the service of the State. The tendency of such arrangements is to secure a far better force than now, and one that in event of war may be able to act in concert with the regular Army for the national defense and safety.

Such is the bill now proposed for adoption. It conforms to the language of the Constitution, is clearly within the scope of its powers, trenches on no rights reserved to the States of the Union, and in the main is a reënactment of old and well-known laws.

Mr. BARTLETT. I would like to have that stated.

The CHAIRMAN. The morning hour has expired and the committee will rise.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. OUTHWAITE, from the Committee of the Whole, reported that they had had under consideration a bill (H. R. 5039) to promote the efficiency of the militia, and had come to no resolution thereon.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the special order.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That this calendar day, after the second morning hour, be assigned to the consideration of bills reported from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds in the order indicated by said committee.

The SPEAKER. The bills referred to in the special order are all in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for consideration of business under the special order.

The motion was agreed to; the House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole, Mr. MCCREARY of Kentucky in the chair.

PUBLIC BUILDING, NEWPORT, KY.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (H. R. 2337) for the erection of a public building at Newport, Ky.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase, or otherwise provide a site for, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, with a fireproof vault therein, for the accommodation of the post-office at the city of Newport, Ky. The plans, specifications, and full estimates of said building shall be previously made and approved according to law, and shall not exceed, for the site and building complete, the sum of $100,000: Provided, That the site shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire in adjacent buildings by an open space of not less than 50 feet, including streets and alleys; and for the purpose herein mentioned the sum of $100,000 is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided further, That no part of said sum shall be available until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Kentucky shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

Mr. WASHINGTON. Is there a report in this case?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes, sir.

Mr. WASHINGTON. I ask to have it read.

The report (by Mr. BERRY) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2337) for the erection of a public building at Newport, Ky., submit the following report:

The city of Newport, Campbell County, Ky., is one of the oldest cities in the State and the third in population and importance. The population is now about 35,000, with several small towns and a thickly settled population about her dependent upon it for its postal accommodations, including Fort Thomas, a military post of the United States, making in all 50,000 people who receive their mail at this point.

The Government has never had a public building here, but has rented from time to time such building as might be offered. The Government is now occupying an old store which is totally unsuited for the purpose, being dark and incommodious. The rental paid therefore is $1,400 per annum.

The Newport post-office handles not less than 8,000 pieces of mail per day, and the number is still increasing. It will pay a net revenue this year to the Post-Office Department of over $10,000. The location of Newport being directly opposite Cincinnati, Ohio, and connected by two bridges and an admirable system of electric street railroads, causes a large amount of the mailing receipts to go to the Cincinnati office, which lessens the receipts of the Newport post-office. It will be a measure of economy for the Government to own its own building and thus have a suitable home for its post-office.

Your committee, therefore, report the bill favorably, and recommend its passage.

[Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. HUTCHESON. Mr. Chairman, I would like to hear some explanation of this bill.

Mr. SICKLES. The explanation is in the report.

Mr. HUTCHESON. I would like to hear a statement from the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. BERRY. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Texas desires me to make a statement in regard to the necessity for this public building. The city of Newport is part of a center of population of half a million, including the three cities of Cincinnati, on the one side, and Newport and Covington on the opposite side of the river, but all three really constitute a homogeneous population. Newport is the third city in the Commonwealth, and is in a very prosperous and growing condition, with large manufactories. The postal receipts are about $50,000 a year.

And I wish to say to this body that nearly every city in the State of Kentucky of any importance has now a public building; smaller towns than this being so supplied—such towns as Paducah, Owensboro, Richmond, Frankfort, Lexington, Covington, and towns of that kind.

This town of Newport has shown itself to be a very prosperous and growing city. Its population is increasing rapidly; it has all modern appliances in the way of pavements and electric roads, and so on; and we ask only $100,000 for the purchase of the ground and the erection of the building. It will be a measure of economy for the Government to make this appropriation, because to secure the proper facilities now, with sixteen or eighteen carriers, requires the annual payment of a rental that is largely in excess of the interest upon the amount of the investment which would be required for the construction of the building.

In all respects this measure, it seems to me, should commend itself to the consideration of the House. The proximity of the city of Newport to Cincinnati, its growing importance, and the amount of mail business done there, both for the city and the adjacent towns, warrant the town of Newport and its Representative on this floor, in asking this appropriation.

Mr. HUTCHESON. Let me ask the gentleman this question: What is the population of that town?

Mr. BERRY. It is about 35,000 at this time.

Mr. HUTCHESON. What did the census show?

Mr. BERRY. The last census showed a population of twenty-six or twenty-seven thousand. But that does not embrace the adjacent villages which are a part of the town of Newport. Belleview and Dayton are adjacent, there being no water course or other natural boundary to divide them from Newport; and they were simply incorporated as separate towns to prevent taxation from the central portion—Belleview having a population of about 6,000, and Dayton of about 8,000 more, a legitimate population, all of which belong geographically and properly to the town of Newport.

This town is connected by three excellent bridges with the city of Cincinnati. We have a rapid transit bridge there across the river which cost about $1,000,000. We have lines of electric railroad which extend and operate all through the post-office district, extending up to Fort Thomas and the cemetery and to the adjacent towns of Dayton and Belleview, carrying fifteen to twenty thousand people daily from Newport to Cincinnati; and the receipts from the post-office there, let me state in this connection, would be very much larger except for the fact that the business men doing business in Cincinnati, and living in Newport, purchase their postage stamps largely on that side of the river, which increases the business of the Cincinnati post-office and lessens that which properly belongs to Newport.

Mr. VAN VOORHIS of New York. What courts are held there?

Mr. BERRY. We do not have any courts there. We do not ask the construction of a court-house; we ask only a plain brick building, with limestone trimmings, and a place for the post-office.

Mr. Chairman, I am aware of the fact that there is a spirit of economy pervading this body that might prevent it from acting on measures of this kind and doing what is fair and proper in connection with such matters as this.

This is the first bill making an appropriation for a public building that has been presented for the consideration of this House during this session, and I dislike, as a Democrat, to be compelled to acknowledge that we, in charge of the Government, are not able to do what is absolutely necessary for its support. While I believe in frugal living and economy in public matters as well as in private, I am not willing to say that in this matter the Democratic party can not make such appropriations as are necessary for the public service; and for that reason I have no hesitancy in asking you to support this bill.

Mr. WASHINGTON. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. BERRY. Yes, sir.

Mr. WASHINGTON. What rent is the Government paying now?

Mr. BERRY. Fifteen hundred dollars a year, and we have fifteen or eighteen mail-carriers and the system is rapidly extending, while our post-office facilities are so bad that you have to pass through between these carriers to get to the post-office at all.

Mr. WASHINGTON. This will take a hundred thousand dollars, I believe?

Mr. BERRY. Yes, sir.

Mr. WASHINGTON. And yet you have no court?

Mr. BERRY. No court.

Mr. WASHINGTON. Are there any other Federal offices there?

Mr. BERRY. Yes; there is a board of examiners in pension cases, and things of that kind.

Mr. WASHINGTON. The Government never furnishes pension examiners with a room in a public building.

Mr. BERRY. Oh, yes; they do in Covington, opposite us.

Mr. WASHINGTON. Well, they do not in my district.

Mr. BERRY. And let me say further in this connection that we have a right to ask this thing. The State of Kentucky paid into the Treasury of the United States, as revenue, $26,700,000 on tobacco and whisky last year, about one-fifth of the entire revenue collections.

Mr. BURROWS. I understand you have no United States court.

Mr. BERRY. No, sir; not at Newport. There is at Covington, just opposite, where the Government paid $225,000 for the building.

Mr. BURROWS. Could not you erect a suitable post-office building for less than $100,000?

Mr. BERRY. Well, I do not think so, if the proper site is secured for it. I think it would cost about $40,000 to secure the site, and we could put up a suitable building for $60,000 more.

Mr. BURROWS. In my city, where we have a post-office building, $75,000 erected a suitable and very substantial building for the purpose, and also obtained the ground.

Mr. BERRY. Well, I would rather take $75,000 than to fail altogether.

I do not want to ask anything unreasonable, but it seems to me that the amount this bill proposes is quite small in comparison with the necessities of the case. It must be remembered that we live under the shadow of the Queen City of the West, the strongest and most powerful city in Ohio; and we have to live up in some extent to the character of people we associate with. Our streets are graded, sewered, and paved with brick; we have the most magnificent system of electric railroads anywhere in the country, and living as we do near Cincinnati, we have to keep up somewhat with the conditions that surround us.

Mr. BURROWS. Well, I will say to the gentleman that my locality is quite favorably situated, and we have kept abreast with the civilization of the times.

Mr. WASHINGTON. Have you to put on style to keep up with Cincinnati?

Mr. BERRY. We have to keep up with Cincinnati, or people will not come on our side of the river. [Cries of "Vote!"]

Mr. HUTCHESON. I would like to ask the gentleman one question.

Mr. BERRY. Certainly.

Mr. HUTCHESON. I would like to state to the House that I do not propose to oppose any reasonable and just appropriation, but I have in mind my own town, when the same matter was under consideration, and the action of this House the RECORD will show as to what was done. We were compelled to contribute the land upon which the post-office was built; and I offer an amendment, Mr. Chairman, to this bill, that the sum appropriated shall not exceed $60,000, and that the ground shall be furnished by the city. That is exactly what we had to do. We have a commerce to-day, as shown by our clearing house, of $3,700,000 a week.

There are but ten cities in the United States that excel us. We had to give the ground. Ours is a city of 60,000 population, and we only got $75,000 for the erection of the public building. Now, Mr. Chairman, it seems to me to be fair, and that is all I want, and I hope the gentleman will not ask anything else but what is fair.

Mr. WASHINGTON. What were the postal receipts in your town?

Mr. HUTCHESON. They were four times the amount at this place.

A MEMBER. What is the name of your city?

Mr. HUTCHESON. Houston, Tex. That is the distributing point for nearly 300 miles square.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. Why should you make the city contribute the ground on which to erect a public building? This is a Government building, and I see no equity in requiring the city to furnish the ground.

Mr. HUTCHESON. That is exactly what was required of us. We were required to contribute the ground in order to get the building.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. But if an injustice was done you, that is no reason why you should do an injustice to another city.

Mr. HUTCHESON. I would like to ask the gentleman if he has a bill to follow which might be an inducement for him to support this bill?

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. I might ask the gentleman if he wanted to be discourteous.

Mr. HUTCHESON. I do not want to be discourteous.

Mr. POST. I desire to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. HUTCHESON. I will send up my amendment. I move to strike out "one hundred" and insert "sixty," and that the city shall contribute the ground.

Mr. BERRY. Mr. Chairman, I can not accept that amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. HUTCHESON. I ask for a division of the question.

First, on the question of appropriating $60,000, and then on the question as to the city contributing the ground.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment of the gentleman from Texas.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 15, strike out "hundred" and insert "sixty."

Mr. ROBINSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to the amendment of the gentleman from Texas [cries of "Vote!"], and in favor of the bill of the gentleman from Kentucky. In regard to the appropriations for public buildings, I am myself interested in a matter in the sundry civil bill, a Senate amendment which has been approved by the Supervising Architect, for an item of $20,000 additional to complete the public building at Chester of stone instead of brick. Chester is a city through which all you gentlemen pass on your way to the metropolis of New York or the metropolis of our own State, Philadelphia.

We have received, through a bill passed in the Fifty-first Congress, $80,000 for the Chester public building, secured through the efforts of my predecessor, and we are asking for an additional $20,000. The amendment has passed the Senate and is now in conference. I have made a comparison of statistics and population upon this subject, and it is my judgment, in view of what has been done in the past, that when a city can come before this body with claims such as the city of Newport has, with about 35,000 inhabitants, and a postal distribution such as the gentleman has told you of, that an appropriation of $100,000 is not too much. It is what we ask for Chester, a larger city, with greater interests and population. I will not trespass upon the patience of the House by reading this comparative statement which I have prepared.

Mr. WASHINGTON. Will not the gentleman read a part of it so that we may have the benefit of it?

Mr. ROBINSON of Pennsylvania. I am going to have it printed in my remarks.

Mr. WASHINGTON. But we can not get that until to-morrow.

Mr. ROBINSON of Pennsylvania. I will read some of it; and I think it comes with a little bad grace from my friend from Texas to say anything against public buildings, because the State of Texas has been most liberally treated by the United States Government.

I do not know whether his town has received any appropriation. The Supervising Architect's report will show that any town which has such claims as Newport or Chester, when they ask for $100,000 for the construction of a public building, it ought to be granted by this Congress, no matter what the result would be elsewhere. From the Supervising Architect's report I see there are towns like Asheville, N. C., with a population of 10,235, where there has been an appropriation of $100,000; and so I could go on down the list. Here is Bay City, Mich., with a population of 27,839 and an appropriation of $200,000. Here is Fort Worth, Tex.—and I ask the attention of the gentleman from Texas—with a population of 23,076 and an appropriation of $175,000. Here is Dallas, Tex., with a population of 38,067 and an appropriation of $291,000; El Paso, population 10,338, appropriation $200,000.

Now, gentlemen, these comparisons are, of course, odious, but at the same time they serve to throw light upon the reasonableness and the justice of appropriations for this purpose. I am in favor of the pending appropriation, and I am in favor of an appropriation of $100,000 for a public buildihg for every town in the United States that can show, as Newport shows, and as the city of Chester shows, that it has a mail distribution, letter-carrier service, population and business environment sufficient to warrant the expenditure of so much money. I might say that my case is a little stronger than that of Newport, as the Architect favors it, although I am not appealing to the jury before whom my case will be heard, except indirectly by these remarks and statistics.

Mr. WASHINGTON. How many of the buildings on the gentleman's list are used for post-offices only, no courts being held in them?

Mr. ROBINSON of Pennsylvania. The gentleman knows very well that it takes just the same size of building to conduct the postal business as it does to accommodate the judicial business, because the judicial business occupies most generally the second story of these buildings and the postal facilities the ground floors.

Mr. WASHINGTON. Oh, no; it takes twice as much space.

Mr. ROBINSON of Pennsylvania. Not at all. Now, Mr. Chairman, I ask leave to submit with my remarks and have printed in the RECORD this list of cities, with the population and the appropriation in each case, for the information of the House and of the public generally, the list including cities of the same or smaller population as Chester, Pa.

There was no objection.

The list is as follows:

Cities.	Population.	Amount.
Asheville, N. C	10,235	$100,000
Ashland, Wis	9,956	100,000
Atchison, Kans	13,963	100,000
Aurora, Ill	19,688	100,000
Baton Rouge, La	10,478	100,000
Bay City, Mich	27,839	200,000
Birmingham, Ala	26,178	335,000
Canton, Ohio	26,189	100,000
Carson City, Nev	3,950	146,000
Cedar Rapids, Iowa	18,020	130,000
Charleston, S. C., wharf	54,955	223,000
Charleston, S. C., post-office		400,000
Charleston, W. Va	21,287	142,853
Chattanooga, Tenn	29,100	275,000
Columbia, Ga	17,303	100,000
Dallas, Tex	38,067	291,000
Danville, Ill	11,491	100,000
Davenport, Iowa	26,872	$25,000; 100,000
Eastport, Me	4,908	117,971
El Paso, Tex	10,338	200,000
Erie, Pa	40,634	231,000
Fargo, N. Dak	5,664	$40,000; 100,000
Fort Worth, Tex	23,076	175,000
Frankfort, Ky	7,892	136,429
Galveston, Tex	29,084	280,581
Greenville, S. C	8,607	102,000
Jackson, Mich	20,798	105,000
Jacksonville, Fla	17,201	275,000
Kansas City, Mo	133,716	750,000
Lancaster, Pa	32,011	100,000
Lansing, Mich	13,102	125,000
Los Angeles, Cal	50,395	153,000
Lynn, Mass	55,727	125,000
Mankato, Minn	8,838	100,000
New Bedford, Mass	40,733	150,000
Newburg, N. Y	23,087	100,000
Norfolk, Va	34,871	90,000
Paris, Tex	8,254	100,000
Port Townsend, Wash	4,558	240,000
Pueblo, Colo	24,558	100,000
Racine, Wis	21,014	100,000
Rockford, Ill	23,584	100,000
Saginaw, Mich	46,322	100,000
St. Albans, Vt	7,771	95,000
San Jose, Cal	18,060	200,000
Savannah, Ga	43,189	200,000
Sioux City, Iowa	37,806	$25,000; 165,000
Sioux Falls, S. Dak	10,177	150,000
Springfield, Mo	21,850	150,000
Texarkana, Tex	2,852	110,000
Vicksburg, Miss	13,373	109,500
Williamsport, Pa	27,133	225,000
Wilmington, Del	61,431	250,000
Wilmington, N. C	20,056	200,000
Worcester, Mass	84,655	300,000
For sites and buildings at Cheyenne, Wyo	11,690
Boise City, Idaho	2,311	100,000
Helena, Mont	13,834
Spokane, Wash	19,922	*150,000

*Not to exceed.

Mr. ROBINSON of Pennsylvania. The side figures for Davenport, Fargo, and Sioux City are being asked for in the sundry civil bill additional, and the last four cities, Cheyenne, Boise, Helena, and Spokane, are asking for $100,000 in all in same bill. I do not antagonize any of these items, and merely allude to them that the comparison may be before the public.

Mr. BERRY. Mr. Chairman, I am willing to accept $75,000 and to have the bill so amended.

Mr. HUTCHESON. I offer that amendment.

The question was taken on the motion of Mr. HUTCHESON to amend the bill in line 15, by striking out "one hundred thousand," and inserting "seventy-five thousand" before the word "dollars;" and it was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is informed by the Clerk that the words "one hundred thousand" occur in another part of the bill. If there be no objection the amendment will be made there also, so as to conform to the one just adopted.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

Mr. PIGOTT. Mr. Chairman, I wish to ask the gentleman from Kentucky a question.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Chairman, I move that the bill as amended be laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

Mr. PIGOTT. Mr. Chairman, I thought I had been recognized for the purpose of asking a question.

Mr. BERRY. What is the gentleman's question?

Mr. PIGOTT. I understand the gentleman to say that the profit of the Government from the post-office at Newport is about $10,000?

Mr. BERRY. A little over $10,000.

Mr. PIGOTT. If that is so, do you think it is good policy for the Government to erect public buildings in towns where the profits are only $10,000, while refusing to erect them where the profits are $30,000 and $40,000?

Mr. BERRY. No, sir; I do not. I suggested, however, in the remarks I made a while ago thatfrom the peculiar location of the city of Newport a large portion of its postal receipts naturally went to Cincinnati.

Mr. PIGOTT. Another question: Do you think this is a good time to go into the erection of public buildings, in view of the present condition of the Treasury?

Mr. BERRY. I think it is, if the Government needs them.

A MEMBER. You can build them cheaper now than in more prosperous times.

The question was taken on the motion of Mr. BANKHEAD; and there were—ayes 113, noes 11.

Mr. PIGOTT. No quorum.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of no quorum being made, the Chair will appoint to act as tellers the gentleman from Connecticut, Mr. PIGOTT, and the gentleman from Alabama, Mr. BANKHEAD.

The committee divided by tellers.

Mr. PIGOTT (pending the announcement of the vote). Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the point of no quorum.

The motion of Mr. BANKHEAD was then agreed to, and the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

PUBLIC BUILDING, BROCKTON, MASS.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I call up the bill (H. R. 116) for the erection of a public building at Brockton, Mass.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase a site for a suitable building, with fireproof vaults therein, for the accommodation of the post-office and other Government offices at the city of Brockton, Mass., and cause such building to be erected thereon. The plans, specifications, and full estimates of said building shall be previously made and approved according to law, and shall not exceed, for the site and building complete, the sum of $75,000: Provided, That the site shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire in adjacent buildings by an open space of not less than 40 feet, including streets and alleys; and no money appropriated for this purpose shall be available until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Massachusetts shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

Mr. BANKHEAD. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MORSE] who introduced this bill is absent at this time, and I move that it be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. BURROWS. Oh, no; let us pass the bill.

Mr. DINGLEY. What was the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

Mr. BANKHEAD. This bill was introduced by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MORSE], who is absent, and I thought that in justice to him it had better be passed over for the present without prejudice.

Mr. BURROWS. There will be no trouble about the bill. Let the report be read.

Mr. DINGLEY. Brockton is a city of 30,000 population, a much larger place than Newport, Ky., for which we have just passed a bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama that this bill be passed over without prejudice?

Mr. BURROWS. I object.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I merely made the suggestion because of the absence of the gentleman from Massachusetts. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. DOCKERY. Let us have the report read and some explanation of the necessity for the bill.

The report (by Mr. MORSE) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 116) providing for the erection of a public building at Brockton, Mass., having had the same under consideration, respectfully report:

The city of Brockton is a most prosperous and rapidly growing manufacturing town of some 30,000 inhabitants, having increased to that number from 13,600 in 1880. The post-office receipts have increased from $14,189 in 1881 to above $32,000 in 1891, to $40,271.29 for year ending June 30, 1892, and to $44,796.31 for year ending June 30, 1893; and the convenience of the Federal business demands, and its extent justifies, the erection of a public building for the purpose.

After a careful investigation, your committee believes that an appropriate site can be secured and a suitable building erected thereon at a total cost not to exceed $75,000.

It is therefore recommended that the bill do pass.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Chairman, I move that the bill be laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. BANKHEAD, the Chairman declared that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. DOCKERY. I ask for a division.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 102, noes 7.

Mr. CABANISS. No quorum, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Georgia makes the point of no quorum, and the Chair will appoint to act as tellers the gentleman from Georgia, Mr. CABANISS, and the gentleman from Alabama, Mr. BANKHEAD.

The committee again proceeded to divide; but before the tellers had made a report—

Mr. CABANISS withdrew the point of no quorum.

So the bill was laid aside to be reported favorably to the House.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT PATERSON, N. J.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next public building bill in order on the Calendar.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 27) to increase the appropriation for the erection of a public building at Paterson, N. J.

Be it enacted, etc., That the amount heretofore fixed as the limit of cost for the erection of a public building, by the United States Government, at Paterson, N. J., be, and the same is hereby, increased to $250,000, and that the same is hereby fixed as the limit of cost for the purchase of a site and the erection thereon of said building; and said additional sum is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be used and expended for the purposes provided in this act.

SEC. 2. That the officers of the United States Government having charge of the erection of public buildings are required to be governed by the limitation hereby prescribed in making the plans and contracts for the erection of said building.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Chairman, I desire to make a point of order against so much of this bill as makes an appropriation of money.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I observe that this bill carries an appropriation. The committee did not intend so to report it. I move that the clause making the appropriation be struck out.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the clause which the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD] moves to strike out.

The Clerk read as follows:

And said additional sum is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be used and expended for the purposes provided in this act.

The amendment of Mr. BANKHEAD was agreed to.

Mr. DOCKERY. Now, Mr. Chairman, I would be glad to have the report read in this case.

The report (by Mr. CADMUS) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred House bill 27, respectfully report:

The question in this case is not whether a building shall be constructed, but as to whether the building to be constructed is adequate to the necessities of the Federal business of Paterson, N. J. A building was authorized by act of Congress approved June, 1888, limiting the cost of site and building to $80,000, which amount was appropriated. It was soon ascertained that this sum was entirely inadequate; the proposed site alone would cost $50,000. This site is now secured at a cost to the Government of $23,000, the balance having been subscribed by the city of Paterson, leaving the amount of only $57,000 available for the erection of the building. This amount is altogether inadequate for the wants of the city of Paterson, even at the present time, regardless of its rapid prospective growth.

The population of Paterson in 1883 was 58,000; in 1893, 97,000; estimated increase in the next ten years, 60 per cent. These figures are exclusive of a large and rapidly increasing suburban population.

The postal receipts for the year 1883 were $35,054; in 1893, $63,157; estimated increase in the next ten years, 75 to 100 per cent.

The industries of Paterson have kept pace with the increase of population. It has 599 establishments, employing 24,232 hands. The silk industry of Paterson alone ranks first of all the States in the Union, amounting to $14,350,000, being 28 per cent of the total value of this industry in the whole country, the total wages paid being $5,000,000 per annum.

Nearly the entire amount of raw silk which is used in the industry comes to Paterson by way of San Francisco, thus passing through the city on its way to the custom-house in New York City, and causing increased expense and much delay by reason of extra carting, storing, and reshipping back to Paterson, all of which could be avoided by having custom-house facilities in the proposed new Federal building.

This claim will appear reasonable when it is considered that of the 121 ports of entry situated at different points throughout the United States there are only 7 where the value of merchandise passing through is greater than the amount which would pass through a custom-house located at Paterson with the silk industry alone.

A plain building, two stories high, about 86 feet by 80 feet in dimensions, of fireproof construction, suitable for the necessities of the Government, can not be provided for less than the amount named below. No immediate appropriation is necessary, as the amount already appropriated will be sufficient to start and carry on the work for the next fiscal year.

In view of the facts stated the committee recommend that the limit of cost for site and building be increased to $250,000, and recommend that the bill do pass.

Mr. WASHINGTON. I move to amend the bill by striking out, in line 6, "$250,000" and inserting "$200,000" as the limit of cost.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Chairman, with the amendment just agreed to, I do not know that I shall offer any further objection to this bill. I realize that it is a most ungracious thing to interpose any sort of opposition to the passage of these bills; yet I realize also the influences which are at work to-day on this floor to impose upon the Treasury of the United States an enormous additional burden.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I do not appeal so much to the gentlemen on the other side of this Chamber as I do to the gentlemen who sit around me, gentlemen who were chosen to these places upon the demand of the country for economy in public expenditures.

I am not prepared to discuss this question fully and thoroughly as it ought to be discussed to-day; but if I am not misinformed this Government is already liable to the extent of millions of dollars, for which we have no money in the Treasury, to meet the requirements of public-building bills. I appeal to gentlemen on this side of the House not to allow their personal interests to dominate the general interest and impose additional taxes upon the people.

Since I came into this Hall a few moments ago Representatives—most excellent gentlemen, for whom I have the highest respect—have come to me and said: "I must get my bill through, because it is essential to my interest in my district." I have heard the same plea from the other side. I appeal again to Democrats on this side. With a depleted Treasury, with the gold reserve down to $50,000,000, with the gold reserve and the current revenues of the Government aggregating less than $100,000,000, I appeal to you, in this condition of the Treasury, to postpone these demands upon the people of the United States.

I do not intend, Mr. Chairman, to interpose factious opposition against these measures. It is possible that I may feel constrained to make the point of "no quorum" against some bill which I consider peculiarly unmeritorious. But I prefer not to take that course. I believe that the majority ought to control. The object of the appeal which I now make is simply that Democrats around me may not press these demands upon the Treasury at a time when millions of our people are out of employment.

Gentlemen, these bills that you propose to pass will do you no good in your campaigns for reëlection. Those gentlemen on the other side of the Chamber—adroit, shrewd, and able—will parade these figures in the campaign as an evidence of the profligacy of a Democratic House and a Democratic Congress in times of great financial stringency.

In view, therefore, of the Treasury condition, with $50,000,000 already added to the interest-bearing debt of the country, I again ask Democrats to be true to their pledges and withhold their demands upon the Treasury until prosperous times shall return.

Mr. GROSVENOR rose.

Mr. DOCKERY. I yield to the gentleman a moment.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I wish to suggest to the gentleman that there is about an equal amount of danger that these bad men over here will parade the fact that the Democratic party is incapable of carrying on the ordinary incidental business of Government.

Mr. DOCKERY. I do not know what those "bad men"—and that expression, let it be remarked, is the gentleman's own language and not mine—may say. But if the "bad men," to whom the gentleman refers, indulge in that comment, I feel warranted in the assertion that they would be departing from a maxim of a great leader of the Democratic party, when he said on a certain occasion: "Tell the truth." [Laughter.]

Mr. BOUTELLE. What was the truth he wanted told?

Mr. DOCKERY. Oh, well, he wanted the truth told. That is sufficient.

I think, Mr. Chairman, when we reach the end of this session, the legislation of the Fifty-third Congress will be a sufficient answer to the suggestion of the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. SICKLES. Well, let us come to a vote now. We have agreed on a tariff bill.

Mr. DOCKERY. I am very glad to hear it and hope the rumor is correct.

Mr. ROBINSON of Pennsylvania. I would like to ask the gentleman from Missouri a question. I advocated one of the bills, and voted for several of them, for the erection of public buildings here, and I do not think that that action is such as would justify the charge, or warrant the assertion, that I was indulging in profligacy or extravagance in voting away the public money. Is it not a fact, however, that the appropriation for the erection of these buildings will not come out of the present Treasury fund, but that it will be carried forward into the future, to be paid for out of appropriations hereafter?

Mr. DOCKERY. That is true.

Mr. ROBINSON of Pennsylvania. Yet you speak of the workingman being out of employment. Is it not true that the erection of these buildings in every city where there is a necessity for a public building will give thousands of the unemployed work?

Mr. DOCKERY. Well, the gentleman's own statement answers itself. In one breath he tells us that these bills make no present charge upon the Treasury, but that the amount is to be carried forward to be paid hereafter, and in the next breath he tells us that the working people are to derive employment from the erection of these buildings. How are they to be employed or to be paid when there is no appropriation?

Mr. ROBINSON of Pennsylvania. I say that the appropriation is carried forward into the future. It is not made in the bills.

Mr. DOCKERY. Does the gentleman consider it a wise business policy to pursue such a course as that at a time when the Treasury is nearly empty? Is that a policy that the gentleman himself would pursue in the ordinary course of his own private affairs? The gentleman knows that we have borrowed money to pay the ordinary running expenses of the Government.

Mr. ROBINSON of Pennsylvania. No, sir; I would not consider it good policy; but I think the Government of the United States is big enough, strong enough, and able enough to appropriate all the money that is needed for such a purpose as this, and that there will be little or no trouble in securing all of the money that is necessary to carry on the affairs of the Government.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I move that the bill be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. DOCKERY) there were—ayes 115, noes 16.

Mr. BLACK of Georgia. No quorum.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of no quorum being made, the Chair will order tellers.

Mr. BLACK of Georgia and Mr. BANKHEAD were appointed tellers.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 136, noes 26.

Mr. BLACK of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the point of no quorum.

So (no further count being demanded) the motion was agreed to, and the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

A bill (S. 528) for the relief of A. W. Wells, administrator;

A bill (S. 1018) granting a pension to Susan E. Cunningham;

A bill (S. 1876) to provide for the payment of accrued pensions in certain cases;

A bill (S. 2234) to further amend section 2399 of the Revised Statutes of the United States; and

A bill (S. 2281) to authorize the Postmaster-General to credit account of James A. Sexton with amount of funds stolen.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the following titles:

A bill (H. R. 5901) to reimburse E. H. Nebeker, late Treasurer of the United States;

A bill (H. R. 6577) to authorize the construction of a wagon and foot bridge across the Chattahoochee River, at or near the town of Columbia, Ala.;

A bill (H. R. 7874) to enable the Secretary of the Interior to pay JOHN T. HEARD for professional services rendered the "Old Settlers" or Western Cherokee Indians out of the funds of said Indians.

A bill (H. R. 7383) relating to lights of fishing vessels.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments bills of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

A bill (H. R. 6284) to prevent interference in the collection of State, county, and municipal taxes assessed against corporations and corporate property, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the reports of committees of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to bills of the following titles:

A bill (H. R. 6777) to amend an act entitled "An act to incorporate the Washington and Great Falls Electric Railway; and

A bill (H. R. 6913) making appropriations for current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895, and for other purposes.

A further message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment the following resolution:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That permission be and is hereby given to the citizens' committee of Knights of Pythias encampment, of which Chapin Brown is chairman, of illuminating the Dome of the Capitol on the nights of August 27, 28, 29, and 30, 1894, under the control and direction of the Architect of the Capitol.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the following titles:

A bill (H. R. 4954) relative to recognizances, stipulations, bonds, and undertakings, and to allow certain corporations to be accepted as surety thereon;

A bill (H. R. 2669) making an appropriation and providing for the construction of a United States revenue cutter for service in the harbor of San Francisco, State of California.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

Mr. PEARSON, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (H. R. 7803) to amend sections 2401 and 2403 of the Revised Statutes;

A bill (H. R. 7827) to authorize a bridge across the Perdido River between the States of Florida and Alabama;

A bill (H. R. 7683) to correct the naval record of James Fay and grant him an honorable discharge;

A bill (H. R. 4326) to subject to State taxation national-bank notes and United States Treasury notes;

A bill (H. R. 3033) granting a pension to Amanda J. Lane;

A bill (H. R. 86) for the protection of persons furnishing materials and labor for the construction of public works.

A bill (S. 901) for the relief of the owners of the schooner Henry R. Tilton, and of personal effects thereon;

A bill (S. 2280) to amend section 2 of the act approved February 15, 1893, entitled "An act granting additional quarantine power, and imposing additional duties upon the Marine Hospital Service; and

A bill (S. 1949) for the relief of James E. North.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT.

A message from the President, by Mr. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, informed the House that the President had approved and signed bills and joint resolutions of the following titles:

On July 30, 1894:

An act (H. R. 4322) granting the use of certain land to the town of Castine, Me., for a public park;

An act (H. R. 5735) to remove the political disabilities of Caleb Huse; and

An act (H. R. 5860) to amend sections 4, 6, and 10 of the act of February 9, 1893, entitled "An act to establish a court of appeals for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes."

On July 31, 1894:

An act (H. R. 7097) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895, and for other purposes.

An act (H. R. 2586) granting certain property to the city of Newport, Ky.

Joint resolution (H. Res. 208) to continue the provisions of a joint resolution approved June 29, 1894, entitled a "Joint resolution to provide temporarily for the expenditures of the Government."

On August 1, 1894:

An act (H. R. 3202) donating condemned cannon to the St. Lawrence State Hospital, at Ogdensburg, N. Y.

An act (H. R. 4858) making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, for the armament thereof, for the procurement of heavy ordnance for trial and service, and for other purposes.

An act (H. R. 38) relating to the pay and retirement of mates in the United States Navy.

An act (H. R. 6309) for the relief of the dependent relatives of the seamen of the Netherlands steamer Amsterdam who lost their lives in the effort to save the crew of the American schooner Maggie E. Wells, and also for the relief of the sole survivor of the rescuing party.

Joint resolution (H. Res. 94) providing for an investigation relative to the work and wages of women and children.

Joint resolution (H. Res. 32) to establish an observatory circle as a provision for guarding the delicate astronomical instruments at the United States Naval Observatory against smoke or currents of heated air in their neighborhood and undue vibrations from traffic upon the extension of public thoroughfares in the vicinity, and for other purposes.

An act (H. R. 4328) for the relief of William B. Chapman, George W. Street, John W. Hoes, Emmet C. Tuthill, and Joseph H. Curtis.

An act (H. R. 5459) to pension the minor children of Alfred Phipps.

An act (H. R. 7197) to provide a register for the schooner barge Astoria.

On August 2, 1894:

An act (H. R. 6171) to authorize the Metropolitan Railroad to change its motive power for the propulsion of the cars of said company.

On August 3, 1894:

An act (H. R. 6111) for the disposal of the accretions of the Virginius indemnity fund;

An act (H. R. 4452) adding the towns of Manchester and Vernon, in the State of Connecticut, to the customs district of Hartford, Conn., and making the city of Rockville, Conn., a port of delivery;

An act (H. R. 83) authorizing the State of Montana to make selections from certain public lands;

An act (H. R. 5293) concerning leases in the Yellowstone National Park;

An act (H. R. 4806) for the relief of Andrew Gray;

An act (H. R. 7734) to amend an act entitled "An act authorizing the construction of a high wagon bridge across the Missouri River at or near Sioux City, Iowa," approved March 2, 1889, as amended by acts of April 30, 1890, February 7, 1893, and March 24, 1894; and

An act (H. R. 108) to fix the times and places for holding the Federal courts in the State and district of Nebraska.

PUBLIC BUILDING, SOUTH OMAHA, NEBR.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Chairman, I now call up the bill (H. R. 109) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at South Omaha, in the State of Nebraska.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, a site, and to cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office and other Government offices in the city of South Omaha and State of Nebraska, the cost of said site and building, including said vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, complete, not to exceed the sum of $200,000.

Proposals for the sale of land suitable for said site shall be invited by public advertisement in one or more of the newspapers of said city of largest circulation for at least twenty days prior to the date specified in said advertisement for the opening of said proposals.

Proposals made in response to said advertisement shall be addressed and mailed to the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall then cause the said proposed sites, and such others as he may think proper to designate, to be examined in person by an agent of the Treasury Department, who shall make written report to said Secretary of the results of said examination, and of his recommendation thereon, and the reasons therefor, which shall be accompanied by the original proposals and all maps, plats, and statements which shall have come into his possession relating to the said proposed sites.

If, upon consideration of said report and accompanying papers, the Secretary of the Treasury shall deem further investigation necessary, he may appoint a commission of not more than three persons, one of whom shall be an officer of the Treasury Department, which commission shall also examine the said proposed sites and such others as the Secretary of the Treasury may designate, and grant such hearings in relation thereto as they shall deem necessary; and said commission shall, within thirty days after such examination, make to the Secretary of the Treasury written report of their conclusion in the premises, accompanied by all statements, maps, plats, or documents taken by or submitted to them, in like manner as hereinbefore provided in regard to the proceedings of said agent of the Treasury Department; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon finally determine the location of the building to be erected.

The compensation of said commissioners shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the same shall not exceed $6 per day and actual traveling expenses: Provided, however, That the member of said commission appointed from the Treasury Department shall be paid only his actual traveling expenses.

No money shall be used for the purpose mentioned until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Nebraska shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

The building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet on each side, including streets and alleys.

The committee recommend the adoption of the following amendment:

In line 12, page 2, strike out "and fifty;" so that it will read $200,000.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I move the adoption of the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the report.

[Cries of "Vote." "Vote."]

Mr. SNODGRASS. Let the report be read.

The report (by Mr. MERCER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 109) to provide for the erection of a public building at South Omaha, Nebr., submit the following report:

South Omaha is the third largest city in Nebraska. Ten years ago not a town lot in sight; to-day 15,000 people enjoy the privileges of its protection and throng its busy thoroughfares.

South Omaha is the third largest stock market in the world. The packing houses employ 5,000 persons, paying them in one year almost $3,000,000. Over 1,000,000 hogs and 500,000 cattle killed in 1893.

The stock yards cover an area of 75 acres.

South Omaha continually grows; her industries are varied and prospects great.

Mr. SNODGRASS. I would like to hear the remainder of that report read.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is informed that the entire report has been read.

Mr. SNODGRASS. I would like to have some explanation, then, of this bill.

Mr. HAINER of Nebraska. The report explains it.

Mr. SNODGRASS. There is very little explanation contained in the report.

Mr. MERCER. The report is very full, if the gentleman will examine it.

Mr. DOCKERY. There are certain letters accompanying the report that have not been read.

Mr. SNODGRASS. They form a part of the report. I move, Mr. Chairman, that the committee rise.

The question was taken, and the Chairman announced that by the sound the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. SNODGRASS. I ask a division.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 0, noes 120.

Mr. SNODGRASS. I call for tellers on the vote.

Tellers were refused, there being nine members only voting in favor thereof.

Mr. SNODGRASS. Would a motion be in order that the House now adjourn?

The CHAIRMAN. That motion could not be made in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I move that this bill be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. BLAND) there were—ayes 106, noes 6.

Mr. SNODGRASS. No quorum.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order being made that no quorum has voted, the Chair will order tellers.

Mr. SNODGRASS and Mr. BANKHEAD were appointed tellers.

The committee again divided; and tellers reported—ayes 166, noes 13.

So the bill was ordered to be laid aside with a favorable recommendation. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next bill.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. A parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Washington.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. At the present rate of procedure it would take a very long time to get through the Calendar. Would it be in order to move to lay aside fifty bills, so that we can all get in?

The CHAIRMAN. That is not a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. At this rate we can never reach my State at all. I move that the committee rise.

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. SNODGRASS. Division.

Pending the count—

Mr. SNODGRASS. I withdraw the demand for a division.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Chairman, I ask that the bill S. 22 be passed by.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, that request will be granted.

There was no objection.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT POTTSVILLE, PA.

Mr. BANKHEAD. The next bill on the Calendar is the bill (H. R. 155) to erect a public building at Pottsville, Pa. I call that up.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the bill called up by the chairman of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase, acquire by condemnation, or otherwise provide a site, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable, commodious, and substantial building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office, internal-revenue office, commissioners' office, and other Government offices, in the borough of Pottsville and State of Pennsylvania. The cost of the site and the building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, complete, not to exceed the sum of $100,000, which said sum of $100,000 is hereby appropriated for said purpose out of any moneys in the United States Treasury not otherwise appropriated, upon the following provisions, namely:

Proposals for the sale of land suitable for said site shall be invited by public advertisement in one or more of the newspapers of said city for at least fourteen days prior to the date specified in the advertisement for opening the proposals. The proposals made in response to said public advertisement at the time named in the advertisement, or within ten days subsequent thereto, shall be received, opened, and considered by a commission of three persons, who shall be appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury, and it shall be the duty of said commissioners to forward to the Secretary of the Treasury, within forty days from the date named in the advertisement for opening the proposals, a written report, with the original proposals, maps, and so forth, and the oaths prescribed by act of Congress approved June 23, 1874, and to definitely state in said report the site selected by them, and their selection of the site shall be final, and each commissioner shall be allowed a compensation for his services of an amount within the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury, said compensation not to exceed $200 and actual traveling expenses to each commissioner. So much of the appropriation herein made as may be necessary to defray the expenses of advertising for proposals, compensation, and actual traveling expenses of the commissioners, and other expenses incident to the selection of the site, shall be immediately available; so much of said appropriation as may be necessary for the preparation of sketch plans, drawings, specifications, and detailed estimates for the building by the Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department shall be available immediately upon the receipt of the report of the commissioners selecting the site; so much of said appropriation as may be necessary to make payment for the site shall be available upon the receipt of the written opinion of the Attorney-General in favor of the validity of title to the site selected, and when the State of Pennsylvania shall have ceded to the United States jurisdiction over the site selected, during the time that the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein, or so much of said appropriation as may be necessary to acquire title to the site by condemnation shall be immediately available; and after the site shall have been paid for and the sketch plans and detailed estimates for the building shall have been prepared by the Supervising Architect and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Postmaster-General, the balance of said appropriation shall be available for the erection and completion of the building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will now report the amendments recommended by the committee.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

Amend by substituting "sixty" instead of "one hundred" in line 14; by striking out the appropriation clause in lines 14, 15, 16, and 17, and by striking out all of the bill including and following the word "so," in line 38.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Chairman, I move that the amendments be adopted.

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to.

Mr. DOCKERY. I desire the reading of the report, or some explanation. This is a proposition to appropriate $100,000.

Mr. BANKHEAD. It is $60,000, now that the amendments of the committee have been adopted.

Mr. REILLY. I will be very glad to make a statement or to have the report read. The report is not lengthy.

Mr. DOCKERY. Let the report be read.

The report (by Mr. WRIGHT of Pennsylvania) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 155) for the erection of a public building at Pottsville, Pa., having had the same under consideration, submit the following report:

A similar bill was introduced in the Fifty-first and Fifty-second Congresses and favorably reported by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

The population of Pottsville is about 16,000, to which is to be added the boroughs of Yorkville, Mount Carbon, and Palo Alto, contiguous to it and included in the delivery from the Pottsville post-office, which, with the other settlements surrounding the town, all accommodated with postal facilities at the same office, make altogether a population of over 20,000.

The town is prosperous and growing, and the postal business very large. The gross receipts of this post-office for the year ending June 30, 1893, were $22,768.67, and the net revenue $9,934.43. The money-order business, both domestic and international, is extensive, aggregating over $100,000 annually.

The number of registered letters at this office is also very large, averaging about 20,000 per year. Pottsville is besides a distributing center, five railroads having terminals there, and nearly 100 passenger trains moving in and out of the town daily. There are 9 letter-carriers at this office, and the accommodations and facilities are totally inadequate for the volume of business done at this place.

The Government is also at present obliged to rent rooms for its internal-revenue business at Pottsville, which is considerable and fast increasing.

The extent of the public business at this place justifies and the public interests and convenience require a public building. The committee believes that a suitable site can be secured and a building erected thereon such as will accomodate for many years to come all Federal business at Pottsville at a total cost not to exceed $60,000.

Your committee, therefore, recommend that the bill in question be amended by substituting "sixty" instead of "one hundred" in line 14; by striking out the appropriating clause in lines 14, 15, 16, and 17, and by striking out all of the bill including and following the word "so," in line 38.

And that so amended the bill do pass.

Mr. WASHINGTON. I would like to ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania if there is a Federal court held in Pottsville.

Mr. REILLY. No, sir.

Mr. WASHINGTON. Have you any other Federal officials there except the postmaster?

Mr. REILLY. Yes, sir; we have an internal-revenue collector, for whose office the Government now pays rent, as well as for the post-office. We also have a United States commissioner.

Mr. WASHINGTON. How much rent is paid for the present post-office?

Mr. REILLY. For the internal-revenue office and the post-office it is, I think, about $1,000 a year; I do not know the exact figures. I will say to the gentleman from Tennessee and to the House that this post-office has not only always been self-sustaining, but that it has yielded a net revenue to the Government, and now yields a net revenue of $10,000 a year; so that in six years we will be able to pay back this money to the Government, if any gentleman has scruples as to the propriety and justice of this investment.

Mr. WASHINGTON. The rent is a good deal less than the interest on $60,000.

Mr. REILLY. That is true; but the facilities at this office have been and now especially are utterly inadequate, and we have been endeavoring to secure improved facilities, but in view of the possibility of some action of this kind no definite arrangements have yet been made. Inspectors of the Department have repeatedly reported as to the inadequacy of the present quarters and the necessity for better accommodations to transact the public business at this place. This is a very important office. Besides the office force proper, there are ten letter-carriers and ten railway mail clerks sign out from that place; so that the gentleman can see that it is a great distributing point. In addition to the large local business, there are nearly a hundred passenger trains, many of which carry mail, in and out every day, and there is a very large amount of mail matter handled at this office. In the Fifty-first Congress, when a majority of the committee was of the opposite political party, a similar bill was reported, and twice since, and every time it has been reported unanimously; and I think that is very fair evidence of the merits of the proposed bill.

Mr. WASHINGTON. Does not my friend think that they can rent sufficient accommodation there for a while longer?

Mr. REILLY. Oh, of course that could be done; but I do not think there is a place in the country, considering the revenues that this office has yielded in the past, and the volume of business transacted, in which action of this kind can more properly be taken, or which is so much entitled to have a public building, both in the interest of the Government and of the public. Moreover, as a matter of public policy, I think it wiser to erect necessary public buildings than to pay out annually large sums for rent.

Mr. HERMANN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to say this in reference to this particular bill: I believe it is a worthy measure and one which should receive the approval of this House. But I wish to say—and I ask the ear of the chairman of the committee to this proposition—that one building in a State should be considered at a time, and then another building in another State should be considered. There should be some equality in this matter. I discover by looking at the Calendar that there are several public buildings in this particular State. Possibly the rest of them are not as deserving as this one which we are considering.

But what I particularly desire to call the attention of the House to is this: that from the way in which these bills are placed on the Calendar there is some injustice done to other States in the Union. I particularly call attention of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds to the condition of my own State. The capital of that State, which I have the honor in part to represent, is without a public building of any kind or character; and in the district which I also have the honor to represent, you will find an area equal to the entire State of Pennsylvania, and I desire to call the attention of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds to this great injustice that seems to be shown on the Calendar in placing two or three bills for the erection of public buildings in one State, while other States have none placed on the Calendar at all.

Mr. REILLY. This is the first bill of this kind called up for the State of Pennsylvania in this Congress.

Mr. HERMANN. I am in favor of this bill. I am simply calling the attention of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds to the injustice of giving two or three public buildings to one State, while other States are neglected. That is the case with Pennsylvania, as shown by the Calendar, and some other States are in the same favored position; and that, I say, is an injustice to the States that are entirely left out.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Chairman, I move that the bill be laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. BANKHEAD, the Chairman declared that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. HALL of Missouri. I ask for a division.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 113, noes 8.

Mr. HALL of Missouri. No quorum.

Mr. HALL of Missouri and Mr. BANKHEAD were appointed tellers.

Mr. HALL of Missouri (pending the count by tellers). I withdraw the point of no quorum, Mr. Chairman.

The motion of Mr. BANKHEAD was then agreed to, and the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

PUBLIC BUILDING, CUMBERLAND, MD.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Chairman, I call up the bill (H. R. 4283) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Cumberland, Md.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, a site, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States court-house, post-office, and other Government offices in the city of Cumberland and State of Maryland, the cost of said site and building, including said vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, complete, not to exceed the sum of $75,000.

Proposals for the sale of land suitable for said site shall be invited by public advertisement in one or more of the newspapers of said city of largest circulation for at least twenty days prior to the date specified in said advertisement for the opening of said proposals.

Proposals made in response to said advertisement shall be addressed and mailed to the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall then cause the said proposed sites, and such others as he may think proper to designate, to be examined in person by an agent of the Treasury Department, who shall make written report to said Secretary of the results of said examination, and of his recommendation thereon, and the reasons therefor, which shall be accompanied by the original proposals and all maps, plats, and statements which shall have come into his possession relating to the said proposed sites.

If, upon consideration of said report and accompanying papers, the Secretary of the Treasury shall deem further investigation necessary, he may appoint a commission of not more than three persons, one of whom shall be an officer of the Treasury Department, which commission shall also examine the said proposed sites, and such others as the Secretary of the Treasury may designate, and grant such hearings in relation thereto as they shall deem necessary; and said commission shall, within thirty days after such examination, make to the Secretary of the Treasury written report of their conclusion in the premises, accompanied by all statements, maps, plats, or documents taken by or submitted to them, in like manner as hereinbefore provided in regard to the proceedings of said agent of the Treasury Department; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon finally determine the location of the building to be erected.

The compensation of said commissioners shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the same shall not exceed $6 per day and actual traveling expenses: Provided, however, That the member of said commission appointed from the Treasury Department shall be paid only his actual traveling expenses.

So much of the appropriation herein made as may be necessary to defray the expenses of advertising for proposals, actual traveling expenses of said agent, and the compensation and actual traveling expenses of said commissioners, and other expenses incident to the selection of the site, and for necessary survey thereof, shall be immediately available.

So much of said appropriation as may be necessary for the preparation of sketch plans, drawings, specifications, and detailed estimates for the building by the Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department shall be available immediately upon the approval by the Secretary of the Treasury of such site.

No money appropriated by this act shall be available, except as hereinbefore provided, until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Maryland shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

After the said site shall have been paid for, and the sketch plans and detailed estimates for the building shall have been prepared by the Supervising Architect and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Postmaster-General, the balance of said appropriation shall be available for the erection and completion of the building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches.

The building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet on each side, including streets and alleys.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I wish to occupy just about a minute in making a statement with reference to this bill. It provides for the erection of a public building at Cumberland, Md., the site and building to cost not exceeding $75,000. There is a United States court held there, there is also an internal-revenue office, and the post-office receipts are about $20,000. I regard this as one of the most meritorious bills on the Calendar. It was reported last year, but was not reached for consideration. I hope that it will now be favorably reported by this committee and passed.

Mr. DOCKERY. I ask that the report be read.

The report (by Mr. MCKAIG) was read, as follows:

Mr. MCKAIG, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, submitted the following report (to accompany H. R. 4283):

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds have had under consideration the bill (H. R. 4283) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Cumberland, in the State of Maryland, and report the same back with recommendation that it be adopted.

The committee further report the following facts in relation to said city of Cumberland to sustain their favorable report:

Cumberland is the second city in size in the State of Maryland; it is the county seat of Allegany County, which is one of the largest and richest counties in the State. The taxable basis of the city is $6,500,000, whilst the taxable basis of city and county is $18,500,000.

The buildings generally are of a substantial rather than a showy character, though many of them, such as the city hall, court-house, academy, banks, and churches, are pleasing specimens of architectural beauty.

The city is lighted by both gas and electricity, Edison and arc lights.

The city is well supplied with schools and churches. Of the former there are seven public schools and of the latter there are eighteen.

The population of 1870 was 8,056, in 1880 it was 10,693, in 1890 it was 12,729. Since taking the last census the number of inhabitants has largely increased, making the present actual population not less than 14,000.

The moving of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company's division shops to the city will bring a permanent addition of 1,000 mechanics and other high-grade workingmen and cause an increase of from 4,000 to 5,000 in the population of the city, and that will add largely to the receipts of its post-office. The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company are now engaged in putting down 53 tracks, each a mile long, a part of which is in the city limits, as now constituted, to provide a magnificent yard for the use of the termini of the second and third divisions of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company and the first division of the Pittsburg and Connellsville Railroad Company, which are to be located at the city of Cumberland.

The city is the center of the great coal and lumber region of the Alleghenies and is the source of supply for all the towns along the the seven railroads that enter the same, thus making it an important railroad center and constituting it a distributing point in a radius of country over 150 miles in extent, in which there are no large towns. The nearest cities are Pittsburg, 149 miles to the northwest; Baltimore, 192 miles to the east; Washington, 152 miles southeast; Wheeling, 204 miles to the west, and Harrisburg, 239 miles to the northeast. This vast country is filled with building material of every kind, and light and fuel in the shape of coal and gas coal, besides a grade of coal that is used and is dependent upon said city for its supply.

The Georges Creek soft-coal region is annually discharging from 1,200,000 to 1,400,000 tons of the finest steaming coal in the world, which is transported to the markets of the Eastern and Western cities via Cumberland, over the seven railroads radiating therefrom.

The city has 15 miles of paved streets, 30 miles of water pipes, 5 miles of electric street railway, and 32 manufacturing plants, employing many mechanics and laboring men and manufacturing products that are shipped all over the country.

It also possesses three national banks, each with a capital stock of $100,000, and an aggregate deposit of $1,500,000.

Cumberland is an important deputy station of the internal-revenue office of the State of Maryland. The receipts from the internal revenue for the year 1889 were $19,231.40; for 1890 were $33,672.49, and for the year 1891 $42,097.90. January receipts in 1892 were $4,146.55, making a grand total in three years and one month of $99,158.44. Receipts of February, 1891, were $2,053.70, while from February 1 to the 10th day of said month, 1892, they were $2,144. Annual rental of said deputy office, $200.

The area of territory covered by distribution of mail matter from the Cumberland post-office reaches an average radius of 5 miles beyond the city limits, covering now the 14,000 people residing in the corporate limits under the free-delivery system of distribution, and the whole distribution from said office covering the city and country delivery would not be overestimated when placed as a population of 17,000 souls. Amount of business transacted by the post-office, including gross receipts, fiscal year ending June 30, 1881, was $10,200.68, whilst the postal receipts for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1891, were $16,750.62, showing a net increase of $6,549.94 in ten years. Annual receipts from box rents, $734.

Receipts from all sources, June 30, 1891, $17,489.43, whilst the receipts from all sources, June 30, 1890, were $14,946.67, showing an increase of $2,542.76, being 17 per cent of an increase for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1891.

The classification and postal standing of said city are shown by the following extract from the Postmaster-General's report for the year 1891:

Cumberland, class 2:
Gross receipts	$17,481.91
Salary	2,400.00
Clerk hire	2,100.00
Rent, light, and fuel	700.00
Incidental expenses	143.19
Free delivery	3,328.77
Total expenditures	8,671.96
Net revenue	8,809.95
Per cent	50

The Government agent, when the releasing took place this year, owing to the crowded condition of the office and great want of space, undertook to rent at several other points in said city; but failing to procure a suitable place for less than $1,200, was forced to re-lease the same building, showing that, while the present post-office is conveniently located on the principal street of the city, yet the Government agent considers it entirely inadequate for the accomodation of the constantly increasing volume of business now being transacted by the said office.

To provide a suitable lot for the site of a post-office building with the required space of 40 feet upon all sides of said building, thus providing that it shall be unexposed from fire (the said 40 feet including streets and alleys), would necessitate the purchase of land which at present has valuable buildings upon it; 40 feet of said buildings would have to be cleared entirely off of said lot to give the required space upon each side of said post-office building where said building faces upon two streets and a 40-foot alley.

The city of Cumberland, being located in a valley of small dimensions, surrounded by large mountains upon the west, northwest, and south, and large hills on the east and southeast, and a portion of said territory being taken up by the water space formed by the intersection of the Potomac River and Wills Creek at a point within the corporate limits, necessarily makes a limited area for the accommodation of over 14,000 people, thereby enhancing largely cost of building lots, making property by the square foot or otherwise very expensive.

Large sums of money are kept in the post-office after banking hours, in a safe that is not at all burglar-proof, and the building is so located and of such a character that burglars could easily break into it and rifle the contents of the post-office.

Mr. JONES. Mr. Chairman, I hope the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. McKAIG] will make an explanation with reference to this bill.

Mr. McKAIG. Mr. Chairman, I do not think it is necessary for me to make a speech on this subject. The report, I admit, is longer than it ought to be. All I have to add is that Cumberland is a city over a hundred years old; being old Fort Cumberland, from which Braddock marched upon Fort Du Quesne.

It has a population of from twelve to fifteen thousand. The United States courts are to be held there, and there is also a deputy internal revenue office. It is the second city in Maryland in population, and I believe that State has only two United States public buildings. There may be a small one at Annapolis, but the two to which I refer are in the city of Baltimore, and one is over eighty years old; so it can not be charged that Maryland has asked too much in the way of public buildings.

Mr. HITT. What are the gross receipts of the post-office at Cumberland?

Mr. McKAIG. Twenty-one thousand dollars.

Mr. HERMANN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to supplement what my friend from Maryland has just said, and I take great pleasure in availing myself of this opportunity to say a word in behalf of the old city in which I formerly had the pleasure to reside. Cumberland occupies a very important position in the commerce of that portion of the State of Maryland. It has considerable manufactures, and there are great coal mines all around it, and it is a very important business center. Then, too, as my friend [Mr. McKAIG] says, it is one of the oldest cities in the State, and it is in every way entitled to have such a public building as this bill provides for.

Mr. McKAIG. Mr. Chairman, I move that the bill be laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. McKAIG, the Chairman declared that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina asked for a division, but subsequently withdrew the demand.

The motion was then agreed to, and the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

Mr. DOCKERY. Now, Mr. Chairman, I ask the gentleman in charge of these bills [Mr. BANKHEAD] to move that the committee rise. We have reached almost the usual hour of adjournment and have disposed of six bills.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Chairman, there are two other bills on the Calendar that ought to be considered and acted upon. One of them is a bill authorizing the erection of a new post-office building in the city of Chicago. That is a very important measure, a new building being absolutely necessary there in the near future. The present post-office building is in a dangerous condition and is entirely inadequate for the business. It has been inspected and condemned as dangerous.

Then, there is a bill on the Calendar providing for an additional appropriation for the Appraiser's warehouse in the city of New York. That, also, is an exceedingly important matter, New York being, as we all know, the city where three-fourths of the revenue of the Government is collected. There are, also, four or five other bills that ought to be passed upon, and I am somewhat at a loss to know just what to do. If we should go on and undertake to consider the two bills I have specified, we should then be unable to dispose of those bills which we have disposed of in Committee of the Whole, and if we fail to consider them now we may not have another opportunity at this session. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BLACK] be permitted to make a brief statement.

There was no objection.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT CHICAGO.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BLACK] will be allowed to make a statement on the bill indicated by the gentleman from Alabama as the one he proposes to call up next. The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I hope that, in conjunction with this permission to the gentleman from Illinois, my colleague from New York, Gen. SICKLES, may also be permitted to make a short statement in regard to the public building at New York. That is perfectly fair.

Mr. SICKLES. I should like to be heard, Mr. Chairman. I have been waiting here all day, against the protest of my physician, upon an assurance that the New York public building bill would be called up early.

Mr. BLACK of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I am not enough versed in parliamentary methods to determine exactly what ought to be done to carry out the purpose I have in view. I believe a majority of the members of this House would favor the measures which we propose to present, if they could have an opportunity of hearing them stated and of passing upon their merits. What I want to do is by some parliamentary process to get an hour's time. If there is any motion that can be suggested by some parliamentarian——

Mr. CAMPBELL. Extend the session until 6 o'clock.

Mr. SICKLES. There is no reason why the Committee of the Whole should not go right on with its business. Let us vote down any motion to rise. No motion for the extension of the session is necessary.

The CHAIRMAN. It is in the power of the committee to determine when it will rise.

Mr. BLACK of Illinois. I desire to make a statement as to the merits of House bill No. 397, which I desire to have taken up and considered now.

Mr. CAMPBELL. In connection with this proposition I hope it will be agreed that the New York public building bill shall also be taken up. The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds adopted a resolution that this New York bill should be one of the first considered. I am in favor of the Chicago bill; but if that bill is to be considered, I want the New York bill considered at the same time or immediately afterward. [Applause.]

Several MEMBERS. That is all right.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I call up the bill (H. R. 397) to provide for the erection of a Government building at Chicago, Ill.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to cause to be erected upon the present post-office site in the city of Chicago, in the State of Illinois, which site is bounded by Adams, Jackson, Clark, and Dearborn streets, a commodious and sufficiently fire-proof building for the use of the post-office, United States courts, United States subtreasury, United States collectors, and other necessary officers of the Government not otherwise provided for; the building to be so constructed as to occupy all the available area of the present site to the street lines on all sides, and all of the old material to be used in the new building as far as may be practicable and consistent with permanent work; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby further authorized and directed to have prepared by the Supervising Architect full and complete plans, specifications, and detailed drawings within ninety days after the approval of this act, the said plans to be first approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, the Postmaster-General, and the Attorney-General of the United States, after which the work shall be publicly advertised according to law for not less than one month, and the work let to the lowest responsible bidder or bidders.

SEC. 2. That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby further authorized and directed, in the specifications for the erection of the building, to require that the entire work of constructing the building shall be finished and the building ready for occupancy within eighteen months after the approval of contract. And for the erection of the said building the sum of $1,000,000 is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the United States Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the said sum to be available immediately after the passage of this present act.

Mr. BLACK of Illinois obtained the floor.

Mr. DOCKERY. I make a point of order against the appropriation carried in this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DOCKERY] reserves a point of order.

Mr. BLACK of Illinois. I move to amend the bill by striking out that part which relates to the appropriation.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the part of the bill which the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BLACK] moves to strike out.

The Clerk read as follows:

And for the erection of said building the sum of $4,000,000 is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the United States Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the said sum to be available immediately after the passage of this present act.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. If it is the desire of the Committee of the Whole to strike out this appropriation, I do not object, but it is not subject to a point of order. I will ask my colleague [Mr. BLACK] whether he intends to follow up this motion, if adopted, by an authorization to place the building under contract, to be paid for as appropriations may hereafter be made?

Mr. BLACK of Illinois. Of course it is understood that the necessary steps will be taken to complete the building as rapidly as practicable.

The amendment of Mr. BLACK of Illinois was agreed to.

Mr. BLACK of Illinois. I move that the bill as amended be laid aside to be reported favorably to the House.

The question being taken—

The CHAIRMAN. The ayes seem to have it.

Mr. HUTCHESON. I call for a division.

The question being again taken, there were—ayes 140, noes 8.

Mr. JONES. No quorum.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. BLACK of Illinois and Mr. JONES were appointed.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 141, noes 2.

Mr. JONES. No quorum.

The CHAIRMAN. There being no quorum, the Clerk will call the roll.

The roll was called, when the following members failed to answer to their names:

Abbott,	Curtis, N. Y.	Kilgore,	Ray,
Adams, Ky.	Denson,	Lacey,	Rayner,
Adams, Pa.	Donovan,	Layton,	Richardson, Mich.
Aitken,	Draper,	Lefever,	Ritchie,
Alderson,	Dunphy,	Linton,	Robertson, La.
Allen,	Edmunds,	Lockwood,	Russell, Ga.
Arnold,	Ellis, Ky.	Loud,	Ryan,
Babcock,	Ellis, Oregon	Loudenslager,	Sayers,
Bailey,	Epes,	Lynch,	Schermerhorn,
Baker, N. H.	Everett,	Magner,	Shaw,
Baldwin,	Fielder,	Maguire,	Sherman,
Barnes,	Fyan,	Marshall,	Sibley,
Belden,	Gardner,	Marvin, N. Y.	Simpson,
Bell, Colo.	Gear,	McAleer,	Snodgrass,
Bell, Tex.	Gillet, N. Y.	McCall,	Sorg,
Beltzhoover,	Gillett, Mass.	McDowell,	Sperry,
Bower, N. C.	Goldzier,	McKeighan,	Stallings,
Bowers, Cal.	Goodnight,	McLaurin,	Stephenson,
Branch,	Gorman,	McMillin,	Stevens,
Breckinridge, Ark.	Graham,	McNagny,	Stockdale,
Breckinridge, Ky.	Gresham,	Meiklejohn,	Strong,
Brickner,	Grow,	Meredith,	Swanson,
Broderick,	Hager,	Milliken,	Sweet,
Burnes,	Haines,	Montgomery,	Talbott, Md.
Cabaniss,	Hall, Minn.	Moon,	Tarsney,
Cadmus,	Hare,	Moore,	Taylor, Ind.
Causey,	Harmer,	Morse,	Taylor, Tenn.
Chickering,	Harter,	Moses,	Thomas,
Childs,	Haugen,	Murray,	Tucker,
Clark, Mo.	Hayes,	Mutchler,	Turner, Ga.
Clarke, Ala.	Heard,	Newlands,	Turner, Va.
Cobb, Mo.	Heiner,	Northway,	Turpin,
Cockran,	Henderson, Iowa	Oates,	Wadsworth,
Cockrell,	Hines,	O'Neil, Mass.	Walker,
Coffeen,	Holman,	Outhwaite,	Waugh,
Cogswell,	Hooker, Miss.	Payne,	Weadock,
Conn,	Hooker, N. Y.	Paynter,	Wever,
Cooper, Fla.	Hopkins, Pa.	Pence,	White,
Cooper, Ind.	Houk,	Pendleton, Tex.	Whiting,
Cornish,	Hudson,	Pendleton, W. Va.	Wilson, W. Va.
Cousins,	Hulick,	Pigott,	Wolverton,
Crain,	Hull,	Powers,	Woodard,
Culberson,	Johnson, Ind.	Price,	Wright, Mass.
Curtis, Kans.	Johnson, Ohio	Randall,

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will now rise.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. MCCREARY of Kentucky reported that the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 174), had found itself without a quorum, whereupon he had directed the roll to be called, and now reported the names of the absentees to the House.

The SPEAKER. The names of the absentees will be entered upon the Journal. One hundred and seventy-five members have answered to their names; not a quorum.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. I ask unanimous consent that the House now take a recess until 11 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. MADDOX. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The question was taken; and on a division there were—ayes 66, noes 54.

Mr. SICKLES. Tellers.

Tellers were ordered.

Mr. BANKHEAD and Mr. MADDOX were appointed tellers.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 48, noes 59.

Mr. MADDOX. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The Speaker announced the appointment of Mr. MADDOX and Mr. BANKHEAD as tellers at the desk.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 48, nays 76, not voting 227; as follows:

YEAS—48.

Bartholdt,	Crawford,	Lapham,	Richards, Ohio
Black, Ga.	De Armond,	Lawson,	Richardson, Tenn.
Bland,	Dockery,	Maddox,	Russell, Conn.
Brookshire,	Doolittle,	Mahon,	Scranton,
Bynum,	Enloe,	Mallory,	Sipe,
Capehart,	Erdman,	McDearmon,	Swanson,
Catchings,	Geary,	Meyer,	Talbert, S. C.
Cobb, Ala.	Griffin,	Money,	Tate,
Cooper, Ind.	Hendrix,	Neill,	Washington,
Cooper, Tex.	Jones,	Page,	Wilson, Ohio
Cox,	Kribbs,	Paschal,	Wise,
Crain,	Kyle,	Price,	Woomer.

NAYS—76.

Aldrich,	Cooper, Wis.	Hunter,	Richardson, Mich.
Apsley,	Covert,	Kiefer,	Robbins,
Bankhead,	Cummings,	Lane,	Sickles,
Bartlett,	Daniels,	Livingston,	Smith,
Barwig,	Davey,	Marsh,	Somers,
Berry,	Dunn,	Martin, Ind.	Springer,
Black, Ill.	Durborow,	McCreary, Ky.	Stone, C. W.
Boatner,	English, Cal.	McDannold,	Stone, Ky.
Boutelle,	Forman,	McEttrick,	Straus,
Bretz,	Geiss nhainer,	McGann,	Tawney,
Bryan,	Goldzier,	McKaig,	Terry,
Bunn,	Grady,	McRae,	Tracey,
Cadmus,	Hainer,	Mercer,	Updegraff,
Campbell,	Hatch,	Morgan,	Van Voorhis, N. Y.
Cannon, Ill.	Henderson, Ill.	O'Neill, Mo.	Van Voorhis, Ohio
Caruth,	Hepburn,	Post,	Wanger,
Clancy,	Hicks,	Quigg,	Warner,
Cockran,	Hitt,	Reed,	Williams, Ill.
Coombs,	Hopkins, Ill.	Reilly,	Wright, Pa.

NOT VOTING—227.

Abbott,	Dingley,	Johnson, Ind.	Randall,
Adams, Pa.	Dinsmore,	Johnson, N. Dak.	Ray,
Adams, Ky.	Dolliver,	Johnson, Ohio	Rayner,
Aitken,	Donovan,	Kem,	Rayburn,
Alderson,	Draper,	Kilgore,	Ritchie,
Alexander,	Dunphy,	Lacey,	Robertson, La.
Allen,	Edmunds,	Latimer,	Robinson, Pa.
Arnold,	Ellis, Ky.	Layton,	Rusk,
Avery,	Ellis, Oregon	Lefever,	Russell, Ga.
Babcock,	English, N. J.	Lester,	Ryan,
Bailey,	Epes,	Linton,	Sayers,
Baker, Kans.	Everett,	Lockwood,	Schermerhorn,
Baker, N. H.	Fielder,	Loud,	Settle,
Baldwin,	Fithian,	Loudenslager,	Shaw,
Barnes,	Fletcher,	Lucas,	Shell,
Belden,	Funk,	Lynch,	Sherman,
Bell, Colo.	Fyan,	Magner,	Sibley,
Bell, Tex.	Gardner,	Maguire,	Simpson,
Beltzhoover,	Gear,	Marshall,	Snodgrass,
Bingham,	Gillet, N. Y.	Marvin, N. Y.	Sorg,
Blair,	Gillett, Mass.	McAleer,	Sperry,
Boen,	Goodnight,	McCall,	Stallings,
Bower, N. C.	Gorman,	McCleary, Minn.	Stephenson,
Bowers, Cal.	Graham,	McCulloch,	Stevens,
Branch,	Gresham,	McDowell,	Stockdale,
Breckinridge, Ark.	Grosvenor,	McKeighan,	Stone, W. A.
Breckinridge, Ky.	Grout,	McLaurin,	Storer,
Brickner,	Grow,	McMillin,	Strait,
Broderick,	Hagar,	McNagny,	Strong,
Brosius,	Haines,	Meiklejohn,	Sweet,
Brown,	Hall, Minn.	Meredith,	Talbott, Md.
Bundy,	Hall, Mo.	Milliken,	Tarsney,
Burnes,	Hammond,	Montgomery,	Taylor, Ind.
Burrows,	Hare,	Moon,	Taylor, Tenn.
Cabaniss,	Harmer,	Moore,	Thomas,
Caminetti,	Harris,	Morse,	Tucker,
Cannon, Cal.	Harter,	Moses,	Turner, Ga.
Causey,	Hartman,	Murray,	Turner, Va.
Chickering,	Haugen,	Mutchler,	Turpin,
Childs,	Hayes,	Newlands,	Tyler,
Clark, Mo.	Heard,	Northway,	Wadsworth,
Clarke, Ala.	Heiner,	Oates,	Walker,
Cobb, Mo.	Henderson, Iowa	Ogden,	Waugh,
Cockrell,	Henderson, N. C.	O'Neil, Mass.	Weadock,
Coffeen,	Hermann,	Outhwaite,	Wells,
Cogswell,	Hines,	Patterson,	Wever,
Conn,	Holman,	Payne,	Wheeler, Ala.
Cooper, Fla.	Hooker, Miss.	Paynter,	Wheeler, Ill.
Cornish,	Hooker, N. Y.	Pearson,	White,
Cousins,	Hopkins, Pa.	Pence,	Whiting,
Culberson,	Houk,	Pendleton, Tex.	Williams, Miss.
Curtis, Kans.	Hudson,	Pendleton, W. Va.	Wilson, Wash.
Curtis, N. Y.	Hulick,	Perkins,	Wilson, W. Va.
Dalzell,	Hull,	Phillips,	Wolverton,
Davis,	Hutcheson,	Pickler,	Woodard,
De Forest,	Ikirt,	Pigott,	Wright, Mass.
Denson,	Izlar,	Powers,

So the House refused to adjourn.

During the roll call the following proceedings took place:

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the roll call be suspended, and that the House do now stand adjourned.

Mr. TRACEY. Regular order.

Mr. DOCKERY. I ask unanimous consent to reconsider the vote by which the yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I object.

The roll call was then resumed and concluded, as above.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask unanimous consent that the point of no quorum be withdrawn on the bill and that we take a recess until to-morrow——

The SPEAKER. But a call has developed a record of no quorum.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. That is so.

The call of the roll was resumed and concluded.

The following pairs were announced:

Until further notice:

Mr. OATES with Mr. STORER.

Mr. ABBOTT with Mr. THOMAS.

Mr. RUSSELL of Georgia with Mr. MOON.

Mr. BRICKNER with Mr. MCDOWELL.

Mr. MONTGOMERY with Mr. MORSE.

Mr. BLACK of Illinois with Mr. CURTIS of New York.

Mr. TAYLOR of Indiana with Mr. BELDEN.

Mr. SCHERMERHORN with Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee.

Mr. MCMILLIN with Mr. HOUK.

Mr. GRESHAM with Mr. MAHON.

Mr. MOSES with Mr. WADSWORTH.

Mr. WHITING with Mr. WHITE.

Mr. GOODNIGHT with Mr. WALKER.

Mr. CLARKE of Alabama with Mr. HENDERSON of Illinois.

Mr. STOCKDALE with Mr. BRODERICK.

Mr. TURPIN with Mr. GILLETT of Massachusetts.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE of Arkansas with Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois.

Mr. LOCKWOOD with Mr. WEVER.

Mr. COFFEEN with Mr. LACEY.

For this day:

Mr. TURNER of Georgia with Mr. CHICKERING.

Mr. PAYNTER with Mr. SHAW.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina with Mr. SHERMAN.

Mr. CORNISH with Mr. HOOKER of New York.

Mr. STALLINGS with Mr. HENDERSON of Iowa.

Mr. SORG with Mr. MEIKLEJOHN.

Mr. ALDERSON with Mr. ROBINSON of Pennsylvania.

Mr. BARNES with Mr. MCCLEARY of Minnesota.

Mr. WHEELER of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, I would like to vote on this call.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Was the gentleman in the Hall of the House and failed to hear his name called?

Mr. WHEELER of Alabama. I would have been had not the door been locked in the passage which connects the basement committee rooms with the House. I had been attending the numerous votes in the House, and went to my committee room for a few moments. I returned in ample time to vote, but found the door locked, and I had to walk clear around. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair can not entertain the request on the statement of the gentleman.

Mr. WHEELER of Alabama. I did not expect to be allowed to vote, and it is not essential that I should have voted upon the pending motion, but I wished to call attention to the inconvenience to which members are subjected by locking this door while the House is in session.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I move a call of the House.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Division.

The committee divided; and there were—yeas 43, noes 25.

So a call of the House was ordered.

Mr. JONES. Tellers. [Cries of "Too late!"]

Mr. MADDOX. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. WHEELER of Alabama and others. Division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 38, noes 47.

Mr. MADDOX. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. JONES. Tellers.

Mr. MADDOX. I demand the yeas and nays.

Mr. SICKLES. Regular order. I ask that the call of the House be proceeded with.

Mr. BERRY. A point of order.

Mr. SICKLES. A call of the House has been ordered, and I demand that it proceed.

The question was taken on ordering the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Seventeen gentlemen have risen in support of the demand—not a sufficient number—and the yeas and nays are refused. The Clerk will proceed to call the roll.

The Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Several MEMBERS. What is the question?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. This is a call of the House that has been ordered.

Mr. SICKLES. That is all right. That is what I understand.

The roll was called, when the following-named members failed to respond:

Abbott,	Davis,	Ikirt,	Pigott,
Adams, Ky.	De Forrest,	Izlar,	Powers,
Adams, Pa.	Denson,	Johnson, Ind	Randall,
Aitken,	Dingley,	Johnson, N. Dak.	Ray,
Alderson,	Dinsmore,	Johnson, Ohio.	Rayner,
Alexander,	Dolliver,	Kem,	Reyburn,
Allen,	Donovan,	Kilgore,	Richardson, Tenn.
Arnold,	Draper,	Kyle,	Ritchie,
Avery,	Dunphy,	Lacey,	Robertson, La.
Babcock,	Edmunds,	Layton,	Robinson, Pa.
Bailey,	Ellis, Ky.	Lefever,	Rusk,
Baker, Kans.	Ellis, Oregon	Lester,	Russell, Ga.
Baker, N. H.	English, N. J.	Linton,	Ryan,
Baldwin,	Epes,	Lockwood,	Schermerhorn,
Barnes,	Everett,	Loud,	Shaw,
Belden,	Fielder,	Loudenslager,	Shell,
Bell, Colo.	Fithian,	Lucas,	Sherman,
Bell, Tex.	Funk,	Lynch,	Sibley,
Beltzhoover,	Fyan,	Magner,	Simpson,
Bingham,	Gardner,	Maguire,	Snodgrass,
Blair,	Gear,	Marshall,	Sorg,
Bland,	Geary,	Marvin, N. Y.	Sperry,
Boen,	Gillet, N. Y.	McAleer,	Stallings,
Bower, Cal.	Gillett, Mass.	McCall,	Stephenson,
Branch,	Goodnight,	McCleary, Minn.	Stevens,
Breckinridge, Ark.	Gorman,	McCulloch,	Stockdale,
Breckinridge, Ky.	Graham,	McDowell,	Stone, Ky.
Bretz,	Gresham,	McKeighan,	Storer,
Brickner,	Griffin,	McLaurin,	Strait,
Broderick,	Grosvenor,	McMillin,	Straus,
Brosius,	Grout.	McNagny,	Strong,
Brown,	Grow,	Meiklejohn,	Swanson,
Bundy,	Hager,	Meredith,	Sweet,
Burnes,	Haines,	Milliken,	Talbott, Md.
Burrows,	Hall, Minn.	Money,	Tarsney,
Bynum,	Hall, Mo.	Montgomery,	Taylor, Ind.
Cabaniss,	Hare,	Moon,	Taylor, Tenn.
Caminetti,	Harmer,	Moore,	Thomas,
Cannon, Cal.	Harris,	Morgan,	Tucker,
Cannon, Ill.	Harter,	Morse,	Turner, Ga.
Capehart,	Hartman,	Moses.	Turner, Va.
Causey,	Haugen,	Murray,	Turpin,
Chickering,	Hayes,	Mutchler,	Tyler,
Childs,	Heard,	Newlands,	Updegraff,
Clark, Mo.	Heiner,	Northway,	Wadsworth,
Clarke, Ala.	Henderson, Iowa	Oates,	Walker,
Cobb, Mo.	Henderson, N. C.	Ogden,	Waugh,
Cockran,	Hepburn,	Outhwaite,	Weadock,
Cockrell,	Hermann,	Page,	Wells
Coffeen,	Hicks,	Paschal,	Wever,
Conn,	Hines,	Patterson,	Wheeler, Ill.
Cooper, Fla.	Holman,	Payne,	White,
Cooper, Ind.	Hooker, Miss.	Paynter,	Whiting,
Cooper, Texas	Hooker, N. Y.	Pearson,	Williams, Miss.
Cornish,	Hopkins, Pa.	Pence,	Wilson, Wash.
Cousins,	Houk,	Pendleton, Tex.	Wilson, W. Va.
Culberson,	Hudson,	Pendleton, W. Va	Wolverton,
Curtis, Kans.	Hulick,	Perkins,	Woodard,
Curtis, N. Y.	Hull.	Phillips,	Wright, Mass.
Dalzell,	Hutcheson,	Pickler,

The SPEAKER. The doors will now be closed and the Clerk will call the names of those who failed to respond on the first roll call.

The roll was called the second time.

The SPEAKER. One hundred and twelve gentlemen have answered to their names.

Mr. JONES. I move to dispense with further proceedings under the call.

Mr. DOCKERY. I move to dispense with further proceedings under the call.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia and the gentleman from Missouri move to dispense with further proceedings under the call.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. DOCKERY and Mr. JONES. Division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 27, noes 43.

Mr. DOCKERY. The yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BOATNER. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. CAMPBELL and others. Division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 30, noes 39.

Mr. BOATNER. The yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 43, nays 36, not voting 272; as follows:

YEAS—43.

Bankhead,	Davey,	McCreary, Ky.	Stone, C. W.
Barwig,	De Armond,	McEttrick,	Stone, Ky.
Black, Ga.	Dockery,	Meyer,	Strait,
Boatner,	Enloe,	Neill,	Talbert, S. C.
Bower, N. C.	Erdman,	Paschal,	Tate.
Cobb, Ala.	Grady,	Price,	Terry,
Cogswell	Hunter,	Richards, Ohio	Warner,
Coombs,	Jones,	Richardson, Tenn.	Washington,
Cooper, Tex.	Kribbs,	Robertson, La.	Woomer,
Cox,	Maddox,	Sickles,	Wright, Pa.
Crawford,	Martin, Ind.	Sipe,

NAYS—36.

Aldrich,	Covert,	Hopkins, Ill.	Reilly,
Apsley,	Cummings,	Kiefer,	Robbins,
Bartholdt,	Daniels,	Livingston,	Smith,
Black, Ill.	Dunn,	Marsh,	Somers,
Boutelle,	Durborow,	McGann	Tawney,
Bryan,	English, Cal.	McKaig,	Tracey,
Cadmus,	Geissenhainer,	Mercer,	VanVoorhis, N. Y.
Campbell,	Hainer,	O'Neill, Mo.	Wever,
Cooper, Wis.	Hitt,	Quigg,	Wheeler, Ala.

NOT VOTING—272.

Abbott,	De Forest,	Izlar,	Pigott,
Adams, Ky.	Denson,	Johnson, Ind.	Post,
Adams, Pa.	Dingley,	Johnson, N. Dak.	Powers,
Aitken,	Dinsmore,	Johnson, Ohio	Randall,
Alderson,	Dolliver,	Kem,	Ray,
Alexander,	Donovan,	Kilgore,	Rayner,
Allen,	Doolittle,	Kyle,	Reed,
Arnold,	Draper,	Lacey,	Reyburn,
Avery,	Dunphy,	Lane,	Richardson, Mich.
Babcock,	Edmunds,	Lapham,	Ritchie,
Bailey,	Ellis, Ky.	Latimer,	Robinson, Pa.
Baker, Kans.	Ellis, Oregon	Lawson,	Rusk,
Baker, N. H.	English, N. J.	Layton,	Russell, Conn.
Baldwin,	Epes,	Lefever,	Russell, Ga.
Barnes,	Everett,	Lester,	Ryan,
Bartlett,	Fielder,	Linton,	Sayers,
Belden,	Fithian,	Lockwood,	Schermerhorn,
Bell, Colo.	Fletcher,	Loud,	Scranton,
Bell, Tex.	Forman,	Loudenslager,	Settle,
Beltzhoover,	Funk,	Lucas,	Shaw,
Berry,	Fyan,	Lynch,	Sheil,
Bingham,	Gardner,	Magner,	Sherman,
Blair,	Gear,	Maguire,	Sibley,
Bland,	Geary,	Mahon,	Simpson,
Boen,	Gillet, N. Y.	Mallory,	Snodgrass,
Bowers, Cal.	Gillett, Mass.	Marshall,	Sorg,
Branch,	Goldzier,	Marvin, N. Y.	Sperry,
Breckinridge, Ark.	Goodnight,	McAleer,	Springer,
Breckinridge, Ky.	Gorman,	McCall,	Stallings,
Bretz,	Graham,	McCleary, Minn.	Stephenson,
Brickner,	Gresham,	McCulloch,	Stevens,
Broderick,	Griffin,	McDannold,	Stockdale
Brookshire,	Grosvenor,	McDearmon,	Stone, W. A.
Brosius,	Grout,	McDowell,	Storer,
Brown,	Grow,	McKeighan,	Straus,
Bundy,	Hager,	McLaurin,	Strong,
Bunn,	Haines,	McMillin,	Swanson,
Burnes,	Hall, Minn.	McNagny,	Sweet,
Burrows,	Hall, Mo.	McRae,	Talbott, Md.
Bynum	Hammond,	Meiklejohn,	Tarsney,
Cabaniss,	Hare,	Meredith,	Taylor, Ind.
Caminetti,	Harmer,	Milliken,	Taylor, Tenn.
Cannon, Cal.	Harris,	Money,	Thomas,
Cannon, Ill.	Harter,	Montgomery,	Tucker,
Capehart,	Hartman,	Moon,	Turner, Ga.
Caruth,	Hatch,	Moore,	Turner, Va.
Catchings,	Haugen,	Morgan,	Turpin,
Causey,	Hayes,	Morse,	Tyler,
Chickering,	Heard,	Moses,	Updegraff,
Childs,	Heiner,	Murray,	VanVoorhis, Ohio
Clancy,	Henderson, Ill.	Mutchler,	Wadsworth,
Clark, Mo.	Henderson, Iowa	Newlands,	Walker,
Clarke, Ala.	Henderson, N. C.	Northway,	Wanger,
Cobb, Mo.	Hendrix,	Oates,	Waugh,
Cockran,	Hepburn,	Ogden,	Weadock,
Cockrell,	Hermann,	O'Neil, Mass.	Wells,
Coffeen,	Hicks,	Outhwaite,	Wheeler, Ill.
Conn,	Hines,	Page,	White,
Cooper, Fla.	Holman,	Patterson,	Whiting,
Cooper, Ind.	Hooker, Miss.	Payne,	Williams, Ill.
Cornish,	Hooker, N. Y.	Paynter,	Williams, Miss.
Cousins,	Hopkins, Pa.	Pearson,	Wilson, Ohio
Crain,	Houk,	Pence,	Wilson, Wash.
Culberson,	Hudson,	Pendleton, Tex.	Wilson, W. Va.
Curtis, Kans.	Hulick,	Pendleton, W. Va.	Wise,
Curtis, N. Y.	Hull,	Perkins,	Wolverton,
Dalzell,	Hutcheson,	Phillips,	Woodard,
Davis,	Ikirt,	Pickler,	Wright, Mass.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Mr. Speaker, is it not practicable for the Committee on Rules to bring in a special rule to extricate us from this difficulty and enable us to pass upon this legislation? [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. This is a question of no quorum.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I supposed that the Committee on Rules could accomplish almost anything.

The SPEAKER. They can not make a quorum. [Laughter.]

Mr. BANKHEAD (during the call). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this roll call be suspended, my purpose being to make a motion to adjourn.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, that may be done.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. I object.

The Clerk resumed and completed the call.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I am entirely satisfied we can not bring a quorum here to-night——

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. Regular order.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I therefore change my vote from no to aye.

Mr. BLACK of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to print in the RECORD, in connection with the remarks I made this afternoon, certain documents for the information of the House and its further consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore [Mr. TATE]. The only trouble is that the record shows there is no quorum present.

Mr. BLACK of Illinois. Well, if nobody makes objection——

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina objected, but immediately withdrew the objection.

Mr. BLACK of Illinois. Now, Mr. Speaker, there being no objection, I ask unanimous consent——

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The record shows by a yea-and-nay vote that there is no quorum present.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, I make the point that if no gentleman objects or raises the point it is not a question for the Chair.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the request of the gentleman from Illinois will be granted.

There was no objection.

The documents are as follows:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, UNITED STATES,
Washington, D. C., January 16, 1894.

To the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, House of Representatives, United States, and to the said House of Representatives:

The undersigned, your memorialists, members of this House and Representatives therein from Chicago and the State of Illinois, respectfully present:

That on the 23d day of September, A. D. 1893, House bill No. 397, a copy of which is here inserted, was presented to the House, referred to your honorable committee, and still remains under consideration thereby:

"A bill (H. R. 397) to provide for the erection of a Government building at Chicago, Ill.

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to cause to be erected upon the present post-office site in the city of Chicago, in the State of Illinois, which site is bounded by Adams, Jackson, Clark, and Dearborn streets, a commodious and sufficiently fireproof building for the use of the post-office, United States courts, United States subtreasury, United States collectors, and other necessary officers of the Government not otherwise provided for; the building to be so constructed as to occupy all the available area of the present site to the street lines on all sides, and all of the old material to be used in the new building as far as may be practicable and consistent with permanent work; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby further authorized and directed to have prepared by the Supervising Architect full and complete plans, specifications, and detailed drawings within ninety days after the approval of this act, the said plans to be first approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, the Postmaster-General, and the Attorney-General of the United States, after which the work shall be publicly advertised according to law for not less than one month, and the work let to the lowest responsible bidder or bidders.

"SEC. 2. That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby further authorized and directed, in the specifications for the erection of the building, to require that the entire work of constructing the building shall be finished and the building ready for occupancy within eighteen months after the approval of contract. And for the erection of the said building the sum of $4,000,000 is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the United States Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the said sum to be available immediately after the passage of this present act."

Your memorialists further state that it is matter of public notoriety, here officially declared by us to the House and the committee, that the public building in the city of Chicago mentioned as the "old building" in said bill, and situate between Adams, Jackson, Clark, and Dearborn streets, is by reason of faulty construction, bad workmanship, defective material, and imperfect foundation work, unfitted for continued use, perilous to life and property, and in danger of falling at any time, all of which matters will later appear in the course of this memorial; that so great and apparent are this peril and danger that the said building has, in a formal and official manner, been abandoned and vacated by the United States court of appeals, as appears by the following order, duly entered of record in said court on the 12th of October, 1893:

"THURSDAY, October 12, 1893.

"Present: Hon. William A. Woods, circuit judge; Hon. James G. Jenkins, circuit judge.

"General order.

"The court being satisfied that the rooms in the Federal building in the city of Chicago, provided for the use of the court, are not proper rooms, the building having been declared by the official inspector to be unsafe, and being believed by the court to be unsafe and dangerous, the marshal of the court is directed to communicate this order of the court to the Attorney-General of the United States, and to ask his approval for the leasing of such rooms in the city of Chicago as may be necessary for the use of the court.

"It is further ordered that upon the conclusion of the argument of cases assigned for hearing on the 20th of October, instant, the court will adjourn to meet at the city of Milwaukee on the 2d day of November, proximo, and resume the call of the calendar."

"United States circuit court of appeals for the seventh circuit.

"I, Oliver T. Morton, clerk of the United States circuit court of appeals for the seventh circuit, do hereby certify that the foregoing written pages, numbered from 1 to 2, inclusive, contain a true copy of the general order of the United States circuit court of appeals for the seventh circuit, made and entered on the 12th day of October, A. D. 1893, October term, 1893, as the same remains upon the files and records of said United States circuit court of appeals for the seventh circuit.

"In testimony whereof I hereunto subscribe my name and affix the seal of said United States circuit court of appeals for the seventh circuit, at the city of Chicago, this 21st day of October, A. D. 1893.

[SEAL.] "OLIVER T. MORTON,

"Clerk of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit."

Your memorialists further show that the work upon this building was begun under an act passed December 21, 1871, two and one-half months after the great Chicago fire, which act made an appropriation of $2,000,000 for the construction of said building. The attention of the Secretary of the Treasury at an early day was called to alleged defects in said building, its foundation and superstructure; thereupon he appointed a commission of three gentlemen, eminent civil engineers, namely, Gen. William Sooy Smith (who will appear later as a witness in this memorial), Mr. George B. Post, and Mr. O. W. Norcross, who reported that the foundation was too weak to sustain the building and dangerous settlements would occur, rendering very large expenditures of time and money necessary to secure the foundation; that the construction stone of the building was unfit for the purpose, and that the building, if completed, owing to defects in construction and material, would not deserve to stand.

The report of the commission to which we refer is found at page 650 of the Finance Report of 1875, and some of its startling statements and prophecies have been since fully verified and affirmed.

We quote a few of them: "The borings and sections show the presence of two mud deposits under the building, the first extending along nearly the entire Jackson street front and one-half the Clark street front of the building; the second underlies the northwest corner. * * *

"The worst movements of the walls have taken place over these mud deposits, and it seems wonderful that the walls, even with their present weight, stand at all upon such insecure foundations.

"The foundation of the building * * * is a bed of concrete varying in width with the thickness of the walls, about 2 feet wider than the footing courses, and of varying thicknesses from 2 feet 6 inches to 4 feet. As the angle of fracture of good concrete under pressure of a wall is 45 degrees, it should project beyond the footing courses on each side a distance equal to its thickness, or in this case from 2 feet 6 inches to 4 feet. But it does actually project beyond the footing courses only about 1 foot. This error is not material, as it appears impracticable to spread the bearings sufficiently with concrete to provide the necessary resistance to sustain the weight of the completed structure. The quality of the concrete is good, but it was carelessly left without adequate protection from the effect of freezing last winter, from which cause, in combination with unequal settlement, the cracks in the concrete and walls have occured."

The Secretary of the Treasury thereupon, and upon the 24th of August, 1875, appointed another and greater commission, composed of seven of the most eminent civil engineers in the United States, drawn from civil and military life, asking them to examine with uttermost care the building and its foundations. This last commission proceeded to the performance of their duty in apparently the most thorough, accurate, and painstaking manner, and on the 23d of September, 1875, this commission reported substantially that the foundation had not been carried to the requisite depth, where it might have been made perfectly secure; that the foundation of the building was not on firm ground; that the stone was not that which should have been selected for such a building. They recommended that a portion of the building should be taken down and rebuilt; that a part of the stonework should be removed, a part of it entirely omitted; and they commended the suspension of the work on account of the apparently dangerous crack in the wall and the general appearance of the building after its winter exposure.

And your memorialists refer to said reports, as found in said Financial Report of 1875, on page 650 aforesaid, and request their careful consideration by your honorable bodies. Yet they show that despite the various reports aforesaid, the last of which was acted upon by the Secretary of the Treasury by ordering compliance therewith, such was the situation that the said building was completed as at present it is. These defects, early pointed out, were not remedied. The walls have settled and cracked; the whole superstructure threatens at any time to fall into a ruinous mass.

Certain of these developments became very startling, and such of your memorialists as are members from the city of Chicago, being particularly acquainted with such developments, conceived it their duty to present facts in the case to the Treasury Department, whereupon the Secretary of the Treasury directed the Supervising Architect to proceed to Chicago and examine and report on the condition of the building. This he did, filing his report on the 31st of August, 1893, and as it presents an admirable résumé of the building operations, failures, and existing dangerous condition, we here incorporate it wholly in this report.

It is shown therein that the prophecies of evil found in the early reports had been fulfilled, and we call particular attention to parts of the statement underscored by us:

"TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
"OFFICE OF THE SUPERVISING ARCHITECT,
"Washington, D. C., August 31, 1893.

"SIR: Various reports relative to the condition of the United States custom-house and post-office in the city of Chicago culminated about the 1st of July last in letters from the Hon. Judge Grosscup and Mr. H. J. Toolin, inspector of public buildings, Chicago (referred to this office), urgently calling attention to the alleged dangerous condition of said building, in consequence of which, and with your approval, I visited Chicago, leaving this city on July 28, accompanied by Mr. Adolph Cluss, chief inspector of public buildings, attached to this office, made a thorough inspection of said building, and have the honor to report, as follows:

"The condition of the building as regarding order and cleanliness I found to be discreditable throughout, and in places filthy and dangerous to the health of the occupants, betraying gross negligence or incompetence, or both, on the part of the custodian and superintendent, and calling imperatively for the appointment of an active, competent, and conscientious person to fill this important and responsible position.

"For a clear understanding, from a structural point of view, of the condition of the building in question, it is necessary to give in due sequence a short résumé of its record from the beginning.

"The excavations for the building were made and the concrete foundations put in place in the seasons of 1872–'73. In the spring of 1875 the walls of the first story and part of those of the second story were erected.

"At this early stage of the work settlements were perceptible, and charges were made that there were serious defects in the foundations and in the stone used for the superstructure of the building, in consequence of which charges, Hon. B. H. Bristow, then Secretary of the Treasury, appointed W. S. Smith, civil engineer, of Chicago, George B. Post, architect, of New York, and O. W. Norcross, builder, of Massachusetts (three men eminent in their callings), as a commission for the purpose of examining the condition of the building.

"On the 15th of June, 1875, this commission reported that the clay under the foundations contained dangerous mudholes, and was too weak to sustain the weight of the proposed building; that the sandstone used in the building was totally unfit for the purpose; that much inferior labor was incorporated in the building, and that it would be a waste of time and money to proceed further with the construction. Upon receipt of this report, on June 24, the Secretary of the Treasury ordered work upon the building to be suspended until Congress had taken action in the case.

"This stoppage of the work and the prospect of delay in the completion of the building alarmed the municipal authorities of Chicago, and the mayor, acting under instructions from the city council, appointed a commission of seven local architects for the purpose of reporting whether the building could be safely completed upon its then foundation. John M. Van Osdel acted as chairman. This commission, "in an evil hour," reported that the structure was strong and stable; that the cut stone used was durable, and that with minor changes in the foundation of some of the piers, at a moderate cost, the work could be resumed and carried to completion.

"Since these conclusions differed radically from those of the Government commission, the Secretary of the Treasury appointed another commission consisting of three architects, two civil-engineers, and two builders, Gen. W. B. Franklin being selected as chairman, for the purpose of reviewing the conflicting reports, and to make a new inspection of the building.

"This commission reported on the 23d of September, 1875, that the whole building was underlaid with a compressible mixture of clay, sand, and water, in thickness from 24 to 25 feet, below which there is a hard blue clay, down to which hard blue clay the foundation should have been carried, and had this course been adopted there would never have been any question concerning the safety of the building.

"They pronounced the cut stone of the building inferior; but in view of the fact of the large amount of money that had already been expended in the cutting of the stone and delivering it on the ground, they did not recommend a change in that item.

"They recommended that certain defects in the foundations should be remedied; that a radical reduction of the weight of the building should be made, observing the principle of equalizing the pressure on the footing stones; that certain defective piers should be rebuilt; that all stone work above the main cornice should be omitted, and then, notwithstanding the first report and their own tests and observations, unwisely recommended that the work be resumed.

"On the 25th of September, 1875, the Secretary of the Treasury, Hon. B. H. Bristow, unfortunately approved this report; instructed the then Supervising Architect to resume operations, and to be guided by its recommendations.

"On the resumption of operations little attention seems to have been paid to the recommendation of this report by the persons having the construction of the building in charge, and on May 13, 1878, William H. Smith, collector of customs, and H. W. Thompson, assistant district attorney, of Chicago, brought grave charges of alleged fraud, abuses, and neglect of duty on the part of officers, employés, and contractors connected with the construction of the building.

"These were reported upon on June 8, by H. F. French, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and on June 10 Hon. John Sherman, Secretary of the Treasury, approved the report as to frauds, abuses, and neglect by the Superintendent, contractors, and chief subordinates, deeming it best to employ other officials. French's report being turned over to the Attorney-General, a number of the officials were subsequently indicted; and there the matter seems to have ended.

"In May, 1880, the building was taken possession of by the postal service, although yet unfinished, and requiring another year for completion.

"Continued settlements were noticeable all through the period of construction, and the years 1881 to 1887 the record of the settlements of the building were kept by exact levels and measurements. Extensive repairs had to be repeatedly resorted to, and a complicated system of heavy iron tie rods were introduced—to hold the walls in position—which extend on the second and third floors, transversely and longitudinally over the whole area of the building, and which, it is almost needless to say, do not accomplish the object intended.

"In February and October, 1890, exhaustive reports, based upon exact instrumental determinations, and tests from foundations to roofs, were made by Mr. Adolph Cluss, an experienced expert of this office. In November following these were personally revised in all branches by Mr. James H. Windrim, then Supervising Architect, who indorsed and reported them in December, 1890, to Mr. Windom, the then Secretary of the Treasury.

"Observations and tests made at my recent inspection and during the three months last past prove that since the year 1875 the greatest settlement of the building has occurred at the corner of Jackson and Clark streets, and amounts to 11¼ inches below the original level; the settlement at the corner of Adams and Clark streets amounts to 8¼ inches, while the settlement in the center between these two points is but 6 inches.

"The interior walls and columns have settled very irregularly, and less than the heavy exterior walls. These unequal settlements have caused the present alleged unsafe condition of the building, and are shown by the cracks and fissures in the walls throughout, particularly at the junction of the exterior and interior walls; bulges and cracks in the walls surrounding the court yard and numerous humps and wavy surfaces in the floors of the offices and corridors throughout the entire building.

"The observations prove further that during the last three years the settlements have been going on at the same slow and steady rate of the earlier periods, and that the settlements are still largest and most pronounced at the points where originally the least reliable soil was built upon. Many old cracks repaired in 1891 indicate by fresh fissures that the movement has not stopped, but continues to the present date, and is likely to continue.

"The roof construction is in an equally deplorable condition with the other parts, and, as a whole, I have never been called upon to examine a building which shows so many plain and convincing evidences of grossly corrupt administration and wasteful and defective construction as this, with perhaps the single exception of the recently erected immigrant buildings on Ellis Island, New York Harbor.

"Taking it as a whole, I am inclined to say that there is no cause to fear an immediate collapse of the structure; but this is the best that I feel warranted in saying in its favor. In a building, however, which is unquestionably in movement pieces of heavy plastering and stucco cornices in the rooms and corridors, and of iron moldings, or even detached bricks, may occasionally, and are likely, to fall at any moment, to the imminent danger of life and limb, if not anticipated and prevented by the watchful care of a vigilant, alert, and conscientious superintendent.

"It is evident that unless the defects in the foundations are cured, there is no telling when a tragedy may occur. A radical cure would require a complete system of underpinning of the exterior walls with steel beams and concrete, thus extending the area of pressure upon the weak soil beneath. This underpinning, including the regulating and relaying of floors, rebuilding of walls, repairs to roofs, drainage and mechanical appliances, renewal of decorations, etc., would involve an enormous expenditure, which I estimate at from $500,000 to $750,000, and would interfere for a length of time with the occupation of the building by the postal and other services, and in the end result in an unsightly patched-up structure.

"I therefore hesitate to make any recommendation, further than the expenditure of the minimum amount of money necessary for the safety and convenience of the occupants, until the case is brought to the attention of Congress.

"The cost of the building has been as follows:

For the site	$1,259,285.65
For the construction	4,615,121.35
Total	5,874,507.00

"To this must be added $100,000 appropriated last winter for the annex, not yet ready for occupation, and intended for the accommodation of the increased business resulting from the World's Fair.

"To this, also, must be added the appropriation for repairs for March, 1885 to date, aggregating $419,000, of which a sum of $43,427 was unexpended on the 1st day of August, and which is now being drawn upon daily and heavily for the necessary repairs and preservation of the building.

"Respectfully, yours,

"JEREMIAH O'ROURKE,
"Supervising Architect.

"Hon. JOHN G. CARLISLE,
"Secretary of the Treasury."

Upon the receipt, by the courtesy of the Secretary of the Treasury, of said report of the Supervising Architect, certain of your memorialists addressed a communication to the Secretary of the Treasury, a copy of which we here insert as best embodying our views of the situation at that time, and which have been intensified by recent events:

"HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, UNITED STATES,
"Washington, D. C., September 16, 1893.

"DEAR SIR: The undersigned members of Congress from the State of Illinois representing, some of us, the State at large, and others particularly the interests of the people of the city of Chicago, respectfully suggest that we have, by your courtesy, had opportunity to and have examined carefully the report of Mr. Jeremiah O'Rourke, Supervising Architect of the Treasury, submitted to you by that official on the 31st of August ultimo, touching the condition of the Federal building in the city of Chicago, commonly known as the post-office building, and in which are located various Government offices, the post-office, the collector's office, the United States marshal's office, the United States circuit and district courts for the northern district of Illinois, and the appellate courts, etc. We respectfully invite your attention to certain prominent features of that report.

"It shows that since the beginning of the post-office building in the city of Chicago there have been a number of careful examinations made of said buildings by commissions duly authorized thereto and by officials detailed for that purpose.

"Each and every one of said examinations has resulted in the exposure of gross faults of construction and serious defects in the materials employed in said building and they have exhibited a constantly increasing condition of danger and threatened ruin of said building.

"The report of the Supervising Architect of the 31st of August shows that one side of this building has sunk on varying lines from 8¼ inches to 11¼ inches; that the sinkings are irregular, and that the results of such irregularities are plainly visible in the breaking of the superstructure now partially held together by a system of iron rods passing at different heights from side to side and from end to end of the building for the purpose of holding the walls in position. But the Supervising Architect declares substantially that the purpose for which these rods have been used has not been accomplished.

"The Supervising Architect declares that a tragedy may occur at any time in this building. His language is: 'It is evident that unless the defects in the foundation are cured there is no telling when a tragedy may occur.'

"The curing of these defects, he states further, would involve an enormous expense; would interfere with the occupation of the building during its progress, and when completed leave the building an unsightly and patched-up structure. He further states that, with possibly a single exception, 'no building he has ever been called upon to examine shows so many plain and convincing evidences of careless and corrupt administration, and wasteful, defective construction as this.' He states that the building is unquestionably in movement, and that fragments of it are likely to fall at any moment to the imminent danger of life and limb, and that constant vigilance and watchfulness are necessary to prevent recurring minor tragedies. He states that the settling of the building is going on now, as it did at the first; that the walls are bulged and cracked and the floors of offices and corridors humped and wavy.

"The nation, Mr. Secretary, was recently shocked by the falling of a public building in Washington where a few score men were employed. In the Government building at Chicago thousands of citizens enter and depart every day, except Sunday, and probably one thousand post-office employés come and go at all times, including the carriers who receive and dispatch mail matter, the clerks, the wagon men, and the various attachés of the post-office proper, in addition to which the courts are thronged with judges, attorneys, clients, and spectators. In short, it is a greatly frequented building, and the dimensions of a disaster, in the event of the tragedy occuring, which the Supervising Architect's report refers to, would be measured in its loss of human life only by the occupancy at the unforeknown hour at which it may occur.

"We are aware that the condition of the public Treasury is such that no unnecessary expenditure should be incurred, but the warning in this case is so plain, the information officially given is so explicit, and the possible disaster so grave that we do not feel that any ordinary financial consideration should weigh in determining the course to be pursued.

"In view of all the facts recited in the report to which we respectfully but earnestly invite your attention, we suggest and urge that you will direct the proper steps to be taken for the immediate vacation of the Federal building at Chicago and for securing other quarters for the transaction of the postal and other governmental services at that point.

"This course would be insisted upon by the municipal authorities of Chicago in case a private building was in the condition of the Federal building which the Supervising Architect alleges to exist. We furthermore request that you will cause said Supervising Architect's report to be communicated to the Congress of the United States to the end that legislation may be had looking to the erection of new and safe quarters for the transaction of the business of the Government in its postal services and in its various revenue offices and in its courts and other attachments.

"We beg further to suggest that the completion of this building, after the report first made to the Secretary of the Treasury, Hon. B. H. Bristow, would not have been allowed but for the circumstances which surrounded the inception of its construction. The preparations made for its building were made partly because the city had been devastated by fire of unparalleled magnitude and it was deemed expedient to afford relief to its workers, and so the ordinary prudent investigations and restrictions surrounding so large a structure were neglected, evaded, or disregarded. The amount expended upon the building is prodigious, but nevertheless it stands to-day a veritable deadfall, the hour of whose crumbling into ruin can not be foreseen nor averted without other enormous and unsatisfactory expenditures.

"We are aware, Mr. Secretary, that this unsightly pile may endure for a period. We are certain that there will be a speedy end to that period. We feel that we must, in justice to our fellow-citizens and constituents, make the request of you that we have made. We urge this, in no sensational or alarmist spirit, but because men of eminence as engineers and the Government officials thereto, appointed, qualified, and delegated, have each and all declared that this structure is insecure, threatening, and dangerous. A failure upon the part of those responsible would be attended with consequences to be remembered and regretted while the city has a history.

"We earnestly ask your cooperation in every just and practicable measure which may be taken to avert the disaster foreseen and foretold by the scientists and experts, and to aid us in securing fitting accommodations for the great services of the Government at Chicago.

"Very respectfully, yours,
"JOHN C. BLACK, M. C., Illinois.
"A. J. HUNTER, M. C., Illinois.
"J. FRANK ALDRICH, M. C., First Illinois.
"L. E. McGANN, M. C., Second Illinois.
"ALLAN C. DURBOROW, JR., M. C., Third Illinois.
"JULIUS GOLDZIER, M. C., Fourth Illinois.

"Hon. JOHN G. CARLISLE,
"Secretary of the Treasury, Washington, D. C."

In replying to our said communication the Secretary, on the 4th of October, 1893, addressed to us the following letter, in which he said the power to comply with our requests contained in our communication to him was not in him, but in the Congress, adding:

"I concur, however, with the conclusion reached by the Supervising Architect, that it will be necessary to provide at a reasonably early day for the erection of a new and larger public building at Chicago."

We here add a copy of the Secretary's letter:

"TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
"Washington, D. C., October 4, 1893.

"GENTLEMEN: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 16th ultimo, in which, after reviewing the report recently made by the Supervising Architect upon the condition of the public building at Chicago, you say:

"'In view of all the facts recited in the report, to which we respectfully rbut earnestly invite your attention, we suggest and urge that you will direct the proper steps to be taken for the immediate vacation of the Federal building at Chicago and for securing other quarters for the transaction of the postal and other Governmental services at that point.'

"This communication has been referred to the Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department, with instructions to reëxamine the subject and submit such suggestions and recommendations as he might consider proper in view of the situation, and a copy of his response is herewith transmitted.

"It is scarcely necessary for me to call your attention to the fact that in the existing state of legislation upon the subject the Secretary of the Treasury has no power to vacate the building now occupied by the public officers at Chicago or to secure by rental or otherwise other buildings at that place for the transaction of the public business. Congress alone has the power to determine what shall be done with the present building, and whether or not a new one shall be erected or necessary accommodation secured for the public officers by renting suitable quarters.

"I concur, however, with the conclusion reached by the Supervising Architect that it will be necessary to provide at a reasonably early day for the erection of a new and larger public building at Chicago; but whether it shall be located on the present site or at some other place in that city is a question upon which I prefer not to express an opinion at this time.

"I also inclose herewith a copy of your communication above referred to.

"Yours, respectfully,
"J. G. CARLISLE, Secretary.

"To Hon. JOHN C. BLACK, Hon. A. J. HUNTER, Hon. J. FRANK ALDRICH, Hon. L. E. McGANN, Hon. ALLAN C. DURBOROW, Hon. JULIUS GOLDZIER, House of Representatives."

Your memorialists respectfully submit that the unbroken testimony of a line of architects, commissions, and officials, covering the entire life of the building, show it to be, as we affirm, unsafe, discreditable, and dangerous to human life and Government property, and that for these reasons it should be replaced at the earliest possible day by suitable governmental structures.

2.

But for other than mere reasons of humanity, heretofore urged, and because that, if it was perfectly safe, the said public building in Chicago has become outgrown and unfitted for the discharge of the work required to be done in it, because that it is antiquated in its structure, having none of the modern facilities for the doing of the immense business centering in Chicago, bearing no more relation to the building that should succeed it than a freight caboose bears to a vestibuled palace car, we urge the passage of the bill.

And we submit for your consideration the following statements:

Chicago is to-day easily the second great postal point in the Union. The mails of 25,000,000 people are distributed through its limits, the city itself having a population of a million and a half, and all of this done with facilities prepared twenty years ago, in a town with a population of 400,000. We have not need to convince the Post-Office Department in this particular, for in his able report of last year the Postmaster-General declared as follows:

"The greatest concentration of the Railway Mail Service of the country is at Chicago, hence its importance as a receiving and distributing point is greatly out of proportion to its postal revenues or the number of local patrons. It needs further special attention also, by reason of its great expansion of territory. * * * There should be no hesitancy, therefore, to make such direct and needful appropriations as will admit of bringing these offices (Chicago and New York) up to the highest standard of efficiency."

We commend the further recitals of the report, found on pages 36 and 37, wherein these two great cities are designated as collectors and distributors of the world's through mail, and that all emphasis may be given to the declaration of the Postmaster-General, that the importance of the office is over proportionate to its revenue, we find him stating (page 620) that the gross revenues of this office are $4,672,018.12; that its net revenues are $3,025,698.70. Give us the net revenue for eighteen months and we will build the fairest building in the postal service of the Union.

So earnest was the Postmaster-General in this matter that he urged what we repectfully ask at your hands—separate action.

We have already quoted the declaration of the Secretary of the Treasury as to the pressing need for adequate buildings in place of the present inadequate one.

Because, therefore, of the facts herein recited; because of the possible grave consequences to citizen and Government which may occur, and to prevent which does not lie within the power of the citizen, save by quitting the service of the Government; because that the buildings now in use have become outgrown, antiquated, and unsuitable, we respectfully ask that the committee will report the bill No. 397 to the House with such amendments, if any, as the committee in its wisdom may desire to make, and that action may be taken at an early day.

With great regard, we are your fellow-members and memorialists,

JOHN C. BLACK, M. C., Illinois.	JOHN J. McDANNOLD.
ALLAN C. DURBOROW, JR.	WM. M. SPRINGER.
A. J. HUNTER.	GEO. W. SMITH.
L. E. McGANN.	P. S. POST.
JULIUS GOLDZIER.	B. F. FUNK.
J. FRANK ALDRICH.	T. J. HENDERSON.
W. S. FORMAN.	EDWARD LANE.
GEO. W. FITHIAN.	R. A. CHILDS.
A. J. HOPKINS.	J. R. WILLIAMS.
	H. K. WHEELER.

"I have not had time to inform myself as to statements contained in foregoing memorial, but from the reputation of the custom-house and post-office at Chicago, and from examination of same, I am satisfied that a new building should be constructed upon the site of the old, and will cheerfully coöperate to that end.

J. G. CANNON.
R. R. HITT.
B. F. MARSH.

JANUARY 17, 1894.

MEMORANDA.

We add that the building site is ample for the public needs, being 321 feet by 396 feet between the building lines; that it is in the heart of the city, whose whole postal life has become accommodated to its present location; that it can be made as secure as a rock foundation by proper and exhaustive use of piles and cement, as shown in Government Engineer Board report of September, 1875, and as further shown by the stability of buildings on either side much greater in dimensions than the Government building, and which are stable and secure.

Also, part of letter from Gen. Smith, recently received, casting light on the "corrupt methods of construction" spoken of by architects:

"SEPTEMBER 21, 1893.

"There is a very important fact that, I think, was not stated in our report years ago, viz: While the plans showed the concrete underlying the footing courses spread at angle of 45°, it was actually cut under by the contractor to save material, giving it the form of a wedge with the point cut off.

"Even if the concrete had been put in as planned the load per square foot on the underlying soil would have been largely in excess of its sustaining power; but the weakness of the foundations was aggravated by this rascally diminution of area.

"The prediction I made in my testimony before the second Government board, that 'if the building was completed according to the plans (it was in course of construction when the investigation was in progress) it would be a first-class wreck inside of twenty years,' was absolutely fulfilled; and it needed no prophet to make it, nor does it now require divine inspiration to foretell the absolute collapse of the building within another twenty years, and probably very much sooner."

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE SUPERVISING ARCHITECT,
Washington, D. C., September 28, 1893.

SIR: In compliance with your verbal instructions, that I supplement, with practical suggestions and recommendations, my recent report on the post-office and custom-house building in the City of Chicago, dated August 12, 1893, in connection with the recent communication addressed to you by Hon. JOHN C. BLACK and other members of Congress from Illinois, dated 16th instant, I have the honor to do so, as follows:

While I must repeat and even emphasize the statement in my report as to the unsafe condition of the building in question, I desire to say that those statements were not intended to be understood in the extreme sense which the honorable members from Illinois seem to have taken them, as expressed in their very able communication to you on the subject.

I have been and, after mature reflection, I am still satisfied that the building is in no danger of an immediate collapse, and that, if so desired, it can be safely maintained and used for its present purposes for some years, or during the time required for the erection of a more suitable and permanent building: provided, however, that it is placed and kept under watchful care and receives the constant attention of a thoroughly competent and vigilant superintendent, with a suitable contingent force of alert and intelligent workmen at his command.

I have no hesitation in suggesting and recommending the erection of a new and larger building, in keeping with the growing wants of the city of Chicago, to be erected on the Lake front or on any suitable location that may be selected, other than the present site. This recommendation I make in the interest of economy as regards the Federal Government and eventual satisfaction to the citizens of Chicago.

The recent erection of the post-office annex at a cost of nearly $100,000 makes this by far the most convenient and suitable building in the city for present requirements. To tear this annex down immediately after its erection would be a cause of just criticism and scandal. Its use for post-office purposes, etc., pending the erection of a new building would be far more convenient for the people of Chicago, would save the Government the very large expenditure required for the renting and fitting up of suitable buildings, even if such could be found in the city of Chicago, which is very doubtful.

In case it is decided to sell the present building and site, and use the receipts for the erection of a new Federal building on the Lake front, or elsewhere, I would recommend in the strongest manner, that the parties purchasing shall be bound strictly and without evasion to tear the present building down to the foundation, for to allow it to be "busheled up" or repaired by a private purchaser would be, in my opinion, to court inevitable disaster in the future.

I return herewith my report of August 31, and the communication of September 16, and have the honor to be,

Respectfully, yours,

JEREMIAH O'ROURKE,
Supervising Architect.

Hon. JOHN G. CARLISLE,
Secretary of the Treasury, Washington, D. C.

CHICAGO, January 22, 1894.

Hon. W. HESING, Postmaster:

SIR: Referring to your request for sanitary investigation of the post-office building in this city, I have the honor to inform you that I caused officers of this Department to investigate the same, and make a chemical examination of the air in certain rooms specified in the reports.

I herewith transmit them as a part of this report, and it will be seen that the present situation is such as to jeopardize the health and lives of the employés. In my opinion the present building should be either thoroughly overhauled or vacated. The renovation necessary to place it in proper sanitary condition would necessarily include new plumbing and painting, and a proper system of ventilation. This opinion is shared by the representative of the Marine Hospital Service, Dr. Hamilton, whose office is in the building, and with whom I have consulted.

I am, sir, very respectfully, yours,

ARTHUR R. REYNOLDS,
Commissioner of Health.

I have read the foregoing report and transmitted papers, and respectfully concur therein.

JOHN B. HAMILTON,
Surgeon, United States Marine Hospital Service.

CHICAGO, January 19, 1894.

DEAR SIR: We desire to make report regarding the investigation of the air in the Government building. The building was visited in the forenoon, at which time the fewest number of employés are present. The conditions, therefore, are unusually good at this time. After remaining in the rooms for a short time we noticed the fullness in the head which is due to an excess of carbon dioxide in the air. The amount of dust was marked. The air of the building was examined in four places: No. 1, basement; No. 2, bag room; No. 3, carriers' room; No. 4, west gallery of carriers' room.

In the basement the amount of dust was most marked, and Petri dishes four inches in diameter that were exposed here for three minutes showed 350 bacteria to have fallen upon them. The amount of carbon dioxide estimated in parts per 10,000 was 12.28 parts. In the washroom in the basement the presence of hydrogen sulphide was shown to be marked by using lead papers.

The bag room had been ventilated during the forenoon and was said to be in unusually good condition. The amount of carbon dioxide here was shown to be 12.24 parts per 10,000, and the number of bacteria that fell upon the exposed Petri dishes in three minutes was 410.

The amount of carbon dioxide in the carriers' room was shown to be 21.25 parts per 10,000, and the number of bacteria that fell upon the plates exposed as before was 178.

The air taken from the west gallery showed 16.33 parts of carbon dioxide, but the conditions were unusually good, as a number of the transoms were open at the time. The number of bacteria that fell upon the plates exposed in the gallery was 154.

The examination of the air in the building shows that the ventilation in the building is bad, as the amount of carbon dioxide should never be over 5 or 8 parts per 10,000 and the amount of dust would be much less. When the carbon dioxide is over 8 parts the sensation of headache and giddiness from which the men complain occurs, and when it is over 18 parts no mental work can be carried out satisfactorily.

Very respectfully submitted.

ADOLPH GEHRMANN, M. D.
CASS L. KENNICOTT.

DR. A. R. REYNOLDS,
Commissioner of Health.

REPORT AS TO SANITARY CONDITION OF POST-OFFICE.

DEAR SIR: In compliance with your request to make a thorough examination of the sanitary condition of the Chicago post-office, I respectfully submit the following report:

The building was visited in the forenoon, at which time the fewest number of employés were present. At this time the chemical examination was made. The sanitary examination extended through a period of four days.

The basement, in which about two hundred men are constantly employed, is dark, grimy, and unventilated. Upon application of the peppermint test we found the sewerage defective, catch-basins full and even with the floor surface. Found water-closet connections connecting with catch-basins and human excretion floating on the surface, especially in room called the weighing room.

The water-closets and wash room in southeast corner of building, containing fourteen water-closets, several urinals and wash bowls, we found in a decidedly unsanitary condition. The fixtures themselves are covered with filth from constant use, soaked and impregnated, while underneath the fixtures water constantly stands. The air of this room is decidedly bad. During the peppermint test, peppermint was plainly discernible in and about fixtures, showing defects in sewerage system. The same general conditions apply to toilet rooms wherever found in basement or on the main floor.

Upon removing the covers of catch-basins in different parts of the basement the odor of peppermint was plainly discernible. As a properly constructed basin is supposed to be trapped against the main sewer or connection, it is plain to be seen that they are deficient in the most important requisite looking to safe or perfect sewerage.

No provision seems to have been made for a supply of fresh air to basement, while the building of the annex has darkened and decreased any chance for ventilation on that side of the building. In conversation with employés we found many of them complaining bitterly of the conditions with which they are surrounded. Sickness among employés is the rule rather than the exception.

On the main floor, in carriers' room and gallery, the air is exceedingly close and stifling. Here the employés complain of lassitude, headaches, etc. As at times there are from four hundred to five hundred working on this main floor their condition without ventilation may be imagined. (See chemical test).

The postmaster's room, northeast corner of building, is deficient in ventilation, being closed in from outer air by reason of the annex part of building, the supply of fresh air in this room being very deficient.

The offices occupied by officials of the Government in the upper part of building are fairly well off as regards light and air, but the plumbing work in general is radically wrong.

Returning to the carriers' room, the fresh-air supply is presumably taken from the corridor. The only supply the corridor receives is from the opening of the doors leading thereto. This is irregular and inefficient. Although transoms are provided over doors and windows, there is no indication of their ever having been opened of late years, as their appliances for opening are rusted and out of order. I failed to find an official or employé of the building who knew of their having been opened at any time.

The carriers' room is inclosed by skylight, no ventilation on same. At the time of our visit daylight was hardly discernible through it on account of the dirt upon it.

I can only say in regard to this building, it is utterly deficient in every requisite as regards drainage, light, and ventilation. Seven hundred employés in basement and carriers' room upon whom the sun can not shine during their employment in the building. The conditions are inexcusably bad, and would not be allowed in any mercantile establishment in the city of Chicago without action, prompt and vigorous, by this Department.

Very respectfully,

ANDREW YOUNG, Chief Inspector.

ARTHUR R. REYNOLDS, M. D.,
Commissioner of Health.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE SUPERVISING ARCHITECT,
Washington, D. C., September 28, 1893.

SIR: In compliance with your verbal instructions that I supplement, with practical suggestions and recommendations, my recent report on the post-office and custom-house building in the city of Chicago, dated August 12, 1893, in connection with the recent communication addressed to you by Hon. JOHN C. BLACK and other members of Congress from Illinois, dated 16th instant, I have the honor to do so, as follows:

While I must repeat, and even emphasize, the statement in my report as to the unsafe and dangerous condition of the building in question, I desire to say that these statements were not intended to be understood in the extreme sense which the honorable members from Illinois seem to have taken them, as expressed in their very able communication to you on the subject.

I have been and, after mature reflection, I am still satisfied that the building is in no danger of an immediate collapse, and that if so desired it can be safely maintained and used for its present purposes for some years, or during the time required for the erection of a more suitable and permanent building, provided, however, that it is placed and kept under the watchful care and receives the constant attention of a thoroughly competent and vigilant superintendent, with a suitable contingent force of alert and intelligent workmen at his command.

I have no hesitation in suggesting and recommending the erection of a new and larger building, in keeping with the growing wants of the city of Chicago, to be erected on the Lake front, or on any suitable location that may be selected other than the present site. This recommendation I make in the interest of economy as regards the Federal Government and eventual satisfaction to the citizens of Chicago.

The recent erection of the post-office annex, at a cost of nearly $100,000, makes this by far the most convenient and suitable building in the city for present requirements. To tear this annex down immediately after its erection would be a cause of just criticism and scandal. Its use for post-office purposes, etc., pending the erection of a new building, would be far more convenient for the people of Chicago, and would save the Government the very large expenditure required for the renting and fitting up of suitable buildings, even if such could be found in the city of Chicago, which is very doubtful.

In case it is decided to sell the present building and site, and use the receipts for the erection of a new Federal building on the Lake front or elsewhere, I would recommend in the strongest manner, that the parties purchasing shall be bound strictly and without evasion to tear the present building down to the foundations, for to allow it to be "busheled up" or repaired by a private purchaser would be, in my opinion, to court inevitable disaster in the future.

I return herewith my report of August 31, and the communication of September 16, and have the honor to be

Respectfully, yours,

JEREMIAH O'ROURKE,
Supervising Architect.

Hon. JOHN G. CARLISLE,
Secretary of the Treasury, Washington, D. C.

[From Chicago Herald, October 13, 1893.]

OUT OF THE OLD RUIN—JUDGES WILL NOT RISK THEIR LIVES—UNSAFE CONDITION OF THE FEDERAL BUILDING CAUSES THE REMOVAL OF THE COURT OF APPEALS TO MILWAUKEE—NEW QUARTERS MUST BE SECURED.

An order entered by the judges in the United States circuit court of appeals yesterday will do more to draw attention to the need of a safe Federal building in Chicago than all the opinions expressed during the last few years. Judges Woods and Jenkins have decided that it is unsafe longer to hold court in the building. In the order yesterday next Friday is the last day in which the court will occupy its room in the Chicago ruin. The judges will reopen the court November 2 at Milwaukee. There is good accommodation to be had in the Federal building there without the probability of several pounds of plaster cornice cutting short the attendance of judges or counsel in a suit. The order in its entirety reads:

The court being satisfied that the rooms in the Federal building in the city of Chicago provided for the use of the court are not proper rooms, the building having been declared by the official inspector to be unsafe and being believed by the court to be unsafe and dangerous, the marshal of the court is directed to communicate this order of the court to the Attorney-General of the United States, and to ask his approval for the leasing of such rooms in the city of Chicago as may be necessary for the use of the court.

It is further ordered that upon the conclusion of the argument of cases assigned for hearing on the 20th of October, the court will adjourn to meet at the city of Milwaukee on the 2d day of November and resume the call of the calendar.

WHY THE ORDER WAS ISSUED.

Speaking of the intended removal of the court Judge Woods said after court had adjourned yesterday:

"We have had the matter under consideration for some months, and in view of the nature of the recent reports upon the building the order was made. It is not the intention to give the court a nugatory character, but even if we personally had no fears of the safety of the building it would not be right to compel others to come into it during the sitting of court. I believe myself that there is no danger of a general collapse, but there is every likelihood that some section of it may come down at any moment. It is not necessary that the entire building should fall to accomplish the destruction of perhaps half a dozen persons. A small-sized section of stone work could easily do that. Chicago is centrally located and the most convenient place in the circuit to hold court, but, of course, if we can not find a court-room here we must go elsewhere."

Judge Woods then referred to the narrow escape from injury which some attorneys had recently in the building. After leaving the court-room they were assembled at the elevator door when a large section of plaster fell from the ceiling and smashed into fragments at their feet.

OFFICE OF SUPERINTENDENT OF CONSTRUCTION,
UNITED STATES CUSTOM-HOUSE, ETC.,
Chicago, Ill., December 4, 1893.

DEAR SIR: In reply to your favor of the 27th ultimo, I beg to inform you that the square of ground on which the post-office stands measures on property line 321 feet on Adams street and Jackson street, and 396 feet on Clark and Dearborn streets, making 127,116 square feet in the square.

Respectfully, yours,

M. B. BAILEY, Superintendent.

Hon. JOHN C. BLACK, M. C.,
Washington, D. C.

The following is from the report of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds:

Your committee is of the opinion that the needs of Chicago are immediate; that the Government, as a matter of justice to itself and in justice to its employés now engaged in the old building, can not afford to wait until the lake front title is adjudicated, if it ever can be.

In conclusion, your committee submits the following facts:

1. The site now owned and occupied by the Government is more desirable from a practical point of view, and we believe a more suitable location for the business of the Government than the lake front.

2. The needs of Chicago are immediate, and we believe an effort to secure the lake front equivalent to an indefinite postponement of action.

3. As the Government now owns ample ground in the very business center of the city, it is in the interests of convenience and economy to concentrate on that spot all of the business of the Government.

4. The lake front was dedicated to the people, and should be preserved for their use and benefit. It affords the only breathing place convenient to the densely populated business center of this great city, and is the only place within easy reach of those who are without the time or the means, when their work is over, to visit suburban parks and resorts.

No building would be thought of if it were not that the pressing needs of the Government actually demand it. There is scarcely a city in the United States which furnishes the National Treasury with more revenue than Chicago. This revenue arises from business transacted by the Government upon its own land and in its own building in that city. No reason can be given why the Government should call upon Chicago to purchase or donate this land. To call upon Chicago as a matter of business for this donation is unreasonable, and to call upon her as a matter of charity is unnecessary.

It is recommended that the bill do pass.

The following statement is given as showing the business done, the cost of doing the same, and the service performed in the five cities of Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, Boston, and Brooklyn:

Cities.	Streets.	Population.	Number of carriers.	Cost of carriage.
	Miles.
Chicago	2,900	1,500,000	941	$1.11
New York	600	1,900,000	1,225	1.38
Philadelphia	1,300	1,200,000	782	1.13
Boston	583	450,000	524	2.34
Brooklyn	609	1,000,000	482

The State of Illinois pays of internal revenue $31,000,000, or one-fifth collected in the United States. The district of Chicago pays $9,000,000 which will be collected in the Government buildings under advisement, and is one-seventeenth of all that is collected in the United States. (See report collector of internal revenue dated July 26, 1894, page 8.)

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker, I desire to make a similar request to that made by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BLACK]. I ask to be permitted to print certain documents in connection with the remarks which I made to-day on the bill providing for the erection of an appraiser's warehouse in the city of New York.

Pending Mr. CAMPBELL'S request, the result of the vote was announced as above recorded; and the House accordingly (at 6 o'clock and 40 minutes p. m.) adjourned.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, the Committee on Invalid Pensions was discharged from the consideration of the following bills; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions, to wit:

A bill (S. 1935) granting a pension to Elizabeth Ellery;

A bill (S. 2056) granting a pension to Ada J. Schwatka, widow of the late Lieut. Fredrich Schwatka.

PUBLIC BILLS, MEMORIALS, AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced, and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. MADDOX: A bill (H. R. 7916) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to correct errors where double allotments of land have erroneously been made to an Indian, to correct errors in patents, and for other purposes—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. ELLIS of Oregon: A bill (H. R. 7917) extending the time for the completion of a railroad bridge over the Columbia River at or near Vancouver, in the State of Washington—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. HOUK: A bill (H. R. 7918) authorizing bona fide settlers on public lands to cut timber therefrom, and for other purposes—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

PRIVATE BILLS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills of the following titles were presented and referred as follows:

By Mr. CURTIS of Kansas: A bill (H. R. 7919) for the relief of J. J. Hitt—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. ENGLISH of New Jersey: A bill (H. R. 7920) granting an honorable discharge to Patrick Kelly, late a landsman, United States steamship Ohio—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. PEARSON: A bill (H. R. 7921) granting a pension to Samuel D. Worral—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7922) for the relief of J. Stephen Wilcoxen—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. PENCE (by request): A bill (H. R. 7923) for the relief of Charles M. Larsh, of Denver, Colo.—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also (by request), a bill (H. R. 7924) for the relief of Mrs. Emma D. Larsh, of Denver, Colo.—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. SPRINGER: A bill (H. R. 7925) to pension Hanna B. Munson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland: A bill (H. R. 7926) for the relief of Thomas J. Benson—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7927) for the relief of Barney Moore—to the Committee on War Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. ABBOTT: Petition of Sarah Cassendra Newport, for relief—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. FITHIAN: Papers to accompany bill for the relief of Charles M. Brown—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. FLETCHER: Petition of citizens of West Minneapolis, Minn., protesting against appropriations to sectarian schools for the education of Indians—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. MEYER: Petition of Robert M. White, of New Orleans, La., asking for the restitution of a tract of land donated to the United States under certain conditions and known as the "Jump revenue station," in the parish of Plaquemines, La.—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, resolution of the Chamber of Commerce of the city of New Orleans, La., in favor of the completion and control of the Nicaragua Canal by the United States Government—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, memorial of the New Orleans (La.) Post-Office Clerks' Association, in favor of the passage of the bill (H. R. 56) for the classification of postal clerks in first and second class post-offices—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petition of certain manufacturers of alcohol in the State of Louisiana, in favor of the alcohol industry of said State—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

Also, resolutions of the General Assembly of the State of Louisiana, in favor of appropriations for the streams known as River Bœuf and Bayou Macon—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, resolution of the Board of Trade of New Orleans, La., in favor of maintaining rice schedule in the pending Wilson tariff bill as the same passed the House of Representatives—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SCRANTON: Petition of J. W. Howarth, M. A. Goodwin, and others, of Scranton, Pa., against taxing incomes of fraternal beneficiary societies—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. TERRY: Memorial of a meeting of colored people of Little Rock, Ark., approving the appropriation for the Cotton States and Industrial Exposition at Atlanta, Ga.—to the Committee on Appropriations.

SENATE.

THURSDAY, August 9, 1894.

Prayer by Rev. J. H. M'CARTY, D. D., of the city of Washington.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings; when, on motion of Mr. TURPIE, and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. PATTON presented the memorial of J. H. Van Coeverd and 47 other citizens of Detroit, Mich., remonstrating against the support of the Government in maintaining the present system of sectarian Indian education, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. MARTIN presented a petition of sundry citizens of Miami, Ind. T., praying for the passage of Senate bill No. 2267, to incorporate the town of Miami, in the Indian Territory; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

He also presented the memorial of H. Brown, W. F. Peters, Frank Smith, and sundry other citizens of Kansas City, Kans., remonstrating against the support of the Government in maintaining the present system of sectarian Indian education; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. BLANCHARD presented a petition of the General Assembly of the State of Louisiana, praying that an adequate appropriation be made for the improvement of the Bœuf and Macon Rivers, in that State; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. BATE presented a memorial of the Chamber of Commerce, of Nashville, Tenn., remonstrating against the rejection by the conferees on the river and harbor appropriation bill of the additional appropriation for the improvement of the Cumberland River below Nashville, Tenn.; and also against the rejection of that portion of the Senate amendment which appropriates $15,000 for a dam near the mouth of the Harpeth River, in the State of Tennessee; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. LODGE presented the memorial of A. Z. Conrad and 130 other citizens of Worcester, Mass., remonstrating against the support of the Government in maintaining the present system of sectarian Indian education, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. MANDERSON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2143) for the relief of Rufus Betz, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. DAVIS, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2255) for the relief of Capt. William Fletcher, United States Army, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. MITCHELL of Wisconsin, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1451) for the relief of George B. Cosby, reported adversely thereon, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. BATE, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1578) authorizing the Secretary of War to recognize Frank D. Baldwin as lieutenant-colonel of the Nineteenth Michigan Infantry Volunteers from the 15th day of May, 1865, reported adversely thereon, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. PALMER, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3005) for the relief of George Isenstein, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. PASCO, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 361) for the relief of C. M. Shaffer, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

MARIA HALL.

Mr. GALLINGER. I am directed by the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 253) granting a pension to Maria Hall, widow of Joseph E. Doak, deceased, to report it favorably without amendment. As the bill has been mislaid for several months and proposes to pension a woman 90 years of age, I ask for its present consideration.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Maria Hall, widow of Joseph E. Doak, deceased, late a private in Capt. Renshaw's company of Tennessee militia from December 6, 1812, to April 20, 1813, and from September 26, 1813, to December 10, 1813.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GUARANTEE COMPANIES.

Mr. PALMER. If in order, I move to reconsider the vote by which the Senate yesterday passed the bill (H. R. 4954) relative to recognizances, stipulations, bonds, and undertakings, and to allow certain corporations to be accepted as surety thereon.

Mr. HILL. I suppose that motion would more properly be made when we reach the Calendar.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The motion of the Senator from Illinois can be entered at this time.

Mr. PALMER. Very well. I enter the motion.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The motion is entered, and will be considered hereafter.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. BLANCHARD (by request) introduced a bill (S. 2294) for the relief of Caroline V. English, widow of the late Lieut. Col. Thomas C. English, Second United States Infantry; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2295) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to correct errors where double allotments of land have erroneously been made to an Indian, to correct errors in patents, and for other purposes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. DOLPH introduced a bill (S. 2296) granting increase of pension to Caroline V. English; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. GALLINGER introduced a bill (S. 2297) to provide for the restatement, readjustment, settlement, and payment of dues to army officers in certain cases; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

LOUIS PELHAM.

Mr. TURPIE. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 1589) for the relief of Louis Pelham.

The Secretary read the bill.

Mr. PALMER. I dislike to object to the bill, but I shall be obliged to the Senator from Indiana if he will explain it.

Mr. TURPIE. The beneficiary of this bill was a man named Pelham, who resided in Indiana. He was a debtor. The creditor resided in Kentucky. The Kentucky creditor, also named Pelham, sympathized and took part with the Confederate States. Proceedings were instituted to confiscate a note in the district court of the State of Indiana because it was due to a person who sympathized with the Confederate States. Under the usual garnishee process, proceedings went on to the extent of a sale by the marshal, when the Indiana beneficiary of the bill bid at public sale $3,000 for the note.

After the war the creditor, the Kentucky person having his disabilities removed, brought suit to have the proceedings of the district court of Indiana set aside, and the case finally terminated here when the Supreme Court of the United States decided that the district court of Indiana, not having possession of the res, that is the note in controversy, and there being no personal service upon the party interested, the proceeding was totally void, and the person had paid $3,000 for a title which was utterly worthless and void ab initio.

It was upon that decision of the Supreme Court and the circumstances and history of the case as I have stated it that the other House passed the bill for the relief of Louis Pelham, the bidder of the $3,000 and the payer of the $3,000 for this worthless title.

Mr. PALMER. I think I understand the Senator from Indiana. This note was condemned, seized, and sold, and the party to whom the money is to be paid by the bill was the purchaser of the judicial order.

Mr. TURPIE. Yes.

Mr. PALMER. And it is desired to refund the money from the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. TURPIE. Yes.

Mr. PALMER. The bill ought to pass.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARYLAND AND WASHINGTON RAILWAY.

Mr. MCMILLAN. A few days since I called up the joint resolution (S. R. 96) to extend the charter of the Maryland and Washington Railway Company. The joint resolution was read, but was not passed on account of an objection made by the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE]. He has no further objection to the joint resolution, and I ask that it be put on its passage.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BOUNTY LAND WARRANTS—REMOVAL OF BAR OF DISLOYALTY.

Mr. GEORGE. I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3130) to repeal in part and to limit section 3480 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

Mr. HOAR. I wish to know to what the bill relates.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be read at length.

The Secretary read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 3480 of the Revised Statutes of the United States be, and the same is hereby, so far and no farther, modified and repealed as to dispense with proof of loyalty during the late war of the rebellion as a prerequisite in an application for bounty land where the proof otherwise shows that the applicant is entitled thereto.

Mr. HOAR. The title of the bill is not in accordance with the rules of the Senate.

Mr. GEORGE. What does the Senator from Massachusetts say?

Mr. HOAR. I desire to object to it, and to all such bills.

If I may be permitted to make a statement which has been made a hundred times, I will say that it is of vast importance to the country that the country should know what legislation is proposed in Congress. The most vigilant Senator can not undertake to read every bill which is upon the Calendar, still less can the whole body of the Senate. The Senate has passed a rule requiring that the subject-matter of a bill shall be stated in the title, and that rule is not complied with by merely stating that a certain section of the Revised Statutes is to be amended. I feel constrained to object.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection to the present consideration of the bill.

Mr. GEORGE. I move to take up the bill. If the Senator from Massachusetts and the Senate will allow me, I will make a statement. I thought it was out of order to do so or I would have made the statement before. May I have unanimous consent to make a statement in regard to the bill?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. HALE. What is the Senator's request?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Mississippi asks permission to make a statement in regard to the bill moved by him.

Mr. GEORGE. May I proceed, Mr. President?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair hears no objection, and the Senator from Mississippi will proceed.

Mr. GEORGE. Section 3480 of the Revised Statutes reads as follows:

It shall be unlawful for any officer to pay any account, claim, or demand against the United States which accrued or existed prior to the 13th day of April, 1861, in favor of any person who promoted, encouraged, or in any manner sustained the late rebellion, or in favor of any person who during such rebellion was not known to be opposed thereto, and distinctly in favor of its suppression; and no pardon heretofore granted, or hereafter to be granted, shall authorize the payment of such account, claim, or demand, until this section is modified or repealed. But this section shall not be construed to prohibit the payment of claims founded upon contracts made by any of the Departments, where such claims were assigned or contracted to be assigned prior to the 1st day of April, 1861, to the creditors of such contractors, loyal citizens of loyal States, in payment of debts incurred prior to the 1st day of March, 1861.

By virtue of the statute which I have read the accounting officers of the Government have declined to issue in pursuance of law bounty land warrants to soldiers who had served in the United States Army prior to the rebellion, unless proof of loyalty could be made. The object of the bill is to remove that impediment to the issuance of land warrants.

Inasmuch as the very parties who have made claim under this statute for bounty land warrants have been relieved of their disabilities on account of participation in the rebellion so far as to give them pensions, I supposed that there would be no objection to extending the law to the very few persons—I know of but one, and I learn there are only a few others—who served in the Mexican war and are entitled to a bounty land warrant for 160 acres according to the time they served. I supposed that there would be no objection to removing that impediment and allowing them to receive bounty land warrants.

Mr. DOLPH. I want to ask the Senator a question or two; but before doing so I will say that I think, from some questions he asked me about it, the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT], who is not in the Chamber, takes some interest in the bill.

Do I understand a law was passed by Congress which required a soldier in the Mexican war applying for a bounty land warrant to make proof of loyalty during the rebellion?

Mr. GEORGE. I have read the statute to that effect.

Mr. DOLPH. And if he can not do that, he is not to receive the warrant? The Senator proposes to repeal that prohibition.

Mr. GEORGE. That only.

Mr. DOLPH. I have not had time to look it up since I had a few words on the subject with the Senator from Connecticut, and I should like to ascertain from the Senator from Mississippi if he knows how these bounty land warrants may be used, and for what purpose? I am not certain whether they can only be used in the payment of preëmption or commuted homestead claims and for other public lands of the United States, or whether they may be located upon land, and the land entered by them without residence? If the latter, they would be now worth a very large amount, from $75 to $100 an acre, and would be equivalent to scrip, which may be located anywhere for the purpose of taking up town sites or other valuable tracts. They cover, I believe, 160 acres of land. If they can only be used in the payment for lands subject to private entry or located under the homestead and preëmption laws, they would be worth now no more than they were worth originally, which was a dollar and a quarter an acre.

At the time the law was passed granting bounty land warrant they were worth no more in the market than $1.25 an acre. There were then ample public lands, and in every State lands subject to private entry, and that was the maximum price for public lands when they had been offered at public sale and became subject to private entry. But if they may be used for the purpose of locating and entering land without residence, they are very valuable. They would be fifty times as valuable as they were originally, when the law was passed authorizing them to be issued.

Mr. PUGH. Will the Senator say where there are any public lands subject to entry worth $75 an acre or any sum approaching that?

Mr. DOLPH. The different kinds of scrip which may be located upon public land and the land secured without residence, are worth to-day about $75 an acre, because they may be located for the purposes of a town site; they may be located where it is important to get title to the land without delay. That is the reason why the scrip is so valuable.

I never had any experience with bounty land warrants. As I have said, I have not had time to look the matter up since it was called to my attention. Therefore I have asked the Senator from Mississippi, if he has examined the subject, to state how these bounty land warrants may be used.

Mr. GEORGE. I am unable, never having given the slightest attention to the question submitted by the Senator from Oregon, to answer it. I have made my statement, and I hope the Senate will allow the bill to be tried upon its merits, and when it comes to its merits I have no doubt the Senator from Oregon, as well as nearly every other Senator in this body, will see the absolute propriety and the absolute justice, as suggested by a Senator near me, of passing the bill. I hope, without my going any further into the discussion of the bill, that the Senate will allow it to be considered, and then I shall proceed further.

Mr. CAREY. Will the Senator permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. GEORGE. If the Senator from Wyoming will allow the bill to come before the Senate for proper consideration, then I shall answer any question. We are talking now out of order. I ask the Senator from Wyoming to allow the bill to be placed before the Senate, and then every Senator can discuss it, and every one can vote against it who proposes to do so. That is all I ask.

Mr. CAREY. The question I wish to ask will probably help the bill.

Mr. GEORGE. Very well.

Mr. CAREY. I wanted to ask the Senator if he knew how much scrip representing how many acres of land will have to be issued if this bill passes and applications are made for the scrip?

Mr. GEORGE. I am unable to answer the Senator. I was not aware until about six weeks ago that there was a single case to which the existing law would apply. I had a letter from a Mississippian, stating that his application for a land warrant had been rejected. That is the only case of which I know. As the bill originated in the House of Representatives, I presume that there are some cases elsewhere. I do not think there are two dozen, but I can not say positively. I had supposed that every single bounty land warrant had been issued and located many years ago until I received the letter to which I have referred.

Mr. CAREY. If the Senator will permit me in his time, as he has unanimous consent to proceed, I should like to make a statement in reference to this scrip.

Mr. GEORGE. If the Senator will allow the bill to be taken up, then he can make his statement.

Mr. CAREY. I have no objection to its consideration.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Mississippi to proceed to the consideration of the bill.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. GEORGE. Now the Senator from Wyoming may proceed.

Mr. CAREY. Mr. President, bounty land warrant scrip has been used in the payment of land entered at private entry at $1.25 an acre. By the passage of a resolution, I think in 1888, we withdrew all the land of the United States from private entry, except that in the State of Missouri. To-day Missouri is the only place where bounty land warrants can be used for the payment of land. Congress on different occasions provided for what purpose this scrip might be used. So they extended the right of this scrip, and permitted it to be used in the payment of land taken up under the preëmption law and to the commutation of homesteads.

There is now pending in the House of Representatives a bill which passed this body, which authorizes the receipt of this scrip not only in the payment of the outstanding preëmption claims which are not yet sold, the preëmption law having been repealed, and the commutation of homesteads, but in the payment of lands sold in abandoned military reservations restored to the public domain, also for timber and stone lands on the basis of $1.25 an acre. The scrip to-day is only worth, as represented before the Public Lands Committee of the Senate, about 30 or 40 cents an acre, because of the limited area where it can be used. If that bill, which has already passed the Senate, becomes a law this scrip will be worth $200, or a dollar and a quarter an acre, because there will be apt to be a slight discount, for there will be no advantage in a person purchasing it, unless it can be bought at a discount below a dollar and a quarter an acre.

Mr. HOAR. I understand that the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT], who is temporarily absent from his seat, has taken an interest in this subject and desires to be heard upon it.

Mr. GEORGE. Does the Senator address his remarks to me?

Mr. HOAR. No; I am addressing the Chair. It is not supposed to be in order for me to address the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. GEORGE. I meant to inquire if the Senator desired me to answer him. I could not hear him.

Mr. HOAR. Yes, I did. I understand the Senator from Connecticut, who is now absent, has investigated this subject and has taken some interest in it, and I should not like to have the bill come to a final vote until that Senator comes in.

Mr. GEORGE. I dislike to refuse any reasonable request made by any Senator, but this bill is so manifestly just, not a single suggestion being made or capable of being made against it; and as it is now at the close of the session, I must decline the request and ask the Senate to pass the bill as it came from the House of Representatives.

Mr. HOAR. Then, Mr. President, I shall be obliged to ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. PLATT entered the Chamber.

Mr. HOAR. The Senator from Connecticut is now here.

Mr. PLATT. Let the bill be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be again read.

The Secretary read the bill.

Mr. PLATT. What is the parliamentary condition of the bill?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill was taken up on motion of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE], and is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole, and open to amendment.

Mr. PLATT. I should like to make some observations on the bill.

Mr. GEORGE. I should like to hear them.

Mr. PLATT. I do not think the bill ought to be considered now, unless the Senator who reports it is able to tell us what it means and how far-reaching it is.

I have heard the statement made that the bill affects only a very few persons. I have been endeavoring to obtain through the Pension Office some statement or indication as to the amount of money involved in the bill—for that is what is involved in it; not bounty land, but money.

If I understand correctly, there is only one place in the United States where bounty land warrants can be located, and that is somewhere in the State of Missouri, and that bounty land warrants can be used for location only on a small tract in the southeastern part of that State, or in paying for land which homesteaders or preëmptionists have to pay for when making final entry and proof.

I believe, Mr. President, that this bill involves the issuing not of a few or a few hundred bounty land warrants, but that it involves the issuing of many thousand bounty land warrants, very few of which can be located under our laws. I will appeal to some Senator who is more familiar with the land laws of the United States than I am as to whether there is any other place in the United States where bounty land warrants can be located except in Missouri. That is my understanding of it.

As for the others, which are to be issued under this proposed law, they are simply to be used to make payment by locators of lands elsewhere in the United States: in other words, it is not a gift of land, but a gift of money to these soldiers; and it is not a few of them still lingering on the stage, but it is thousands of them and of their heirs, whoever their heirs may be.

In a letter addressed to Assistant Secretary of the Interior Bussey by the Commissioner of Pensions, when this matter was once before under consideration by Congress, he attempted approximately to indicate the number of persons who would be entitled to have bounty land warrants issued to them if an act similar to this should be passed. To ascertain that fact he said it would be necessary to look at all the rejected applications for bounty lands pending in the Pension Office, and to find what portion of them had been rejected, which would be taken up if this bill should pass, a matter which the office had not the time to examine; but he said it would be, in his judgment, several thousand. Every rejected bounty land application is still pending in the office, and the heirs of any Mexican soldier, who for any reason has had his bounty land application rejected, would be entitled to bring it forward and prosecute it.

I have said this much about it, which, I agree, is but a very partial and superficial statement with regard to the matter. As I said before, I have endeavored to get more direct information through the Pension Office and through officials in the Pension Office, and persons whom I supposed to be as well qualified to give facts and data as anybody can be. I have been unable as yet to get that information. I am quite sure that I make no mistake in saying that instead of there being, as is represented, perhaps 100 old soldiers of the Mexican war who are to be benefited by this provision, it will inure to the benefit of thousands, and I have the authority of the Commissioner of Pensions in a former Administration for that statement, which I could get if I had time.

Mr. President, I do not think we should enter upon legislation of this kind at a time like this, when nobody is giving attention to matters of ordinary legislation, when the minds of Senators are concentrated upon one issue, and where legislation of this sort is so apt to be taken up and passed upon without the Senate knowing anything about what is involved in the measure. I confess my surprise that on such a matter as the pending bill, on a matter like the bankruptcy bill, which was desired to be taken up yesterday, there should be an apparent haste and determination to rush the bills through now in what we hope at least may be the closing hours of the session, under circumstances where every Senator knows that no proper consideration can be given to any matter or bill which ought to be discussed and thoroughly investigated.

I wish that the bill might lie over until the next session. I think we ought to understand just what we are doing.

With regard to the merits of the case, I think we have treated the soldiers of the Mexican war pretty well. We have removed any disability to their getting pensions, and every soldier in the Mexican war who was sixty days in service from the time of his muster in, although he never saw a battle and scarcely reached the scene of action, and although he subsequently went into the Confederate army and fought against the United States, has been granted a service pension or the opportunity to get such a pension. I regard it somewhat in the light of magnanimity, and I think it ought to be so received and considered by the soldiers and pensioners of the Mexican war.

A Union soldier in the last war gets no bounty land; he gets no service pension, and I do not see any reason why we should now make what seems to me is somewhat of an invidious distinction by the passage of the pending bill. I think a soldier of the Mexican war gets a service pension of $8 per month, not depending at all, as I said, upon whether he saw a battle; and I believe there is a proposition before Congress to increase it to $12.

There seems to be an idea that we are doing too much for the soldiers, that we have overloaded and overdone the pension business. If that be so, let us make it applicable to the soldier of the Mexican war as well as to the volunteer soldier of the late war. If we have overdone it, do not let us overdo it further by now giving to the soldiers of the Mexican war, who already receive pensions, the opportunity to sell a bounty warrant and to get $200 more in cash, for that is what it amounts to. The warrants are not to be located on land. They are to be sold to people who can use them for the purpose of paying for land upon which they have located. I shall move that the further consideration of the bill be postponed until the first Monday in December next.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I wish the Senate to understand the case exactly as it exists. In the first place there is not in the bill any grant of bounty land. The bill merely removes an impediment, growing out of the applicant's relations to the late war, to his getting what the law already grants him. I desire that the Senate shall understand, too, that every man who served in the Mexican war and who was not engaged on the Confederate side in the late civil war, can go and get his bounty land to-day. If, as suggested by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT], there be a large number of persons who are or would be entitled to bounty land under the act of Congress, I venture to say that they are not of the kind who would be benefited by the passage of the pending bill.

I wish to call the attention of the Senate to the exact situation. The section of the statute proposed to be modified refers only to debts due by the United States, and it is applied to the bounty land claims upon the ground, and let the Senate understand that point, that they constitute a debt due by the United States to the applicants. I will read the statute to show that that is correct:

> It shall be unlawful for any officer to pay any account, claim, or demand against the United States which accrued, etc.

It is simply because the United States owe the claim, the demand, or the debt and there is an obstacle in the way of paying it, and that obstacle is merely that the claimant, the creditor, served in the Confederate army. I desire the Senate to understand that if they refuse to pass the pending bill they put themselves on record in favor of the proposition that although the claim or debt is a just one, and valid under the laws of the United States, yet the United States refuse to pay the debt, refuse to recognize the claim, simply upon the ground that the claimant, or creditor, was on the Confederate side in the late war; and that is all there is in it. It is not within the power of human ingenuity to make anything more or less out of it. These men (I do not know how many there are; I know of but one) under the laws of the United States have a right to demand from the United States bounty for their services in the Mexican war. That part of the claim is not interfered with by the bill.

Mr. HILL. Will the Senator from Mississippi allow me for a moment? I understand that the measure which the Senator desires to have enacted into law proposes to remove a legislative punishment on a few old veterans of the Mexican war.

Mr. GEORGE. I am obliged to the Senator from New York for asking that question, because he states the situation exactly right.

Mr. HILL. In order to enable those people to have what is due them from the Government every other disability except this has been removed, has it not?

Mr. GEORGE. Every disability except this one has been removed.

Mr. HILL. And the pending bill is intended to remove the last vestige of that punishment?

Mr. GEORGE. The last one. I am very much obliged to the Senator from New York for putting those questions to me in that very pungent way, so that every one may understand the case as it is.

Now, I wish to submit to the Senate the question whether they are prepared at this day to repudiate a debt due by the United States to one of their citizens, because and because only that citizen happened to be on the Confederate side during the late war? That is all there is in it.

It is said that there are a great many claims; that there are thousands of these persons. What is the difference? Are the United States in the condition of paupers? Are we ready to take the bankrupt law because there are more claims than we are willing to recognize or pay? Are we to say that because there are numerous persons who will get, not a bounty from the Government, not a new grant, but the privilege of securing what is already due them, we will not allow them to set up their claim on account of their service in the Mexican war simply because they were in the civil war on the Confederate side?

Now, one other word and I shall be through. There is a consideration which ought to have some weight. The valor of these men secured to the United States millions of acres of land in New Mexico, millions of acres of land in Arizona, millions of acres of land in California, millions of acres of land in Utah and Nevada, and about one-half of the State of Colorado. Their valor gained to the country this immense body of land, and the United States, recognizing the value of their services, said, "You shall have a part of the land." Now, the question is whether, they standing in that attitude, we are willing to say because they were on the Confederate side in the late civil war we will not pay the claim, when we are paying claims of that sort every day?

Mr. PLATT. If the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY] is here I wish he would state—perhaps he stated before I came in—where, at the present time, bounty land warrants can be located under the laws of the United States.

Mr. CAREY. I before stated that land warrants can be used only to locate land in the State of Missouri, land in all the other States having been withdrawn from private entry and sale.

Mr. PLATT. What amount of land is there now subject to such location?

Mr. CAREY. Probably the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] can state. Bounty land warrants can be used in cases of commuted homesteads, in the payment of preëmption claims, where there are any preëmption claims left, the preëmption law having been repealed. Under a bill which has passed this body at the present session Congress proposes to further extend the use of these land warrants so that they may be applied in payment for desert lands and land sold in abandoned military reservations, on the basis always of $1.25 an acre for those lands.

Now, the scrip, because of the withdrawal of the land from sale by the resolution passed in 1888, has become of very little value. I understand it sells on the basis of 30 or 40 cents an acre, but it is a just claim against the Government of the United States. The proposition in the bill passed by the Senate and pending in the House of Representatives is to give the scrip the value of $1.25 an acre in payment for commuted homesteads, desert lands, and timber and stone lands, still retaining the right of the holder to locate land in the State of Missouri.

Mr. PLATT. I have sent for the RECORD, and I will read from a letter addressed by the Commissioner of Pensions to Hon. Cyrus Bussey, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, dated March 26, 1892. From it I read this extract:

> There are more than 193,000 rejected claims for bounty land in the Bureau. The only means of ascertaining the ground of rejection of any one of them is an examination of the papers or, in many cases, the perusal of a letter recorded in a book which is referred to by an indorsement on the jacket of the claim. The vast majority of these claims were not formally rejected, and were not briefed. The number rejected on the ground of disloyalty or inability to prove loyalty is doubtless comparatively small. The number rejected on other grounds in which evidence of loyalty would be required if reopened is probably larger. As any one of the very large number of rejected claims in the files might belong to one or the other of these two classes, the ascertainment of the number belonging to them would be impracticable.
>
> If the right to complete these claims was confined to the soldier or such of his heirs as can make claim in their own right, the number would be limited; but as the legal representatives of a deceased claimant whose claim was filed prior to his death, may file the proofs necessary to perfect such claim, the failure to complete any claim susceptible of proof can not be predicted.

While it appears to be impossible to make any reliable estimate of the number of bounty land claims whose allowance is conditioned on the passage of this bill, it is not believed that the number is likely to exceed a very few thousands.

It is regretted that the difficulty experienced in securing satisfactory data has caused the delay in making this report.

Very respectfully,

GREEN B. RAUM,
Commissioner.

Mr. President, the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE] tries to raise the issue that there is a debt due to somebody, and that if we refuse to pass the bill we put ourselves in the attitude of saying that we will not pay it because the person happened to serve in the Confederate army. I made no such issue. What I said about it was that there is neither the proper opportunity to consider the bill now as it ought to be considered, nor is there the data at hand upon which the Senate ought to act in such matters. It will be seen from the extract which I have read from the letter of Commissioner Raum, that not only the living soldier who has had his claim rejected, in which it was necessary that he should prove his loyalty, would have a right to prosecute his claim if the bill passes, but his heirs at law and legal representatives would have a right to prosecute such a claim.

This brings me to a matter which I omitted to state when I was on my feet before. The experience of the Pension Office shows that these claims for Mexican bounty lands were in great numbers presented by people to whom they had been assigned. The truth is that almost whole regiments of soldiers of the Mexican war assigned their claims for bounty lands when they were paid off; that they assigned them at the pay table. This is not a bill solely for the benefit of surviving soldiers of the Mexican war, to whom, as the Senator from Mississippi says, we owe a debt, which we do not want to pay because they served in the Confederate army, but it is for the benefit of their heirs, and not exclusively their legal descendants but any collateral descendants, and any assignees of the original claims of the soldiers of the Mexican war are to receive the benefits of this proposed act.

There is a good deal more involved in this measure which I am unable to state with positiveness, because I have not been able as yet to collect the necessary data upon which I may ground my statements and my remarks; but there has not been a bill passed in the Senate with reference to pensions that is so much for the benefit of the claim agent and the assignee as the one pending.

Now, Mr. President, suppose we did owe a debt?

Mr. HUNTON. Will the Senator from Connecticut allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. PLATT. Yes.

Mr. HUNTON. I understand one of the main objections the Senator makes to the passage of the bill is because the bounty land will not go to the original soldier, but to his heirs, his widow, or his assignee. I want to know if that is not true to-day of soldiers of the Mexican war who did not serve in the Confederate army; and if he excludes the heirs, the widows, representatives, and assignees of the Confederate soldiers while those very same representatives of the Union soldiers come in and get the bounty, I ask him if that is not an exclusion directed to these people because of their service in the Confederate army?

Mr. PLATT. What does the Senator from Virginia mean by Union soldiers coming in and getting bounty?

Mr. HUNTON. I refer to anyone who was not in the Confederate army, whether he was a Union soldier or not. If the representatives of Confederate soldiers are excluded because they are the representatives of Confederate soldiers, and the representative of every other person who was not a Confederate soldier is allowed to come in, then is not the exclusion now directed to people who in all human probability had nothing to do with the late war, but are excluded because the dead soldiers whom they represent were on the Confederate side?

I desire to ask the Senator another question, that he may answer both at once. One of his main objections to the bill is on account of the number of persons who would come in as claimants if this bar should be removed. I ask the Senator from Connecticut why these people are still entitled to bounty land and would receive it but for the bar of the statute? Is it not because they have not been allowed to apply for it? If the number be great or small, that number exists to-day not from any fault of theirs, not from any laggardness in making claim for the bounty given to the soldier for his valiant services on the battlefields of Mexico, but because the Federal Government has said to these people, "You must not apply now, because the soldier was afterwards in the Confederate army." If there be a number of claimants now it is because, owing to this very bar, they could not get the bounty at the time the others got it.

Another Senator has objected to the bill because in the meantime the price of the land has risen. Whose fault is that? They would have had these claims through and the bounty lands located long ago but for the bar of the statute, and if the land in the meantime has risen in value, about which I know nothing, it is not because these people are speculating upon the public lands of the country, but because they were not allowed to make the claims on account of the bar of the statute. I desire the Senator to answer the questions that I have propounded.

Mr. PLATT. The questions have so spun out into the nature of an argument that I do not know whether I can remember them.

The first question which I understand the Senator from Virginia to propound is, admitting that the majority of these claims are for legal and collateral heirs and assignees and the heirs of assignees, would not those parties, who never fought, and some of whom bought the right of the soldiers, be entitled to it except for the fact that the soldier went into the Confederate army? Very probably that is true. I do not propose to evade that issue. But I say that I will be ready, and I am ready now, to pass a bill enacting a statute of limitations against legal and collateral heirs of soldiers and assignees of soldiers' rights and the heirs of the assignees of soldiers' rights to prevent them from making application for bounty warrants now, after a period of from forty-seven to fifty years.

Mr. GRAY. May I ask the Senator from Connecticut a question right there?

Mr. PLATT. I have answered but one question of the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. GRAY. It has an important bearing upon the point the Senator is discussing.

Mr. PLATT. If it will recall to my mind the other question the Senator from Virginia asked I will yield.

Mr. GRAY. It will do so in one regard. I recollect to have read a case in the Supreme Court recently which arose out of the attempted assignment of one of these bounty land warrants, and the assignment was declared void because the statute providing for the issue of such warrants forbade any assignment. I ask the Senator from Connecticut whether that law is not in existence, and if it does not entirely dispose of that part of the objection which refers to the claims on behalf of assignees?

Mr. PLATT. That just shows upon what inaccurate information, or want of information, we are proposing to act in a matter of this sort. I insist——

Mr. HUNTON. Right there——

Mr. PLATT. Wait a moment. Let me answer the question. I insist that the parties who are asking for this legislation ought to tell us what is involved in it from beginning to end. I will not speak very positively in reference to this point, but my understanding is that the law providing for the Mexican war land warrants has some clause in it by which they can be issued to assignees. If there has been any decision of the Supreme Court (of course I have not had an opportunity to look at it, and I may be mistaken) of the character suggested by the Senator from Delaware, I imagine that it applies to the bounty warrants issued under some other law, and not under the law issuing bounty warrants to soldiers of the Mexican war.

I confess I do not know much about it; but I insist that when a bill of this sort is brought here the parties bringing it and responsible for it should be able to tell us what is involved in it.

Mr. HUNTON. I desire to ask a single question of the Senator from Connecticut in the line of the Senator's answer to me.

Mr. PLATT. There is one unanswered question yet.

Mr. HUNTON. I now understand the Senator to say that he for one would be willing to pass an act of limitation to bar these claimants for bounty lands because of the lapse of time since the Mexican war or the lapse of time from the passage of the original law. Now, the Senator from Connecticut is a fair and candid man; I hope so and believe so.

I ask him if he is willing to assume the position that is clearly deducible from his line of remarks, that this great Government shall say to these claimants, "You shall not make this claim now, because the time has elapsed in which you ought to have made the claim, and not having made it, I will bar you for the future," when at the very time the Federal Government has said to these same men, "You shall not make the claim"? While the Federal Government has been excluding these men from making the claim, does the Senator say that that very exclusion of the Federal Government ought to be used by the Federal Government to bar them forever from making the claim? I take it for granted that the Senator from Connecticut is not willing to put himself in that position.

Mr. HOAR (at 1 o'clock and 10 minutes p. m.). Mr. President, I wish to know whether there is a special order for this morning?

Mr. BLANCHARD. There was a special order for 1 o'clock, but having charge of the special order, at the request of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE], who brought up the pending bill, I agreed that it should run along, giving a little time for the pending bill to be gotten out of the way.

Mr. HOAR. I object to that proceeding, and I rise to a question of order. That can only be done by an order of the Senate.

Mr. BLANCHARD. The Senator from Massachusetts has a right to object, and I take it one objection will lay aside the pending bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. HOAR. I object.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection.

Mr. BLANCHARD. I call for the regular order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate the regular order, which is the bill (S. 1945) for the relief of Holmes & Leathers.

Mr. PLATT. Let me make a single suggestion. In the course of a day or two I will have more accurate information. I have endeavored to state nothing this morning except what I thought was accurate, but in the course of a day or two I shall have a great deal of information on the subject which we have been discussing.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. GRAY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After twenty-two minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 1 o'clock and 37 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Friday, August 10, 1894, at 12 o'clock m.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate August 9, 1894.

CIRCUIT JUDGE.

Amos M. Thayer, of Missouri, to be United States circuit judge for the eighth judicial circuit.

DISTRICT JUDGE.

Henry S. Priest, of Missouri, to be United States district judge for the eastern district of Missouri.

POSTMASTER.

Luther M. Embry, to be postmaster at Shelbyville, in the county of Shelby and State of Illinois.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, August 9, 1894.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Rev. G. N. LUCCOCK, of Washington.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

CORRECTION.

Mr. BRYAN. Mr. Speaker, on yesterday afternoon I presented a petition signed by about ten thousand citizens of the United States, residing in thirty-eight States, some of them in the State of Nebraska, which I have the honor in part to represent, asking for an investigation of the conduct of Attorney-General Olney, and I find that it does not appear in the RECORD this morning. I simply make the statement now that it may be known that it was presented yesterday. I have just learned that it got in so late as not to appear in the RECORD of to-day, but will appear to-morrow. I will say also that I appended to the petition a statement that it was introduced by request, and that I, not having any knowledge of the facts upon which the petition was based, expressed no opinion as to its merits, but presented it, because I believe in the sacredness of the right of petition.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands that the petition came in late and was omitted from the RECORD of to-day, but that it will appear to-morrow.

COLLECTION OF TAXES AGAINST CORPORATIONS, ETC.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a bill (H. R. 6284) to prevent interference in the collection of State, county, and municipal taxes assessed against corporations and corporate property, and for other purposes, with an amendment of the Senate thereto.

Mr. CULBERSON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House nonconcur in the amendment, and ask for a conference.

Mr. DINGLEY. Let the amendment be read.

The Senate amendment was read, as follows:

Whenever there shall be due any State, county, or municipal tax, which tax shall constitute a lien or claim upon property in the hands of a receiver appointed by a court of the United States, or any part thereof, it shall be the duty of the court to take order that such tax shall be paid promptly from said property, and no consumption or disposition of such property shall be permitted by said court until said tax shall be paid, except for the purpose of raising money to pay the same, without the consent of the officer whose duty it shall be to collect such tax, or except for the purpose of paying taxes due the United States.

Mr. DINGLEY. This seems to be an entirely new bill.

Mr. BURROWS (to Mr. CULBERSON). Why do you ask to nonconcur?

Mr. REED. I would like to hear what the original bill was.

The original bill (H. R. 6284) was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That taxes heretofore or hereafter assessed by State, county, or municipal authority against any corporation or corporate property shall not be classed as debts to be passed upon in the first instance by any court of the United States, but shall be collectible by the proper authorities of such State, county, or municipality according to the assessment, whether such corporation be in the hands of a receiver or not; and no judge or court of the United States shall have any other or greater authority or power to enjoin, restrain, or in any way interfere with the collection of such taxes against any corporation or corporate property in the hands or under the management of a receiver than if no such receivership existed; and the seizure as well as the sale of any property for the collection of any such taxes shall divest the receiver and the court of all control over the same: Provided, That any and all property taken out of the hands of the receiver and from under the control of the court and not sold for such taxes shall be returned to the receiver, and shall again be under the control of the court: And provided further, That a corporation or receiver of a corporation shall have the same right that a citizen of such State, county, or municipality may have, under the laws of such State, to apply for the abatement of any tax, or to sue or defend on account of any alleged overassessment or improper or illegal assessment in any court having jurisdiction.

SEC. 2. That all acts and parts of acts, in so far as the same are repugnant to or inconsistent with the provisions of this act, are hereby repealed.

Mr. REED. Did we pass such an act as that?

Mr. CULBERSON. Certainly we did, and it is good law; it has been so decided by the courts since the bill was passed.

Mr. REED. Then what are you passing the bill for?

Mr. CULBERSON. We want to make all the courts conform to it.

Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana. You want to make the courts of the United States inferior to the State courts. That is what you want to do.

Mr. CULBERSON. I move that the House nonconcur, and on that I demand the previous question.

Mr. REED. I think this ought to be referred to the Judiciary Committee. The amendment is a totally different bill.

The previous question was ordered.

The motion of Mr. CULBERSON was then agreed to. The Speaker appointed as conferees on the part of the House Mr. DE ARMOND, Mr. WOLVERTON, and Mr. POWERS.

SURVEYS OF PUBLIC LANDS.

The SPEAKER proceeded to lay before the House Senate bills for reference. The bill (S. 2234) to further amend section 2399 of the Revised Statutes of the United States was laid before the House.

Mr. McRAE. At the request of the Acting Commissioner of the General Land Office I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of this bill.

The bill was read, as follows.

Be it enacted, etc., That section 2399 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended by act of Congress of October 1, 1890, Statutes at Large, volume 26, page 650, be further amended so as to read as follows, namely:

"SEC. 2399. The printed manual of surveying instructions for the survey of the public lands of the United States and private land claims, prepared at the General Land Office, and bearing date June 30, 1894, the instructions of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and the special instructions of the surveyor-general, when not in conflict with said printed manual or the instructions of said Commissioner, shall be taken and deemed to be a part of every contract for surveying the public lands of the United States and private land claims."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. COOMBS. Let us have some explanation.

Mr. McRAE. The bill, it seems to me, explains itself. The only point in it is that it makes the manual of surveying instructions a part of all contracts for public surveys, and this is desirable and entirely proper.

Mr. COOMBS. Has this bill been referred to the Committee on Public Lands of the House?

Mr. McRAE. It has not. This is a Senate bill which I have asked to take from the Speaker's table and pass it, upon the request of the Acting Commissioner of the General Land Office.

Mr. COOMBS. It seems to me it would be best that it should be considered by the committee of this House.

Mr. McRAE. Then it may not be reported back this session, as there is difficulty in getting a quorum of the committee now. It is important to pass it at once, so that it may apply to the new contracts for surveying.

Mr. COOMBS. Has the gentleman a request from the Secretary of the Interior that the bill be passed?

Mr. McRAE. I have a telegram from the Acting Commissioner of the Land Office, Mr. Bowers, received a few moments ago, requesting me to ask the immediate consideration of the bill, and I have done so. I know that it is important, or he would not ask such action.

Mr. COOMBS. And the Secretary of the Interior, you think, approves the measure?

Mr. McRAE. I imagine that he does. I am certain that the Acting Commissioner of the General Land Office would not ask legislation that the Secretary does not want.

Mr. COOMBS. It seems to me that this is a rather important question to be disposed of by the House without reference to a committee.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill, which was read three times, and passed.

On motion of Mr. McRAE, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED.

Senate bills of the following titles were laid before the House, read twice, and referred as respectively stated:

A bill (S. 528) for the relief of A. W. Wells, administrator—to the Committee on War Claims.

A bill (S. 1018) granting a pension to Susan E. Cunningham—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (S. 1876) to provide for the payment of accrued pensions in certain cases—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (S. 2281) to authorize the Postmaster-General to credit account of James A. Sexton with amount of funds stolen—to the Committee on Claims.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. BRICKNER, by unanimous consent, obtained leave of absence indefinitely, on account of sickness.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

Unanimous consent (by request of Mr. TATE) was given to Mr. CAMPBELL to print remarks in the RECORD on the New York public building bill.

AMERICAN REGISTER FOR STEAMER S. OTERI.

Mr. MEYER. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 1852) to provide an American register for the steamer S. Oteri.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Commissioner of Navigation is hereby authorized and directed to cause the foreign-built steamer S. Oteri, owned by Salvador Oteri, a citizen of the United States, residing at New Orleans, La., and repaired in United States ports, to be registered as a vessel of the United States.

SEC. 2. That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to cause the inspection of said vessel, steam boilers, steam pipes, and their appurtenances, and cause to be granted the usual certificate issued to steam vessels of the merchant marine, without reference to the fact that said steam boilers, steam pipes, and appurtenances were not constructed pursuant to the laws of the United States and were not constructed of iron stamped pursuant to said laws; and the tests in the inspection of said boilers, steam pipes, and appurtenances shall be the same in all respects as to strength and safety as are required in the inspection of boilers constructed in the United States for marine purposes.

Mr. PAYNE. I hope the report in this case will be read.

Mr. DINGLEY. Let the report be read, reserving the right to object.

The report (by Mr. BERRY) was read as follows:

The Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1852) to provide an American register for the steamer S. Oteri, submit the following report:

Your committee, having carefully considered said bill, adopt the Senate Report No. 459, hereto annexed, and recommend the passage of the bill.

[Senate Report No. 459, Fifty-third Congress, second session.]

The Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1852) to provide an American register for the steamer S. Oteri, having duly considered the same, report as follows:

The steamer S. Oteri was built in England in 1881, and has a tonnage of 542 tons net register. She has been engaged in the fruit trade between New Orleans and Honduras. She was wrecked in March, 1885, in the Gulf of Mexico, outside of American waters, when a shaft was broken and other injuries sustained, rendering her unseaworthy. She was towed into New Orleans and repaired at an expense of $9,373.55.

The steamship was again wrecked in August, 1887, in the Caribbean Sea, off the coast of Yucatan. Her machinery broke down, her cabins were swept overboard, together with nearly all her rigging, besides very serious damage being done to her hull and engines. She was again towed to New Orleans and docked in the shipyard of O. P. Valette, where she was thoroughly repaired at an aggregate cost of $22,021.75. Since this last wreck general repairs have been made aggregating $23,900.16.

A recent appraisement of the vessel, according to a valuation, under oath, by the president of the board of harbormasters and other officials at the port of New Orleans, is $25,000.

The statute requires that the repairs to a wrecked vessel must equal three-fourths of the value of the vessel after having been so repaired, and that this sum must have been expended in American ports to American labor.

The evidence shows an expenditure for repairs in American ports considerably in excess of the required three-fourths of her value, but having been wrecked outside of American waters, a special act of Congress is required to give the vessel an American register. As she is owned by an American citizen and has been substantially rebuilt in the United States, it is believed by your committee that she is justly entitled to this privilege.

A bill granting an American register to this vessel was favorably reported from the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries in the Fifty-first Congress, but was not acted on for want of time.

Your committee recommend the passage of the bill.

Mr. MEYER. Mr. Speaker, the report that has just been read states explicitly the facts in connection with this bill. I have in my hand, sir, for examination all necessary evidence to sustain these statements.

First. The affidavit of the owner giving history of the vessel and of the disasters and repairs.

Second. Affidavits of the owner of the dry dock at New Orleans where she was repaired.

Third. The appraisement of the vessel after being repaired.

A favorable report was made by the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries on this steamer February 12, 1891. This report was not acted on for want of time during that Congress. Mr. Oteri is an old, well-known, and highly respected citizen of New Orleans. He has four steamships in his line, all flying the American flag, and he desires greatly to have this one also under the banner of his country.

The Oteri has been practically rebuilt in the United States. She is now a good, substantial, and seaworthy vessel, made so by American labor in American shipyards. Many bills of this nature have passed. His case is in all respects similar to that of the Foxhall, which was granted a register by special act of the Fifty-second Congress, and also in all respects to that of the steamship El Callao, owned by B. F. Clyde, of Philadelphia, which has been registered by special act of the present Congress, and that of the steamship Goldsworthy, which was favorably acted upon by this House but a few days since.

At the time Mr. Oteri built this vessel, in 1881, he could not have one constructed in the United States within the time required, and was compelled to have it done in England.

Had she been built in this country of course an American register would have been granted him.

Now, that it is shown that he had substantially rebuilt her here, I trust that no objection will be made to the provisions of the bill, although a "child of misfortune," as the distinguished gentleman from Maine [Mr. REED] termed her, she is now staunch and strong, and under our American standard will redeem herself and prove a valuable addition to our commerce with our southern neighbors.

Mr. PAYNE. Could not this vessel get a new register under the amendatory act which we passed the other day?

Mr. MEYER. She could if that bill were a law; but it is not a law.

Mr. PAYNE. It has passed the House.

Mr. MEYER. But it may linger in the Senate; and inasmuch as the present bill has been passed by the Senate and approved by our committee, I can not see why this special act should not be passed.

Mr. DINGLEY. As I understand, the only reason this vessel can not be registered by the Secretary of the Treasury under existing law is that she was wrecked outside of American waters?

Mr. MEYER. That is the only reason.

Mr. DINGLEY. The vessel is appraised at $25,000, and the cost of repairs is $23,000.

Mr. MEYER. Yes, sir; such are the facts.

Mr. DINGLEY. Are those statements sustained by affidavits?

Mr. MEYER. As I have stated they are sustained by affidavits in my possession; and the evidence has passed the scrutiny of the committees of both the Senate and the House.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill; which was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. MEYER, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

JOSIAH B. ORBISON.

Mr. PHILLIPS. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 1279) for the relief of Josiah B. Orbison.

The bill was read.

Mr. COOMBS. I believe this bill was up before. I should like to hear the report.

Mr. PHILLIPS. I ask that the report be read.

The report (by Mr. MAHON) was read.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. KILGORE. I should like to know of what nationality this claimant was.

Mr. PHILLIPS. He was colored.

Mr. KILGORE. A colored man?

Mr. PHILLIPS. Yes; but not a citizen of the United States.

Mr. KILGORE. Why was he not at that time?

Mr. PHILLIPS. He could not be.

Mr. KILGORE. Where was he born?

Mr. PHILLIPS. I do not know; probably somewhere in the South.

Mr. KILGORE. Did not he owe something to the country in which he was born?

Mr. PHILLIPS. Well, however that may be, it was illegal to draft him.

Mr. KILGORE. Oh, I can not agree to that, Mr. Speaker. I object.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

CLERK TO COMMITTEE ON IRRIGATION, ETC.

Mr. COOPER of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the clerk to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands be continued upon the rolls of the House until the end of the present session; and that he be paid at the rate of $2,000 per annum from and including July 31, 1894, until the end of the session, the same to be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. WILSON of Washington. I would like to offer an amendment if I can, providing that the clerks of the members be continued.

The SPEAKER. The first question is whether there is objection to the request?

Mr. KILGORE. I do not understand this proposition.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I would like an explanation of it by the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. COOPER of Indiana. I will make an explanation.

This resolution provides that the clerk to this committee shall be continued until the end of the session. He was an annual clerk under existing law, or under the previous appropriation bill. The present legislative appropriation bill discontinued him as an annual clerk, and provided for putting him on the session roll. It was evidently the intention of the law, however, to put him on the session rolls, commencing at the time he was discontinued as an annual clerk; but the Comptroller thinks that as he is discontinued as an annual clerk, and being placed on the session rolls, the new arrangement will only apply to the next session. He is therefore working now without any compensation.

Mr. KILGORE. When did the change occur?

Mr. COOPER of Indiana. On the 31st of July of this year.

Mr. KILGORE. I would be willing to see any injustice done to this man corrected by a bill for that special purpose; but I do not see why we should discriminate in this particular case against all others who may be similarly situated.

Mr. COOPER of Indiana. This is the only case of the kind that will be found upon the roll.

Mr. KILGORE. I would be willing to see it corrected, but I do not propose to go further and put him on as an annual clerk.

Mr. COOPER of Indiana. This only provides that he shall be paid until the end of the present session of Congress. It does not put him on any permanent roll.

Mr. KILGORE. I understood it provided "at the rate of $2,000 per annum."

Mr. COOPER of Indiana. He has been an annual clerk, and this only provides that he shall be paid until the end of the session. We agree that he shall be transferred to the list of session clerks.

Mr. KILGORE. That is all there is of it?

Mr. COOPER of Indiana. That is all the resolution does.

Mr. COX. What compensation does this give him?

Mr. COOPER of Indiana. Only the compensation which he was entitled to. It was the evident intention of the legislative bill to put these clerks on the session roll during the next session.

Mr. COX. The compensation is just the same, then, that he has been receiving?

Mr. COOPER of Indiana. That is all.

Mr. DOCKERY. That was undoubtedly the intention—to continue the clerk until the end of this session.

There being no objection, the resolution was considered and agreed to.

MARIA DAVIS.

Mr. MAHON. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 6186) for the relief of Maria Davis.

The bill was read at length.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. KILGORE. Let us have some explanation.

Mr. JONES. I will ask for the reading of the report.

Mr. BARTLETT. I object.

JOHN W. KENNEDY.

Mr. PENDLETON of West Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 4162) for the relief of John W. Kennedy.

The bill was read at length.

Mr. COOMBS. Let the report in that case be read.

The report was read at length.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. FITHIAN. I desire to ask the gentleman a question. By what authority was this attorney employed?

Mr. PENDLETON of West Virginia. By the district attorney, with the assent of the Attorney-General of the United States. The district attorney lived 350 miles from where the case was to be tried and where the testimony and local management was to be had.

Mr. FITHIAN. There is nothing in the record which indicates that the Attorney-General directed the district attorney to employ outside counsel.

Mr. PENDLETON of West Virginia. But there are letters on file with the evidence in the case——

Mr. FITHIAN. They are not contained in the report.

Mr. PENDLETON of West Virginia. I know; but the report shows that this was done with the assent of the Attorney-General. That is all contained in the report.

Mr. FITHIAN. The law requires that this service shall be performed by the district attorney in such cases; and it is proper that he should take charge of the case of litigation in which the United States is concerned. I do not think the Government ought to be subject to the payment of extra counsel fees in a case of this character.

Mr. PENDLETON of West Virginia. Do not object to it now.

Mr. FITHIAN. I do object.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

Mr. DOCKERY. Regular order.

PERSONAL PRIVILEGE.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I rise to a personal statement, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The Chair did not hear the statement of the gentleman.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I rise to a question of personal privilege.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman states that he rises to a question of personal privilege.

Mr. BOUTELLE. On the 30th day of July, Mr. Speaker, I introduced publicly in the House and asked the immediate consideration of a series of resolutions embodying a cordial recognition of the Republic of Hawaii. They were decided by the Speaker not to be privileged resolutions, and were referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs. At a meeting of that committee, held subsequently, it was reported in the public press that those resolutions were considered.

Mr. McCREARY of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. McCREARY of Kentucky. I fail to find a question of personal privilege in the gentleman's statement.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I am endeavoring to enable the Speaker to find a question of privilege in my statement, which is very much more important than that the gentleman from Kentucky should ascertain it. In order to convince him I might be compelled to take more of the time of the House than I would care to occupy. [Laughter.]

In the public reports of the proceedings alleged to have taken place before that committee, which were unusually detailed, although, of course, I am unable to state with what accuracy they were given, the gentleman from California, my esteemed friend Mr. GEARY, was reported to have said—and I read from the Washington Star—that—

Mr. GEARY furnished the most interesting passages of the discussion to-day, as he did at the first meeting. He informed his Democratic colleagues frankly that Mr. BOUTELLE had introduced the resolution hoping and expecting that the Democrats would reject it. For one he did not propose to help to fulfill Mr. BOUTELLE's desire and furnish the Republicans with campaign material.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I have no idea that the gentleman from California used that language. I do not believe that he imputed to me any lack of faith in my action as a Representative upon this floor. That report has gone to the public, nevertheless; and I desire here and now absolutely to repudiate and denounce any imputation, from any source, or in any language or degree, that I introduced those resolutions with any other motive than that of absolute good faith; that from the beginning until now I have had any desire or have used any influence to accomplish any other purpose than a prompt and cordial passage of those resolutions by the House of Representatives as expressive of the practically universal sentiment of the American people on this subject.

And in confirmation of that statement, Mr. Speaker, I desire to say that I have conversed and pleaded with numerous Democratic members of the Committee on Foreign Affairs not to delay or obstruct the passage of these resolutions; that instead of seeking to obtain any Republican advantage through the failure of Democrats to rise to their plain duty in this case, I have urged upon those gentlemen repeatedly the importance, from a national and patriotic point of view, of a prompt and favorable consideration and report of those resolutions.

Among those members I may cite the chairman of the committee himself; and the gentleman must certainly confirm my statement, that I have not only once, but repeatedly, urged upon him my belief that this question had reached a point when partisanship should be laid aside, that the mistakes of the past should be ignored, and that the dignity and traditions of the House of Representatives, and the honor of our country among the nations of the world should be vindicated by extending a cordial welcome to the new Republic.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I take up a leading Democratic paper, the New York World, this morning, and the information that it conspicuously proclaims seems to demonstrate that instead of my acting in a partisan manner, instead of my attempting to use this great subject for the purpose of making political capital, this paper states that the Executive Administration of the United States Government has been so using it for the purpose of discrediting the action of a Republican Representative upon this floor—myself—and of anticipating and preventing a proper and independent expression of the House of Representatives upon an important public matter.

A special dispatch in this morning's New York World, headed "Recognition for Hawaii," states that—

The Republic of Hawaii has been formally recognized by the United States, through the President and Secretary of State, etc.

And then it goes on to say:

Secretary Gresham visited the Capitol to-day and informed Senator GRAY, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Chairman MCCREARY, of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, that the President had formally recognized the Hawaiian Republic. No official announcement of the action taken was given out for publication to-day, and for this reason neither Senator GRAY nor Mr. MCCREARY would discuss the subject.

So far as the House was concerned, secrecy was observed for the purpose of springing a surprise on the Republicans to-morrow.

Then, a little further on, it proceeds to say:

The Boutelle resolution will be considered again at to-morrow's meeting of the committee, when Chairman MCCREARY expects to surprise the Republicans by announcing that no object could be served by reporting the resolution, as the Government has already recognized the Hawaiian Republic.

This, Mr. Speaker, in spite of the oft-repeated official assurances given this House by the Executive that the disposition of the Hawaiian matter had been transferred to Congress and that in dealing with it the Executive Department of the Government desired to take into its confidence in the fullest manner the House of Representatives and the Senate of the United States. Mr. Speaker, I am willing that this Administration and the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs shall take to themselves all of the credit, all of the honor, and all of the glory they may be able to obtain by "getting ahead" of Mr. BOUTELLE and "springing this surprise upon the House of Representatives."

But, Mr. Speaker, I desire to call the attention of this House, and the attention of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, to the fact that this subject can not rest here; that if the Secretary of State of the great American Republic, instead of dealing with this grave international matter in the broad, open, and dignified manner befitting its importance, sees fit to sneak up into the lobby of the House and privately inform the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs that certain great international transactions have occurred, but which were to be kept secret from the House "for the purpose of springing a surprise on the Republicans" next day——

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I call the gentleman to order.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I desire, Mr. Speaker, to say that the duty rests upon this House as imperatively——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maine will suspend. The gentleman from Ohio calls the gentleman to order.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Oh, I did not know that the gentleman from Ohio had appeared!

Mr. OUTHWAITE. The gentleman from Maine rose ostensibly to a question of privilege. To that no objection could be made. He has taken the opportunity to use disrespectful language of a member of the Cabinet, and I submit that that is not in order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maine will please confine himself to his personal explanation.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Mr. Speaker, I desire to proceed absolutely in order, and if the Speaker will rule that my remark transgresses in the slightest degree the parliamentary privileges of this floor I will withdraw it. I ask for a ruling by the Chair.

The SPEAKER. The Chair rules that the gentleman rose to a question of personal privilege, and under the guise of that has discussed another subject. He has no right to go beyond the question of personal privilege.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I will keep directly to the question.

The SPEAKER. That is all the Chair desires.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Mr. Speaker, it is a question not only of my own personal privilege, but of the privilege of this House which is thus raised, and when we are informed by a public newspaper which is regarded as a semiofficial organ of the Administration, that it has been deliberately determined to take such a furtive course in regard to a great public matter as to elude and evade an expression of the sentiment of the House of Representatives; to take advantage of the House; to prevent the House from exercising those functions of sympathy which it never has failed to exercise on such occasions, it seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that we have presented a question of very high and important privilege.

I desire to say to the Foreign Affairs Committee, concerning which it is rumored—I have no right to know what has transpired in the committee—concerning which it is rumored that by a majority and partisan vote it has substantially taken the ground that the Executive Department having recognized the Republic of Hawaii, it is therefore unnecessary for this House to have anything to say about it—I desire to inform that committee that if they adhere to that course they will traverse the undeviating precedents and traditions of this Republic and of this body, and we shall have, for the first time in the history of the United States, the advent of a new republic among the galaxy of free nations without an expression of cordial welcome and congratulation from the Congress of the greatest republic of all, the United States of America. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. Speaker, the mere formal performance of a duty on the part of the Executive which ought to have been performed long ago, long before the emmissaries of a defunct monarchy were allowed to find a side-door entrance to the anterooms of power—the fact that the Administration has performed this duty reluctantly, haltingly, grudgingly, and secretively—for to-day this great body, representing the people and expected to speak for the people, is officially unaware of the great public transaction, notification of which has been peddled out to some partisan members of this body. I say, the fact that the Administration has in such a manner, at this late day, performed that duty, does not relieve us from our responsibility or our duty.

Mr. Speaker, it would be gross disrespect to a great commercial product of several States in this Union for me to denounce the course pursued by the Administration in this whole transaction as "peanut politics." [Laughter.] The outrage upon every principle of public honor that has characterized the so-called "Hawaiian policy" from the beginning has been carried fittingly to the end, and while, in the outset, every principle of international probity, every idea of national dignity, every sentiment of public honesty, and every impulse of American manhood have been trampled under foot by this Administration, we have to-day another attempt to violate the unbroken precedents and traditions of the House of Representatives of the United States.

In the name of the people, in the name of the people's representatives, in the name of popular government, in the name of freedom for mankind, in the name of that sentiment which recognizes struggles for liberty wherever they exist or succeed, I ask this House to repudiate this mass of tergiversation, to come back to the bedrock of the first principles of the Republic in its better days, and to join heartily in doing what ought to have been done long ago, namely, to express our cordial congratulations to the Republic of Hawaii. [Applause on the Republican side.]

And, Mr. Speaker, with that view and to place the responsibility exactly where it may belong——

Mr. COOMBS. I call the gentleman to order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York calls the gentleman from Maine to order.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I will proceed in order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has gone away beyond the question of personal privilege.

Mr. BOUTELLE (holding up a paper). Mr. Speaker, to place the responsibility where it may belong, I ask unanimous consent for the passage of the resolutions of congratulation——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maine has been called to order.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Let any man, be he whom he may, take the responsibility of objecting——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maine will come to order. He has transgressed the rules of the House. He has gone beyond the question to which he referred——

Mr. BOUTELLE. I rise to a question of order.

The SPEAKER (a messenger from the Senate having appeared at the bar of the House). The House will receive a message from the Senate.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I rise to a question of order.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. The gentleman has been called to order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maine will be seated.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I ask unanimous consent for the passage of this resolution——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maine will be seated. The rules of the House can not be continuously and persistently disregarded by the gentleman from Maine.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Will the Chair kindly inform me in what particular I have violated the rules?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman rose, as he stated, to a question of personal privilege in regard to some matter referring to himself in the public prints, but he has discussed a question entirely foreign to that; and the gentleman must know from his long experience here that he has violated the rules of the House.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I desire to say that I immediately informed the Speaker that my question of personal privilege involved also a question of the privileges of this House.

The SPEAKER. That is another question.

Mr. BOUTELLE. That is exactly what I stated.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman was recognized to present a question of personal privilege, and he read from a public print something that he said reflected upon his motives, and the Chair thought that was a question of personal privilege. But the gentleman has gone away beyond that——

Mr. BOUTELLE. Does the Speaker rule that what I have stated does not constitute a question of the privileges of the House?

The SPEAKER. The Chair rules that when a gentleman is called to order, he is not in order in continuing to occupy the floor and to address the Chair.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I insist upon a ruling on the question of the privileges of the House which I have presented.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maine will take his seat.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I ask a ruling on the question of privilege.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maine will conform to the rules of the House.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

A bill (S. 1688) for the relief of Enoch Davis;

A bill (S. 1706) to provide registers for the steamers Claribel and Athos;

A bill (S. 1772) extending the time for the completion of a railroad bridge over the Columbia River at or near Vancouver, in the State of Washington;

A bill (S. 1969) granting a pension to Harrison C. Hobart, brevet brigadier-general of volunteers;

A bill (S. 2107) granting to the Northern Mississippi Railway Company right of way through certain Indian reservations in Minnesota; and

A bill (S. 2261) to further encourage the holding of a world's exposition at Atlanta, Ga., in the year 1895.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment the bill (H. R. 1589) for the relief of Louis Pelham.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments the bill (H. R. 7380) to authorize purchasers of the property and franchises of the Choctaw Coal and Railway Company to organize a corporation and to confer upon the same all the powers, privileges, and franchises vested in that company, asked a conference with the House on the bill and amendments, and had appointed Mr. PUGH, Mr. VILAS, and Mr. PLATT as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments the bill (H. R. 4667) to provide for the opening of certain abandoned military reservations, and for other purposes, asked a conference with the House on the bill and amendments, and had appointed Mr. PASCO, Mr. MCLAURIN, and Mr. CAREY as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments the bill (H. R. 7006) to authorize the Washington, Alexandria and Mount Vernon Electric Railway Company to extend its line of road into and within the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, asked a conference with the House on the bill and amendments, and had appointed Mr. FAULKNER, Mr. HARRIS, and Mr. MCMILLAN as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE.

Mr. MCCREARY of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. MCCREARY of Kentucky. I rise to a question of privilege.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky states that he rises to a question of privilege. The House will be in order.

Mr. MCCREARY of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Maine [Mr. BOUTELLE], who never loses an opportunity to parade before this House his views on Hawaiian affairs, has referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and I desire to respond to him briefly.

The Committee on Foreign Affairs has used all proper dispatch, and has in accordance with every precedent taken proper action with regard to the resolution offered by the gentleman from Maine on the 30th day of last month.

The gentleman from Maine, before any information had been officially communicated to the House of Representatives that the Republic of Hawaii had been established and proclaimed, offered in this House resolutions recognizing that Republic and congratulating the people on their self-government, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs. Those resolutions, the gentleman from Maine [Mr. BOUTELLE] said, were in a form similar to resolutions offered by me when Brazil threw off the monarchy and proclaimed the republic.

I did offer resolutions similar to those; but the Republicans in this House at that time refused to allow them to be considered; and when they were referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs that committee, then having a majority of Republican members, refused to consider them. After awhile, however, in accordance with the precedents, the President of the United States, Mr. Harrison, recognized the Republic of Brazil.

The Committee on Foreign Affairs have given proper consideration to the resolutions offered by the gentleman from Maine [Mr. BOUTELLE]. There is no necessity for demagogy. There is no necessity for any criticism of the Committee on Foreign Affairs. That committee has acted with more promptness and courtesy than was extended when resolutions were offered with regard to the recognition of the Republic of Brazil in 1890.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Will the gentleman allow me?

Mr. MCCREARY of Kentucky. I decline to be interrupted.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Does the gentleman desire to answer a question just there in that connection?

Mr. MCCREARY of Kentucky. Unless the gentleman has a question directly in point——

Mr. BOUTELLE. Oh, a very brief question. I simply want to ask if the committee is favorable or otherwise to the resolution?

Mr. MCCREARY of Kentucky. I will state, Mr. Speaker, that the members of the Committee on Foreign Affairs in connection with this matter have done their full duty. When similar resolutions recognizing the Republic of Brazil were offered by myself and referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs they were not only not considered by the committee, but they were referred to a subcommittee, which never reported. It was then claimed that as the President had recognized the Republic of Brazil pending the consideration of the resolutions it was not necessary to adopt them.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Does not the gentleman know——

Mr. MCCREARY of Kentucky. I decline to be interrupted.

I desire to say to him and to this House that we followed the precedents of the past. It has been an unbroken rule for many years in the United States when a monarchical form of government has been overthrown and a republican form of government established in any foreign country for the President of the United States in a reasonable time to recognize the republic.

Mr. FITHIAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of order. I make the point of order that the gentleman from Kentucky is not stating any question of privilege. We have had about enough of this Hawaiian matter, and I think we had better put a stop to it right here and now.

Mr. MCCREARY of Kentucky. I am answering the statement of the gentleman from Maine, in which he criticised the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Mr. FITHIAN. Well, we have had enough of Hawaii; let us put an end to it now.

Mr. MCCREARY of Kentucky. I will finish in a moment.

Mr. FITHIAN. I insist upon the point of order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Kentucky that the discussion of the Hawaiian question does not constitute a question of privilege. Neither does the question of the action of the Committee on Foreign Affairs constitute a question of privilege. The gentleman from Maine read an extract from a newspaper and stated that it imputed to him improper motives, and thereupon proceeded to discuss the Hawaiian question——

Mr. MCCREARY of Kentucky. But, Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Maine charged improper motives on the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I charged absolute inaction, and charge it now.

Mr. MCCREARY of Kentucky. To that charge I wish to respond.

The SPEAKER. What does the gentleman understand as constituting a question of privilege; the term "inaction" of the committee?

Mr. McCREARY of Kentucky. The gentleman charged improper motives to the committee in not reporting a resolution in one week which is not privileged, and which, I think, if reported would have been discourteous and an infringement of the rights of the President.

The SPEAKER. But this is no question of privilege. There is no reflection on the gentleman. If there was, it would authorize him to rise to a question of privilege. But the mere inaction of the committee, if that is the charge of the gentleman from Maine, can not constitute a question of privilege.

Of course the Chair would recognize the gentleman if the question, in the judgment of the Chair, involved one of privilege; but the mere question of the action of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, or the inaction of the committee, or any other committee, in relation to the measures brought before it, the Chair does not think constitutes a question of privilege. If that were so, why, of course, we might discuss everything that was discussed before any of the committees of the House.

Mr. McCREARY of Kentucky. But the gentleman from Maine has, as I have said, charged improper motives on the part of the committee, and that makes a question of privilege. A charge of improper conduct on the part of a committee, or of any member of the House, constitutes a question of privilege; for one of the rules of the House declares that questions of privilege are those affecting the rights, reputation, or conduct of members individually in their representative capacity.

Now, Mr. Speaker, in answer to the gentleman——

Mr. FITHIAN. Mr. Speaker, is there not a regular order for to-day?

The SPEAKER. There is.

Mr. FITHIAN. Then let us have it.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman demands the regular order.

Mr. McCREARY of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, the Committee on Foreign Affairs has followed an unbroken precedent——

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman state his question of privilege?

Mr. McCREARY of Kentucky. I understand the gentleman from Maine to say that the Committee on Foreign Affairs, of which I am a member, was prompted by improper motives in making no report on his resolution. Now, any question affecting the conduct of any member of the House, or the action or the integrity of a committee of the House, is a question of privilege, and to that question I wish to address myself.

The SPEAKER. What does the gentleman understand by "improper" motives? There must be something reflecting either upon the committee or the gentleman himself, to warrant the assertion that he presents a question of privilege.

Mr. McCREARY of Kentucky. The manner of the gentleman from Maine and the words used by him indicate it.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I withdraw the "manner." [Laughter.]

Mr. McCREARY of Kentucky. I desire to close the discussion which, if not in order now I think it was not in order when it first began, with a few words.

Mr. BOUTELLE. The gentleman from Kentucky has manner enough for both of us.

Mr. McCREARY of Kentucky. I wish only to say in conclusion that the committee followed the unbroken line of precedents in their action in regard to the resolution of the gentleman from Maine. It has been the custom of the House for many years, and was the custom when the Republican party had control of the House, for the recognition of a republican form of government, established on the ruins of a monarchical system, to be first made by the President of the United States.

When the empire of France was overthrown and the republic proclaimed the President of the United States recognized the republic. When the republic of Brazil was declared it was recognized in due time by the President of the United States. When the Argentine Republic and the republics of Chili and Peru and Mexico and Guatamala were severally proclaimed, they were in a few months recognized by the President of the United States. In some instances, afterwards Congress passed congratulatory resolutions. The gentlemen from Maine desired that there should be a recognition of the Hawaiian Republic by the Congress of the United States before the President had time to take any action upon the subject.

Mr. FITHIAN. I renew my point of order. I am getting tired of hearing this entire discussion.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman makes the point that no question of privilege is presented.

Mr. McCREARY of Kentucky. I can only state in conclusion——

Mr. FITHIAN. I demand the regular order.

Mr. McCREARY of Kentucky (continuing). That the committee has followed the unbroken line of precedents.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the call of committees for reports.

Mr. BOUTELLE. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BOUTELLE. My inquiry is whether it would be in order at this stage to ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of these resolutions?

The SPEAKER. The regular order has just been demanded.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Foreign Affairs be discharged from the further consideration of the resolutions, and that they be considered now in the House.

The SPEAKER. The demand for the regular order cuts off all requests for unanimous consent.

Mr. BOUTELLE. When will it be in order?

The SPEAKER. When the regular order is demanded, it is never in order, of course, to ask unanimous consent. The regular order is the call of committees for reports.

SILK CULTURE.

Mr. ALEXANDER, from the Committee on Agriculture, reported favorably the bill (S. 115) for the development and encouragement of silk culture in the United States under the supervision of the Secretary of Agriculture; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ADULTERATION AND MISBRANDING OF FOODS AND DRUGS.

Mr. HATCH, from the Committee on Agriculture, reported favorably the bill (H. R. 4863) to prevent the adulteration and misbranding of foods and drugs, and for other purposes; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ADDITIONAL COMPENSATION TO ASSISTANT COMMISSIONERS TO INDUSTRIAL EXPOSITION AT MELBOURNE.

Mr. TUCKER, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, reported favorably the bill (S. 2024) authorizing additional compensation to the assistant commissioners to the Industrial Exhibition held at Melbourne, Australia; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

OLEOMARGARINE AND IMITATIONS OF DAIRY PRODUCTS.

Mr. FORMAN, from the Committee on Agriculture, reported favorably the bill (H. R. 7125) to make oleomargarine and all other imitation dairy products subject to the laws of the State or Territories into which they are transported; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

PREVENTING FREE USE OF TIMBER ON PUBLIC LANDS.

Mr. McRAE, from the Committee on the Public Lands, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 7854) to prevent the free use of timber on the public lands and to revoke all permits heretofore granted in certain States, and for other purposes; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Mr. McRAE, from the Committee on Public Lands, asked that that committee be discharged from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 7855) donating 640 acres of land to Oklahoma Territory for a home for old soldiers, and for other purposes, and that the same be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The SPEAKER. The Committee on Public Lands will be discharged from the further consideration of this bill, and it will be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PUBLIC LANDS IN CHEROKEE STRIP FOR CEMETERY PURPOSES.

Mr. LATIMER, from the Committee on the Public Lands, reported adversely the bill (H. R. 5470) to authorize legally organized cities and towns in the Cherokee Strip, Oklahoma Territory, to purchase public lands for cemetery purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table.

RIGHT OF WAY THROUGH YAKIMA INDIAN RESERVATION.

Mr. CURTIS of Kansas, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, reported favorably the bill (H. R. 6854) to grant the Tacoma and Yakima Land Company a right of way through the Yakima Indian Reservation; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

CLERKS TO MEMBERS.

Mr. RUSK, from the Committee on Accounts, reported favorably the resolution relative to clerk hire to Members and Delegates during the period from adjournment of the present session until the assembling of the next regular session; which was referred to the Union Calendar, and, with accompanying report and views of the minority (filed by Mr. TATE), ordered to be printed.

The SPEAKER. This completes the call of committees for reports.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. DRAPER, indefinitely, on account of sickness.

The SPEAKER. The morning hour begins at fifteen minutes past 1 o'clock, and the Committee on the Militia has a bill before the House. The bill is in Committee of the Whole. The Clerk will report the title of the bill.

EFFICIENCY OF THE MILITIA.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 5039) to promote the efficiency of the militia.

Mr. MEYER. I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the further consideration of the pending bill.

The question being taken, the Speaker declared that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. FITHIAN. I ask for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 60, noes 20.

Mr. FITHIAN. Let us have the yeas and nays, Mr. Speaker.

The question being taken on ordering the yeas and nays, they were refused; only 6 members voting in favor thereof.

The motion of Mr. MEYER was then agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole, Mr. OUTHWAITE in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole for further consideration of the bill (H. R. 5039) to promote the efficiency of the militia.

Mr. MEYER. Mr. Chairman, I doubt very much indeed whether it will be practicable within the short time allotted for the consideration of this bill to pass it to-day, but even if it must be postponed, I believe that much will have been gained by the brief discussion of yesterday and to-day. There is a great deal of ignorance, a great want of knowledge of the laws governing the militia of this country. In the bill which we have before us there is very little that is altogether new. As I stated yesterday, it proposes to remodel and adapt to modern conditions the laws which have been in existence for a hundred years.

And now, sir, let us look at our present force as it stands, and our possible necessities for the future.

The last annual message of the President states the strength of the regular Army on the 30th day of September last at 25,778 enlisted men and 2,144 officers. The expense of this military establishment, exclusive of fortifications, was about thirty millions of dollars per annum.

The President says that the total enrollment of the militia of the several States was on the 31st of October last, 112,597 officers and enlisted men.

The officers of the Army detailed for the inspection and instruction of this reserve of our military force report that increased interest and marked progress are apparent in the discipline and efficiency of the organization.

The report of the Adjutant-General of the Army, giving an abstract of the militia force by States and Territories, with specifications of each branch of the organized force, accompanies House Report No. 619, presented with the pending bill.

Sir, there is no example on earth of so small a regular army for a country so vast as our own, and having such a large population and wealth to be defended, with such an enormous frontier line and seacoast, and so many points of attack by foreign foes.

Mr. FITHIAN. If it is necessary to have a larger standing Army, would it not be better that the General Government should increase the regular Army?

Mr. MEYER. I will say to the gentleman from Illinois that I am no advocate of an increase of the regular Army. On the contrary, I should oppose such a proposal, and this bill does not contemplate anything in that direction.

Mr. FITHIAN. It nationalizes the militia of every State and Territory, and of the District of Columbia.

Mr. MEYER. I think that on a careful reading of the bill the gentleman will find there is nothing in it whatever that looks in the remotest degree towards nationalizing the militia of the States.

Mr. FITHIAN. Does it not provide that inspectors are to be appointed by the Federal Government to inspect the militia of the different States and Territories?

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. That is already the law.

Mr. FITHIAN. That inspectors shall be appointed to inspect the militia of the States?

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Yes, sir; to visit every encampment every year.

Mr. MEYER. I will state to the gentleman that the War Department sends an officer to any State encampment whenever application is made by the State authorities, for the purpose of inspecting the militia and making a report under the direction of the State commander; and the only provision in this bill looking in that direction is that it proposes to authorize the Secretary of War, upon the application of the governor of any State, to assign an officer of the regular Army to that State to serve under the governor and to give instruction to the organized militia of the State.

And the gentleman will remember that this is to be done only in the event that the governor of the State should apply for it. Furthermore, if at any time the State government should request the Secretary of War to recall such officer, he must be recalled, under the provisions of this bill, and, on the other hand, the Secretary of War has authority to recall such officer at his discretion. Beyond that there is nothing in this bill which looks to any Federal supervision, and I think the gentleman will admit that that is not Federal supervision, in any objectionable sense.

Mr. Chairman, it is true that there is now little fear of Indian wars on any large scale, such as we have had up to a very recent date in our history; but while this danger is greatly diminished by the construction of the transcontinental railroads and the advance of civilization and population in all the States and Territories, the risk of trouble from this quarter is not wholly removed. It would be an act of great unwisdom to assume that we can treat all the Indian tribes as no longer to be distinguished from the other citizens of the country, and as requiring no military guard or control. To do so would be to invite aggressions upon them from bad white men and conflicts among themselves, or disorders by their young braves.

But, sir, there is to be defended, the long seacoast of the Pacific and the Atlantic Oceans, our many fortifications, arsenals, our mints and depositaries of treasure in the great cities, our public records and departments at the national capital, and last, not least, our long line of northern frontier where we see the flag of a great nation with which we have had two fierce wars in our history, and have had repeated international questions which have led us to the very verge of war. It may be happily true that between the people of England and the people of the United States there is now a greater feeling of amity than at any time in the past and a more intimate and a larger commercial intercourse; but, sir, we must remember that England has her own policy and interests to pursue and they often infringe upon our own. Whenever these two may conflict the British Government will not be sentimental, but eminently practical.

Moreover, sir, she will be ready for war. She is ready. Her fleet is more than ten times our own in effective strength, her regular force far outnumbers our own, and is easily mobilized. The Atlantic Ocean, once so great an obstacle to her attacks upon us, is now an absolute convenience and facility—a highroad which, with her war steamers and commercial marine, would enable her to hurl 50,000 troops upon an exposed point of our coast in twelve or fourteen days. Out of our small regular Army how many could be spared for a special point of service? In the past few days there were reasons which, in the judgment of the President, required a concentration of United States troops at Chicago, Sacramento, and some other points in order to enforce Federal authority and laws.

Mr. FITHIAN. Does the gentleman claim that at the time when Federal troops were sent into Illinois the governor and the State authorities were not able to maintain the peace of the State?

Mr. MEYER. I do not propose, Mr. Chairman, to discuss that question, as the time at my command is so limited, nor do I think that it pertains especially to this subject.

Mr. HEPBURN. You might answer that, whether the governor was able or not, he was not doing it.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. I hope the gentleman from Louisiana will make the answer that the governor of the State of Illinois was not maintaining the peace, and that, on the contrary, he protested when the President exercised his power under the Constitution for that purpose.

Mr. FITHIAN. I want to say to my colleague that I differ with him entirely in that regard. The fact is that the governor of the State of Illinois at the time the Federal troops were sent there had not been called upon by either the mayor of the city of Chicago or the Republican sheriff of Cook County to send a single company of State militia into Cook County. As soon as the demand was made upon the governor, he did send the militia. There is a sufficient organized militia force in the State of Illinois to protect the peace of the State, and the present governor of the State, whenever the demand is made by the constituted authorities, can and will protect the peace without the interference of any Federal authority.

Mr. MEYER. Since my friend from Illinois [Mr. FITHIAN] desires an answer to his question, I will cheerfully give it, although I did not propose to enter into that subject at all.

I do believe—I believed at the time, and in the light of the experience of the past month I am confirmed in that belief—that the exigency had arrived when it was necessary for the President to call for troops of the United States to maintain peace and order in the city of Chicago; nor need his action be necessarily construed as a reflection upon the governor of Illinois. The conditions required prompt action.

Mr. FITHIAN. You believe, then, that it is the duty of the President to invade a State with Federal troops before he is requested to do so by the governor or the Legislature of a State?

Mr. MEYER. Allow me to say——

Mr. FITHIAN. Answer that question. Is that your belief?

Mr. MEYER. I will answer the gentleman's question. It is not my belief that it is the duty of the President to invade a State under the conditions suggested by the gentleman from Illinois, unless the situation is so critical that, in his judgment, urgency demands it.

Mr. FITHIAN. That was not the condition in the State of Illinois.

Mr. MEYER. But I do assert that under the Constitution of the United States, and in accordance with every law that has been recorded on the statute book for the last hundred years, the President has the right which he exercised in that case. I do believe that had he not exercised it at the time he did we would have had greater riots and greater destruction, and possibly civil war, in the city of Chicago and the State of Illinois. I think, sir, that the history of the past——

Mr. FITHIAN. In other words, you believe that the State of Illinois is not capable of self-government. The fact is that when troops were sent into Cook County the governor had not been called upon by the sheriff of that county or by the mayor of Chicago to send a single company of militia there.

Mr. MEYER. I do not think that my language is capable of such an interpretation.

Mr. HEPBURN. Did he not know the condition?

Mr. FITHIAN. He knew what was in the newspapers, the same as everybody else did. The fact of the matter is that at the time Federal troops were sent into Cook County the mayor of Chicago and the sheriff of Cook County were keeping the peace there; and if matters had reached a point where the militia of the State of Illinois under the command of the governor was not sufficient to cope with the rioters, then the governor would have called upon the President of the United States to send Federal troops there. I claim that it is a Democratic doctrine that the President has no right to send troops into a State until he is requested to do so by the governor or the Legislature of a State. And I want to say that any gentleman who takes the contrary position on the floor of this House is flying in the face of Democratic doctrine that has been adhered to ever since the organization of the Democratic party.

Mr. MEYER. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. Will my friend from Illinois yield to me five minutes in order that I may reply to my colleague [Mr. FITHIAN]?

Mr. MEYER. I will yield a little later.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. I desire to answer him right now. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. MEYER] is entitled to the floor.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. I believe the gentleman yields to me five minutes.

Mr. MEYER. I prefer to go on with my remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Louisiana declines to yield.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. As my colleague [Mr. FITHIAN] has spoken of the condition of affairs in Illinois—his State and mine—I appeal to the gentleman from Louisiana that he allow me, just at this point while the matter is fresh, to state what I understand the fact to be.

Mr. PICKLER and others. That is right.

Mr. MEYER. I shall be very glad to yield to the gentleman from Illinois a little later; I shall finish my remarks in a few minutes.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. The right time to speak about a matter is when it is "on;" and the House, I am sure, will extend the gentleman's time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] must understand that the gentleman from Louisiana declines to yield, and is entitled to proceed without interruption.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. Let me put it in this way——

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois is not in order.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. I merely ask unanimous consent——

Mr. MEYER. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois for a question.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. The gentleman from Louisiana is so fair that under the guise of a question, I would not impose upon him by making even a brief speech.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Louisiana yield?

Mr. MEYER. No, sir; I regret that I can not yield at this moment; I will when I shall have finished my remarks.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. How much time is to be had on this matter?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Louisiana is entitled to twenty minutes more.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. Well, I ask unanimous consent that his time be extended ten minutes.

Mr. FITHIAN. I object to any extension of time.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. My friend makes his charges, and then seeks to avoid an answer.

Mr. FITHIAN. No, sir; not at all. But we are proceeding in the morning hour, and it expires at fifteen minutes after 2 o'clock.

Mr. MEYER. Mr. Chairman, I decline to yield, and ask for order.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will be in order. The gentleman from Louisiana is entitled to the floor.

Mr. MEYER. Mr. Chairman, there is no member of the House who has a higher admiration or a higher regard for the patriotism and integrity of the State of Illinois than I have.

Mr. MORGAN. And the governor. [Laughter.]

Mr. MEYER. In all of the conditions in which she has been placed the people of that State have been true to every duty that can be required of patriotic and free citizens. But I take occasion to refer to the remark of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FITHIAN], and say in response, that whether true or not—and, in my judgment, it is true—there prevails a well-founded belief in the minds of many people here and in this country that the governor of Illinois did not rise equal to the occasion or the emergency which confronted him and his State. [Applause.] And for that reason, and also because he was exercising an undoubted constitutional right, the country ratified and approved the act of the President of the United States in maintaining order and in acting in conformity with the Constitution and the laws of the country as they had been engrafted on our statute books in the past. [Applause.]

Mr. FITHIAN. There is no ground for any such belief; no ground for entertaining any such belief as that.

Mr. MEYER. But, Mr. Chairman, to continue, it took some days to put even so small a body as 2,000 men at Chicago, while 1,000 men were all that could be spared for Sacramento. These examples teach us that, with our vast distances to overcome and numerous points necessary to be guarded, we might be in great danger of being overwhelmed at a given point by such a power as Great Britain, Germany, or France. Our seacoast is menaced by such powerful fortresses and bases of operation for fleets and armies as Vancouver, Halifax, and Bermuda. They have been well compared to a man pointing a pistol at our breast. It is obvious, sir, that our regular force would not be sufficient for such an emergency as war. If a serious question were to arise with a great naval and military power like Great Britain, the American people would have to submit to unjust demands and dishonoring aggressions, or to embrace the alternative of a war for which we would be unprepared. It is idle to shut our eyes to this truth, painful as it may be. The money that might have gone to building up a powerful navy and other means of national defense has been devoted to other objects.

The wonderful exhibition of American prowess on a large scale in the late civil war has led many to believe that the work of putting an army in the field sufficient for all purposes would be an easy task. It is thus that a feeling of security has been imparted to our people which is not warranted by the actual facts of our situation. The time was when a million of seasoned troops, disbanded in 1865, were still available for national defense, but long years have passed since then and the soldiers of the civil war are rapidly passing away. Other are advanced in life, with impaired health and unable to stand the hardships of the camp. Few indeed comparatively would now be available for actual service. Other reasoners have rashly concluded that the civil war demonstrated that good troops could be improvised, and that what was done then can be done again. Sir, that war demonstrated just the contrary, as all wars have done.

The American, like the Frenchman, is quick in learning the profession of arms, but both and all classes of soldiers require time, instruction, and something of actual service to make reliable troops. If we are to supplement our regulars by an organized militia, that militia must be well drilled and disciplined and accustomed to camp life and to act in bodies, or the force will be to us in the hour of trial a broken reed. Give them arms, instruction, camp life, and the march, and they will be efficient for the great and necessary purpose of national defense.

Again, sir, there are many persons who, not stopping to note the lessons of history, imagine that before war can come upon us, there will be some preliminary warning and fair time given us in order to get ready. Vain expectation! History is full of contrary examples. Many of the bloodiest wars of modern times have been sprung suddenly. The example of the Franco-Prussian war is fresh in our recollection. Every nation with an organized and powerful force, whether land or naval, is always on the alert to strike the first blow, if war must come. It is a word and a blow, and very often the blow precedes the word. Thus we witness the painful endeavors of the nation thus taken at a disadvantage to catch up with its adversary in military preparation and supply, but it is very hard to make up for lost time and deficient preparation in war. There is not a great soldier, living or dead, whose teaching does not confirm this statement.

But, sir, recent events have demonstrated that there are other occasions, and very numerous ones, in which the presence of a citizen soldiery is indispensable to preserve law and order. In the case of mobs and outbreaks against Federal or State authority, or both, it is of the highest importance to have a steady and firm citizen soldiery to support the constituted authorities and restore order. In the late unfortunate conflict the great transportation system of the country, so important to its business, happiness, and safety, was interrupted in a number of States and Territories, extending from Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois to the Pacific coast, and embracing a large number of trunk lines of railroad and large cities with many great interests. It is much to be preferred that these civil disorders should be quelled by State troops and by the State militia acting under State authority. The valuable services rendered by State troops in this and in former emergencies must not be forgotten.

It is on this force, so often tried and employed of late years, that the State and local authorities must depend in the main for the maintenance of the law and order which are the rightful inheritance of all the people of the land. In a great number of instances all over the Union the citizen soldiers have responded promptly to the call of the proper authority, to aid in maintaining the law. In an excellent speech delivered by Mr. Cutting in the House on the 12th of January, 1893, there is appended a most valuable table, showing the active service performed by the State militia from 1870 to the present time. The showing is a most striking one, and deserves to be studied. It embraces nearly all the States and Territories of the Union.

In the same carefully prepared speech there is an account of the many wars begun in modern times without any declaration of hostilities. It appears from this interesting recital that, while there were ten wars preceded by a declaration of war, there were one hundred and seven in which this formality was dispensed with. These modern wars, it is well said, are short and sharp. The Franco-German war occupied only forty-nine days up to the decisive victory of Sedan, after which France lay at the mercy of the conqueror. The war of 1866 between Austria and Germany occupied just seventeen days prior to the decisive struggle at Sadowa. And this is what we may expect as a rule hereafter. In any event, by timely preparation for defense, we shall be able to escape great calamities and much suffering at the outset if unfortunately we shall be involved in war.

And now, sir, it is obvious that we have before us the alternatives of going on with wholly inadequate preparation for foreign war, necessitating submission on our part to injustice and aggression from strong governments or an appeal to arms, with the certain knowledge that our adversary is prepared for war and that we are not prepared. If this is satisfactory to gentlemen who profess to have the national honor and interests at heart, then it may be, in their minds, some excuse or palliation for doing nothing. But our plan is to take now a moderate and gradual step in the nature of greater preparation for the dread contingency which has happened in the past, and which may happen again any day when we least expect it. I feel assured, sir, that the sentiment of the country will, regardless of party divisions, indorse and demand the policy embodied in the proposed bill.

We have enough soldiers in our regular Army—supplemented, as it is, by the national guard of the respective States, whose numbers, over 100,000 men embracing all arms of the service—infantry, cavalry, and artillery—form an ample reserve for emergencies. There is much State and national pride in their standing and efficiency; they are well drilled, disciplined, and equipped. Besides these, the reserve militia would afford nearly 10,000,000 men liable to military duty, who would be ready for any patriotic call. The strong military spirit of our people needs but little stimulus to maintain the efficiency for prompt service. With the States amply prepared, we need no costly standing armies as in Europe, drawing, like an octopus, upon the substance and the fruits of the labor of our toiling masses.

It is our duty to aid by legislation this most important element in our State and national life. Our young men are enthusiastic everywhere in the preparation for any peril likely to arise. True, no war is imminent; we are at peace with all the world; the horizon is again clear, but it is needless to insist upon the duty to prepare for all possible conflict. It is only by maintaining efficient organizations that we can achieve the degree of security essential to the happiness of our communities.

The national guard of our various States affords the security and safeguard we require.

Well do I remember a spectacle, scarce more than five years since, which illustrated its capabilities. Within less than forty-eight hours there were concentrated in the great metropolis of our country, more than fifty thousand men, a magnificent array that came from nearly all the States of our Union, from the North and the South, the East and the West, to commemorate the centennial anniversary of our Government's founding. As they marched in soldierly tread, their helmets glistening in the noonday sun, amidst the cheers and plaudits of the throng that lined the broad avenues for miles, our hearts swelled with pride and emotion under the inspiration of the scene.

To some this gala parade may have seemed a mere holiday service or "Sunday soldiering," but to the more thoughtful it had a deeper, grander significance. Here were gathered the soldiers of the national guard of the sovereign States, showing by its force its great possibilities, the embodiment of the nation's patriotism, to whom, when in danger, the Government must turn for protection against domestic strife or foreign foe. The cheers that greeted them were not so much for their gallant array on that joyous march, as because all felt that the hearts that melted under the influence of the bright eyes that shot them their glances at every step would become as hearts of oak and their pliant sinews as of steel whenever their country's safety should require their willing services.

Such a body, so noble a phalanx, should not be denied its encouragements. They are our walls, our casements, and our fortresses in times of danger, for they constitute a State—

Men, high-minded men * * *
* * * * * * *
Men who their duties know,
But know their rights, and knowing dare maintain.
* * * * * * *
These constitute a State * * *

[Applause.]

I append a table, giving an abstract of the militia of the United States.

APPENDIX.

Abstract of the militia force of the United States according to the latest returns received at the office of the Adjutant-General, United States Army, for the year 1893.

States and Territories.	Organized strength.										Number of men available for military duty (unorganized).
	Commissioned officers.					Enlisted men.
	General's.	General staff.	Regimental, field, and staff.	Company.	Total.	Noncommissioned officers.	Musicians.	Privates.	Total.	Aggregate.
STATES.
Alabama:
Generals and general staff	9	95	.....	.....	104	.....	.....	.....	.....	104	.....
Cavalry	.....	.....	.....	12	12	27	.....	143	170	182	.....
Light batteries	.....	.....	.....	15	15	27	.....	170	197	212	.....
Infantry	.....	.....	27	139	166	342	.....	1,954	2,296	2,462	.....
Total	9	95	27	166	297	396	.....	2,267	2,663	2,960	160,000

Abstract of the militia force of the United States, etc., for the year 1893—Continued.

States and Territories.	Organized strength.									Number of men available for military duty (unorganized).
	Commissioned officers.					Enlisted men.			Aggregate.
	Generals.	General staff.	Regimental, field, and staff.	Company.	Total.	Noncommissioned officers.	Musicians.	Privates.	Total.
STATES—continued.
Arkansas:
General staff		13			13				13
Cavalry				4	4	8	1	31	40	44
Light battery				3	3	5	1	14	20	23
Infantry			8	51	59	112	21	709	842	901
Total		13	8	58	79	125	23	754	902	981	213,734
California:
Generals and general staff	7	111			118	12			12	130
Cavalry				4	4	14		46	60	64
Artillery			12	21	33	101	19	305	425	458
Light batteries				10	10	28		84	112	122
Infantry			93	180	273	857	141	2,814	3,812	4,085
Signal corps				5	5	15		65	80	85
Total	7	111	105	220	443	1,027	160	3,314	4,501	4,944	179,558
Colorado:
General and general staff	1	38			39					39
Cavalry				6	6	17		71	88	94
Light battery				3	3	10		34	44	47
Infantry			26	30	56	104		458	562	618
Signal corps				2	2	14		13	27	29
Total	1	38	26	41	106	145		576	721	827	80,000
Connecticut:
General and general staff	1	9			10	4	1		5	15
Light batteries				9	9	28	3	73	104	113
Infantry			50	113	163	527	197	1,657	2,381	2,544
Signal corps				4	4	11		23	34	38
Naval militia				4	4			37	37	41
Total	1	9	50	130	190	570	201	1,790	2,561	2,751	[illegible]
Delaware:
Generals and general staff	3	11			14					14
Cavalry			3	3	6	17	2	29	48	54
Infantry			10	20	30	65	15	152	232	262
Total	3	11	13	23	50	82	17	181	280	330	28,080
Florida:
Generals and general staff	2	9			11					11
Light batteries				4	4	16	2	42	60	64
Infantry			20	60	80	170	48	638	856	936
Total	2	9	20	64	95	186	50	680	916	1,011	(*)
Georgia:
General staff		49			49					49
Cavalry			14	48	62	127	3	404	534	596
Light batteries				8	8	25	2	75	102	110
Infantry			62	195	257	577	44	1,902	2,523	2,780
Total		49	76	251	376	729	49	2,381	3,159	3,535	264,021
Idaho:
General staff		8			8					8
Infantry			3	13	16	26	10	172	208	224
Total		8	3	13	24	26	10	172	208	232	13,932
Illinois:
Generals and general staff	5	51			56	4			4	60
Cavalry				6	6	18		81	99	105
Light batteries				8	8	22		90	122	130
Infantry			68	209	277	722	96	3,387	4,205	4,482
Total	5	51	68	223	347	767	96	3,567	4,430	4,777	650,000
Indiana:
General and general staff	1	9			10					10
Light batteries			4	10	14	34	22	127	183	197
Infantry			44	185	179	398	123	1,726	2,247	2,426
Total	1	9	48	145	203	432	145	1,853	2,430	2,633	481,192
Iowa:
Generals and general staff	2	40			42	1		2	3	45
Infantry			55	133	188	413	143	1,526	2,082	2,270
Total	2	40	55	133	230	414	143	1,528	2,085	2,315	202,799
Kansas:
Generals and general staff	4	14			18					18
Infantry			25	80	105	324	85	1,134	1,543	1,648
Total	4	14	25	80	123	324	85	1,134	1,543	1,666	120,000
Kentucky:
General and general staff	1	16			17					17
Infantry			36	73	109	220	86	899	1,205	1,314
Total	1	16	36	73	126	220	86	899	1,205	1,331	495,000

* Not reported.

Abstract of the militia force of the United States, etc., for the year 1893—Continued.

States and Territories.	Organized strength.									Number of men available for military duty (unorganized).
	Commissioned officers.					Enlisted men.
	Generals.	General staff.	Regimental, field, and staff.	Company.	Total.	Noncommissioned officers.	Musicians.	Privates.	Total.	Aggregate.
STATES—continued.
Louisiana:
Generals and general staff	2	12			14					14
Cavalry				2	2	8		44	52	54
Light batteries			11	24	35	67	2	298	367	402
Infantry			13	56	69	149	6	555	710	779
Total	2	12	24	82	120	224	8	897	1,129	1,249
138,439
Maine:
General staff		12			12	3		12	15	27
Infantry			19	57	76	189	55	717	961	1,037
Total		12	19	57	88	192	55	729	976	1,064
98,972
Maryland:
General and general staff	1	9			10					10
Infantry			40	120	160	459	24	1,465	1,948	2,108
Total	1	9	40	120	170	459	24	1,465	1,948	2,118
(*)
Massachusetts:
Generals and general staff	2	19			21	14	2		16	37
Cavalry			10	9	19	52	6	179	237	256
Light batteries			7	15	22	58	6	235	299	321
Infantry			72	212	284	678	166	3,055	3,899	4,183
Signal corps				2	2	10		36	46	48
Hospital and ambulance corps				2	2	14		21	35	37
Cadet corps			17	24	41	78	10	213	301	342
Naval brigade			12	40	52	46	10	234	290	342
Total	2	19	118	304	443	950	200	3,973	5,123	5,566
391,323
Michigan:
Generals and general staff	4	26			30					30
Infantry			45	113	158	528	145	1,940	2,613	2,771
Total	4	26	45	113	188	528	145	1,940	2,613	2,801
250,000
Minnesota:
General and general staff	1	27			28					28
Light batteries			5	6	11	24	4	60	88	99
Infantry			27	68	95	292	111	1,176	1,579	1,674
Total	1	27	32	74	134	316	115	1,236	1,667	1,801
150,000
Mississippi:
Generals and general staff	3	25			28					28
Cavalry			1	6	7	16	2	75	93	100
Artillery (heavy)			3	18	21	48	9	210	267	288
Infantry			11	61	72	216	36	945	1,197	1,289
Total	3	25	15	105	148	280	47	1,230	1,557	1,705
(*)
Missouri:
General and general staff	1	8			9	5			5	14
Light batteries			2	7	9	27		117	144	153
Infantry			38	94	132	331	86	1,560	1,977	2,109
University cadets			3	10	13	24	16	86	126	139
Total	1	8	43	111	163	387	102	1,763	2,252	2,415
350,000
Montana:
General staff		11			11					11
Light battery				3	3	10		25	35	38
Infantry			6	29	35	80	20	342	442	477
Total		11	6	32	49	90	20	367	477	526
25,000
Nebraska:
General and general staff	1	17			18					18
Cavalry				3	3	9	2	27	38	41
Light battery				3	3	7	2	40	49	52
Infantry			12	63	75	191	68	641	900	975
Total	1	17	12	69	99	207	72	708	987	1,086
125,000
Nevada:
Generals and general staff	2	16			18	1			1	19
Light battery				3	3	8	1	49	58	61
Infantry			7	26	33	71	1	308	380	413
Total	2	16	7	29	54	80	2	357	439	493
(*)
New Hampshire:
General and general staff	1	9			10	5			5	15
Cavalry				3	3	9	2	44	55	58
Light battery				4	4	14	2	52	68	72
Infantry			30	67	97	216	102	695	1,013	1,110
Total	1	9	30	74	114	244	106	791	1,141	1,255
(*)
New Jersey:
Generals and general staff	3	48			51	6			6	57
Cavalry				3	3	10		42	52	55
Light battery				4	4	10	2	56	68	72
Infantry			82	149	231	502	86	2,912	3,500	3,731
Total	3	48	82	156	289	528	88	3,010	3,626	3,915
284,887

*Not reported.

Abstract of the militia force of the United States, etc., for the year 1893—Continued.

States and Territories.	Organized strength.										Number of men available for military duty (unorganized).
	Commissioned officers.					Enlisted men.
	Generals.	General staff.	Regimental, field, and staff.	Company.	Total.	Noncommissioned officers.	Musicians.	Privates.	Total.	Aggregate.
STATES—continued.
New York:
Generals and general staff	5	73			78					78
Cavalry				6	6	15	1	89	105	111
Light batteries				22	22	73	8	287	367	389
Infantry			206	420	626	2,055	305	9,157	11,517	12,143
Signal corps				5	5	25		59	84	89
Total	5	73	206	453	737	2,167	314	9,592	12,073	12,810	650,000
North Carolina:
Generals and general staff	2	28			30					30
Cavalry				3	3				37	40
Infantry			48	90	138				1,403	1,541
Naval battalion			2	11	13				158	171
Total	2	28	50	104	184	(†)	(†)	(†)	1,598	1,782	235,000
North Dakota:
General staff		3			3					3
Cavalry			4	6	10	18	2	42	62	72
Light battery				4	4	8	1	42	50	54
Infantry			9	24	33	72	11	234	317	350
Total		3	13	34	50	98	14	317	429	479	40,500
Ohio:
General and general staff	1	17			18					18
Cavalry				9	9	20	4	57	81	90
Light batteries			16	29	45	104	33	346	483	528
Infantry			117	241	358	932	363	3,722	5,017	5,375
Hospital and ambulance corps								114	114	114
Total	1	17	133	279	430	1,056	400	4,239	5,695	6,125	600,000
Oregon:
General and general staff	1	13			14					14
Cavalry				6	6	23	4	73	100	106
Light battery				4	4	11	2	29	42	46
Infantry			29	67	96	241	56	1,016	1,313	1,409
Total	1	13	29	77	120	275	62	1,118	1,455	1,575	44,444
Pennsylvania:
Generals and general staff	5	59			64	28	95		123	187
Cavalry			7	8	15	42	6	130	178	193
Light batteries			6	12	18	42	5	183	230	248
Infantry			190	374	564	1,732	266	5,225	7,223	7,787
Naval battalion			5	14	19	29	1	150	180	199
Total	5	59	208	408	680	1,873	373	5,688	7,934	8,614	790,451
Rhode Island:
Generals and general staff	5	20			25	1		4	5	30
Cavalry			7	6	13	22	2	66	90	103
Artillery (heavy)			41	12	53	77	19	196	292	345
Light batteries				6	6	24	3	63	90	96
Infantry			23	45	68	187	37	500	724	792
Naval reserve				5	5	18	1	86	105	110
Total	5	20	71	74	170	329	62	915	1,306	1,476	130,566
South Carolina:
Generals and general staff	7	80			87					87
Cavalry			33	136	169	306	34	1,035	1,375	1,544
Light battery				4	4	9		418	427	431
Infantry			55	276	331	621		2,426	3,047	3,378
Total	7	80	88	416	591	936	34	3,879	4,849	5,440	(*)
South Dakota:
General and general staff	1	22			23					23
Light battery				3	3	9		34	43	46
Infantry			25	42	67	187	33	423	643	710
Total	1	22	25	45	93	196	33	457	686	779	32,189
Tennessee:
General staff		16			16					16
Light batteries			1	6	7	12	2	90	104	111
Infantry			23	44	67	120	17	892	1,029	1,096
Military cadets			6	36	42	96	24	409	529	571
Total		16	30	86	132	228	43	1,391	1,662	1,794	169,000
Texas:
Generals and general staff	3	36			39	6			6	45
Cavalry			9	28	37	84		299	383	420
Light battery			4	12	16	30		98	128	144
Infantry			53	132	185	412	81	1,497	1,990	2,175
Total	3	36	66	172	277	532	81	1,894	2,507	2,784	300,000
Vermont:
General and general staff	1	19			20	2			2	22
Artillery (heavy)				3	3	7	1	38	46	49
Light battery				8	8	13	1	57	72	80
Infantry			12	36	48	104	25	456	585	633
Total	1	19	12	47	79	126	28	551	705	784	44,164

* Not reported.

† Not classified.

Abstract of the militia force of the United States, etc., for the year 1893—Continued.

States and Territories.	Organized strength.									Number of men available for military duty (unorganized).
	Commissioned officers.					Enlisted men.			Aggregate.
	Generals.	General staff.	Regimental, field, and staff.	Company.	Total.	Noncommissioned officers.	Musicians.	Privates.	Total.
TERRITORIES—continued.
Virginia:
General and general staff	1	9			10				10
Cavalry			13	19	32	74	4	216	294	326
Light battery			6	12	20	53	3	140	196	216
Infantry			50	135	185	456	120	1,899	2,484	2,669
Total	1	9	71	166	247	583	136	2,255	2,974	3,221	220,000
Washington:
Generals and general staff	2	32			34				34
Cavalry			5	12	17	60	8	180	248	265
Infantry			18	63	81	270	86	966	1,322	1,403
Total	2	32	23	75	132	330	94	1,146	1,570	1,702	86,156
West Virginia:
General and general staff	1	10			11				11
Infantry			18	51	69	167	59	594	820	889
Total	1	10	18	51	80	167	59	594	820	900	(*)
Wisconsin:
General staff		17			17				17
Cavalry			1	3	4			58	58	62
Light battery			1	4	5			56	56	61
Infantry			47	122	169	18	96	2,298	2,412	2,581
Total		17	49	129	195	18	96	2,412	2,526	2,721	(*)
Wyoming:
General staff		10			10				10
Infantry			9	27	36	38	23	308	369	405
Total		10	9	27	46	38	23	308	369	415	12,000
Aggregate State militia	92	1,175	2,134	5,589	8,991	18,880	3,901	76,318	100,697	109,688	8,124,397
TERRITORIES.
Alaska†
Arizona:
General staff		8			8				8
Infantry			15	81	96	76	33	257	366	462
Total		8	15	81	104	76	33	257	366	470	7,600
New Mexico:
General staff		16			16				16
Infantry			8	24	32	74	19	328	421	453
Total		16	8	24	48	74	19	328	421	469	25,000
Oklahoma*
Utah*										25,000
Aggregate Territories		24	23	105	152	150	52	585	787	939	57,600
District of Columbia:
General and general staff	1	12			13	6			6	19
Engineers				1	1	22		76	98	99
Cavalry				2	2	9	1	29	39	41
Light battery				3	3	9	1	31	41	44
Infantry			45	70	115	240	13	964	1,217	1,332
Hospital and ambulance corps				1	1	4		23	27	28
Total	1	12	45	77	135	290	15	1,123	1,428	1,563	42,000
Grand aggregate	93	1,212	2,202	5,771	9,278	19,330	3,968	78,026	102,912	112,190	8,223,997

* Not reported.

† No organized militia.

GEO. D. RUGGLES, Adjutant-General.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE, Washington, D. C., February 2, 1894.

Mr. DUNN was recognized.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. How much time has the gentleman from Louisiana remaining?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has seven minutes of his time remaining.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. I ask the gentleman to yield me that time.

Mr. MEYER. Certainly. I will yield five minutes of the time to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON].

Mr. FITHIAN. Has not the gentleman from Louisiana exhausted the hour?

The CHAIRMAN. He has not. The gentleman has seven minutes remaining.

Mr. DUNN. I thought the time had expired.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, in the five minutes yielded to me by the gentleman from Louisiana I can not undertake to discuss the provisions of this bill. I understand it to be a codification, substantially, of existing law, and therefore I believe it to be wise and shall vote for it. I would not have said anything were it not that my colleague from Illinois [Mr. FITHIAN], speaking of the late troubles in the State of Illinois and the city of Chicago, did not put the action of the President of the United States, in my opinion, upon the true ground. He takes the position that the governor of the State of Illinois had power to enforce the law, and that having that power he had the will to exercise it, and was enforcing the law; that the President of the United States was an interloper in the teeth of the law when he sent the Federal troops into that State.

I will say, in reply to the gentleman from Illinois, that in the enforcement of a State law the governor has plenary power, and the President can not interfere except on the request of the governor or of the State Legislature. But in the case in Illinois the process of the Federal courts was openly and notoriously defied: the civil officers of the United States were powerless to enforce the laws of the United States; commerce among the States ceased—was prevented by mob force; arson and mob force ruled supreme in the county of Cook, and the laws of the United States were nullified and as powerless as if they did not exist. The President of the United States, having jurisdiction to enforce the laws of the United States anywhere in our boundaries, reached out and performed his sworn duty; and in the performance of that duty it was not in the power of the mayor of the city of Chicago or the governor of the State of Illinois to stand in the way, and he kept his oath when he enforced the laws of the United States, as it was his duty to do.

Republican as I am, Mr. Chairman, I indorse the action of the President in the premises. Republican Presidents in former administrations have enforced the laws of the United States, and the people of this country took it as a matter of course. And when this Democratic President, keeping his oath, against the protest of the Democratic governor of the State of Illinois, enforced the laws of the United States, he but did his duty, and secured the cordial indorsement of the great mass of the people of the United States of all parties. However we may differ as to party politics, "the enforcement of the laws" should be the shibboleth for all the people.

And let me say to my colleague from the State of Illinois, this coming fall, if he wants to make the question in our State of sustaining the action or nonaction of the governor of the State and the mayor of Chicago at the crucial period a party question, well and good. He can do it, and he will find me and he will find the Republican party indorsing the action of the President of the United States in the performance of his sworn duty and condemning the unpatriotic course of the governor of the State of Illinois. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. FITHIAN. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New Jersey is recognized.

Mr. DUNN. Mr. Chairman, that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] should take advantage of the time yielded to him by the gentleman from Louisiana to make a political speech I am not at all surprised, but that the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. MEYER] should support a measure of this kind is more than a surprise to me. I am aware that almost every service of the United States has its organization, floating somewhere around the corridors, looking after some advantage that they may gain out of the public Treasury.

I know that the military organization of this city, which is back of this measure, means to saddle one of its members upon each State in this Union at the expense of the Government; and I know that they want to furnish from the General Government the arms by which the militia are to be armed; and I know that once the General Government arms the militia of a State, it becomes a servant of the central power, that which was never intended by the framers of the Constitution.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. DUNN. Yes.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Are you not aware that the United States Government furnishes these things to the entire extent required by this bill—that it pays $400,000 for the purpose of furnishing arms to the militia?

Mr. DUNN. I am fully aware of that, as I am aware also that the United States Government has protected certain industries to the injury of other industries, thereby violating the Constitution. [Loud applause.] I do not care what your precedent is; I am only telling you it is wrong; that the General Government is undertaking to grasp a power reserved to the States and carrying it to the Federal power. I want members of this House to look at what this bill means.

It means this, if it means anything—that each State in the Union and each Territory shall have a military officer of the United States quartered upon it with not only such pay as now allowed to the rank of that officer, but it authorizes the inference that in the State on which that officer shall be saddled he shall have an allowance of quarters and everything else that is now supplied by the General Government supplied to him by the State. My State spends $100,000 a year for its militia, and when the war was declared upon this Union there was not a State in it that responded more faithfully and more numerously in proportion to its population than did the State of New Jersey. We do not want any Federal officers for the training of our militia. We only want the United States to have what the Constitution gives it—that is the right to regulate the militia when in the service of the United States Government.

Mr. BARTLETT. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him one question?

Mr. DUNN. Certainly.

Mr. BARTLETT. Why does your State, then, take $8,626.23 from the Federal Government for the use of its militia?

Mr. DUNN. I do not care what New Jersey does. I do not know what it does. If it is wrong I will not indorse it. It is not right to do it. I know that every lame duck that wants some benevolence, whether it is a State, a Territory, or an individual, comes down here to Congress for it; and it seems to be a hospital for lame ducks generally, judging by the number of pension claims that is passed by this body. [Laughter and applause.] Every fellow who thinks he wants something simply comes down here and is backed up by some power behind the throne to rob the General Government.

There is, as I said before, hardly any service of the Government, or that has not an office here, which is not engaged in this business; and now to advance private interests, because New Jersey receives $6,000 or $600,000 under a provision of law enacted clearly outside of the intents and purposes of the Constitution, is no reason why we should go still further and impose upon the General Government an expenditure of $400,000, which will only be a drop in the bucket compared to what we will have to pay if this bill is enacted.

Besides that, Mr. Chairman, I want to read you what the Constitution says upon that particular subject. I suppose you are familiar with it, and it is not necessary to call attention to it; but it is evident that there are some members whose knowledge of that instrument is rather musty.

Mr. HEPBURN. Before the gentleman enters upon that, will he allow me to ask him one question?

Mr. DUNN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HEPBURN. You have spoken of the participation of the militia of New Jersey in the war of the rebellion. Was there a single organization of the militia of New Jersey that as such participated in the war of the rebellion?

Mr. DUNN. Why, my dear friend, what age have you been living in? The First and Second New Jersey Militia participated.

Mr. HEPBURN. I assert that the contributions of the New Jersey militia to the Army that put down the rebellion were absolutely inconsiderable—that it was the volunteers and other such organizations that participated.

Mr. DUNN. Mr. Chairman, I can not yield to the gentleman to make a political speech. The man who says that New Jersey did not do its part and much more than its part as compared with other States is utopian.

I say at the time the Constitution was framed we were under a Federal system. The people were jealous of the power they granted at that time in the Constitution. They surrounded that instrument with every safeguard known to the great minds who framed it, and what did they say when they formed the Constitution, in relation to the militia?

Paragraph 16, section 8, says:

To provide for organizing, arming, and disciplining the militia and for governing such part of them as may be employed in the service of the United States.

And while in the service of the United States might be added to put contention outside of dispute, though that is the clear meaning of the word.

And again it repeats:

The President shall be commander-in-chief of the Army and Navy of the United States, and of the militia of the several States when called into actual service of the United States.

Now, here was the point at which the safeguards were thrown around the States and their militia. Nowhere is the General Government allowed to interfere with the militia of the States except for the purpose of giving such instructions, and arming them when in the service of the United States. There is no pretense anywhere that the Constitution ever gave the right to this Congress to arm the militia of the States within the States in time of peace at the expense of the General Government, or to send representatives of the General Government into the States to train their militia; and whenever you enact such a law you depart from the clear principles of the Constitution; and as one of the lovers of my country and of its institutions I must lift my voice in protest whenever any attempt of that kind is made.

It may be said that this is only a little infringement of the Constitution, but St. Paul says: He that contemneth small things shall fall by little and by little; and by little and by little you and I, gentlemen, have seen Federal laws enacted to interfere with the rights of the States in their elections. We were all pledged to repeal those Federal laws because they were an interference with the rights of the people in the States, and the man who attempts now to fasten upon the States such a measure as this goes even a step further, because he makes the militia of the State the servants of the General Government, so that whenever a tyrant gets into the Presidential chair and the militia of the States are organized with an officer of the General Government as their trainer in each State, it will be an easy matter for him to transfer the power of the State into an engine of oppression and tyranny, or upon which he could ride to a throne.

Now, let me go a step further. I am satisfied that even my friend from Illinois [Mr. CANNON], if he had read this bill, would have manifested as violent opposition to it as I have done; that is, if he has any regard for the Constitution.

In this bill there is a grant of $400,000 from the General Government to be divided among the States. I fail to find that a single State has asked for this. The sum of $6,000, or $50,000, the portion which you say New Jersey might get under this bill, would be only a drop in the bucket compared with what we spend to maintain as good a militia as there is in any State in the Union. And New Jersey is too proud to ask that wrong may be done that it might become a beneficiary in crime.

It would not amount to a drop in the bucket in the State of New York, which spends more than a million to maintain as good a militia as there is anywhere. No, gentlemen, we must not depart from the landmarks of the fathers.

Mr. BINGHAM. Will the gentleman allow an interruption?

Mr. DUNN. Yes, sir.

Mr. BINGHAM. Is not the gentleman aware that from 1808 until 1887 the National Government appropriated annually for this purpose $200,000? In 1887 the appropriation was increased to $400,000, and for the next fiscal year $400,000 has been appropriated.

Mr. DUNN. I am fully aware of that.

Mr. BINGHAM. Then there is nothing novel in that phase of this bill.

Mr. DUNN. There is nothing particularly novel except the fact that you furnish the several States with arms, and furnish an officer to take control of those arms in the hands of the State militia, and only one step further is necessary in order to build up a tyrant in the White House, a man who, having the opportunity and the desire, will have at his hand the power to command your State militia to crush your liberties.

Mr. REED. Do you think he will command them as thoroughly as he does the House conferees on the tariff bill? [Laughter.]

Mr. DUNN. I make no allusion to him. He is able to take care of himself.

Mr. REED. And of you fellows too. [Laughter.]

Mr. DUNN. Yes; and of you, too. By and by he will show you what he can do. I had no reference to the honorable gentleman who now occupies the White House. He is too much of an American, too much of a gentleman, too much of a statesman to ever pass beyond the barrier of constitutional restriction; but if he ever should attempt to go beyond that boundary as it was established by the fathers, you will find no man to assail him more bitterly than I will for the attempt.

Mr. Chairman, since I have been a member of this House I have discovered that there is a disposition to make our Treasury a hospital for lame ducks of every kind and character; the lame and the lazy of every class of public servants are aiming for that end; every pretense is urged by the applicants for public benevolence.

This Government is not a benevolent institution to take care of such characters, though action is sometimes taken that would indicate that view of it. There is hardly a service under the Government that has not its organization the first purpose of which is to overreach the people through their representatives for the benefit of their own particular service.

The military service is evidently no exception to this rule, as this bill abundantly proves. Its meaning is to find soft "snaps" for about fifty military men to be distributed among the States and Territories under the alluring pretense of training the militia of the States and Territories.

I am a friend of the military in their places. They are a body of men of whom the country should feel proud, but I am a still greater friend of the Constitution of my country and am opposed to its infringement even in the slightest degree. By little and by little is liberty stolen.

The people of the States should be allowed to do for themselves that which is clearly within their province, and there is no more clearly guarded right than that of training their own militia.

How much time have I remaining, Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has ten minutes.

Mr. DUNN. I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FITHIAN].

Mr. FITHIAN. Mr. Chairman, I am not surprised at all at the attitude which my colleague [Mr. CANNON] has taken in regard to sending Federal troops into the State of Illinois during the Chicago strike. He is only defending what has been Republican policy and Republican doctrine ever since the Republican party was organized, and in doing so he is opposing the express doctrine of the Democratic party, the doctrine which the Democratic party has always maintained, the idea of local self-government.

Mr. HEPBURN. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. FITHIAN. I have not time.

Mr. HEPBURN. Only a single question. I wanted simply to ask the gentleman——

Mr. FITHIAN. I have no time to yield; I have only ten minutes.

Mr. HEPBURN. The gentleman will not yield. Well, that is wise.

Mr. FITHIAN. Mr. Chairman, in the last national Democratic convention we declared that—

> The need of a return to those fundamental principles of free popular government, based on home rule and individual liberty, was never more urgent than now, when the tendency to centralize all power at the Federal capital has become a menace to the reserved rights of the States, and strikes at the very roots of our Government under the Constitution as framed by the fathers of the Republic.

So that I am glad to know that when it becomes necessary to defend the President of the United States against Democratic doctrine, that defense has to come from the other side of the House.

The gentleman says that the governor of the State of Illinois made no attempt to maintain the peace of the State. I want to call his attention to the fact that from the first governor of the State of Illinois to the last there was never a precedent set of a governor sending troops into a community without first being called upon by the sheriff of the county or the mayor of the city at the seat of trouble.

Governor Altgeld was only following the precedents that had been established by every governor, both Democratic and Republican; and up to the time Federal troops were ordered by the President into the State of Illinois neither the mayor of Chicago nor the sheriff of Cook County had called upon the governor for a single soldier to assist in keeping the peace. And as soon as that demand was made upon the governor of Illinois troops were sent immediately by his order.

I want to say to the House that the great State of Illinois is capable of taking care of itself. We have an organized State militia large enough to cope with any riot that may occur within the State. I want to say further that the governor of Illinois, as the commander of the State militia, stands ready and willing, whenever the necessity demands and whenever called upon by the constituted authorities, to send the militia of the State to the seat of trouble to suppress all riot and insurrection within the State.

Sir, if the organized companies of militia at any time were found to be insufficient, on the request of the governor of Illinois for volunteers, if necessary a hundred thousand—yea, two hundred thousand—patriotic citizens of Illinois would respond to his call to protect the peace and maintain the dignity of that great State. [Applause on the Democratic side.] I love peace and good order as well as any man, but I love the Constitution and the laws of my country, and I deprecate the violation of the Constitution and the laws by the President, or by anybody else.

Sir, this charge so repeatedly unjustly made and made, too, without any foundation, that the governor of the State of Illinois had been derelict in the discharge of his duty is an untruth, uttered with malice and uttered with a total disregard of the truth. Sir, at the time of the coal strike companies of militia were sent at once into every county in which there was trouble, upon the request of the sheriff of the county or the mayor of the city where the trouble existed. Where it was not deemed necessary by the local authorities that troops should be sent, arms and munitions were sent to the sheriffs for the purpose of aiding in keeping the peace and protecting property.

I desire to say that from the foundation of this Government to the present time no Democratic President ever flew in the face of the Constitution and in defiance of Democratic doctrine by invading a State with Federal troops without the request and demand of the constituted authorities of the State and over the protest of the governor of the State.

It may be said that this is not good Democratic doctrine now. It was good Democratic doctrine in 1892 when the Chicago convention made the platform upon which President Cleveland was elected, and upon which a large majority of the membership of this House was elected. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The morning hour has expired. The Committee of the Whole will now rise.

The committee accordingly rose; and Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, Mr. OUTHWAITE reported that the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 5039) to promote the efficiency of the militia, and had come to no resolution thereon.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The morning hour has expired, and the Clerk will report the special order which now operates

The Clerk read as follows:

That Thursday, the 9th instant, after the morning hour, be assigned to the consideration of bills reported from the Committee on Claims in the order indicated by said committee.

Mr. BUNN. I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of bills on the Private Calendar under the special rule.

The question being taken, there were, on a division (called for by Mr. KILGORE)—ayes 104, noes 2.

Mr. KILGORE. No quorum.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. KILGORE and Mr. BUNN were appointed.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 142, noes 3.

So the motion of Mr. BUNN was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar, Mr. BAILEY in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is now in Committee of the Whole for the purpose of considering bills on the Private Calendar, under the special order, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk again read the special rule.

MERRILL DENHAM.

Mr. BUNN. I call up for present consideration, under the order for to-day, the bill (H. R. 1075) for the relief of Merrill Denham.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Merrill Denham, of Madison County, Ky., out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $68, for seventeen days' service as storekeeper in the internal-revenue service, beginning January 21, 1889, under order of the collector of internal revenue of the eighth district of Kentucky.

Mr. BUNN. I desire to say only that this bill is to pay this party for seventeen days' work that he performed for the Government before he could take the oath of office. Afterwards he took the oath of office and performed the duties regularly for a year or more, and the Department suggests that he should be paid the sum which is properly due him for the time that he acted before taking the oath, which can not be allowed by the Department.

Mr. BYNUM. How long did this man serve as an officer of the Government?

Mr. BUNN. He served a long time after this date for which payment is now asked to be made, and until the distillery was discontinued, a year or so. He was appointed, but for seventeen days after his appointment, although he performed the duties of his position, he did not qualify. This is recommended by the Department.

Mr. BYNUM. Do I understand the gentleman to say that he performed the duties before he qualified?

Mr. BUNN. Yes; absolutely. He was on duty all the time. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MCCREARY].

Mr. MCCREARY of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, it became necessary at the distillery of W. S. Hume & Co., in Madison County, Ky., to employ extra revenue officials in the month of January, 1889, and the collector of internal revenue required the service of an additional storekeeper. He recommended the appointment of Merrill Denham for the position of storekeeper; and as he was needing the services of a storekeeper at the time, Mr. Denham was immediately assigned to duty. It took seventeen days to get the commission from Washington; but in the meantime he was discharging the duties of storekeeper all the time, and he is entitled to pay for the seventeen days he thus served. As he had not secured the commission, however, he was not able to secure payment from the Department.

The collector of internal revenue recommends that he be paid, and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue was willing that he should be paid, but he had no authority to pay him under the circumstances.

He discharged the duties faithfully as a $4 storekeeper before the commission arrived, and for more than a year afterwards. He is clearly entitled to the compensation.

Mr. KILGORE. I would like to propound an interrogatory to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. MCCREARY of Kentucky. Certainly.

Mr. KILGORE. I did not understand the name of the beneficiary of this bill.

Mr. MCCREARY of Kentucky. Merrill Denham.

Mr. KILGORE. I thought it was some lady. Well, when was the service rendered?

Mr. MCCREARY of Kentucky. In the month of January, 1889.

Mr. KILGORE. This party actually discharged the duty and received no compensation for it?

Mr. MCCREARY of Kentucky. He actually discharged the duty, being placed on duty by the collector of internal revenue before the time he received the commission for seventeen days, and he could not be paid because he had not received his commission.

Mr. KILGORE. Well, you are paying him $17 a day?

Mr. MCCREARY of Kentucky. No; $4 a day for seventeen days. Under the law Merrill Denham was not entitled to draw pay until he had regularly executed a bond and been assigned to duty, but the collector of internal revenue had to stop the distillery and thereby cause heavy loss to the distillers and the Government or place Merrill Denham on duty immediately. The collector of internal revenue states that Denham performed his duties faithfully and efficiently, not only for seventeen days before his commission was received and for which he has not been paid, but for many months thereafter. He is entitled to his pay, but the Commissioner could not pay him. Out of the abundance which our Government has he should be paid this just claim without delay. He has been kept out of it long enough because the bill could not be reached. Now that we have at last reached it, I hope it will pass unanimously.

Mr. KILGORE. I think the House might reject this claim on the general principle of law, de minimis non curat lex—the law takes no cognizance of small matters. I do not think we ought to bring in that sort of a bill here, and put the whole machinery of Government in operation. I would rather pay it myself—if I had the money. [Laughter.]

Mr. BUNN. I move that the bill be laid aside with favorable recommendation.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

H. W. M'CONNELL.

Mr. BUNN. I now call up the bill (H. R. 5368) for the relief of H. W. McConnell.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Postmaster-General be, and he is hereby, authorized to settle with and pay to H. W. McConnell the sum of $428 on account of his claim for that amount, growing out of the robbery of the mails between Jacksboro, Tex., and Dallas, Tex.; and to enable the Postmaster-General to carry this into effect the sum of $428 is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Mr. BUNN. Mr. Chairman, I ask that the report be read. It is very short and states the facts concisely.

The report (by Mr. HUTCHESON) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5368) for the relief of H. W. McConnell, having considered the same, report as follows:

That McConnell was postmaster at Jacksboro, Tex., in 1883; that he mailed a registered package of surplus funds of $350 on September 6, 1883, to Dallas, Tex., the stage containing which was robbed and the package lost. But the committee find that he allowed $4 accumulations of funds, against the requirements of the postal law, and that of the $350 only $94 was received during the day of transmittal, and that, therefore, he was guilty of negligence as to the loss of all except the $94. We recommend that the sum of $95 be refunded to him.

They further find that on the 22d of September, 1883, he transmitted $120, which was likewise stolen by highwaymen; but that, as before, he had permitted accumulations, and only $42 of the $120 were received by him on the day of transmittal, and for the loss of all of the balance of said sum he was clearly responsible for negligence and violation of law.

Your committee therefore recommend that the words "four hundred and twenty-eight," in lines 4 and 5, be stricken out, and that the words "one hundred and thirty-six" be substituted therefor, and that as so amended the bill do pass.

Mr. BUNN. I notice that there is a misprint in the report. It reads "$4 accumulations." I should be four days' accumulations of funds.

The CHAIRMAN. This is only an error in the report; not in the bill.

Mr. BUNN. That is all.

Mr. COOMBS. I would like to ask the gentleman from North Carolina if this postmaster made the loss good to the Department?

Mr. BUNN. Yes, sir.

Mr. COOMBS. Have you any communication from the Department to that effect?

Mr. BUNN. Oh, yes; and he asked to be reimbursed.

Mr. COOMBS. That does not appear in the report.

Mr. BUNN. We did not print all of the evidence, as it was quite full and cumulative, but the proof was that he paid the whole loss himself, and we relieve him now only to the extent of the loss that he was bound to send by that day's mail. The other accumulations, which were laid over and not sent in time, we do not allow compensation for.

Mr. COOMBS. As a matter of law is the Government responsible for the loss of funds transmitted through the mail?

Mr. BUNN. Certainly, when they are transmitted in accordance with the regulations.

Mr. KILGORE. I would like to inquire of the gentleman from North Carolina—I could not hear the report or the bill read here, there is so much confusion—is this a loss sustained by a postmaster?

Mr. BUNN. Yes, sir.

Mr. KILGORE. And for a burglary?

Mr. BUNN. It was the robbery of a mail after it was made up and went from his office.

Mr. KILGORE. The claim is $400, and the committee recommend a reduction?

Mr. BUNN. Yes; in accordance with the statement I have made.

Mr. KILGORE. The committee charge that he was guilty of negligence as to a portion of the loss?

Mr. BUNN. Yes, sir.

Mr. KILGORE. Now, if he was guilty of no negligence, can not the Department afford him relief?

Mr. BUNN. They think not.

Mr. KILGORE. The law is that way, I think.

Mr. BUNN. We think his relief can only be given by Congress; and we were so advised by the Department; and we naturally would take their word.

Mr. KILGORE. Did you submit this matter to the Department?

Mr. BUNN. Yes, sir.

Mr. KILGORE. Is it not a fact that the law provides that where the loss is less than $2,000 the Department can settle it with the postmaster; but if loss arises from his neligence then there is no hardship in the matter?

Mr. BUNN. The gentleman is speaking of a case where the post-office was burglarized. The gentleman has not kept up with the law.

Mr. KILGORE. How much do you allow him at last?

Mr. BUNN. One hundred and twenty-nine dollars.

Mr. KILGORE. Then the loss of that $129 was not caused by his neglect at all?

Mr. BUNN. We thought not; possibly we were mistaken.

Mr. KILGORE. I think you likely were; you are generally mistaken.

Mr. BUNN. I am glad to say that the House has found otherwise.

Mr. BYNUM. Mr. Chairman, we are not at all well-advised as to how this loss occurred. I would like to hear the gentleman explain how the money was lost, and how the money was transmitted, and what evidence there is that it was transmitted and lost.

Mr. BUNN. The evidence as to the carrying of the money and its loss was conclusive.

Mr. BYNUM. It may have been conclusive to the gentleman; but what I would like would be for him to give that evidence to the House.

Mr. BUNN. We did not print the evidence in the report because it would cost more to print it than it would to pay this sum.

Mr. BYNUM. The gentleman can state the substance of it.

Mr. BUNN. I have stated the facts in the matter, but will repeat them. The mail was made up in this office to be sent in accordance with the law. The stage that carried it was robbed and the funds were stolen.

Mr. BYNUM. Was this money transmitted simply through the mails?

Mr. BUNN. Why, certainly it was. It was in the regular course of transmission of these postal funds, by order of the Department. It was the only way he could do it. He followed his instructions.

Mr. BYNUM. Is there anyone other than the postmaster himself who testifies that this money was transmitted?

Mr. BUNN. It was proven by all the parties.

Mr. BYNUM. I do not understand how that could be.

Mr. BUNN. I will yield to the gentleman who made the report.

Mr. HUTCHESON. The Postmaster-General and the Sixth Auditor had this investigated, and I have their report; but we did not print it, because it would be more expensive to do so than to pay this sum; but there is no question about the loss. The only thing about the whole case which is not in favor of the claimant is that there was a portion of the money that he had kept too long by two or three days.

Mr. COCKRELL. I will state for the benefit of the gentleman from Indiana that this matter occurred in my district, and I am perfectly familiar with it. The point of deposit was at Dallas. The mail had to pass 65 miles from Jacksboro to the railroad, and the mail was robbed twice during this time when the funds were in the office. There is no question about it at all.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendments proposed by the committee.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. BUNN. I move that the bill be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

JOSEPH HAXTHAUSEN.

Mr. BUNN: Mr. Chairman, I now call up the bill (H. R. 526) for the relief of Joseph Haxthausen.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to pay to Joseph Haxthausen, of Louisville, Ky., the sum of $110, being the amount of special taxes overpaid by him in the year 1873.

Mr. BUNN. Mr. Chairman, the report in this matter is a little lengthy, and I desire to make a brief statement of the facts. In the fiscal year commencing with the 30th day of April, 1872, and ending with the 1st day of May, 1873, the firm of Ropke & Haxthausen paid a special tax amounting to $320, license for the entire year.

Mr. COOMBS. On what?

Mr. BUNN. As rectifiers of spirits. That was the amount that the law required them to pay. During that year Mr. Ropke died, and the Department called upon Mr. Haxthausen to pay this additional license tax, as he could not continue the business under the old firm name. So he paid for January, February, March, and April up to the 31st, amounting to $110, it having been covered by the refiners' license which had already been paid for by his firm. The Revenue Department certified to that fact and addressed Mr. Haxthausen a note stating that he would be entitled to a refund but for the fact that he did not make his application in time; and therefore this amount could not be paid back to him. That is the statement of facts; and I would like to answer any questions gentlemen may desire to ask.

Mr. COOMBS. It has been standing, then, for twenty-one years?

Mr. BUNN. Yes, sir.

Mr. COOMBS. Has it been brought up in Congress before?

Mr. BUNN. Yes, sir; it has been here ever since I have been here, and years and years before.

Mr. COOMBS. Has it ever been acted upon?

Mr. BUNN. It has been reported, but never called up for consideration.

Mr. COOMBS. It seems to me that this is a rather large lapse of time.

Mr. BUNN. It was no laches on the part of the man. He has been trying his best the whole time to get his bill through.

Mr. COOMBS. It must be admitted that under the law the man was not entitled to this refund.

Mr. BUNN. He was, if he had made it in time. I will read this letter of the Department to the gentleman:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF INTERNAL REVENUE,
Washington, February 23, 1881.

SIR: Your letter of the 20th instant has been received, in which you ask, on behalf of the Committee on Ways and Means, to be informed whether certain special taxes, amounting to $110, paid by Joseph Haxthausen upon the dissolution of the firm of Ropke & Haxthausen, as surviving partner of said firm, for the period commencing January 1, 1873, have ever been refunded.

I reply I have the honor to state that a claim for refunding $110, paid as above stated, was filed in this office by Mr. Haxthausen in September, 1879, and was rejected, not having been presented within three years from the date of the purchase of the stamps.

There is no record of any allowance by this office to Mr. Haxthausen on account of the special taxes above mentioned.

Respectfully,

WALTER EVANS, Commissioner.

Hon. ALBERT S. WILLIS,
House of Representatives.

So it will be seen from the report of the Commissioner that the only reason in the world why this money was not paid to this man before was, that he did not demand it within three years, and it was barred by the statute of limitations.

Mr. COOMBS. But do you think the Government ought to reopen matters of this kind now?

Mr. BUNN. I think so. This was a double tax. He paid the tax twice, and the Department says that they would have refunded it to him if he had asked it. I see no reason why it should not be paid now. Time and again we have passed bills in cases of this kind.

Mr. COOMBS. The amount involved in this case is very small, but it may serve as a precedent.

Mr. BUNN. I assert that the precedent has been embodied in every such bill that has come before this Congress, and no point of that kind has ever been made. It seems to me there can be no doubt as to the justice and propriety of this bill. I move that it be laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

The motion was agreed to.

GEORGE C. TANNER.

Mr. BUNN. I call up the bill (H. R. 2842) to reimburse Geo. C. Tanner, late consul, etc., the sum of $200 paid by him for rent of room.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the sum of $200 be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and that the same be paid to George C. Tanner, late consul at Verviers and Liege, for rent of rooms paid by him.

SEC. 2. That this act shall be in force from its passage.

Mr. COOMBS. Let the report be read.

The report (by Mr. RICHARDS) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2342) to relieve George C. Tanner, having duly considered the same, submit the following report:

This is a bill to reimburse George C. Tanner, late consul of the United States at Verviers and Liege, Belgium, the sum of $200 paid by him for rent of rooms for use of the consulate.

It appears from the evidence that while Mr. Tanner was absent on leave the term of lease of the consulate expired and the vice-consul renewed the lease for another year. On Mr. Tanner's return, he being ignorant of the renewal of the lease at Verviers by the vice-consul, removed the consulate to Liege.

Suit was then brought against him by the owner of the building at Verviers which had been vacated, for the unexpired term, and he was compelled to pay a sum amounting to $200 with costs, the receipts for which are on file at the State Department.

The maximum amount allowed for rent of the consulate was necessarily expended for the quarters actually occupied at Liege and there remained no fund from which the $200 could be paid by the State Department.

Mr. Tanner was without fault in the premises. He should be reimbursed, and your committee recommend that the bill do pass.

Mr. BUNN. Mr. Chairman, the report in this case is very brief. It was made by the gentleman from Ohio, Mr. RICHARDS, who investigated the case. He says he finds, as a matter of fact, from the evidence before him, that Mr. Tanner, who was our consul at the point named in the bill——

Mr. COOMBS. At what time?

Mr. BUNN. In 1885, I believe, though I am not quite certain of that, for I have not the evidence before me. It appears, I say, from the evidence that the vice-consul in the absence of the consul rented these premises——

Mr. KILGORE. Do I understand that some one connected with the consulate contracted for the renting of these rooms in the absence of the consul and without his authority?

Mr. BUNN. Yes, sir; the vice-consul, who was acting consul in his absence, did make the arrangement. The vice-consul, as a matter of course, had charge of the office until the consul arrived.

Mr. KILGORE. Was there any necessity for these rooms?

Mr. BUNN. There was an absolute necessity at that time.

Mr. KILGORE. Does the Department say anything about it?

Mr. BUNN. The Department says that he paid the money and that it should be refunded. The consul at first refused to pay the amount, but he was sued and a judgment was recovered against him for $200. He paid the judgment, and this bill simply provides that he be reimbursed the $200.

Mr. KILGORE. Was it the Democratic consul or the Republican vice-consul that made this arrangement? [Laughter.]

Mr. MEREDITH (to Mr. BUNN). Is this the case of my friend from Loudoun?

Mr. BUNN. Yes, sir.

Mr. MEREDITH. Well, he is a good man, and the bill ought to pass.

Mr. BUNN. As to the question of the gentleman from Texas, I can not answer it, because the question of politics has not entered into the examination of these cases in the Committee on Claims. Mr. Chairman, I move that the bill be laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

Mr. BYNUM. I wish to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. BUNN. I yield to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. MEREDITH], who introduced the bill, and the gentleman from Indiana can address his questions to him.

Mr. BYNUM. I understand that this consulate was in a certain building?

Mr. MEREDITH. Yes, sir.

Mr. BYNUM. And the consul took a leave of absence?

Mr. MEREDITH. By proper authority.

Mr. BYNUM. But without making any arrangements for the continuation of the lease or the continuation of the occupancy of the building after the lease should expire. Then while he was away the vice-consul, who was in charge, renewed the lease for one year. The consul returned and took the consulate out of the building before the time had expired——

Mr. MEREDITH. Yes, sir; but, as the report states, he was ignorant of the fact that a lease had been made by the vice-consul, and the parties sued him and he was compelled to pay this amount.

Mr. BYNUM. He must have been a very ignorant consul if he was ignorant of the fact that he was occupying premises which he had no right to occupy, or if he went away without making provision for the retention of the consulate in the building.

Mr. MEREDITH. The records show that he was a very efficient consul, and this is a very small matter for the Government of the United States to kick against. It is only $200.

Mr. BYNUM. The Government of the United States ought not to pay $200 for his negligence or carelessness.

Mr. MEREDITH. I deny that this happened because of his negligence or carelessness.

Mr. BYNUM. I think it did.

Mr. COOMBS. I will ask the chairman of the Committee on Claims whether the Department recommends the payment of this claim?

Mr. BUNN. Yes, sir.

Mr. COOMBS. Then I have nothing more to say.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. Just a word, Mr. Chairman. I suppose this matter is all right, because the committee have investigated and reported it, but it seems to me that this consul ought not to rest under the stigma of being ignorant and inefficient. He is one of our Virginia constituents, is he not?

Mr. MEREDITH. Yes, sir; and a good man, and he made a good consul.

Mr. BUNN'S motion was agreed to, and the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

CHARLES DEAL.

Mr. BUNN. I call up the bill (H. R. 7603) for the relief of Charles Deal.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to pay to Charles Deal, late a deputy collector of customs at Champlain, N. Y., the sum of $240.04, for expenses incurred by him in the case of Hugh O'Hara against said Deal, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Mr. BUNN. I ask that the report, which sets forth the facts very clearly, be read.

The report (by Mr. BUNN) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7603) for the relief of Charles Deal, having had the same under consideration, report it back to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

As a part of this report we print House Executive Document No. 135, second session Fifty-third Congress, which fully explains this bill and contains the reasons given for our action.

(House Executive Document No. 135, Fifty-third Congress, second session.)

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, April 7, 1894.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith copy of a communication from the Commissioner of Customs of the 4th instant, submitting the account of Charles Deal, late deputy collector of customs at Champlain, N. Y., for reimbursement of expenses incurred by him in the case of Hugh O'Hara vs. said Deal, $240.04.

This account grows out of a suit brought by Hugh O'Hara to recover the value of certain goods seized and sold by said Charles Deal, deputy collector, in which suit the jury, in January, 1892, returned a verdict of no cause of action, and the fees of witnesses and other expenses to the suit, amounting to $240.04, as per sworn account submitted to the Department, were paid by the said Charles Deal.

The provision of law for the payment by the United States of costs in suits against officers of the revenue is that made by section 989 of the Revised Statutes. That provision is restricted to cases in which a recovery is had against such officer of the revenue upon conditions prescribed by statute. There having been no recovery against the deputy collector in the case against Mr. Deal, there is no authority of law for paying the costs therein.

The amount accruing to the United States by the sale of the goods referred to was $350.06.

As these facts constitute equitable ground for relief, I have to recommend that the appropriation of $240.04 asked for be granted.

Respectfully, yours,

S. WIKE, Acting Secretary.

The SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONER OF CUSTOMS,
Washington, D. C., April 4, 1894.

SIR: Referring to the claim of Charles Deal, late deputy collector of customs at Champlain, N. Y., for reimbursement of expenses incurred by him in the case of Hugh O'Hara vs. Charles Deal, etc., which was reported to you by me on the 16th of January last, I have now to further report that he has furnished vouchers in support of said claim amounting to $240.04, being the whole amount of said claim, with the exception of the item charged by him for interest, which, in my judgment, should not be allowed. Each voucher contains a statement that the amount thereof has been paid to the person receipting therefor by Charles Deal, and is attested under oath.

This proof removes my previous objection to the recommendation of this claim to Congress for an appropriation.

The vouchers referred to are herewith transmitted.

Respectfully, yours,

WM. H. PUGH,
Commissioner of Customs.

The SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS,
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, UNITED STATES,
Washington, D. C., March 29, 1894.

SIR: I have the honor to inclose herewith papers in the matter of claim of Charles Deal, late a deputy collector, against the United States, to which papers I ask your kind attention.

Yours, respectfully,

JOHN M. WEVER, M. C.

Hon. J. G. CARLISLE,
Secretary of the Treasury, Washington, D. C.

CHAMPLAIN, N. Y., March 20, 1894.

SIR: Herewith find statement, with vouchers, for full amount of claim, as requested.

In reference to the item of interest will say, as the Government has had $350.06, net receipts from seizure since October, 1890, and it was in the execution of my duty, sustained by the court, that this money was paid, is it not but just that I should be allowed the interest thereon?

Respectfully, yours,

CHARLES DEAL.

Hon. WM. H. PUGH,
Commissioner of Customs, Washington, D. C.

Mr. BUNN. Mr. Chairman, as will be seen from this report, Charles Deal, being a deputy collector, seized goods of Hugh O'Hara which he, as the deputy collector, thought were subject to seizure under the statute. O'Hara thought differently, and brought suit against the deputy collector for damages on account of the seizure. The judgment of the court was in favor of Deal, thus sustaining the legality of the seizure; but, notwithstanding this fact, under the law as it now exists, the deputy collector was obliged to pay his own costs, the party bringing the suit against him proving to be insolvent.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. If the judgment was in favor of the defendant in this case, did not that carry costs?

Mr. BUNN. Undoubtedly; but, as I have here stated, the plaintiff proved to be utterly insolvent.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. I did not hear that statement.

Mr. BUNN. The vouchers have been duly certified and transmitted and the Department, after examination, has recommended to Congress the payment of this claim. I move that the bill be laid aside to be favorably reported to the House.

The motion was agreed to.

J. E. MERRIAM.

Mr. BUNN. I call up the bill (H. R. 507) for the relief of J. E. Merriam.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to J. E. Merriam the sum of $240, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for services as custodian of the Northwest Point, Royal Shoal light-house, fifth United States light-house district.

An amendment reported by the Committee on Claims, striking out "$240" and inserting "$120," was read.

Mr. BUNN. I will ask that the report be read.

Mr. COOMBS. Let the gentleman make an explanation.

Mr. BUNN. Very well. As requested by the gentleman from New York, I will explain this matter without occupying time in having the report read.

Mr. Merriam, the beneficiary named in this bill, was appointed keeper of the Northwest Point Royal Shoals light station, and at the same time he was given the care and custody of the Government property at Southwest Point Royal Shoals light station, both on the North Carolina coast. He held the position of keeper of the Northwest Point Royal Shoals light-house until May 31, 1885, when he resigned the same, but he continued to care for the property of the Government at Southwest Point Royal Shoals light station for two years after his said resignation. Mr. Merriam has never been paid anything for this service.

The committee fully examined the proof and found that, though living 10 miles away from the place where this Government property was, he had gone across in his boat twice a week, opened and aired the building, and looked after the property of the Government. For this service we thought he was entitled to $120, one-half the amount claimed.

Mr. COOMBS. Is this recommended by the Light-House Board?

Mr. BUNN. Yes, sir; it is recommended by the light-house authorities adjacent to this station. The amount recommended to be paid was $240; but we thought that, according to the proof, the services were not worth that much, so we have made the reduction named in the amendment.

The question being taken, the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BUNN. I move that the bill as amended be laid aside, to be reported favorably to the House.

The motion was agreed to.

MARTIN MADDUX.

Mr. BUNN. I call up the bill (H. R. 2845) for the relief of Martin Maddux.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to pay Martin Maddux, of Culpeper, Va., $972 for services rendered and performed as clerk in United States land office, Tucson, Pima County, Ariz., between the years 1888 and 1889.

Mr. COOMBS. I would like to hear the report read; and I hope we shall have order, so that we may hear it.

The CHAIRMAN. Before the report is read, the Chair desires to call the attention of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BUNN] to the fact that by the report the bill appears to have been reported with an amendment, but the amendment does not appear in the printed bill.

Mr. BUNN. I will ask, then, that the bill be amended in accordance with the report of the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, that will be done.

The report (by Mr. BUNN) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2825) for the relief of Martin Maddux, report that they carefully examined the same and recommend that the bill be amended by striking out the words "nine hundred and seventy-two," in line 6, and inserting in lieu thereof the words "four hundred and forty," and as so amended it do pass.

We present herewith as a part of our report copies of letters on file in the General Land Office, together with a statement of the amount claimed by the claimant; also, a letter dated June 8, 1892, from Hon. William M. Stone, Acting Commissioner of the General Land Office.

By reference to this letter it will appear that he fixes the balance due to Mr. Maddux at $440. This is done by calculating his wages at $3 per day.

The evidence before your committee justifies us in the conclusion that he made a special contract to perform this work at $4 per day. We have therefore added $1 per day for 280 days to the $440, making the aggregate $720.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., June 8, 1892.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your communication of the 31st ultimo, with certain inclosures, and, in reply to your request for further information respecting the claim of Mr. Martin Maddux for compensation for clerical services in the Tucson (Ariz.) land office, I have to state as follows:

As appears by the above-mentioned inclosures, Mr. Maddux was employed chiefly as a contest clerk in that office for the time stated, and would probably have been paid for such services had not the receiver, Fred. W. Smith absconded.

The period during which Mr. Maddux claims service is from November 1, 1888, to November 30, 1889, less Sundays and 16 days' absence sick, computed as 343 days, at $4 per day; total, $1,372. He allows a credit of $400, which he acknowledges to have received of Mr. Smith, the ex-receiver and disbursing agent.

The total number of days embraced in the period designated is 395; deducting Sundays, 56 days, and time absent sick, 16 days, total 72 days, and there remains 323 days.

The receiver was absent from the office, under an application for leave of absence, for fifty days, from October 9 to November 27, 1889, and under the rules was required to employ a clerk to take his place in the office at his own expense. It is believed Mr. Smith employed Mr. Maddux, and that during the time last mentioned the former alone is responsible for the latter's compensation. Therefore, deducting 50 days, less 7 Sundays, namely, 43 days, from 323, leaves 280 days for which compensation remains due if service was rendered as claimed, and paid for only in the amount of $400 as stated.

The usual rate of pay to contest clerks is $3 per day, instead of $4, as charged by claimant; two hundred and eighty days at $3 per day amounts to $840. Deducting the $400 acknowledged to have been received by Mr. Maddux there remains $440 apparently yet due him upon this claim.

The returns from the Tucson land office were so incomplete and unsatisfactory for the period in question as to render further report in the case impracticable.

No oath was ever filed in this office by Mr. Maddux, as required by all employés in local land offices.

Your inclosures are herewith returned.

Very respectfully,

W. M. STONE, Acting Commissioner.

Hon. B. H. BUNN,
Chairman Committee on Claims, House of Representatives.

UNITED STATES LAND OFFICE,
Las Cruces, N. Mex., December 11, 1889.

SIR: At the request of Martin Maddux, of Tucson, Ariz., I inclose herewith his bill against the Government for services rendered as "contest clerk" in the Tucson land office, Arizona.

I was unable to find any letter authorizing the appointment of Mr. Maddux as "contest clerk," and he was unable to refer to the precise date of his appointment; but from his conduct I am satisfied he thought he was a regularly appointed contest clerk by the late officers.

I find that in June, 1889, he was paid $256 as "contest clerk," but the books of the receiver show no other payment to him since November 16 last to 1st instant. Mr. Maddux, to my knowledge, has been working every day in the office at Tucson, Ariz., and he informed me that he was the "contest clerk," and when I arrived at Tucson he was working on the contest docket.

Respectfully,

W. D. HARLAN, Inspector.

The COMMISSIONER OF THE GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. C.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., December —, 1889.

GENTLEMEN: W. D. Harlan, inspector, submits bill of one Martin Maddux, of Tucson, who was a contest clerk in said office during the time from November 1, 1888, to December 1, 1889. This office can take no action in the matter, as said clerk hire is paid from fees received by receiver. You can report to this office all the facts in the case and notify Mr. Maddux that he must look to the late register and receiver for his pay.

Very respectfully,

W. M. STONE,
Assistant Commissioner.

REGISTER AND RECEIVER, Tucson, Ariz.

The United States of America to Martin Maddux, Dr.

To services rendered in the United States land office at Tucson, Ariz., as contest clerk, by virtue of an appointment as such clerk by A. D. Duff, then register, and by Maj. Fred. W. Smith, who was then and during the entire period of employment herein referred to continued to be receiver of public moneys at said land office at Tucson, Ariz.

Said appointment was made on the 1st day of November, 1888, and said services were rendered continuously (Sundays excepted) from said 1st day of November, 1888, up to and including the 1st day of December, 1889, except sixteen days, during which said Martin Maddux was sick and unable to work.

The services consisted in reducing the testimony of witnesses in contested land cases to writing, and preparing papers for such contest cases, and doing such general clerical work in the offices of the said register and the said receiver as there was to be done; and, at the request of the receiver, performing contest and general clerical work in the register's office during the illness of A. D. Duff, whilst said Duff was register of said land office at said

Tucson, until and since the appointment of Herbert Brown as such register, and up to said 1st day of December, 1889, at $4 per day:

343 days, at $4 per day	$1,372.00
By cash received from Receiver F. W. Smith	400.00
To balance due from United States of America	972.00

Exhibits 1, 2, and 3, are hereto annexed, referred to, and made a part of this demand.

TERRITORY OF ARIZONA, COUNTY OF PIMA,
District of Arizona, ss:

Martin Maddux, being first duly sworn, deposes and says that he has rendered the foregoing services as stated in the foregoing demand, and that the same are true and just, and were necessarily rendered, and that the compensation asked therefor is reasonable.

MARTIN MADDUX.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 10th day of December, 1889.
[SEAL.]
Notary Public, Pima County, Ariz.

TUCSON, ARIZ., December 10, 1889.

I hereby approve the foregoing account or demand and certify that the services therein mentioned were actually and necessarily rendered in discharging the business of the office of register and of receiver of the United States land office at Tucson, Ariz.; and that said services were rendered by said Martin Maddux.

FRED. W. SMITH.

EXHIBIT 1.

UNITED STATES LAND OFFICE,
Tucson, Ariz., December 10, 1889.

SIR: I have the honor to report that Mr. Martin Maddux has since July 16, 1889, acted as contest clerk in this office and attended to such business in that department as properly came before him. He was officiating in that capacity when I assumed the duties of register and continued so to act until the 1st instant.

Very respectfully,

HERBERT BROWN, Register.

The COMMISSIONER OF THE GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. C.

EXHIBIT 2.

UNITED STATES LAND OFFICE,
Tucson, Ariz., December 10, 1889.

Martin Maddux, of Tucson, Ariz., has been performing the duties of contest clerk in this office, to my own personal knowledge, since August 1, 1889, and the records show his work prior to that date.

He has performed said duties, so far as I know, to the perfect satisfaction of all concerned, and has been of great service to the special agent of the General Land Office in giving the correct data of contest cases now pending. I respectfully recommend that he be fully compensated for his services.

Very respectfully,

D. A. BOWMAN,
Special Agent, General Land Office.

I, M. R. Slater, do hereby certify that I was a special agent of the General Land Office from May, 1888, to April, 1889, and that Martin Maddux was employed as a contest clerk in the Tucson land office (in which office I had my headquarters) from November, 1888, until a few days ago, except at one period he was absent for a few days, probably not more than ten days or two weeks; that as special agent I had several hearings on behalf of the Government, and that I always found said Maddux efficient, courteous, and competent, and common justice demands that he should receive remuneration for his services as such contest clerk.

M. R. SLATER,
Late Special Agent, General Land Office

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 19th day of December, A. D. 1889.
[SEAL.]
THOS. A. BORTON,
Notary Public, Pima County, Ariz.

Mr. BUNN. Mr. Chairman, the report accompanying the bill is very full and complete. I think it covers all of the points involved, explains thoroughly the basis of the bill, and I therefore move that it be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

The CHAIRMAN. The question will be first on the amendment recommended by the committee.

Mr. MCNAGNY. Before the question is submitted I would like to get some information from the gentleman from North Carolina. Under the law are not these clerks regularly paid by the Government on accounts sent in and audited?

Mr. MEREDITH. The register or the receiver in this case ran away.

Mr. MCNAGNY. The gentleman from Virginia informs me that in this instance the register or receiver ran away from the office.

Mr. BUNN. Yes, sir; that is correct. Mr. F. W. Smith, who was the receiver at the land office, absconded.

Mr. MCNAGNY. Is it possible, or is it in evidence that this man would have been continued in that place, unless he was acting in the absence of his principal, and no inquiry was made about it?

Mr. BUNN. It does seem, I admit, to be a very strange case. But the Commissioner of the General Land Office, Mr. W. M. Stone, in a letter addressed to me, explains the fact and states that this man performed the duties, and he recommends the payment.

Mr. MCNAGNY. Is it not probable, let me ask the gentleman, that this man was acting as the deputy of the receiver, and in his place; and that the Government is not at all liable for the compensation; in other words, that this party must look to the receiver?

Mr. BUNN. I think not, from the evidence accompanying the claim.

Mr. MCNAGNY. Is it not more probable that he ought to have looked to the receiver for payment?

Mr. BUNN. I think not. The receiver was an officer of the Government——

Mr. MCNAGNY. Is it not a very remarkable case that a man would have continued in the employment so long a time without any compensation whatever? It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, that this case is surrounded by such peculiarities as require a further investigation of it. I hope the gentleman will not press it.

Mr. MEREDITH. If the gentleman from North Carolina will yield to me for a moment, I would like to state that if there is anything harder than for a "camel to pass through the eye of a needle," it is to get a claim, although a just one, through the Claims Committee of this House.

Now, the evidence in this case shows that this man Maddux performed the services for which the claim is made against the Government for payment, and that according to the testimony this service was necessary to be performed, and that it has been of large benefit to the Government. Every day that he was sick, every Sunday and every day on which he was not employed, has been deducted from the claim, and he has been allowed but $3 a day for the time actually in the service and performing duty.

Mr. MCNAGNY. Will the gentleman pardon a further suggestion?

Mr. MEREDITH. Certainly.

Mr. MCNAGNY. If this man was acting for the receiver, who had absconded, and discharged his duties all of this time, is it not a fact that the Government was very likely liable to the receiver for the service performed? There is no proof here that the Government has not paid already for the services to the receiver, not only the amount covered in the claim, but largely in excess of the amount in the shape of fees.

Mr. BUNN. Not at all. Here is a letter from the Acting Commissioner of the General Land Office showing that the man has not been paid.

Mr. COOMBS. What is the date of that letter?

Mr. BUNN. June, 1892.

Mr. MEREDITH. The letter is dated since the services were rendered and since the bill has been before the committee.

Mr. BYNUM. Will the gentleman have that letter read again?

Mr. BUNN. Well, it has been read already from the desk. It it quite a long letter.

Mr. BYNUM. That part of it to which the gentleman now refers.

Mr. BUNN. Certainly; I will read that part of it for the gentleman. The Commissioner says:

> The usual rate of pay to contest clerks is $4 per day instead of $4 as charged by claimant. Two hundred and eighty days, at $3 per day, amounts to $840. Deducting the amount acknowledged to have been received by Mr. Maddux, there remains $440 apparently yet due him upon this claim.

Mr. BYNUM. "Apparently." That does not cover the facts in controversy.

Mr. BUNN. It covers the fact that the office has not paid him.

Mr. MCNAGNY. But it does not say the receiver had not been paid for that identical service.

Mr. BUNN. Why, undoubtedly. The receiver reported to the land office——

Mr. MCNAGNY. But the gentleman does not get my point. My point is that the receiver absconded, and that this man under some arrangement was discharging the duties, but there is nothing to show, no proof submitted here, that the receiver had not already been paid in full.

Mr. BUNN. The receiver has been paid in full. He received the money——

Mr. MCNAGNY. Certainly.

Mr. BUNN. And it was his duty to disburse the money?

Mr. MCNAGNY. Certainly.

Mr. BUNN. And if he did receive the money and did not disburse it, why our committee thought that the Government was liable. The evidence they act upon is very clear in that respect.

Mr. MCNAGNY. But my point is that there is an entire absence of proof that the Government has not already paid this receiver for the services that would have been rendered by him if this man had not rendered the services here claimed for.

Mr. MEREDITH. Does not he make an affidavit to the fact that he has not been paid.

Mr. MCNAGNY. No, sir; there is not a particle of proof that the Government has not paid for this service.

Mr. MEREDITH. The Government ordered that it be paid out of the receipts of the land office.

Mr. McNAGNY. Certainly.

Mr. MEREDITH. And that man certainly was the agent of the Government.

Mr. McNAGNY. This man discharged his duties during his absence.

Mr. MEREDITH. Yes, sir.

Mr. McNAGNY. And now what evidence is there that this man's employer has not paid him for his services and taxed the Government with it?

Mr. BUNN. The Government could not have paid Martin Maddux, having put it in the hands of the receiver. The receiver was an officer of the Government, and the receiver held it as the property of the Government until he discharged the duty, and then it comes against the Government.

Mr. MEREDITH. The Government was responsible for the act of its agent.

Mr. BUNN. Undoubtedly. That has been held for a considerable period. We all have some recollection of the holding in the Silcott case here.

Mr. BYNUM. You will have to get a quorum before you can pass this bill.

Mr. BUNN. I move that the bill be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The question was taken, and the Chairman announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. BYNUM. Division, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. BUNN. I withdraw this bill from consideration.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

WILLIAM H. QUINN.

Mr. BUNN. I now call up the bill (H. R. 3605) for the relief of William H. Quinn.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to William H. Quinn, of the District of Columbia, the sum of $4,000, for services rendered by him in addition to his duties as draw-keeper at Anacostia or Navy Yard Bridge, in exercising supervision over said bridge, and also over Bennings Bridge; in making all estimates for repairs for both of said bridges and purchasing material for same from 1869 to 1878; and also for services as inspector for the Government of all mechanical work of the said Navy Yard Bridge, and supervising the construction of same, in 1874 and 1875.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Chairman, I would like to hear a good deal of explanation about that.

Mr. BUNN. You shall have it.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 6, strike out the words "four thousand" and insert "nine hundred and forty."

Mr. BUNN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to state that this is a perfectly plain bill. The claim has been before the Court of Claims and that court has rendered its judgment. On the 25th day of January, 1888, the account was rendered, and I will ask, if any one desires information, that the findings of the Court of Claims be read.

Mr. COOMBS. Let them be read.

Mr. PICKLER. How much did the court give?

Mr. BUNN. Nine hundred and forty dollars, instead of $4,000; and that is all my committee recommends.

Mr. KILGORE. Send that up and let it be read.

Mr. BUNN. I have no interest in the case, except that this is a poor Irishman in the city whom I never saw before. Let the report be read.

The report [by Mr. BUNN] was read as follows:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3605) for the relief of William H. Quinn, submit the following report:

That the facts upon which this claim is based sufficiently appear in the findings of fact by the Court of Claims in William H. Quinn vs. The United States, which are below given in full and made a part of this report.

Your committee are of opinion that the claim is a just one, and do therefore report the bill back with the recommendation that the words "four thousand," in line 6, be stricken out, and the words "nine hundred and forty" be inserted in their stead, and as so amended that the bill do pass.

[Court of Claims. Congressional case No. 295. William H. Quinn vs. The United States.]

FINDINGS OF FACT.

At a Court of Claims held in the city of Washington on the 19th day of December, A. D. 1887, the court filed the following findings of fact, to wit:

The claim in the above-entitled case was transmitted to the court by the Committee on Claims of the House of Representatives on the 10th day of February, 1885.

James H. Embry, esq., appeared for claimant, and the Attorney-General, by F. P. Dewees, esq., his assistant, and under his direction, appeared for the defense and protection of the interests of the United States.

The case having been brought to a hearing on its merits on the 6th day of December, 1887, the court, upon the evidence and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, finds the facts to be as follows:

I. The claimant was appointed a drawkeeper at the Anacostia or navy-yard bridge over the Eastern Branch of the Potomac in October, 1869, and continued in said capacity until May, 1878, and received compensation as drawkeeper at the rate of $720 per annum. He was without an assistant until July 1, 1874.

The following letter defined his duties at the time of his appointment:

OFFICE OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS, GROUNDS, AND WORKS,
Washington, D. C., October, 1869.

SIR: You are hereby directed to take charge of the Navy-Yard Bridge. It will be your duty to keep the floor of the same in good condition, free from breaks and holes, to keep it at all times clean, and for this purpose it will be swept at least once a day, to prevent fast driving over the bridge, to prevent all accidents or damage, as far as is possible, and in general to keep a strict watch over it at all times, and for this purpose you had better live somewhere in the immediate vicinity of the bridge.

Very respectfully,

TIMOTHY LUBERRY,
Superintendent in charge of Bridges.

Mr. WM. C. QUINN, Bridge-keeper.

II. While so employed, in pursuance of instructions, he exercised constant supervision over the Anacostia bridge, and also over Bennings bridge, 2 miles above, and in the discharge of these duties he made all estimates for the constant repairs of both bridges, purchased and inspected all material, employed all mechanics and laborers and kept their time, supervised their work, and witnessed their payment.

III. When the new Anacostia Bridge was built under contract, in 1874 and 1875, the claimant represented the Government as inspector in seeing that all the requirements of the contract were complied with, both in the materials used and in the construction of the bridge, from the driving of the piles to the completion thereof. His time was fully occupied, and in many instances he was required to be on duty at night when the work was going on. For all of the services enumerated on the two bridges he has never received compensation beyond his salary as drawkeeper.

IV. The condition of the two bridges, during claimant's term as drawkeeper, was such that his time was largely occupied in the work of supervision and inspection and in the purchase of materials and employment of mechanics and laborers. The draw at the Navy-yard Bridge required only occasional service, and Bennings was not a drawbridge.

V. The services of claimant were necessary and useful, and if he had not been so employed some other superintendent and inspector would have been indispensable to the proper care and necessary repairs of the two bridges.

VI. In 1870 his additional service did not begin till December. For the years 1871, 1872, and 1873 the additional service was reasonably worth $100 per year, at the same time taking into consideration the fact that he was in the Government employment and not fully occupied. For the years 1874 and 1875, when the new Anacostia Bridge was building, and the claimant acted as inspector both as to work and materials, and superintended the driving of the piles, being frequently on duty at night, the additional service was reasonably worth $200 a year. For the years 1876 and 1877, and until May, 1878, the additional service in supervising both bridges was reasonably worth $100 a year, amounting in all to $940.

VII. The claimant applied to Gen. Babcock, while he was Commissioner of Public Buildings, for additional compensation, and was informed that it would be approved by him, but would require the action of Congress. He subsequently applied to the present Commissioner of Public Buildings (Col. Casey), who decided, with the approval of the War Department, that the claim was barred by the provision of the Revised Statutes, section 1765.

BY THE COURT.

Filed December 19, 1887.

A true copy.

Test, this 25th day of January, A. D. 1888.

[SEAL.] JOHN RANDOLPH,
Assistant Clerk, Court of Claims.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Chairman, I understand from the reading of that report that the party named in that bill received as drawkeeper something over $700 a year, and that when he was put in charge of that bridge and his duties were multiplied or enlarged he received the same pay that he did before.

Mr. BUNN. Yes, sir.

Mr. KILGORE. Now, the purpose of this bill is to give him an increase in his pay during that time that he was on duty as an inspector, etc., is it not?

Mr. BUNN. It is to increase his pay for the extra work.

Mr. McNAGNY. If the gentleman will pardon an interruption, he will find that the claim is absolutely barred by the statute of limitations.

Mr. KILGORE. When it went to the Court of Claims did not the House, when it referred it to the Court of Claims, remove the bar?

Mr. McNAGNY. It could not.

Mr. KILGORE. How much did the Court of Claims find that this man would be entitled to at a reasonable rate of compensation, and how does it happen that there is such a great discrepancy between the amount found by the court and the amount originally claimed? I would be willing to hear an explanation of that from the gentleman from North Carolina or any other gentleman who knows anything about this case.

Mr. BUNN. In response to the gentleman from Texas, I will say that I do not know why this man claimed $4,000.

Mr. KILGORE. I would like to inquire if he claimed any extra compensation by reason of these extra duties?

Mr. BUNN. Undoubtedly he did at the time.

Mr. KILGORE. Have you proof to that effect?

Mr. BUNN. Yes. The evidence was before the committee.

Mr. KILGORE. Written proof?

Mr. BUNN. Yes, sir. Our committee has rarely taken testimony in any other form.

Mr. KILGORE. I do not mean the man's own affidavit, but testimony from other sources.

Mr. GROSVENOR. The gentleman from Texas evidently did not hear the report read.

Mr. KILGORE. I could not hear it; there was so much confusion around me.

Mr. GROSVENOR. One of the findings of the court is that the claimant "applied to the Commissioner of Public Buildings for additional compensation and was informed that it would be approved by him, but would require the action of Congress; that he subsequently applied to the present Commissioner of Public Buildings, Col. Casey [that was back in 1887], and that he, with the approval of the War Department, decided that the claim was barred by the statute of limitations."

Mr. KILGORE. Had not this man been drawing a salary or compensation from some other source while he was performing the duties for which he claims pay now?

Mr. GROSVENOR. It does not so appear, and I do not see why the gentleman should assume that.

Mr. BYNUM. He was getting a salary of $700 from the Government all the time.

Mr. KILGORE. I understand that, and I understand that it is the difference between that amount and the amount it is supposed he ought to have that is claimed under this bill; but my inquiry is whether he was not drawing some other compensation—a pension, or something of that kind—from some other source.

Mr. BUNN. He was not drawing a pension.

Mr. KILGORE. Was not he a Union soldier, and had not he been shot all full of holes? [Laughter.]

Mr. BUNN. Well, sir; I did not examine into that.

Mr. KILGORE. Well, that is what I understand to be the case; and if so, he ought to have a pension.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I have not seen the old gentleman, but I understand that he is in a helpless condition and that he has been prosecuting this claim for a great many years.

Mr. BUNN. The gentleman from Indiana says that this claim was found by the court to be barred by the statute of limitations. There is not a word in the report which justifies that statement. The report says that "he subsequently applied to the present Commissioner of Public Buildings and Grounds, Col. Casey, who decided, with the approval of the War Department, that his claim was barred by the statute of limitations."

Mr. BYNUM. When did he apply?

Mr. BUNN. I do not know just when. The statement here is that he "subsequently" applied. There is not a word to the effect that the court decided that the claim was barred.

Mr. PICKLER. What services did he render that he was not obliged to perform under his contract?

Mr. BUNN. The report answers that question. It states the conditions of the service. He was first employed to keep the Anacostia bridge and then he was sent to Bennings, an entirely different bridge, which did not come under the contract.

Mr. PICKLER. And the Court of Claims found that this overwork was reasonably worth $900?

Mr. BUNN. Yes, sir; and the finding sets forth definitely what the work was.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. He also acted as inspector of materials for the repair of the bridge?

Mr. BUNN. Certainly. It seemed to the committee that there was no doubt about the propriety of this claim, and I may add that it has been reported upon favorably in every Congress since the Court of Claims passed upon it.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment reported by the committee.

Mr. BYNUM. I suggest to the gentleman that he withdraw this bill. I do not think it ought to pass, and I shall antagonize it. So if the gentleman wishes to save time he will do well to withdraw it.

Mr. BUNN. Well, if it is the gentleman's idea to antagonize everything, of course he has a right to do so.

Mr. BYNUM. I am not antagonizing everything, but I am going to antagonize this bill; and if the gentleman wishes to proceed with this business let him call up another bill.

Mr. BUNN. Well, I will endeavor to find something that will please the gentleman from Indiana. I withdraw the bill, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. BYNUM. The gentleman must not be too pert about it, or he may find that I can not be pleased with anything. [Laughter.]

Mr. BUNN. Well, I will try to please the gentleman from Indiana. I call up the bill (H. R. 3315) for the relief of James Hooper.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the sum of $23,150.20, with interest thereon from July 10, 1864, be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any moneys not otherwise appropriated, to be paid to James Hooper, of Baltimore City, in the State of Maryland, for the difference between the value of the bark General Berry, owned by him, $41,650.20, and the net amount received from the Government as a war risk, $16,000, less $2,500 costs of collection; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to pay to James Hooper, or to his order, said sum of $23,150.20, with interest thereon at the rate of 4 per cent from July 10, 1864, out of any moneys in his hands, or which shall come to his hands, not otherwise appropriated.

Amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

Page 1, lines 4 and 5, strike out "July 10, 1864," and insert "September 9, 1873."

Page 2, lines 17 and 18, make the same amendment.

Mr. BUNN. Mr. Chairman, I have called up this bill at the request of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. COX], and I yield to him.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, if I can have the attention of the committee a few minutes I think I can make this question plainer than it would be made by the rapid reading of the report from the Clerk's desk.

I do not hesitate to say at the outstart that a more meritorious and absolutely upright claim was never presented against this Government. It is based upon these facts: In 1864 Mr. Hooper was the owner of a vessel known as the General Berry, which was chartered by the Government to transport freights from New York to Fortress Monroe. There were no other freights on the vessel except such as belonged to the quartermaster's department of the Government. During the transit from New York to Fortress Monroe, the Florida, a Confederate cruiser, took the Berry and one or two other vessels, and destroyed the cargoes and the vessels.

When the arrangement was made between the United States and Great Britain as to the awarding of damages for the destruction of vessels under circumstances of this kind, the vessels destroyed by the cruiser Florida, except this one, entered into the consideration of the Geneva arbitrators and were paid for. On the first consideration of the matter this vessel, the General Berry, was omitted upon some technical ground; and the claim for this vessel was not adjusted.

Mr. DINGLEY. Can the gentleman state what was that "technical ground"?

Mr. COX. Yes, sir. The technical ground, as alleged by the claimant, was that his attorneys failed to prosecute the claim. But that is all obviated, as will be seen in a moment when I make a further statement of the facts. Afterward the abitrators selected to adjust these claims and make awards considered the claim in reference to the General Berry, and decided that the claimant was entitled to a certain amount of money, which was paid by Great Britain in discharge of the claim of Mr. Hooper and passed into the Treasury of the United States for the purpose of being paid to him as the owner of this vessel.

Now, the present claim is based upon the recovery of that money by our Government from Great Britain for the destruction of this very vessel. That is the whole case. In the examination as to the value of the vessel, she was valued, I believe, at $40,737. I am speaking from memory.

Mr. BUNN. That is the amount which was paid in.

Mr. COX. That is the amount paid into the Treasury of the United States by Great Britain.

Now, the United States Government, when it took charge of the vessel to transport these supplies, took what is called a "war risk" of $16,000. This amount was paid to Mr. Hooper. He set up a claim of two thousand and some hundred dollars as expenses in the collection of this $16,000. The committee decided that he was entitled to receive from the Government of the United States the forty-odd thousand dollars which the papers show to have been the value of the vessel, less the $16,000 which the Government paid him; and the committee further decided that he was not entitled to receive anything as compensation for expenses incurred in the collection of that sum of $16,000.

Now the whole case is summed up in this statement: The Government of the United States has received from Great Britain in payment for the destruction of this identical vessel; and the committee has allowed Mr. Hooper the amount paid by Great Britain less the $16,000 paid to him by the United States—all expenses of collection to fall upon Mr. Hooper. Consequently the amount of this claim is the balance (after deducting the $16,000) of the money awarded by the Geneva arbitrators and paid into the Treasury of the United States by Great Britain to compensate the owner for the loss of this vessel.

This money was paid into the Treasury of the United States in September, 1873; and as it was paid over by Great Britain for the purpose of meeting this claim, the committee thought it right to allow the claimant interest on the amount. This is the whole case.

Mr. KILGORE. When this man received the $16,000 did he execute any receipt?

Mr. COX. Oh, yes. There is no question about the payment of the $16,000.

Mr. KILGORE. Did he accept that as a full payment of all claim against the Government?

Mr. COX. No.

Mr. KILGORE. Have you seen a copy of the receipt?

Mr. COX. Oh, yes. This claim has been investigated in every Congress of the last six or eight.

Mr. KILGORE. Was this award of $40,000 made specifically by the Geneva arbitrators to this man or for his vessel?

Mr. COX. Precisely.

Mr. KILGORE. Then why was it not paid like all other awards?

Mr. COX. I have been trying to explain that this man did not get his claim through upon the first award; but on a reëxamination of the matter his claim was allowed; and the Government of Great Britain paid over the money.

Mr. KILGORE. That is no reason why the Government of the United States should pay it now.

Mr. COX. I think it is a reason why it should be paid now.

Mr. KILGORE. If it could have been paid under the law, it seems that it would have been paid unless something was wrong about it. It could have been paid without a special act of Congress.

Mr. COX. I wish he had been paid; this bill would not have been here.

Mr. HUNTER. Let me ask the gentleman whether he presented his entire claim to the award in the first instance, and why any part of it was deducted and not the whole?

Mr. COX. Well, only a part was paid in the shape I think my friend has in mind. I will explain, though. The vessel was valued at forty thousand seven hundred and some odd dollars. That valuation was finally allowed by the board of arbitration. But the Government of the United States in taking charge of the vessel in the first instance assumed a war risk of $16,000. Now, the Government of the United States had paid the $16,000 before they got the money from Great Britain, but the vessel was valued at forty thousand and over, as I have said, and the remainder of the money which has not been paid is still in the Treasury.

Mr. HUNTER. I do not understand what you mean by the term "war risk."

Mr. COX. Why, the Government of the United States, in transporting supplies, assumed the war risk; that is, to the extent of $16,000 in case the vessel was destroyed. It is a kind of insurance.

Mr. HUNTER. Then the Government was in the insurance business at that time?

Mr. COX. Yes, to a certain extent.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Mr. Chairman, this bill is a very peculiar one——

Mr. COX. Does the gentleman desire to ask a question?

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. No; I want to take the floor in my own time.

Mr. COX. I have yielded only for a question, not for a speech.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Then I propose to take the floor to make a speech before this bill passes.

Mr. COX. Well, you may make as many as you desire, but I have the floor at present. This claim is nothing to me, Mr. Chairman, except that it is to do an old man an act of justice.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. The case has not been one-half presented to the House. There are some important matters to which the attention of the House should be called before action is taken upon it.

Mr. COX. Then I wish you would call my attention to them.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. I will, in my own time.

Mr. COX. I do not propose to yield the floor to the gentleman.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Very well; that may be, but I can assure the gentleman that this bill will not pass until I have had an opportunity of being heard at least.

Mr. COX. Oh, well; I have heard that kind of talk all my life. You will not get the floor now until my time is up.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Very well.

Mr. HICKS. Will the gentleman admit a question?

Mr. COX. If you will come to the point I will answer any question.

Mr. HICKS. The question is this: What is the exact amount of this claim?

Mr. COX. The exact amount paid into the Treasury of the United States was forty thousand seven hundred and odd dollars.

Mr. HICKS. What do you claim?

Mr. COX. Well, the Government paid under the war risk $16,000, which left a balance of about $24,000.

Mr. HICKS. Why was not that balance paid along with the rest of the claim?

Mr. COX. Why, I have just explained. When the money was first paid over by Great Britain this claim had not been considered, but was considered afterwards. Afterwards Great Britain paid the money into the Treasury on the award, and this money is still there. Now, it belongs either to the Government of Great Britain or old man Hooker——

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. That is not the question at all.

Mr. PICKLER. Does it require an act of Congress to get any of that money out of the Treasury that was paid subsequently?

Mr. COX. Precisely.

Mr. PICKLER. Why has it been kept all these years in the Treasury?

Mr. COX. Why, this old man has been knocking here ever since the award was made, and has been working all the time, as he is working now, to get this claim allowed.

Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland. It was passed in the Forty-eighth Congress.

Mr. REED. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. COX. Yes, sir.

Mr. REED. In the first place, can the gentleman be right in saying that this money is now in the Treasury?

Mr. COX. There is no doubt about it.

Mr. REED. But the whole Geneva award has been distributed.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Every dollar of it.

Mr. COX. No, sir; this money has not been paid.

Mr. REED. I had something to do with the last distribution made of the Geneva award, and if my recollection serves me right, and I think it does, although I have not kept all the details of the subject in my mind—but if my recollection serves me, the remainder of the Geneva award was distributed pro rata among the war premium men. Consequently there can not be any of the Geneva award still left in the Treasury. That is the first place.

In the second place, Mr. Hooper had an opportunity to appear before the first Geneva award commission, which was in 1874, or thereabouts.

Mr. COX. Eighteen hundred and seventy-three, I think.

Mr. REED (continuing). And he did not receive a favorable report, the case being decided against him by the commission. Subsequently, I find by the report, Congress permitted the claimant to present his claim a second time. So he has had two opportunities to have a hearing on the claim.

As to the ultimate justness of it I know nothing. Only these three facts: First, that there is no Geneva award now remaining in the Treasury, consequently this money will have to be paid, if paid at all, out of the United States Treasury; second, that there has been one adjudication on the case brought directly before the Alabama claims commission; and the third fact is that he has had a second opportunity.

Now I think that these two last things ought to be explained to the satisfaction of the committee, or else he ought not to recover.

Mr. COX. Now, I will ask the gentleman to listen to me for one moment and see if I do not make it satisfactory to him.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. May I suggest to the gentleman from Tennessee——

Mr. COX. After I answer the gentleman. When the first arbitrators passed upon this question the claim of this old man was presented, but it was not passed upon. Afterwards——

Mr. REED. It was passed upon.

Mr. COX. It was not allowed or disallowed.

Mr. REED. It was disallowed. You can not say that it was not passed upon.

Mr. COX. After that he presented his case again for a second examination. The gentleman from Maine will remember that on that cruise the Florida destroyed other vessels than the General Berry, and under the same circumstances as his claim was based they were allowed. Now, the first award was distributed, but this, being for the destruction of the General Berry by the Florida, has never been distributed; and there is no other claim there as to this fund, as we are informed by the Department, except for the General Berry, which belonged to this gentleman.

Mr. REED. Does the gentleman mean to say that this sum of forty-odd thousand dollars has been retained in the Treasury?

Mr. COX. No, sir; I mean there has been forty-odd thousand dollars received by the Treasurer of the United States. The Government of the United States had paid the old gentleman $16,000 (I speak in round numbers) on the war risk which he had assumed, which is in the nature of insurance, and left $24,000, which was paid by Great Britain, in the Treasury of the United States. Now, my point is this, if I am not mistaken, that of the forty thousand paid by Great Britain into the Treasury the Government has the right to retain $16,000, which it paid itself, and that left $24,000 there. Now, whose money is that?

Mr. REED. But the trouble is that the $24,000 was not left there. The United States distributed that under the second Geneva award bill, which came from the committee of which I was at that time chairman, the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. COX. I would not upon a question of fact set myself up against the gentleman from Maine, but that matter was investigated by the committee, and we had no trouble in arriving at the fact that $24,000 remained in the Treasury paid by Great Britain for this vessel.

Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland. Will the gentleman allow me to ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. KILGORE. I would like to have the statement of the gentleman from Maine in regard to the matter which has just been referred to.

Mr. COX. I would not know this old man, Mr. Hooper, if I met him in the road. All I care for is to present the facts as I understand them.

Mr. REED. I have no doubt the gentleman has stated the facts as he understands them, but I think that he has been misled in the matter. I do not mean improperly misled.

Mr. COX. Oh, no.

Mr. REED. Or that anybody has improperly misled him. I do not mean that; I only mean that there is an error as to facts.

Mr. COX. You think the $24,000 has been paid out?

Mr. REED. It has been paid out.

Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland. To somebody else.

Mr. REED. Paid out generally. Now, I have no desire to cloud this question the least bit in the world. I make no opposition to it. I only want the committee to know upon what basis it is proceeding. I do not know whether it is a just claim or not. I do not pass any opinion upon that. But, as I understand, the situation is this: The arbitrators did not give any specified sum in any specified case. They gave the sum of $15,000,000 in lump to cover the differences between the United States and Great Britain, whatever they might be; and that was given to the United States.

Mr. COX. Pardon me one moment. That was the first award.

Mr. REED. It was the only award.

Mr. COX. No, sir; there was another award.

Mr. REED. There was but one award of $15,000,000 given for the purpose of satisfying claims, not of individuals, but of the United States; and the United States was to dispose of that entire sum to suit itself. Accordingly a bill was passed by which the damages inflicted by certain specified vessels to our shipping was paid for, and then the sums paid out by insurance companies on damages because of these particular vessels. That left something like $7,000,000, not counting the interest (and I do not pretend to be exact as to the amount), which was to be disposed of. In the Forty-seventh Congress it was disposed of on this plan. We paid on a certain class of vessels outside of those considered by the commission, because, in our judgment, the United States ought to protect the owners of those ships. Then there were one or two other claims paid, and then the rest of the sum was given to the war-premium men.

Gentlemen will recollect that during the war, owing to the attacks of Confederate cruisers, heavy premiums were assessed on marine risks. Premiums went up to a very high point; and so high a point, and so entirely loud were they, that not only did they pay what the insurance companies paid, but the insurance companies made an immense amount of money besides. Therefore we concluded that the more just course would be to distribute this amount among the people who had paid war premiums on account of the fright occasioned by the Confederate cruisers; and accordingly a commission was appointed to take proof on which a distribution should be made, and that distribution was made.

Now, inasmuch as there was not enough money to pay the whole of that and only a percentage was paid, it would seem to follow as an inevitable result that that entire fund was exhausted, and consequently that there can not be $48,000 of it in the United States Treasury.

Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland. Twenty-four thousand dollars.

Mr. COX. The whole amount was some $40,000, which was paid by Great Britain on this account. Now, the insurance companies had no claim whatever on that fund.

Mr. REED. The gentleman is in error.

Mr. COX. No; wait a moment. The Government of the United States assumed the war risk, and paid this claimant $16,000 out of that money——

Mr. REED. That was the first distribution.

Mr. COX. Well, that was the result of it, $16,000.

Mr. REED. The fundamental error which the gentleman is committing is this. He is assuming that Great Britain paid for this vessel eo nomine a certain sum of money, $40,000, and that the Government paid $16,000 of that to the man and that he is entitled to the balance.

Mr. COX. That is all right, except that the Government paid it before it got the $40,000.

Mr. REED. Now that is an entirely erroneous idea. Great Britain never paid any sum of money whatever to the Government of the United States for this vessel. Great Britain paid $15,000,000 in a lump sum as an indemnity to cover the whole subject to be disposed of by the United States as they saw fit, and the United States have disposed of that sum in the way I have stated, and in disposing of it have they not necessarily passed upon this case?

Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland. No, sir. They have not.

Mr. REED. There are two proofs of that. First, the fact that this claim was before the first commission, and, if the statement of it be correct, it was under the term of the first commission and should have been allowed; but the first commission, hearing the case, disallowed the claim. Thereupon Congress gave the claimant permission to present himself again before the commission, and your report says that his attorney, for some unknown reason, failed to docket the action.

Mr. COX. That was the first commission.

Mr. REED. It may have been the first commission, but it was the second presentation of the case under a special act of Congress.

Mr. COX. Yes, sir.

Mr. REED. So that the claimant has had two days in court. I do not say that that is enough; I say nothing about that; only I want——

Mr. COX. I agree with the gentleman from Maine, and he will have no trouble with me, for I am trying to get at the facts. Of course, if the Government of the United States got this money for this vessel under any sort of award, the money does not belong to the United States.

Mr. REED. But I have been trying to show the gentleman that the Government did not get the money for this vessel.

Mr. COX. Well, if the Government never got it, that is a different matter.

Mr. GROSVENOR. What evidence has the gentleman from Tennessee to show that this vessel figured at $40,000 in the gross award?

Mr. COX. This vessel did not pass under the general award, but it was afterwards examined and the value found to be something over $40,000, and that money was paid by Great Britain into the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Where is the evidence of that?

Mr. COX. The evidence is here in the record. Then the Government of the United States appropriated $16,000 of that money——

Mr. GROSVENOR. But the gentleman who was chairman of the committee states here, apparently with full knowledge, that there never was anything paid.

Mr. COX. Well, that is important if it is a fact, for we are trying to get at the facts.

Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland. I want to say just a word in reply to the gentleman from Maine. I do not know much about the facts of this case, but I know this claimant very well and I know him to be a very worthy man.

Mr. REED. I have not a doubt of it.

Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland. I know him to be one of our best citizens, a man who has been impoverished by this transaction. Congress allowed him to go to the Court of Claims a second time, because his attorney failed to go there within the time fixed. That is why the claimant has to come here. That is a reflection upon the attorney, but I believe he is dead now—for I think I know who he was.

The only point that I want to call attention to is that before the assembling of the board of arbitration at Geneva, the Government advertised for persons who had suffered loss in this way, and Mr. Hooper came in and proved his claim and it was filed among the other claims and presented at Geneva, so that it was one of the claims that went to make up the total sum awarded.

Mr. REED. Was it?

Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland. That must have been because the claim was found to be due, for the claimant proved his claim; and if he received this first allowance of $16,000, then the only reason why he did not get the balance must have been that his attorney did not file his claim for the full amount.

Mr. REED. Oh, no. The gentleman from Maryland has not read the report in this case.

Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland. I am frank to say I have not read it very carefully.

Mr. REED. Now, let us see whether the section I am about to read does not cover the claim, if the facts are correctly stated by the gentleman:

> No claim shall be admissible or allowed by said court for any loss or damage or in respect to which the party injured, his assignees or legal representatives, shall have received compensation or indemnity from any insurance company, insurer, or otherwise; but if such compensation or indemnity so received shall not have been equal to the loss or damage so actually suffered, allowance may be made for the difference.

That section covers what the gentleman is claiming here, does it not?

Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland. If there were any doubt about the claim that would settle it; that would remove all doubt.

Mr. REED. Now, here was the action of a tribunal that had this claim before it. The report goes on to state:

> Under this section the claimant brought suit before that court, and the value of the vessel (less the amount originally paid), the $28,150.20, was disallowed.

Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland. Now, read further. The report goes on to say:

Shortly afterwards allowance was made for the bark Greenland, destroyed under precisely similar circumstances, and for which a similar part payment had been made by the United States.

These two vessels were captured the same night by the same cruiser; and the court decided that the owner of the General Berry was not entitled to compensation and that the owner of the Greenland was.

Mr. REED. Why did the court so decide?

Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland. That I do not know.

Mr. REED. There is the mystery about it. If it should be shown satisfactorily to this House by evidence that another case involving the same question was subsequently decided by the court a different way, then one of two things must necessarily follow, either the United States ought to pay this money out of its own Treasury, or else this man was to blame for not having brought the case subsequently before the court in order to have the correction made.

Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland. Previous Congresses did not take that view.

Mr. REED. I am not speaking of previous Congresses. I am speaking of the action of this commission. Let us understand this case. It is admitted that the claim was disallowed; but it is asseverated that a similar claim was allowed right afterwards. Now, if that was so, either the United States ought to pay the money, or else it ought to be able to show that this man was negligent in not calling the attention of the commission to this different method of treating the two cases. If he failed to do this when he had opportunity, then, having had his day in court, having suffered by his own laches, he must take the consequences.

Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland. Congress gave this old man this relief and allowed him——

Mr. REED. No, Congress did not give him relief.

Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland. Not the relief called for by this bill; but Congress gave him relief by authorizing him to go back to the tribunal that had this special matter within its jurisdiction.

Mr. REED. No.

Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland. Oh, yes.

Mr. REED. Congress never gave him any relief.

Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland. Congress gave him the right to go back to this court; and he did go there. He is not personally to blame for the laches of his attorney. He is simply asking that the Government pay him the amount that it received from the British Government for the purpose of satisfying this claim; for it is not disputed that the claim was presented to the Geneva arbitrators and allowed by them.

Mr. REED. The fact is that this claimant had his trial in court; and the court allowed part of the claim and refused the balance.

Mr. COX. All that I desired in the explanation I made was to put this case before the House on its merits. If the Government of the United States had not received this money in some shape from England I do not think this would be a just claim against our Government. But I am so thoroughly satisfied that when the facts are understood there can be no trouble in securing the passage of this bill (because the Government of the United States received the money for this claim), that I ask permission that the claim be withdrawn for the present in order that the facts may be further looked into by members.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. I object.

Mr. BUNN. I had risen for the purpose of withdrawing the claim.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. I object.

Mr. BYNUM. I object, Mr. Chairman, until the gentleman from New Hampshire is heard. I would like to get all the facts in this case that are accessible.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New Hampshire objects to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. REED. I wish to make one correction in my former statement. If this report be correct the $16,000 was allowed by a direct act of Congress and not by the first commission, as I suggested before.

Mr. COX. The gentleman is absolutely correct in that. The Government got the money——

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. BUNN. Mr. Chairman, what has become of the request I submitted?

The CHAIRMAN. Objection was made to that.

Mr. BUNN. Then I raise the question as to whether I have not the right to withdraw the bill. There has been no amendment offered to it; no action taken in reference to it, merely a matter of discussion. I ask if have not a right to withdraw the bill?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is perfectly certain that it would be competent for the gentleman to withdraw a proposition before an amendment had been adopted or the previous question ordered in the House; and the Chair thinks that the rule prevailing in the Committee of the Whole is the same.

But the gentleman asked unanimous consent to withdraw the bill. The Chair submitted the request, and the gentleman from New Hampshire objected.

Now the Chair understands the gentleman from North Carolina proposes to withdraw the bill as a matter of right.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Pending that, Mr. Chairman, I had been recognized as entitled to the floor, and desire to proceed with my remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has not been recognized except to make the objection. The Chair will recognize the gentleman if he desires to be heard as to the right of the gentleman from North Carolina to withdraw the bill.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. I rise to a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. I think the Chair is mistaken as to the facts. I had objected to the withdrawal of the bill. The Chair had stated that without objection it would be withdrawn. I objected. I then addressed the Chair for the purpose of debating the merits of the bill, and was recognized——

The CHAIRMAN. But the gentleman had only stated the objection, and the Chair recognized the gentleman to make the objection; or, subsequently, as stated by the Chair, to discuss the right of the gentleman from North Carolina to withdraw the bill.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. But I had been recognized to discuss the bill upon the merits; and while I was on the floor the gentleman from North Carolina rose and insisted upon his right to withdraw the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New Hampshire misapprehended the action of the Chair. The truth of the matter is, that after the gentleman from North Carolina had asked unanimous consent to withdraw the bill, and the gentleman from New Hampshire objected, a member who was standing by the Speaker's table asked if it required unanimous consent; the Chair replied that it did not, but in responding to this inquiry did not observe that the gentleman from New Hampshire was still attempting to obtain recognition; and when the Chair again gave his attention to the proceedings in the committee, the gentleman from North Carolina addressed the Chair, was recognized, and proposed as a matter of right to withdraw the bill, and the Chair has decided that the gentleman, as a matter of right, may withdraw the bill.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. From that I appeal.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the committee?

The question was taken, and the Chairman announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. No quorum.

The CHAIRMAN. No vote has been taken by which the absence or presence of a quorum can be determined.

The ayes have it, and the decision of the Chair stands as the judgment of the committee.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. I demand a division.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Against that I make the point of order. The gentleman did not ask a division until too late. He made the point of no quorum when there had been no vote to determine the fact, and after the Chair had announced the result of the vote, he made the demand for a division.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman made the point of no quorum, but there had been no vote upon which the presence or absence of a quorum could be determined.

Mr. BYNUM. But, Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from New Hampshire might make the suggestion of the absence of a quorum whether there is a vote or not.

The CHAIRMAN. That is not the practice of the House, the Chair will state to the gentleman from Indiana. It is the practice in the Senate, but has never been in the House.

Mr. BYNUM. It has been the practice of the House since I have been here.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks only in the morning, before the approval of the Journal; and that practice obtains because the rule of the House provides that the Speaker of the House shall assume the chair, "and on the appearance of a quorum" cause the Journal to be read. Under that rule any gentleman may suggest the absence of a quorum, in which case the Chair orders a call of the roll to determine the fact. But the Chair thinks it has never been the practice of the House to merely suggest the absence of a quorum: the only time when that question can be raised is when there is a vote, which of itself discloses the fact.

Mr. BYNUM. In the interest of a correct ruling upon this subject, I beg leave to differ with the Chair and suggest that any member has the right, at any time during the proceeding before the House, to suggest that a quorum is not present, whereupon it is the duty of the Chair to cause a count to be made and if there is no quorum then a call of the House must be had or an adjournment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will suggest to the gentleman from Indiana that while he may have some reason to believe that to be the practice of the House, the opinion of the Chair is positive that such is not the custom.

The Chair will make the further suggestion that if the gentleman from New Hampshire had first demanded a division, and on a count no quorum had voted, then his point of no quorum could have been made. But he did not do that. He undertook to make the point of no quorum when the point could not lie. The gentleman therefore lost his opportunity, and the Chair announced that on the vote the decision of the Chair had been sustained as the judgment of the committee.

Mr. BUNN. I ask unanimous consent to say to the gentleman from New Hampshire that I have no sort of objection to his being heard, and if I can get an opportunity I will bring up the bill at another time, so that he can be heard. But inasmuch as to-day is set apart for a special purpose, I am instructed by the committee that if any claim is seriously fought to withdraw it. The gentleman from Maine and the gentleman from New Hampshire will have an opportunity hereafter.

Mr. REED. I want it distinctly understood that I am not in any way fighting or opposing the bill, but only as a matter of duty stating the facts within my knowledge. It may be that Congress, upon examination, may think the court did such an injustice that it ought to right it.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. I move that the committee now rise.

The question was taken, and the Chairman announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Division.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 26, noes 40.

So the motion was rejected.

HENRY HERRMAN.

Mr. BUNN. Mr. Chairman, I call up the bill (H. R. 6236) for the relief of Henry Herrman.

The bill was read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to the lawful heirs of Henry Herrman, late a citizen of the State of New York, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $2,451.54, with interest thereon from May 18, 1867, the same to be received by them in full settlement for custom duties claimed to have been illegally exacted and paid into the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. BUNN. Mr. Chairman, at the request of my colleague on the committee [Mr. CAMPBELL] I call up this bill, and I yield to him.

Mr. CAMPBELL. The report of the committee speaks for itself.

The report (by Mr. BUNN) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6236) for the relief of Henry Herrman, have considered the same, and find the fact clearly stated in the report of the Committee on Ways and Means in the Forty-seventh Congress.

Your committee therefore adopt the said report and recommend the passage of the bill.

[House Report No. 1634, Forty-seventh Congress, first session.]

The accompanying bill proposes to refund to Henry Herrman, of the city of New York, the sum of $2,451.54, that being the amount paid by him for duties erroneously assessed and collected on woolen goods imported by the firm of Herrman & Co., of which firm Henry Herrman was the senior partner, in April, 1867. The facts on which this claim for refund is based are these:

Messrs. Herrman & Co. imported into the port of New York a certain lot of woolen goods per steamer Manhattan, which arrived at that port on Saturday, March 2, 1867. An entry of these goods was made at the custom-house March 4, 1867 (Monday), and the rate of duties stated in such entry was that imposed by the act of June 30, 1864, on such class of goods; but the entry was liquidated April 9, 1867, at the increased rates imposed by the act of March 2, 1867, entitled "An act to provide increased revenue from imported wool, and for other purposes."

Under date of May 23, 1867, Messrs. Herrman & Co., by their attorneys, filed a protest against the exaction of duties under the act of March 2, 1867, on the ground that that act was not in force at the time the importation was made and until after the importers had duly entered and paid duties on their goods under the act of June 30, 1864. Due notice of the liquidation of the entry at the advanced rates was given the parties, but the protest not having been filed within ten days after liquidation of the entry, as required by section 15 of the act of June 30, 1864, the Treasury Department declined to entertain the appeal. The foregoing statement of facts in this case is taken from a letter of the Secretary of the Treasury, dated March 30, 1880.

The act of March 2, 1867, under which the increased duties were exacted, although purporting to have received executive approval on March 2, was in fact approved on Monday, March 4, as the records of Congress show, the legislative day beginning Saturday, March 2, having been extended to noon of Monday, March 4, when the Congress expired by limitation. The Secretary of the Treasury, in a letter reviewing this case, dated March 30, 1880, says:

"The following facts may be considered as established:

"First, that the importation was complete on March 2, 1867.

"Second, that the act bearing date March 2, 1867, was not approved until March 4, 1867, and therefore was not a law until that day; and,

"Third, that therefore, as a matter of law, the goods in question were subject to duty under the act of June 30, 1864."

While there is no dispute as to the legal right of the goods to entry and liquidation under the lower rate of duties imposed by the act of June 30, 1864, it appears that, in consequence of the failure of Messrs. Herrman & Co. to file protest in due time, the exaction of additional duties under the act of March 2, 1867, was insisted upon, and the amount of additional duties ($2,451 54) was paid by them. Your committee are of opinion that the mere failure to enter protest within the time prescribed by law should not exclude these parties to the refund of excessive duties paid by them, particularly as it is admitted by the Secretary of the Treasury that the Government had no legal claim to exact the increased duties imposed by the act of March 2, 1867.

In reference to the failure to enter protest within the prescribed period, it appears that the business partner of Henry Herrman, Jules B. de Mesquito, who attended to the custom-house business of the firm of Henry Herrman & Co., was suffering from mental derangement when the importation in question was made, although this fact was not apparent to his business partner and friends at that time. Shortly thereafter De Mesquito committed suicide. These facts, in the opinion of your committee, should remove any technical obstacle that may exist touching the failure to enter protest within the period prescribed by the statute.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. I understood from the reading of the report that this claimant did not protest and appeal as required by law. It has been the universal practice of Congress, so far as I know, to refuse favorable action on bills where that protest and appeal are lacking; and, therefore, I move that the bill lie on the table.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I hope that motion will not prevail, so that the friends of the bill may have an opportunity to explain it.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New Hampshire moves that the bill be laid on the table——

Mr. REED. The Committee of the Whole has no table.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair was going to suggest that the Chair presumed that the intent of the gentleman was to move that the bill be reported to the House with the recommendation that it lie on the table.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. I move that the bill be reported to the House with the recommendation that it lie on the table.

Mr. BUNN. I suppose that is debatable.

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I desire to be heard.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair had recognized the gentleman, and he expressed the hope that the motion would not prevail, and concluded. The Chair did not intend to defeat the gentleman's opportunity to be heard.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, in answer to the gentleman from New Hampshire, I would state that I do not think his argument is sound on the question under consideration. The facts are simply these: We were living under a tariff law that existed from 1864 until 1867. A law had passed both branches of Congress on the 2d of March, 1867, but had not received the President's signature, and therefore it was not the law until the 4th of the month. In the mean time the collector of the port, or the people who had charge of that branch of the business, insisted that this party should pay excessive duties under a law which had not yet been signed by the President. He demurred to that at the time, and in the mean time the gentleman in the firm who had charge of the custom house branch of the business——

Mr. KILGORE. I can not hear what the gentleman says.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Oh, yes, you can. A partner of the firm committed suicide, and during the unfortunate troubles of the firm they failed to comply with this requirement within sixty days.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Ten days.

Mr. CAMPBELL. And the result was that this party had to pay this duty; and the only way in which he can be reimbursed is to obtain an enabling act from Congress. That is all there is of it.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I should like to ask the gentleman from New York if in his belief the excessive duty upon these goods caused the suicide of this man's partner?

Mr. CAMPBELL. I would not be surprised; but I can not tell. I was not there at the time, general.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. I would like to ask the gentleman a question, if he will yield to me?

Mr. CAMPBELL. Certainly.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Can the gentleman give the committee any precedents where Congress has relieved a claimant under circumstances where a protest was not made or an appeal taken?

Mr. CAMPBELL. I can not at this time, but I know that there are cases, and there are equitable cases of that kind pending. I think it is only right that equal justice should be dealt out to all people on that basis.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. With the understanding that the gentleman from New York will cite to the House these precedents at some future time, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my motion.

The CHAIRMAN. It does not require unanimous consent. [Cries of "Vote!"]

Mr. CAMPBELL. The gentleman from North Carolina, the chairman of the committee, has charge of this bill; but as I have been making an explanation, I move that the bill be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

Mr. KILGORE. Before the motion is put I would like to understand what is meant there by paying this amount to the legal heirs of a particular individual?

Mr. CAMPBELL. I think I have fully explained the matter. One of these people committed suicide.

Mr. KILGORE. I could not hear a word of what was said, or the report when it was read; and I would not be inclined to let this claim go through this evening with the meager information that the committee possesses. If the committee votes against it, I would have no objection. [Laughter.]

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman was serious in his remarks I would make further explanation. The bill has received the unanimous approval of the Committee on Claims in former Congresses. It has been thoroughly investigated by our committee, and has its unanimous favorable recommendation.

Mr. KILGORE. I want to inquire of somebody I can hear [laughter] whether or not this claim——

Mr. CAMPBELL. If the gentleman will not get angry, I will buy a speaking trumpet for him.

Mr. KILGORE (continuing): Whether or not this claimant has not forfeited his right by his own laches, by failing to make a protest, or by paying the duties under protest. If he had paid them under protest he could go to the Treasury Department and they would have the matter investigated, and if they found the facts as they have been stated, the Treasury Department would have refunded his money without any occasion for this party to come to Congress.

Mr. BUNN. I want to say to the gentleman that the proof in the case shows that the partner of this gentleman, whose duty it was to attend to these matters, was insane. It was not found out until afterwards.

Mr. KILGORE. But it was as much the duty of the one to do it as it was of the other to do it.

Mr. BUNN. I am just speaking now about the custom. This protest was not made in time, but the Department has recommended the payment of this claim, and it is absolutely just.

Mr. KILGORE. Who recommends the payment?

Mr. BUNN. I do not remember now.

Mr. KILGORE. Is it in the RECORD?

Mr. BUNN. No; it is not printed there, because the RECORD is very voluminous, but it is in the files room.

Mr. KILGORE. Is there any reference in the report to the fact that the Department has recommended it?

Mr. BUNN. No, sir; but I state it as a fact.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Now, if the gentleman from Texas will just keep quiet! He has my best wishes in his convention to-day, and I hope he will be renominated. [Laughter.]

Mr. BYNUM. Mr. Chairman, this claim is similar to a much more meritorious one which was presented by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MAHON] and was rejected. There was no protest in this case under the law, and therefore there is no legal right. The gentleman who favors this claim [Mr. CAMPBELL] belongs to a party which believes that every importer who pays a duty adds that duty to the price of the goods. Now these importers, if they paid a high duty, added it to the price of their goods and collected it from the consumer, so that they have been long since reimbursed, and it is ridiculous for them to come in now thirty years afterwards with this claim. [Laughter.]

Mr. CAMPBELL. That is nonsense.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Chairman, following up the suggestion made by the gentleman from Indiana, I want to say that on this side of the House our Republican friends believe that the foreigner pays the duty. Therefore this man is out nothing, and therefore he is not entitled to any reimbursement. [Laughter.]

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. CAMPBELL, that the bill be laid aside to be reported favorably to the House, the Chairman declared that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. BYNUM. I ask for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 52, noes 37.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. No quorum.

Mr. BUNN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw this bill, and then I will move that the committee rise and report to the House the bills that we have passed upon favorably.

There was no objection.

The bill was accordingly withdrawn.

Mr. BUNN. I move that the committee rise.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. BAILEY, from the Committee of the Whole, reported that they had had under consideration various bills, and had directed him to report the same back to the House with sundry amendments.

BILLS PASSED.

House bills of the following titles, reported favorably from the Committee of the Whole House, were severally taken up, the amendments (if any) concurred in, the bills ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed; and motions to reconsider the several votes by which the bills were passed were respectively laid on the table:

A bill (H. R. 1075) for the relief of Merril Denham;

A bill (H. R. 5368) for the relief of H. W. McConnell;

A bill (H. R. 526) for the relief of Joseph Haxthausen;

A bill (H. R. 2842) to reimburse George C. Tanner, late consul, etc.;

A bill (H. R. 7603) for the relief of Charles Deal; and

A bill (H. R. 507) for the relief of J. E. Merriam.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. HOPKINS of Pennsylvania, for this day, on account of sickness.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. PEARSON, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (H. R. 2669) making an appropriation and providing for the construction of a United States revenue cutter for service in the harbor of San Francisco, State of California;

A bill (H. R. 4954) relative to recognizances, stipulations, bonds, and undertakings, and to allow certain corporations to be accepted as surety thereon;

A bill (H. R. 5901) to reimburse E. H. Nebeker, late Treasurer of the United States;

A bill (H. R. 6415) to provide an immediate revision and equalization of real-estate values in the District of Columbia; also to provide an assessment of real estate in said District in the year 1896 and every third year thereafter, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 6577) to authorize the construction of a wagon and foot bridge across the Chattahoochee River at or near the town of Columbia, Ala.;

A bill (H. R. 6913) making appropriations for current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 7383) relating to lights on fishing vessels; and

A bill (H. R. 7874) to enable the Secretary of the Interior to pay John T. Heard for professional services rendered the "Old Settlers" or Western Cherokee Indians out of the funds of said Indians.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Mr. BOATNER. Mr. Speaker, I am instructed by the Committee on Pacific Railroads to ask that that committee be discharged from further consideration of the bill (H. R. 7878) to facilitate and expedite legal proceedings by the United States and other creditors against Government-aided railroad companies, their officers, stockholders, and the trustees of their mortgages; and that the bill be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The House then, on motion of Mr. BUNN (at 4 o'clock and 50 minutes p. m.), adjourned.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as follows:

By Mr. McRAE, from the Committee on the Public Lands: A bill (S. 447) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to issue a duplicate of a certain land warrant to Emma A. Ripley. (Report No. 1394.)

By Mr. PICKLER, from the Committee on Indian Affairs: A bill (H. R. 7645) for the relief of Kate Eberle, an Indian woman. (Report No. 1395.)

By Mr. TAWNEY, from the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (H. R. 7129) granting a pension to Henry Schnetberg, of Indiana, Pa. (Report No. 1404.)

A bill (H. R. 7468) for the relief of William T. Holman. (Report No. 1405.)

By Mr. MORGAN, from the Committee on Military Affairs: A bill (H. R. 7937) granting an honorable discharge to Adam Hand, in lieu of a bill (H. R. 955) of the same title. (Report No. 1406.)

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, committees were discharged from the consideration of the following bills and joint resolution; which were referred as follows:

Joint resolution (S. R. 68) for the relief W. D. Mack, a clerk in the Record and Pension Division of the War Department—the Committee on Claims discharged, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

A bill (H. R. 7923) for the relief Charles M. Larsh, of Denver, Colo.—the Committee on the Public Lands discharged, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

A bill (H. R. 7924) for the relief of Mrs. Emma D. Larsh, of Denver, Colo.—the Committee on the Public Lands discharged, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

PUBLIC BILLS, MEMORIALS, AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced, and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. DOOLITTLE: A bill (H. R. 7928) to amend section 1 of the act of August 4, 1892, entitled "An act to authorize the entry of lands chiefly valuable for building stone under the placer mining laws"—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. JONES: A bill (H. R. 7929) directing the Secretary of the Treasury to examine and settle the accounts of certain States and the city of Baltimore growing out of moneys expended by said States and city for military purposes during the war of 1812—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. DAVIS: A bill (H. R. 7930) to authorize and enable the Commissioner in charge of the census to procure certain information of public value not derivable from any existing reports—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

PRIVATE BILLS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills of the following titles were presented and referred as follows:

By Mr. CATCHINGS: A bill (H. R. 7931) for the relief of the estate of A. Bowie, deceased, late of Warren County, Miss.—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. DOOLITTLE: A bill (H. R. 7932) to remove the charge of desertion from the record of William McCutcheon—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7933) for the relief of Peter Runquist—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. PRICE: A bill (H. R. 7934) for the relief of the estate of Onezeine Leleu, deceased, late of Vermilion Parish, La.—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7935) for the relief of the estate of Desiri Le Blanc, deceased, late of Vermilion Parish, La.—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WILSON of Ohio: A bill (H. R. 7936) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of William Wardel—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WHEELER of Alabama: A bill (H. R. 7938) for the relief of Bartley Harris, of Madison County, Ala.—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7939) for the relief of Nathan L. Williams, administrator of Martha R. Williams, deceased, late of Madison County, Ala.—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. SPRINGER: A bill (H. R. 7940) for the relief of Hannah Bailey Munson—to the Committee on War Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. ALDRICH: Petition of Local Union No. 356, American Railway Union, of Pullman, Ill., concerning the action of the Attorney-General of the United States in the recent strike—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. BRYAN: Petition of about 10,000 citizens, residing in thirty-eight States, some of them residing in Nebraska, asking for an investigation of the official conduct of Attorney-General Olney during the recent Pullman strike, with the following indorsement: "Having no evidence before me by which to judge of the charges made in the petition, I express no opinion upon the merits; but believing in the sacredness of the right of petition as guaranteed by the Constitution, I present the petition to the House and ask its reference to the proper committee"—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DOOLITTLE: Petition of the Geological Society of America, for the establishment of a national park in the State of Washington—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, memorial from the Chamber of Commerce of Seattle, Wash., praying for the survey of public lands in Washington—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, petition of citizens of Skagit County, Wash., praying for the improvement of the Skagit River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. FLETCHER: Petition of citizens of Minneapolis, Minn., protesting against appropriations to sectarian schools for education of Indians—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. HARTMAN: Petition of W. H. Gallagher et al., of Montana, favoring impeachment of Attorney-General Olney—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of N. B. Ringeling and other citizens of Montana, concerning appropriations for Indian education—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. HAUGEN: Petition of Samuel N. Griffith and 111 other citizens of Rice Lake, Wis., in favor of nationalizing the telegraph business and the interstate commerce of the United States—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, protest of W. J. Lawrence and 117 other citizens of Barron County, Wis., against the appropriation of public funds for sectarian instruction in Indian schools—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. SCRANTON: Petition of S. B. Hills and other citizens of Jermyn, Pa., against the income tax as affecting fraternal beneficiary societies—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SPRINGER: Papers to accompany House bill 7925—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland: Papers to accompany House bill 7926—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, papers in claim of Barney Moore, to accompany House bill 7926—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WALKER: Petition for a Federal act to enable the States to enforce State laws regulating the sale of substitutes for dairy products—to the Committee on Agriculture.

SENATE.

FRIDAY, August 10, 1894.

Prayer by Rev. J. H. M'CARTY, D. D., of the city of Washington.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on the 8th instant approved and signed the following acts:

An act (S. 829) granting an honorable discharge to Cyrus Payne; and

An act (S. 1471) to provide for the adjustment and payment of the claim of the American Transportation Company for dredging done at Fairport Harbor, in the State of Ohio.

CALL OF THE SENATE.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aldrich,	Cullom,	Hoar,	Peffer,
Allen,	Davis,	Jarvis,	Perkins,
Bate,	Dixon,	Jones, Ark.	Platt,
Berry,	Dolph,	Lindsay,	Pugh,
Blackburn,	Faulkner,	McMillan,	Sherman,
Blanchard,	Frye,	Manderson,	Teller,
Brice,	Gallinger,	Mills,	Turpie,
Call,	George,	Mitchell, Oregon	Vest,
Carey,	Gray,	Murphy,	Walsh,
Chandler,	Harris,	Palmer,	Washburn,
Coke,	Hill,	Patton,	White.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Forty-four Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. The Senate will receive a message from the House of Representatives.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLES, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6284) to prevent interference in the collection of State, county, and municipal taxes assessed against corporations and corporate property, and for other purposes, asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. DE ARMOND, Mr. WOLVERTON, and Mr. POWERS managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills:

A bill (S. 1852) to provide an American register for the steamer S. Otori; and

A bill (S. 2234) to further amend section 2399 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

The message further announced that the House had passed the following bills and joint resolutions; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 859) for the relief of B. D. Greene;

A bill (H. R. 7461) to amend an act entitled "An act to create a new division of the northern judicial district of Georgia," approved March 3, 1892;

A bill (H. R. 7499) to grant to the city of Port Angeles, State of Washington, certain lands within the town site of Port Angeles, Wash., for cemetery purposes;

A bill (H. R. 7810) to authorize the Attorney-General to bring suit in the supreme court of the District of Columbia against the Wichita and affiliated bands of Indians, the Comanche, Kiowa, Apache, Choctaw, and Chickasaw tribes, to determine and settle the legal or equitable interest in said Indians in certain lands located between the ninety-eighth and one hundredth degree of west longitude, in Oklahoma Territory, and located within the territory leased from the Choctaw and Chickasaw tribes in the year 1855, and ceded in 1866, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 7828) to permit the use of the right of way through the public lands for tramroads, canals, and reservoirs, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 7834) for the relief of the bona fide purchasers of land in section 36, township 1 north, range 9 west (San Bernardino meridian), in the State of California;

A bill (H. R. 7840) to amend section 2335 of the Revised Statutes; and

A joint resolution (H. Res. 95) providing for an investigation relating to the effects of machinery on labor.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills, and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

A bill (S. 901) for the relief of the owners of the schooner Henry R. Tilton and of personal effects thereon;

A bill (S. 1949) for the relief of James E. North;

A bill (S. 2280) to amend section 2 of the act approved February 15, 1893, entitled "An act granting additional quarantine powers and imposing additional duties upon the Marine Hospital Service;

A bill (H. R. 86) for the protection of persons furnishing materials and labor for the construction of public works;

A bill (H. R. 2669) making an appropriation and providing for the construction of a United States revenue cutter for service in the harbor of San Francisco, State of California;

A bill (H. R. 3033) granting a pension to Amanda J. Lane;

A bill (H. R. 4326) to subject to State taxation national-bank notes and United States Treasury notes;

A bill (H. R. 4954) relative to recognizances, stipulations, bonds, and undertakings, and to allow certain corporations to be accepted as surety thereon;

A bill (H. R. 5901) to reimburse E. H. Nebeker, late Treasurer of the United States;

A bill (H. R. 6415) to provide an immediate revision and equalization of real-estate values in the District in the year 1896 and every third year thereafter, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 6577) to authorize the construction of a wagon and foot bridge across the Chattahoochee River at or near the town of Columbia, Ala.;

A bill (H. R. 6913) making appropriations for current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department, and fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 7383) relating to lights on fishing vessels;

A bill (H. R. 7683) to correct the naval record of James Fay, and grant him an honorable discharge;

A bill (H. R. 7827) to authorize a bridge across the Perdido River between the States of Florida and Alabama; and

A bill (H. R. 7874) to enable the Secretary of the Interior to pay JOHN T. HEARD for professional services rendered the "Old Settlers" or Western Cherokee Indians out of the funds of said Indians.

REPORT OF A COMMITTEE.

Mr. BRICE, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2293) to provide for the improvement of the building and grounds of the United States court and post-office at Little Rock, Ark., reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

INVESTIGATION BY THE COMMITTEE ON PATENTS.

Mr. CALL, from the Committee on Patents, reported the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, and ordered to be printed:

Resolved, That the Committee on Patents have authority to sit during the recess of Congress and continue their session during said recess for the investigation of the proposed change of the patent laws, to send for persons and papers and take such evidence as they may think proper and necessary, and visit such places as they may think advantageous for gathering information upon the subject and report the same to Congress at the next session, and also authority to employ a stenographer and the necessary clerical assistance, to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

INVESTIGATION BY THE COMMITTEE ON COMMERCE.

Mr. RANSOM, from the Committee on Commerce, reported the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on Commerce be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed to sit during the recess of Congress, and to visit and examine the Pacific coast between Points Duma and Capistrano, with a view to determining the best location for the construction of a deep-water harbor. Said committee is also hereby authorized to visit and examine such other works of river and harbor improvement on the Pacific coast, existing or proposed, as in their judgment the interests of commerce may demand, and shall have power to subpœna witnesses, to administer oaths, and take testimony, to employ a stenographer, and to appoint a sergeant-at-arms from the messengers of the Senate; and that the actual necessary expenses of said committee, properly incurred, shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate in the usual manner.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. TURPIE introduced a bill (S. 2298) for the relief of Michael Lynch; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PEFFER introduced a bill (S. 2299) to authorize and enable the Commissioner in charge of the Census to procure certain information of public value not derivable from present existing reports; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Census.

RECENT ELECTION IN ALABAMA.

Mr. CHANDLER. I submit a resolution and ask for its present consideration.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Privileges and Elections be directed to inquire into the facts of the election held in the State of Alabama on the 6th of the present month of August, and to ascertain and report whether such election was full, fair, free, and honest, and resulted in the choice of a Legislature entitled to elect a United States Senator, and that said committee as a whole or by subcommittee shall have power to send for persons and papers and sit during the approaching recess of Congress.

Mr. HILL. I should like to have the resolution go over for further examination.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will go over under the rule.

EFFECTS OF MACHINERY ON LABOR.

Mr. BATE. If the morning business is closed I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate House joint resolution No. 95, which has just come from the other House, with a view to its present consideration.

The joint resolution (H. Res. 95) providing for an investigation relating to the effects of machinery on labor, was read twice by its title.

Mr. BATE. I ask for the present consideration of the joint resolution.

By unanimous consent, the joint resolution was read at length and considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands:

A bill (H. R. 7499) to grant to the city of Port Angeles, State of Washington, certain lands within the town site of Port Angeles, Wash., for cemetery purposes;

A bill (H. R. 7828) to permit the use of the right of way through the public lands for tramroads, canals, and reservoirs, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 7834) for the relief of the bona fide purchasers of land in section 36, township 1 north, range 9 west (San Bernardino meridian), in the State of California; and

A bill (H. R. 7840) to amend section 2335 of the Revised Statutes.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

A bill (H. R. 7461) to amend an act entitled "An act to create a new division of the northern judicial district of Georgia," approved March 3, 1892; and

A bill (H. R. 7810) to authorize the Attorney-General to bring suit in the supreme court of the District of Columbia against the Wichita and affiliated bands of Indians, the Comanche, Kiowa, Apache, Choctaw, and Chickasaw tribes, to determine and settle the legal or equitable interest of said Indians in certain lands located between the ninety-eighth and one-hundredth degree of west longitude, in Oklahoma Territory, and located within the territory leased from the Choctaw and Chickasaw tribes in the year 1835, and ceded in 1866, and for other purposes.

The bill (H. R. 859) for the relief of B. D. Greene was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

AVERY D. BABCOCK AND WIFE.

Mr. DOLPH. I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill (S. 744) for the relief of Avery D. Babcock and wife, of Oregon, which has been reported from the Committee on Claims. It will lead to no discussion, I think.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to pay to Avery D. Babcock, of Polk County, Oregon, and to Margaret I. Babcock, his wife, $2,000, to be equally divided between them, in full payment of their claim against the Government of the United States for the use and occupation by the United States of their donation claim.

Mr. PLATT. I should like to hear some explanation of the bill.

Mr. DOLPH. Avery D. Babcock and wife, under the donation law of the 27th of September, 1850, took up a donation claim in the Willamette Valley. The wife was entitled to one-half of it, and that is the reason why she is named in the bill. In 1856, after they had occupied and improved it for several years, Gen. Hazen selected it as the site of Fort Yamhill, and it was afterwards also embraced in an Indian reservation, and they were deprived of the use of it for about ten years. Afterwards the fort was abandoned, and the lines of the reservation were limited so that this was excluded, and the land was patented to them. This is the lowest estimate of all the parties, so the committee says, for the use and occupation of the United States, and for being deprived of the use of the land for some ten or twelve years.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PROPOSED EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. GRAY. Pursuant to notice, I now move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Delaware that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. HILL. I should like to offer a resolution, if the Senator from Delaware will allow me.

Mr. GRAY. I should like to oblige the Senator from New York, but, under the circumstances, I must insist on my motion. Several other Senators this morning have asked me to yield, and I have been compelled to decline.

Mr. HILL. Is the motion to proceed to the consideration of executive business in order at any time?

Mr. GRAY. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHERMAN. Debate on such a motion is not in order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Debate is not in order. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY] that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. HILL. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. PLATT (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. HUNTON], and withhold my vote.

Mr. QUAY (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN], who is not present. If he were here I should vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. DAVIS (after having voted in the negative). I am paired with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE], who is not present, and withdraw my vote.

Mr. QUAY. As I stated when my name was called, I have a general pair with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN], who is absent. The Senator from Nevada [Mr. JONES] is also absent. I transfer my pair with the Senator from Alabama to the Senator from Nevada, and vote "nay."

Mr. DIXON. I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. MCLAURIN], and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. CAREY (after having voted in the negative). I am paired with the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. MITCHELL], and withdraw my vote.

The result was announced—yeas 21, nays 32; as follows:

YEAS—21.

Bate,	Faulkner,	Mills,	Vilas,
Berry,	George,	Pasco,	Walsh,
Blackburn,	Gray,	Ransom,	White.
Brice,	Jarvis,	Roach,
Call,	Lindsay,	Smith,
Cokе,	Martin,	Vest,

NAYS—32.

Aldrich,	Frye,	Lodge,	Perkins,
Allen,	Gallinger,	McMillan,	Power,
Allison,	Gibson,	Manderson,	Proctor,
Blanchard,	Hale,	Mitchell, Oregon	Pugh,
Chandler,	Hansbrough,	Murphy,	Quay,
Cullom,	Hawley,	Palmer,	Shoup,
Dolph,	Hill,	Patton,	Teller,
Dubois,	Hoar,	Peffer,	Washburn

NOT VOTING—32.

Butler,	Dixon,	Jones, Nev.	Platt,
Caffery,	Gordon,	Kyle,	Sherman,
Camden,	Gorman,	McLaurin	Squire,
Cameron,	Harris,	McPherson,	Stewart,
Carey,	Higgins,	Mitchell, Wis.	Turpie,
Cockrell,	Hunton,	Morgan,	Voorhees,
Daniel,	Irby,	Morrill,	Wilson,
Davis,	Jones, Ark.	Pettigrew,	Wolcott.

So the motion was not agreed to.

THE REVENUE BILL.

Mr. HILL. I offer a privileged resolution. I submit the resolution which I send to the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the conferees on the part of the Senate, who are now considering the differences between the two Houses on House bill 4864, being an act entitled "An act to reduce taxation, to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes," be, and they are hereby, requested to report to the Senate if they are likely to come to an agreement, and, if not, to report to the Senate, and also to report the principal items of disagreement, so that the Senate may take action thereon.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is upon the resolution submitted by the Senator from New York. [Putting the question.]

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, it is perhaps proper that I, as one of the conferees on the part of the Senate, should say that the representatives of the majority party of the two Houses have for many days conferred. We have encountered serious difficulties, and it is proper to say that up to this moment we have reached no agreement. There are serious differences of opinion in respect to at least three items in the bill. Possibly, if agreements could be reached as to those, other items might be agreed to; but the items of sugar, of coal, and of iron ore, are all three items in respect to which serious differences of opinion have been entertained and various propositions have been made pro and con, but no one of them has as yet proved quite acceptable to the conferees. We are still at variance, no agreement having been reached. This much it is perhaps due to the Senate that I should say.

Perhaps I need not refer to the various other items of difference; they are somewhat numerous; but, as I said before, I should indulge a strong hope, if the three things which I have mentioned were agreed upon, that we might reach agreements upon all other matters. But my associates on the committee know quite as well as I in regard to this subject, and I should be glad if they would make any statement they desire.

Mr. SHERMAN. I should like to ask the Senator from Tennessee, through the Chair, whether in his judgment the tariff bill is now before the Senate for such action as the Senate chooses to take?

Mr. HARRIS. Upon the contrary, in my opinion, it is most certainly not now before the Senate for the action to which the Senator refers.

Mr. SHERMAN. It does seem to me that the resolution——

Mr. HARRIS. I mean only, Mr. President, if the Senator will allow me, that I, as one of the conferees, have made a statement of facts to the Senate. The conference committee has submitted no report, nor would the conference committee undertake to submit a report until it had invited the Senator from Ohio and his associates to sit down with us and determine what report we should make.

Mr. SHERMAN. I understand the Senator to say that the tariff bill is not now before the Senate. It seems to me, therefore, that the resolution now pending is premature. Until we can have something to act upon, it is scarcely worth while for us to take up a resolution such as is proposed. I shall therefore object to the consideration of the resolution. ["No!" "No!"] I waive the suggestion for the present; but I do not wish to enter into a moot-court discussion. Let us have something before us that is tangible.

Mr. ALLISON. I do not understand clearly what the Senator from New York [Mr. HILL] proposes. If I heard aright the resolution as offered by him, it is a resolution asking the conferees on the part of the Senate to state the prospect of an agreement, the differences between the two Houses, and to report either an agreement or a disagreement. I think the resolution should be modified; and therefore I move its modification, so that the conferees be instructed to report a disagreement if they can not agree.

Mr. President, the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS] very properly, I have no doubt, states that there are great difficulties surrounding the differences, and I, as one Senator, should be glad to know the propositions which have been made and those which have been rejected on one side or the other. If the conferees had had a meeting, as is usual with conferences, it would be legitimate for me to inquire or for any Senator to inquire of the Senator from Tennessee as to the details of the differences; but inasmuch as this proceeding has been going on in an entirely informal way, and has partaken rather of the nature of secret and friendly conferences between members of the same political party, I do not feel that I have any right to inquire of the Senator from Tennessee, under the present situation, whether or not the obstacles to agreement are obstacles which present themselves through the conferees on the part of the House of Representatives or whether they are obstacles which can be removed by some intimation or suggestion from the Senate itself to the Senate conferees.

Mr. President, we, I submit, are in no condition to make an inquiry as to the real situation between the conferees, because, for myself, I should not feel that I could properly inquire whether the conferees on the part of the House of Representatives are obstinate as to the suggestions and propositions which I understand, at least from the newspapers, have been made repeatedly by our conferees to the House conferees as to these differences. Therefore, it seems to me until these differences in the conference committee are unfolded, unless the Senators who are and have been in these conferences are willing to state the difficulties, we are not in a position to inquire of them what the differences are.

The conference having now been for nearly three weeks engaged in the discussion of this question, I think we ought to exact from our conferees either that they report an agreement or that they report a disagreement, so that we may know in this Chamber what are the troubles as to this great bill now hanging between the two Houses. I should be glad if the Senator from New York would so modify his resolution or accept my suggestion of amendment that the conferees shall either report an agreement or a disagreement in order that the two Houses may have unfolded to them in all the details the differences which now exist between the two Houses upon the tariff bill.

Mr. GRAY. Mr. President——

Mr. ALLISON. I offer the amendment, and I hope the Senator from New York will accept it.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President——

Mr. GRAY. One moment, if the Senator pleases. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. What is the present status of the resolution?

Mr. HILL. It is before the Senate.

Mr. BERRY. Subject to objection.

Mr. GRAY. I ask the Chair.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution proposed by the Senator from New York.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President——

Mr. GRAY. Has the request for unanimous consent been put to the Senate? I object to the present consideration of the resolution.

Mr. ALDRICH. I suggest that the objection is too late. An amendment has been offered and the resolution has been discussed on both sides of the Chamber.

Mr. GRAY. The discussion has been proceeding by unanimous consent.

Mr. HILL. In the first place, I desire to suggest that that is not the case, and, in the second place, that after the resolution has been proceeded with for fifteen minutes it is too late to make the objection.

Mr. GRAY. The debate has been proceeding by unanimous consent.

Mr. BERRY. An objection will lie to the further consideration of the resolution.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will answer the parliamentary inquiry of the Senator from Delaware. When the resolution was presented by the Senator from New York, with the request for present consideration, the Chair submitted to the Senate the question as to whether there was objection to the present consideration of the resolution.

Mr. ALLISON. I so understood.

Mr. GRAY. I did not hear it.

Mr. VILAS. That certainly was not heard here.

Mr. ALDRICH. It was heard everywhere.

Mr. GRAY. The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS], as a member of the conference, proceeded by unanimous consent to make a statement.

Mr. HILL. That was when the Presiding Officer was putting the question on agreeing to the resolution. Then the Senator from Tennessee rose and desired to make a statement before it was carried.

Mr. MANDERSON. The "aye" vote had been taken on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. HILL. Yes, sir; and nearly everybody said "aye."

Mr. MANDERSON. Then the Senator from Tennessee rose and was recognized.

Mr. BATE. But the noes were not called.

Mr. RANSOM. The Reporter can determine that question at once by reading his notes of what took place.

Mr. BERRY. An objection can be made at any time.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, am I not entitled to the floor?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair has not yet answered the parliamentary inquiry raised by the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY].

Mr. HILL. I submit that the proper time to raise an objection to the consideration of a resolution of this character is at the beginning. My recollection is that the Chair asked whether there was objection to the consideration of the resolution. There was none. Then the Chair proceeded to put the question on agreeing to the resolution. He called for the ayes, and was just about to call for the noes, when the Senator from Tennessee desired to make a few remarks, as he had a right to do.

Mr. HOAR. I wish to make a suggestion to the Chair. As I understand the matter, the Chair submitted the request for unanimous consent, and it was granted. Then the Chair put the question on the resolution, and the ayes answered. The ayes having answered, the Senator from Tennessee rose, as is the custom in the Senate, and addressed himself to the resolution, the noes not having been called for, and the result of the vote not having been declared. Now the Senator from New York has taken the floor.

I submit to the Chair that if that be the fact, it is altogether too late now to displace the resolution by an objection. The Senate has given consent for its present consideration, and the question on its adoption was put after that consent was given. If that be not the fact, the record of the stenographer will show.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair desires the record to be read. The recollection of the Chair is that the Chair submitted to the Senate the question as to whether there was objection to the consideration of the resolution offered by the Senator from New York. The ruling of the Chair will be deferred until the record is read.

Mr. VILAS. Will the Chair oblige me by permitting me to make one suggestion in reference to the matter?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will hear the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. VILAS. If the proposition was submitted to the Senate, it certainly was not heard at my desk or by my immediate neighbors. The methods of business in the Senate have not been so exact heretofore with respect to these nice, finical compliances with technical rules that an important resolution like the one proposed by the Senator from New York should be crowded upon the Senate in haste and against the will of the members of the body who would like to consider it, as the rules provide, and especially not upon any misunderstanding.

But I was about to call attention to the fact that the rule does not particularly limit to the instant of proposal the necessity for objection. Rule XIV says:

> Whenever a bill or joint resolution shall be offered, its introduction shall, if objected to, be postponed for one day.

That is the first clause. The fifth clause is:

> All resolutions shall lie over one day for consideration—

That is, this resolution—

> unless by unanimous consent the Senate shall otherwise direct.

Mr. HILL. Will the Senator from Wisconsin allow me for a moment?

Mr. VILAS. In one moment. I am sure that if in the confusion existing in the Chamber the invitation of the President of the Senate for objection was not heard, it will not be considered as against the objection of many Senators on the floor as a foreclosure and consent on their part. There ought to be no misunderstanding, no snap judgments, no nice and finical adherence to technical rules in a body like this, and no surprises, as the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. RANSOM] well says.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, I do not propose to beg the question, as I think the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS] does. The resolution must be treated in the same manner as any other motion pertaining to the business of the Senate is treated. It is entitled to no more favors and no more consideration than any other resolution. The Senate ought to be permitted once in a while to do what it wants to do. If the Senate desires to pass the resolution, it ought to be entitled to the right to do it, and no finical, technical objection ought to be raised by a Senator to prevent the Senate from passing upon the resolution; and the technicality, sir, is upon the other side.

I therefore submit to the Senate that the resolution, which pertains to a most important subject pending before this body, ought to be discussed and disposed of. The Senator from Tennessee did not ask unanimous consent to make his remarks,

He assumed, and properly so, that he had a right to speak and present his sentiments. No other Senator who spoke asked for unanimous consent. It was treated as though the resolution was properly before the Senate, and it was only when I took the floor that the technical objection was raised that I should not be permitted to speak on my own resolution.

Mr. President, it strikes me that the technicality is invoked after other Senators have been permitted to discuss the resolution. The Senate is at liberty to dispose of the resolution. We are not very much pressed with business now, and we might as well spend our time in the discussion of the resolution. Otherwise the Senate simply adjourns, and we stay around the city and wait until to-morrow. The discussion can do no harm, and it may expedite the tariff bill. Therefore I think debate ought to be entertained.

In addition, no one objected to the resolution, and we proceeded to discuss it without objection on the part of anyone. Therefore I think it might properly be held that the objection comes too late now. Does the Senator from Wisconsin claim that a resolution can be read, that Senators can proceed to discuss it upon its merits, and that then, at the close of the discussion, objection can be raised? No, sir; the point——

Mr. VILAS. We do that under the rule.

Mr. HILL. I think the Senator from Wisconsin is the only Senator around this circle who would make any such point. It reminds me of a ruling I once heard by a gentleman in the New York Legislature. He was the only speaker who ever made such a ruling, and I think the Senator from Wisconsin is the only man who ever made such a point.

A member of the assembly rose and asked unanimous consent to speak. The chair asked, "Is there objection?" Nobody objected, and the gentleman proceeded with his speech. He tired the legislative body a little and was worrying the other side against which he was speaking, and finally another gentleman rose and said, "Mr. Speaker, I object to the gentleman's proceeding." The speaker actually rapped for order, and said, "The gentleman must take his seat." When he asked why, the speaker said, "The gentleman is proceeding by unanimous consent, and the moment that consent is withdrawn by anybody the gentleman must take his seat." It was ridiculous, and it was always so treated in that body.

Mr. GRAY. May I ask the Senator from New York a question about the precedent he has cited?

Mr. HILL. Certainly.

Mr. GRAY. In that case the Senator says the speaker had submitted the request for unanimous consent for the member to proceed.

Mr. HILL. That does not affect the question in the slightest degree.

Mr. GRAY. We shall see.

Mr. HILL. The Senator from Wisconsin takes the broad ground that the President of the Senate can wait until any time during the whole discussion and then can ask whether there is objection, just before the vote is taken. Is not that the Senator's point?

Mr. GRAY. The statement of the Senator from Wisconsin is that unanimous consent had not been given.

Mr. HILL. Let the Senator from Wisconsin state his own proposition. He is as competent as the Senator from Delaware.

Mr. VILAS. I will state my own proposition.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair requests Senators to address the Chair.

Mr. HILL. I do not wish to misrepresent the Senator from Wisconsin, and he knows I do not.

Mr. VILAS. Certainly the Senator from New York does not. The Senator from New York naturally recurs to the Legislature of New York for parliamentary instruction.

Mr. HILL. It is a good body to refer to.

Mr. VILAS. It has been the source of a great deal that would perhaps conflict with the methods in the Senate.

Mr. HILL. I should hope so.

Mr. VILAS. I will state what my point is, and I wish to have the attention of the Senator from New York, because he talked about the matter strictly as a proposition of parliamentary law. Fairly stated and without an attempt to be unfair, I think he will agree that my proposition is right. Here is the rule——

Mr. HILL. I ask the Senator to state precisely what the proposition is.

Mr. VILAS. Here is the rule:

All resolutions shall lie over one day for consideration unless by unanimous consent the Senate shall otherwise direct.

Is it finical to insist upon adherence to the rule? Is it finical to insist that the same fair opportunity to oppose a resolution shall be afforded to those who may wish to examine it which has been enjoyed by those who have prepared the resolution and seek to spring the discussion suddenly upon the Senate?

Now, unanimous consent was not given by the Senate for the consideration of the resolution, and I should like to ask the President of the Senate if upon inquiry he is not satisfied that that was an error.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will hear any suggestions that Senators may desire to make, but the Chair is ready to determine the question now.

Mr. VILAS. I do not wish to discuss the question, but I desire to answer clearly the point made by the Senator from New York, and to state the point made by myself, which is that the rule compels the resolution to go over unless the Senate by unanimous consent agree to take it up to-day, and that no unanimous consent has been given, first, because it was not asked for, if we here understood correctly. I think the Chair was in error in respect to it, confounding something else with this particular matter.

But if the Chair asked whether there was objection, and in the confusion it was not heard in the Senate and no objection was made, has it reached the time when it is to be declared that unanimous consent was given while men are protesting in every direction against it?

Now, I state the proposition in this way to the Senator from New York. The rule compels the resolution to lie over unless unanimous consent is given to the contrary. Such consent has not been given.

Mr. HILL. The Senator from Wisconsin and I only differ as to the method of getting at the same point. If, when the resolution was submitted, any Senator had objected, of course the resolution would have gone over, unless it can be regarded as a privileged resolution. The moment the question was raised, I understood the Chair to say that his recollection was that he had submitted the question to the Senate and that there was no objection. The point I make is that if he did that a Senator could not afterwards raise an objection. I say further that if the Senate proceeded to discuss the resolution on its merits without objection that is a waiver of objection. Like every other point it must be raised before the Senate proceeds to discuss a bill or resolution on the merits, and a Senator can not wait until the discussion is concluded. If the question has not been submitted to the Senate even directly, then that presents a different question.

I do not know what the RECORD may show; that is a question between the Presiding Officer and the stenographer, and I am willing to accept the statement of the Presiding Officer upon that question; but I submit that whether the question was expressly submitted to the Senate every Senator here understood the full force and effect of the resolution, and could have objected to it. We proceeded to vote upon it, however, and there was a large number of ayes in its favor. The Presiding Officer started to call for the negative vote when the Senator from Tennessee rose, as he had a right to do, to speak upon the question. Is there no limit? Can a Senator make objection after we have taken a vote upon either side and before the result is declared? It violates every principle of parliamentary law. It is one of those points which must be made in some form before the Senate proceeds to discuss a bill or resolution on the merits. Usually when a resolution of this character is offered it is read for information to see whether any Senator desires to object. What is the object of reading a resolution for information? So that a Senator can make objection then and there or forever after hold his peace. That is the object of it; and the question must be determined at the outset of the proceedings and not afterwards. After there has been a discussion for two hours upon a subject, aye, would you say that even when the roll was being called, you might still object? That is the legitimate conclusion of the Senator's argument. Mr. President, I do not think that is so.

I now give way to enable the President of the Senate to decide upon this question of recollection between the Presiding Officer and the stenographer.

Mr. PALMER. I should like to ask a single question and make an explanation. The Senator from New York announced that he had a privileged resolution to offer. When it was presented I should like to know for my own information whether unanimous consent for its consideration was asked. I confess that I supposed the Senator from New York was offering the resolution in the exercise of his right as a privileged question, and I am somewhat curious to know whether the President of the Senate did ask for consent or not?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will determine the pending question. Section 5 of Rule XIV is as follows:

All resolutions shall lie over one day for consideration unless by unanimous consent the Senate shall otherwise direct.

The resolution of the Senator from New York will lie over under the rule unless unanimous consent was given for its present consideration. It was the impression of the Chair that unanimous consent had been given; in other words, that no objection had been interposed to the present consideration of the resolution. The notes of the Reporter, however, do not sustain the Chair in that recollection. They fail to show that the question was submitted to the Senate as to whether unanimous consent would be given for the present consideration of the resolution presented by the Senator from New York.

More than that, a Senator states that he was unable to hear the request for unanimous consent submitted to the Senate. The Chair would be very reluctant to hold that a Senator had waived his right to object to suspending the rules when the Senator stated from his place that he was unable to hear the request when presented. The present occupant of the chair has in more than one instance, when a Senator has made such a statement, recognized it as an objection to a suspension of the rules. It occurs to the Chair that that is the proper and fair interpretation of the rule. For that reason, the Chair will submit to the Senate, is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution of the Senator from New York?

Mr. GRAY. I object, Mr. President.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection, and the resolution will go over under the rule.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, just a word. I desire to submit for the consideration of the Chair the question as to whether the resolution is not of a privileged character and that it can be acted upon at any time. Allow me to suggest that the ordinary rules of the Senate to which attention has now been called do not apply to resolutions of a privileged character. The Chair will recollect the discussion which we had on the presentation of a report from the special committee to investigate in regard to bribery of Senators. It was held to be a privileged resolution. I objected to the report. It was held that it had a right to be made. I submit that the same rule applies on all matters which are themselves questions of privilege. The presentation of a conference report would be a matter of privilege.

If the conference committee should report a resolution to this body asking for further time, if their time had been limited, that would be a question of privilege. If, for instance, in appointing this committee, we had limited the time in which the committee should report, and the committee desired further time, and they presented a resolution to that effect from the committee, would it not be held that that was a privileged resolution? Are not all privileged resolutions taken out from under the rule? For example, a resolution to investigate the charge of bribery against a Senator can be brought up at any time. Will it be said that a single objection puts such a resolution over to another day. The very point in having it privileged is that it may be acted upon at any time and that it is different from other resolutions.

Mr. President, there is no question but that the resolution relates to a privileged matter. The presentation of a conference report is privileged. Anything that grows out of or pertains to that conference report, as a request to the conferees to make either a general or a special report, seems to me to carry with it the character of being privileged. Therefore, sir, in my judgment this resolution is one of a privileged character, and a single objection does not put it over until another day.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. President, I apprehend the Senator from New York does not draw the distinction that exists in parliamentary law in reference to privileges. The legislative body has certain privileges. Then there are certain privileges that pertain to the individual member of each body, distinct from the body. Then there are privileges that pertain to a committee of the body which do not belong to any distinct member of the body. Now, it is parliamentary law, I suppose as old as parliamentary bodies, that a report of a parliamentary body to be made by a conference committee is of the highest privilege. They have that privilege, but it is not a privilege of a member of the body to propose to compel or instruct the conference committee to make a report, or to take any charge of the business of the conference committee. That business has been given by the legislative body to the committee itself, and with the appointment of the committee that privilege has gone to the committee of conference. The committee of conference have the privilege to come in and make a report when they please, and displace all other business.

Mr. HILL. Will the Senator allow me?

Mr. MILLS. In a moment. I have seen in another legislative body a member taken off the floor when he was moving to adjourn in order to give way for a conference committee.

Mr. HILL. Then, has the conference committee greater power and authority over its report than the Senate has when acting in reference to that particular report?

Mr. MILLS. Yes; for the present time.

Mr. HILL. I think, of course, you are bound to make that claim.

Mr. MILLS. The Senate, as a matter of course, has absolute, paramount sovereignty over all its business.

Mr. HILL. My point is, if the Senator will allow me, that as the report itself is privileged, any resolution in reference to that report is also privileged.

Mr. MILLS. Privileged by the conference committee, but not by any other member of the body.

Mr. HILL. The Senator says it is privileged by the conference committee, but that no other Senator, nor the Senate itself, can do anything in regard to the report that is privileged. I can not comprehend that.

Mr. WHITE. Rule XXVII is in these words:

The presentation of reports of committees of conference shall always be in order, except when the Journal is being read, etc.

The statement made by the Senator from New York, it appears to me, is a misinterpretation of this rule. The rule itself limits the matter to the presentation of reports. It expressly singles out the presentation of reports from the various motions which may be made with reference to a conference. The presentation is privileged, but when the rule was adopted making that exception of course everything else was omitted.

Mr. HILL. Will the Senator allow me a moment?

Mr. WHITE. Certainly.

Mr. HILL. Would not a resolution to appoint a conference committee be regarded as privileged, and could you raise the point that such a resolution must go over to another day? I think not.

Mr. WHITE. It would not be liable to the section of the rule to which I have alluded. It is a privileged motion.

Mr. MILLS. The Senator from New York again fails to draw the distinction between the ordinary procedure of business in the body and a privilege. He says that if the conference committee alone has the privilege to report the body is powerless to act. No; it acts under its regular rules. A resolution comes in to-day, under its rules, proposing to call this committee of conference to the bar of the Senate to report or to do anything else the Senate wants them to do. The resolution goes over under its rules, made by the Constitution of the United States for the orderly transaction of its business, and it comes up to-morrow, and then the Senate acts on it.

Mr. HILL. Will the Senator allow me to repeat the question I put to the Senator from California? A motion to appoint a conference committee is nothing more nor less than a resolution of the Senate. Would a single objection throw that resolution over until another day?

Mr. MILLS. I think it would. The committee of conference is privileged to report when appointed.

Mr. HILL. That is a new proposition, if that is true.

Mr. MILLS. It is not at all new in parliamentary law.

Mr. WHITE. It is plain under the rules.

Mr. ALLISON. Before this matter passes from the consideration of the Senate to-day, I ask if my amendment has been noted. The amendment I propose is to insert the words "a disagreement" after the word "Senate," in the last line but one of the resolution of the Senator from New York.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will determine the pending question and then recognize the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. ALLISON. I do not wish to be recognized, except to have my amendment pending when the resolution again comes up.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. Insert after the word "Senate" in the last line but one, the words "a disagreement;" so as to read:

